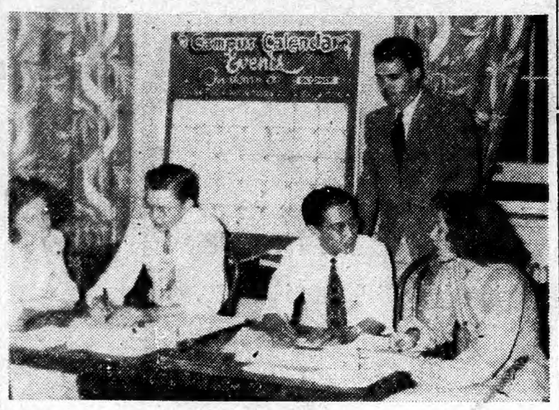
GM's Student Activities Center To Introduce Campus Societies

By Roland Giduz

Names like Phi, CRIL, IRC, S and F, CPU and several dozen other campus groups should no longer remain a mystery to the vast overwhelming majority of John Q. Average Carolina students. Through the formation of a Student Activities Center in the Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial, the student union is prepared to take all of these alphabetical extra-curricular organizations to every new student himself.



The center, designed as an information and recruiting center for these groups, is a part of Graham Memorial's program to serve the student body in every possible means. Director of the center is Jesse Dedmond, third-year student.

Representatives from more than a dozen campus groups have been conducting interviews with all interested students from 2 to 5 o'clock every afternoon this week. As it is now set up, each group or organization has a table in the room, and a spokesman for the group. Mimeographed information for their specific group is available at every table, and photo and poster displays are placed around the walk by many tables.

For this first week students have been coming in voluntarily to look over the organizations. Beginning next Monday new students who have not previously been through the Center will be contacted for interviews with organizations in which they expressed interest during orientation.

"We believe there is a great need for developing stronger interest in student activities on campus," GM Director Bill Shuford has written campus activities leaders. He estimated that only 250 to 300 students out of the entire student body of nearly 7000 had been active in student government or other student activities.

The 14 groups set up in the center at present include Daily Tar Heel, Carolina Magazine, Tarnation (humor magazine), Yackety Yack, Woman's Interdormitory council, Valkyries, Carolina Political union, International Relations club, Collegiate Council on United Nations; Sound and Fury, Order of the Grail, Phi Assembly, Di Senate, and Graham Memorial.

Tray Shop at Lenoir To Speed Meal Service

Lenoir dining hall, capable of serving some 10,000 students daily, will expand its facilities to include the "Tray Shop," formerly the Pine Room, Monday or Tuesday of next week, the Daily Tar Heel learned today.

Mrs. Elizabeth "Ditz" Britton, dining hall accountant, said that the proposed "Tray Shop" would conform in much the same manner to a similar set-up at the S & W cafeteria at Raleigh. The system was first introduced in lenoir last fall.

"It's one of the fastest means of service," Mrs. Britton pointed out, "and nine persons can be served per minute. The Tray Shop method has proven a great labor saver as well."

Under new management, Lenoir dining hall has now as its director R. Dewey Roscoe, who has been affiliated with the University for the past five years. He served as manager of the old Swain Hall under Supervisor L. H. Gooch, who presently is connected with a restaurant chain at Charlottesville, Va.

Meal Hours at Lenoir have been somewhat shortened over last spring's schedule. Breakfast hours are seven until 9:15 o'clock, excepting Sundays when the hall opens at 8:30 and closes at 9:30 o'clock. Lunch will be served from 11:45 until 1:45 o'clock, and dinner from five until seven.

For the first time since last fall a year ago, all wings of the dining hall are open. Manager Dewey Roscoe is currently acting in the capacity of dietitian and purchaser due to a shortage of assistance.

University officials hope to serve in the neighborhood of 10,000 students daily this fall, or some 3,500 per meal.

Checks for Vets Will be Month Late

Veterans on campus should not expect their subsistence checks before November 1, according to an announcement made by Colonel F. Carlyle Shepard, University veterans director.

The delay, Colonel Shepard says, is necessitated by the registration this late in September and the consequent impossibility of completion of records for October. However, the checks should arrive within the first ten days of November for an amount to cover the last few days of September and the entire month of October.

Colonel Shepard also reminds veterans that thereafter their subsistence will be paid at the end of each month as usual and not in advance.

Subsistence Checks Held by Postmaster

Today is last chance for nearly three hundred Carolina veterans to secure August subsistence checks, Postmaster W. S. Hogan warned yesterday.

Many veterans studying here under the GI Bill were away from Chapel Hill over the September 1-9 period when most checks arrived, and some failed to claim them at the post office.

He said yesterday VA headquarters in Richmond had extended the delivery deadline until today. Checks may be claimed at the General Delivery window in the post office from 9 a.m. till 5 p.m.

Board Makes Rules For Coed Visiting

Women Students may visit fraternity houses on Saturday and Sunday during the Georgia - Carolina weekend during certain hours provided a chaperone, who has been approved for the specific occasion, is present. The Dean of Women will approve the chaperones. The houses may receive visitors between 12 noon and 1 a.m. on Saturday and between 12 noon and midnight on Sunday.

The Daily Tar Heel will publish on Friday a list of the fraternities which will be open to coeds. This provision has been sanctioned by Barbara Cashion, Leon Todd, and the executive committee for the Interfraternity Council, who are the active members of the House Privileges Board.

May Move To Dorms

The housing office has announced eight dormitory assignments that were made too late to contact the students concerned at their home addresses. As soon as the following students report to the basement of South building for a dormitory key, they may move from the quonset huts to these rooms immediately: James W. Cheshire, from hut 23 to 110 Everett; Foy R. Cole, hut 23 to 313 Aycock; James B. Garrison, hut 26 to 112 Everett; Wingate E. Hannah, hut 20 to 309 Graham; Tyler R. Lisk, from hut 24 to 113 Ruffin; Eliah J. Perry, Jr., from hut 32 to 303 Ruffin; Richard H. Taylor, from hut 32 to 406 Ruffin; C. L. Quinn, Jr., from 37 to 316 Stacy.

First Ball Set For New Coeds

Carolina's new coeds will be introduced to campus social life at the 1947 version of the annual Coed Ball. According to information from Joyce Jones, Coed Senate Dance Committee chairman, the Ball will be held in Woollen gymnasium from nine until twelve on Saturday evening, Sept. 27.

The dance, which will be semi-formal, is for new girls only. Members of the Coed Senate, the sponsoring organization, will be present along with student advisers. Some 300 new girls on the campus are expected to be present to dance to the music of Johnny Satterfield's new band. Beverly Joslin is vocalist for the group.

New Students Lift Enrollment to 7,250 Record

Every continent except Antartica is represented in the record-breaking student body that begins classes this morning, Admissions Director Roy Armstrong announced yesterday.

Reflecting an enrollment peak at schools everywhere, registration at Carolina will reach approximately 7,250 for the fall quarter, Armstrong estimates. The expected total represents a gain of more than 6 percent over last year's figure.

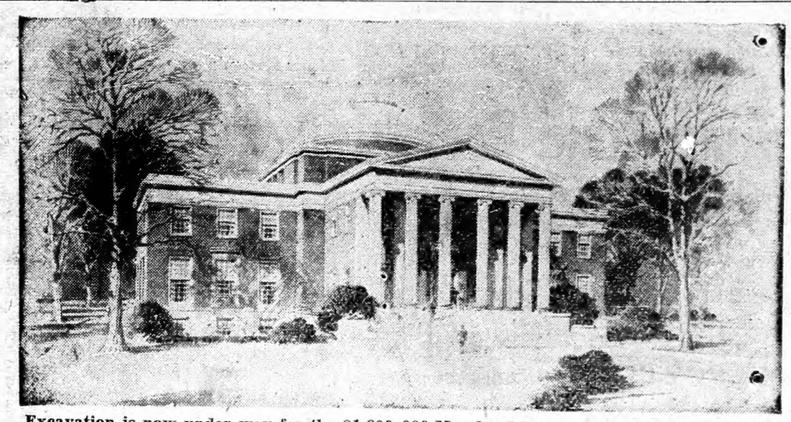
Tar Heel Frosh

A breakdown of Armstrong's setimates predicts between 600 and 700 as the number of 1947 North Carolina high school graduates entering as freshmen. Several hundred more state high school graduates returning from military service will see their first university work.

As a result of action by the state legislature last winter out-of-state enrollment has been limited to 10 percent of the student body. Only 150 new students have been admitted from outside North Carolina, and all of these except several undergraduate women are quartered off campus.

Foreign Students

Over 50 students—more than before—have been admitted from foreign countries. Fifteen South American exchange students are studying in the School of Public Health under U.S. government sponsorship. Others India, Egypt, Iraq, Norway, represent South Africa, China, Australia, Canada, Mexico, and Nicaragua.



Total estimated college enrollment in the United States this fall, according to the American Council of Education, will approach 2,500,000, a gain of 200,000 over last year. Carolina's enrollment increase, though record-breaking, falls two percent below the national gain.

New students reported to duty Friday morning at 9 for a conference with Dean C. P. Spruill. During the following orientation period they have undergone placement tests, instruction in regulations and tradition, and physical examinations. The regular registration period opened Monday and will continue through this week and into next if necessary.

Dr. G. B. Johnson Wins Catholic Church Award

Army Flight Group Instituted at UNC; Grads Will Get Reserve Commissions

Excavation is now under way for the $1,600,000 Morehead Planetarium above. The construction is being done by J. A. Jones and company of Charlotte. The building is a gift of John Motley Morehead, and is located back of Alumni hall.

By Chuck Hauser

A new military installation arrives on the Carolina campus this fall with the activation of an Army Air Forces ROTC unit, Major A. S. Freer, AAF, temporarily in charge of the group, has announced.

The course will be divided into two sections — advanced and elementary. The advanced course is for veterans in their junior year; and elementary for freshmen and sophomores.

Training Begins Now

Men selected for the second group will receive credit for the basic course and stand to gain a reserve commission and active service if desired upon graduation. Their training consisting of five class-hours per week, will begin immediately. They will also get six weeks summer camp work.

Freshmen and sophomores must pass a physical examination and be approved for entrance by the University Professor of Military Science and Tactics before they may enroll for the training, which is scheduled to start for them in the winter quarter. Either section will get four quarter-hours credit for quarters during which time they are enrolled.

Uniforms will be provided at no cost to applicants accepted for admission.

Pay for Advanced Men

Members of the advanced course will receive 79 cents per day subsistence for a total of not more than 570 days for the two years, but there has been no provision made for pay for the elementary group.

The University is one of 14 colleges throughout the United States chosen to activate Air ROTC units this fall.

At present the staff consists of Major Freer, Major L. L. May, and five non-commissioned officers. Scheduled to arrive Saturday are Colonel Bryon R. Switzer, who will command the unit, and Captain F. C. Holmes.

Year-and-a-Half Building Project For Morehead Planetarium Started

Tractors and bulldozers began turning earth more than a week ago on the site of a proposed planetarium to be constructed between the Alumni Building and Graham Memorial. The six-columned domed planetarium, two million dollar gift of philanthropist John Motley Morehead, is expected to be completed in early 1949 and will house, in addition to planetarium equipment, the Morehead art collection, astronomy classrooms, and museums.

The first official recognition that work has begun on the building will be a cornerstone-laying ceremony on Thanksgiving Day just before the Virginia-Carolina football game. But meanwhile it will be obvious to all that construction is underway. Gaping red holes bound Senior Walk, now closed off with the rest of the construction area by large wire fences. Several trees have been felled by construction crews and wooden work shacks have been thrown up on the south side of the old Barbee lot. The Durham Excavating Company is doing the digging; the J. A. Jones Construction Company of Charlotte will begin their million dollar building job with first concrete pouring on September 29.

The planetarium and its equipment, including a $75,000 Zeiss star-studying instrument described in press releases as "rare," will cost about $1,600,000. Further equipment that may be installed in the planetarium includes a $2,400 15-inch reflector telescope which had been ordered by the school of mathematics and physics. The telescope will be mounted in Phillips Hall unless provisions can be made for it in the new building.

The planetarium is Mr. Morehead's second large gift to the university. He joined with Rufus L. Patterson in presenting the school with the Morehead-Patterson memorial tower and chimes in 1931. "The Morehead Foundation" has been set up to administer the two million dollar fund and "to devote unused moneys to scholarships for outstanding young men in such amounts and in such manner as the Trustees of the Foundation shall determine." (Mr. Morehead will serve as chairman of the Board of Trustees. Other trustees: Norman A. Cooke, attorney, and John L. Morehead, a Charlotte manufacturer.)

The Morehead art collection, valued at $250,000, includes paintings (George, Martha Washington, and others), rare glass, china, lace and other objects of art. The collection will be placed in the building's main gallery which will be called the Genevieve M. Morehead Gallery, in tribute to Mr. Morehead's late wife.

The University of North Carolina will be the only university or college in the world to own a planetarium, which, by the way, is not the same thing as an observatory. A planetarium is a model of the planetary system which can display on a high, domed ceiling the movement of celestial bodies. An observatory is a building for the telescopic viewing of stars, planets, etc.

The new planetarium will be similar to other buildings of this type in five of America's metropolitan centers.

Extensive Parking Plan Devised For Out-of-Town Autos Saturday

By Bill Sexton

A new parking system for out-of-town autos plus one-way traffic in and out of Chapel Hill Saturday afternoon will speed football traffic by one-third, Sgt. R. S. Harris of the State Highway predicted yesterday.

Sgt. Harris, who will command 65 state patrolmen assigned to the Georgia game, said that the patrol would be prepared to handle a crowd even larger than the record attendance at last year's Duke contest in Kenan stadium and in less time.

Special off-street parking fields will accommodate approximately 4000 cars. A new road has been cut from highway 54 near the eastern city limit to Kessing field, which will be used for parking all autos from Raleigh and points east. Durham and northern cars will be routed from highway 15 down Raleigh street to positions on Emerson field.

Autos from Greensboro and points west will be directed onto the high school athletic field off West Franklin street—over a mile's walk from Kenan stadium. And cars from Sanford and south will be parked by Woollen gymnasium.

After 1 p.m. Saturday all out-of-town cars bound for the game are to be shunted to these parking fields, and only through traffic will be permitted to enter the Chapel Hill business district or pass the Kenan stadium approaches.

At the same time two lanes of one-way traffic will begin on highway 54 both east and west approaching Chapel Hill. Outbound traffic is to be detoured until normal operation resumes at game time.

After the game the one-way routing will be reversed with two lane operation away from Chapel Hill until the crowd disperses.

Yack Eds Outline Shooting Schedule For Yearbook Pics

Getting an early start on class photographs for the Yackety Yack, editors of the yearbook began having freshmen photographed early this week. Co-editors Hal Bursley of Charlotte and Ruth Evans of Fort Knox, Ky., have announced that appointments can be made by any student at the Yack office any afternoon between two and five o'clock. Pictures will be made between nine and eleven a.m. and from one p.m. into the late afternoon.

The new acting co-editors, who succeed Bill Moffitt, have urged all students to make their appointments early so that there will be no repetition of the delay in distribution of the yearbook which was caused by a tie-up in class photographs last year. They hope to have all pictures completed by November 1.

Photographs will be made at no on-the-spot cost to the student; they are paid for through student fees. The students "only obligation," the editors said, is to make their appointments and appear on the specified date. If necessary, night appointments can be arranged.

The Chidnoff Studio of New York will take the pictures. It is suggested that male students wear dark, solid coats and dark ties. Coeds have been asked to wear white blouses.

Budget Raised for Hill

Increases in salaries and costs for services have caused the Chapel Hill budget for the fiscal year 1947-48 to rise to $100,500, as compared to $80,500 last year.

Mass Carolina-Georgia Pep Rally Slated To Take Place Friday Night on Eve of Game

Friday night—unofficially recognized as Georgia game eve—is due to be a noisy one, according to reports from Moffatt Sherard and his assistant cheerleaders. Sherard, chief cheerleader, has outlined a raucous evening of shouting to get students into shape for the Saturday afternoon tussle with the Bulldogs from the cracker state.

Sherard says things have been lined up for a mass pep rally at 7:15 Friday evening. It's due to get underway in the Y court and progress—after a few warm up yells—to fraternity court, then to the girls' dorm area by way of East Franklin, on the lower quad and back then to the Y court.

The parade about the campus will be led by Sherard and the rest of the cheerleading squad: Charlie Stancell, Jerry Pence, Mac McLeese, Pat McKinsey, Bill Basnight, Lanier Davis, Dick Wafford, Evelyn Pettitt, Jean Ann Ramsdell, Phyllis Isenhour, Ruth and Mary Moore, Marguarite Johnson, Cris White and Bill Henderson. Myrt Sherard and Charlie Stancell are the only veteran cheerleaders in the group. But the others, who were chosen last spring, are in the loud Tar Heel tradition; they've been working out twice a day since Thursday of last week.

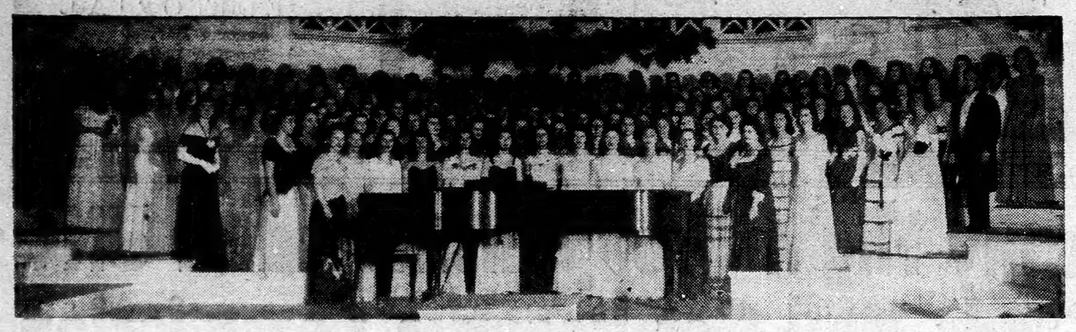
Tomorrow night's rally will be a major production, according to Sherard. Several gentlemen of note will be present to offer their own personal sentiments concerning the season opening game, not to mention the quadruped Rameses whose own attitude is well known. The university's symphony orchestra—in part—will let its hair down and contribute a few well chosen musical selections to the festivities.

Fashion notes on uniforms for cheerleaders have also been provided. The girls will wear new Carolina blue sweaters, white tights and skirts.

GOP Fights GI Raise But Vets Will Win

By Drew Pearson

Drew Pearson, noted Washington columnist, opens his year as a contributor to this newspaper with a special column prepared exclusively for readers of the Daily Tar Heel.



Though the next session of Congress is many weeks off, hard-pressed veterans on college campuses are already planning to bombard their congressmen for relief from the jet-propelled cost of living.

Having been cheated of increased subsistence by Republican leaders during the closing minutes of House debate last July, veterans are determined this time they will get no more double play. And this columnist predicts that the results will now be different. Next time Congress will not be blind to the 1948 elections.

The University women's glee club invites all new students to try-outs to be held for two weeks from Monday, September 22, through Friday, October 3, between 4:30 and 5:30 on the second floor of Hill hall.

Under the direction of Paul Young, associate professor of the music department, the glee club has extensive plans for this year, its first performance being scheduled for the University convocation next month. Other programs to be given include concerts, broadcasts, a Christmas caroling in co-operation with the men's glee club, and a tour to various points in the State during the spring.

No special training is required to sing in the glee club, and new co-eds are urged to try out as soon as possible to avoid confusion when old students return.

75-Piece Marching Band Preparing For Football Season Under Slocum

By Herbert Nachman, Jr.

This year the Carolina band will march under the title of "The Varsity Band," according to an announcement made yesterday by Earl Slocum, director.

Scheduled to make its first appearance at the Georgia-Carolina game Saturday, the 75-piece marching band will perform before the game and during half time, Mr. Slocum said.

More than 65 students reported for the first pre-game practice session Monday and Mr. Slocum expects to line up at least 55 more, which will bring the total to 120 pieces.

An unusual program has been planned for Saturday's game. Spectators will witness the same type of program that was presented at the Sugar Bowl last year, the director said.

Mr. Slocum also said that the band plans to present one feature concert arrangement for each game this year and that it would make one major trip away from home, in addition to the jaunt to Durham for the Carolina-Duke game.

Tryouts for membership in the band are being held daily in Hill Hall room 105. Auditions for all musical groups will continue for another week and all old or new students that may be interested are urged to come in for a tryout.

Barnett Leaves Baptist Church

Dr. Das Kelley Barnett, pastor of the Chapel Hill Baptist church for the last four years, has resigned to accept a position as head of the department of christian ethics and sociology in the Roberts School of Christianity at Mercer University, Macon, Ga.

Dr. Barnett's resignation became effective Sunday, September 14, when he preached his last regular service here. At that time a pulpit committee was elected which has yet to procure a successor to Dr. Barnett. For the next few Sundays prominent residents of Chapel Hill will conduct guest sermons both in the morning and evening.

Express Opens Office

The Railway Express office of Chapel Hill will vacate its rented premises on Franklin street on October 15 to move to a new building now under construction on Columbia street. Planned by J. B. Goldston, lumber merchant, the new building will be one story high, in colonial style with a white trim.

College Centers Begin Classes

Classes began yesterday in off-campus centers in five cities throughout the State in accordance with an authorization from the North Carolina College Center program for the opening of additional centers in any towns where as many as 30 students are accepted for admission.

Of the 12 centers which operated in the State last year those reopening with their approximate enrollment are in Charlotte, more than 300; Greensboro, 60; Burnsville, 40; Hendersonville, 30 to 35; and Gastonia, 40 to 45.

C. E. McIntosh, assistant director of the program, has emphasized that the college centers are "seeking only to accommodate those students who cannot secure living quarters at one of the established colleges or universities. Mr. McIntosh also said that if there is a sufficient number of these students in any one locality without a college center now, one may be organized even as late as the middle of October for the fall quarter.

Many New Students At Graham's Reception

Well over 1,000 students attended the annual president's and chancellor's reception in the beautiful newly decorated main lounge of Graham Memorial last Sunday afternoon. The reception was sponsored by the Student Orientation committee, and directed by Johnny Clampitt, who was assisted by the Women's Orientation committee.

Heading the receiving line were President and Mrs. Frank P. Graham and Chancellor and Mrs. Robert B. House. Clampitt introduced the students to Chancellor House and President Graham.

Others in the receiving line were: Dean of Men Fred Weaver; Dean of Women Katherine Carmichael; Miss Katherine Cook, director of vocational guidance for women; director of admissions, Roy Armstrong; Col. Carlyle Shepard, veterans adviser, and Mrs. Shepard; and Prof. and Mrs. C. C. Carter, of the school of commerce.

Schenkkan Wins National Award

Robert Schenkkan, graduate student in the dramatic arts department of the University, received one of the five National Theater Conference awards for the year for his outstanding work in the field of playwriting, announced Sawyer Falk, president of the NTC.

The grant was made on the basis of a recommendation from some person in the field of drama, an original, full length play, and plans for another play. NTC judges included Frederic McConnell, chairman; Hallie Flanagan Davis, co-chairman; and John Gassner, consultant.

Working with Soldier theater during the war, Schenkkan has also appeared with the Beaux Arts academy and Neighborhood Playhouse, New York, and with the Hedgerow and Federal theaters in Philadelphia. Among his original plays are "Not Often to the Arrogant," a play of the Boer war, and "The Trial of Stephen," historical drama. Collaborating with Kai JuJgenson, Schenkkan in translating Ibsen for Henry Holt and company at present.

Schenkkan will continue his work under the fellowship plan, one of the many endeavors of the NTC, an organization of university and civic theaters. Its local members are Samuel Selden and Paul Green.

Symphony Auditions

Auditions for musicions, including both adult and minor soloists under 17, who wish to take part in North Carolina symphony concerts during the coming season, will be held at the Meredith college.

Auditorium from 2 to 5 o'clock on Saturday, October 4th.

Child soloists are especially invited. Last year, eight of the 14 promising soloists were musicians under 7. Those interested in applying may receive a list of recommended concertos from the Symphony Office in Chapel Hill.

G. Memorial Reservations Must Be Made

Due to the unprecedented number of student organizations which will desire to meet in Graham Memorial this year, it will be absolutely necessary that all of these groups notify the student union office immediately of their meeting schedules and space needs.

"The demand for the use of space in the building is extremely heavy and we must know the name of the organizations, how many are in it, and the dates and times of meetings in order to plan our yearly schedule," announced union director Bill Shuford.

All organizations, regardless of how long they have been housed in Graham Memorial should make reservations this week with Mrs. Cook in the Graham Memorial office, so they may be included in the master schedule for meeting rooms. More than 100 different groups met regularly in the union last year, and one and a half times that number are expected this year.

Football Contest Sponsored By GM

Drugstore quarterbacks will have their chance to play backroom football again this fall through the weekly Graham Memorial football contests which began yesterday.

Entry blanks are available in the YMCA and student union information desks through tomorrow evening, and should be dropped in the ballot box in the main hall of Graham Memorial.

The eighteen top games of the week plus two puzzlers thrown in, are listed on each entry. In addition the UNC game of the week is listed at the bottom of the entry.

Prize of a book of movie tickets to the Carolina theater will be awarded to the student who picks the most winners for the 20 games, and the closest prognostication for the score of the Carolina game.

Blanks will be available every Monday morning, and must be turned in by Friday night.

TD Pays $3000 In Settlement Of Grail Breach of Contract Suit

Tommy Dorsey, famed trombonist, is shown reading a summons from the Order of the Grail to several thousand dancers at the Grail Dance here last November. The Carolina honorary organization sued the bandleader for $20,000 charging breach of contract, in that Dorsey failed to bring his full orchestra to the campus as provided by contract. Dorsey's lawyers recently made an out-of-court settlement of the case for $3000. Jack Fitch, delegata of the Grail, announced that the money will be used to finance needy students who otherwise would be unable to attend the University.

By Charlie Gibson

Tommy Dorsey, the man with the slide trombone, the name band, and the campus bad manners, has agreed to a $3,000 out of court settlement of the breach of contract suit filed against him last fall by the Order of the Grail, according to Charlie Vance, the University honorary organization's representative in the fuss with Dorsey lawyers and agents.

It was at the Grail concert and the two dances November 22 and 23 that "Mr. Trombone" sounded several sour notes of contract and etiquette. The original agreement by Grail interpretation called for a 35-piece band to play here for $10,000. However, the big-name band turned up in Chapel Hill stripped of its string section.

Played Too Many Fast Numbers

The concert for which Dorsey signed to play two hours lasted only ninety minutes. And time was not the only thing speeded up when the first dance of the weekend series began. Some of the 2,400 students packed into Woollen gynasium objected to Dorsey's playing so many fast selections. Several couples asked Charlie Fulton, delegata of the Grail at that time, to request slower numbers. Fulton went to the platform with the request, Dorsey biting back with an announcement to the crowd over the loud speaking system that some "jerk" who had gotten himself elected head of some student organization was offering him advice on what music to play, and more words to that effect.

After that, though, he did play more slow numbers.

About 20 minutes before the end of the final dance Saturday evening Deputy Sheriff W. P. Jordan was the next to walk to the platform with a more formidable proposal. He served Dorsey with a summons in which the Grail asked $20,000 for breach of contract. Dorsey read the summons to the crowd through the loudspeaker and with more irony "thanked" the Grail members for their "hospitality."

The suit was not the result of dissatisfaction with Dorsey's playing. Grail members had been advised to press it before the dances when they first learned DT was to come to them short-banded.

At midnight after the last prom Dorsey left for New York and consultations with his attorneys. While here, he declared intentions of disolving his band in order that he might make personal appearances and leave trumpeter Ziggy Ellman to form a new band around the nucleus of the old group.

Jack Fitch ,this year's delegata of the Grail, says the $3,000 will go towards Grail scholarships which are awarded annually to students who could not come to the University without financial assistance.

YWCA Cabine tRetreat GrowsThis Year To General Advisor-Student Assembly

The annual YWCA cabinet retreat developed into a large gathering of 75 students and advisers with members of both the YWCA and the YMCA present from September 15 to September 17. Camp Betty Hastings, ten miles east of Winston-Salem, was the scene of the two day conference held, just before orientation.

Students conducted the major part of the conference, which followed the theme "The Carolina Student and Christianity." An introductory address on the nature of Christianity by Rev. Mr. Charles M. Jones opened the program and discussion, and was followed by a panel on Christian leadership at Carolina, workshops on "Carolina today," and separate meetings of the senior and freshmen groups.

Activities of the group included organized recreation and swimming, cooperative "K. P.," a special campfire program, group singing, and numerous informal "bull sessions."

The camp was directed by YWCA Secretary, Mrs. Betty Rose Dowden, and the YMCA Secretaries, Claude Shotts, and his assistant, Joe MacArthur. Guests included Chancellor R. B. House, Dr. Fred Epps, Dean Katherine Carmichael, Dean Fred Weaver, Miss Ruth Duncan, Miss Katherine Cook, Mrs. Bob Nelson, and staff personnel from the Winston-Salem YWCA president, and Charles Foley, YMCA president.

Student Auto Registration First Step In New Campus Traffic Control Plan

By Charlie Gibson

Registration of student automobiles was conducted this week along with all other stages of processing in Woollen gymnasium, climaxing a full year of work by students, faculty members, and Chapel Hill and State representative to correct the traffic problem on the University campus.

Under the auspices of a specially created University Safety council and in accordance with the provisions of a trustee resolution, any student who keeps and uses an automobile in Chapel Hill and does not have a Chapel Hill license plate is required to register and secure an identification plate for his car. These identification plates are to arrive about October 1 and will be mailed to auto registrants at that time. They are of the decaleomania type with serial numbers. Depicting the Old Well in colorful black, white, silver, and navy blue, they are to be affixed to the windshield of the car in the lower right-hand corner. No charge whatsoever is to be made to the student for either the registration or the identification tag.

This is the latest measure undertaken in the effort to relieve the traffic congestion and violations by means short of an outright restriction upon the use of automobiles by students. Action of the State General assembly has defined the University campus as coming within the police authority of Chapel Hill. Campus traffic is now subject to the same legal control as that of the town, and violations will be handled by the local police and recorder's court. Detailed traffic regulations adopted by the Board of Trustees have been posted on several campus bulletin boards.

A campus policeman has been employed to assist in the enforcement of these regulations. This officer is a member of the Chapel Hill police force and all automobile operators are subject to the authority vested in him as a police officer.

Following a study of campus traffic and parking problems, a careful plan providing for parking areas and limitations upon parking, speed limits, and suitable markings, and other precautions and aids has been adopted by the University Safety Council.

Art Gallery Collection Again Set for Rentals

As a means of furthering public interest and appreciation of fine art, the Person Hall Art Gallery will again make it possible for people living in the Chapel Hill area to rent the exhibits in its PICTURE RENTAL COLLECTION for the nominal fee of 25c pre month per picture.

The collection has become increasingly popular during the past few years and now contains works ranging from old masters Rembrandt, Holbein, and Breughel to more recent masters Picasso, Brasque, and Derain.

University students and residents of Chapel Hill can make their selections at the exhibition and register, beginning September 29, for the pictures wanted for each month through the year. Any one picture may be kept for a maximum of three months.

The rental charge is payable when the picture is taken out. A deposit of $1.00 is also payable in advance and will be refunded upon prompt delivery of the picture.

The exhibition opened September 8 and will continue through September 29. The gallery will be open daily from 10 to 5 o'clock and Sundays from 2 to 5 o'clock.

Humorists in Demand

All students, old and new, who are interested in working on the staff of Tarnation, college humor magazine, are requested to meet this afternoon at 3 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge No. 1, Graham Memorial.

Need Art Class Models

Models, who will be paid from $2.00 to $2.50 a day, are desperately needed by the art classes, afternoons from 2 to 5 o'clock. Those who are interested in this interesting and easy method of earning cigarette money should contact Lynette Warren at 8301, Person Hall Art Gallery.

Program Meeting

There will be a meeting of all men who were contacted to sell programs for the Georgia game in 304 Woollen at 7:30 tonight.

Carolina's New Daily Tar Heel

"Something New has been added!" No, the Daily Tar Heel is not trying to steal a stereotype slogan of the advertising world or adopt the practice of breakfast food manufacturers in order to sell our commodity, but we are expanding. For nearly 20 years, since the fall of 1929 when we began daily publication, we have remained the same size newspaper—except during the war when we were forced to resort to a bi-weekly. Now we have thrown off the mantle of our stunted growth and have assumed the size and foremat of an orthodox newspaper.

It is high time that your newspaper grew and adapted itself to the size of the student body. The enrollment has almost tripled itself since the first daily in 1929. The additional two columns, which will give us about one-third more space to report the campus and international news, is significant also in that it eradicates the last of our campaign promises we pledged when we ran for the editorship of this publication last spring.

The financial aspects of a publication is another worry—a worry that we believe to have dispersed. Naturally with the larger Daily Tar Heel we will incur additional expenses that were not included when the Student Legislature doled out its funds to us last spring. The additional expenses will be taken care of with the increase in advertising rates, another of our campaign promises. Even with this increase it will be only with parsimanious budgeting that we will meet expenses.

In content and policy-making we are going to take a different stand. It is much simpler for the editor to sit back in his chair and accept for publication just those items, columns and editorials that find their way to his basket. This is not our intention. We have a competent staff of holdovers from last year and with those added during the summer months and the new crop of newspapermen and women that have just matriculated we should rake the complete campus daily for editorial and news comments.

When the political fracas begins, as it always does around election time, the Daily Tar Heel will be able to retort that it is a non-partisan publication and our political editor will report the events and campaign notices fairly and without any sentiments.

All of our issues during the year will not be a replica of this eight-page, eight-column sheet. This is a pipe-dream that can only materialize when the strengint rationing of newsprint eases. Our plans for the present time included printing either an eight or six page edition once a week after our staff and the new staff at the Colonial Press work out the technical details.

Interest Indicator Cards - - A Big Boost

Graham Memorial's plan to catalogue the interests and talents of each new student that enters the University will be one of the biggest boosts to student government and campus organizations in many years. Co-authors of the plan, Director Bill Shuford and Student Jess Dedmont, have spent much time in working out the technicalities so that a master interest indicator index will be devised to contain information that will be invaluable to student leaders.

In past years it has been difficult, unless a student has a good friend in the organization he is interested, to barge in and offer his services. When the indices are compiled the master file will show each student interests. If he is fond of or talented in publications, forensic teams, mimicking or any other phases of campus life, the files will show it. Then it will be quite simple for a student leader to look in the specified index and select the men needed for the job. Many timid freshmen and transfer students are interested in getting into campus organizations, but do not know how to do so. With the new system the organizations can seek out the men they need from the masses.

It is a recognized fact that the burden of every campus group rests on a very few dependable members. The master indices, containing the interest indicator cards, will direct these leaders to more dependable helpers that are interested in their activity.

It is plans such as this one that help keep an active flow of new membership into organizations and train leaders for the coming years.

Way Of Life

To those who come to Chapel Hill for the first time we extend WELCOME.

We, at the University, look with pride upon one hundred and fifty years of service to the country. For Chapel Hill is more than a school—it is a way of life. We believe a person left to his own means in a proper environment will search knowledge, live honestly and propone a conduct becoming a lady or a gentleman. To aid in your search for knowledge, we have some of the finest teachers in America, to guide you in your conduct we have a campus code, and to help in the quest for honor, there is an honor system. To protect you we have a Student Government second to none in the country.

From this "way of life" evolves a spirit. It is a spirit of consideration and respect for the opinions and rights of all. We believe every man is entitled to free expression of opinion in all matters. We further believe through regard for the minority and respect of the majority we can arrive at the just and righteous solution of our problems and further gain to ourselves that broadening of mind which will make for our society a better citizen.

Partake fully of this knowledge and surround yourself with friends to share the pleasures of this experience with you. For this is the Carolina spirit and the "way of life" which has brought us to our present position of distinction and will guide us in writing a greater chapter to the History of our Institution.—W.M.

A Reminder

It is always stimulating to see a new group of men at the University if for no other reason than to remind us of our purpose here. Students living in Chapel Hill often become too involved in the social life or extracurricular activities and forget that they are here primarily to attend classes and participate in the activity called studying.

We were awakened to this fact several days ago while conversing with a new student. He knew the minute details concerning the whys and wherefores of registration, class tickets, and resuming classes, but he was ignorant to the fact that Carolina and Georgia will bring to life the Sugar Bowl Classic here Saturday. This is an extreme case, but it does accomplish it's purpose—that of reminding us of the academic side of Carolina.

Some students may think that the above mentioned freshman did not have any school spirit or that he did not have the least interest in his football team. These are not assumptions that are not true. The freshman was primarily interested in getting a firm foundation in his academic work—a commendable intention.

When you have an edge to your voice, it's best to cut out talking.

Statesmanship is the ability to reconcile differences without sacrificing principle.

If you can't bear home life, you may be the bear.

To Pull Or Not To Pull

BOOKS

Summer Harvest

By Bob Sain

Some people make it a point of honor to read nothing heavier than the Sunday comics in the months of June, July and August. Those who applied themselves to Li'l Abner and Dick Tracy through this particular summer didn't miss much in the way of literature. This season's litter of new books was small competition for a good comic strip. But, with the law of averages working overtime, some few of the hundreds of books published in summer '47 had something to say and a still smaller group said it with some regard for good writing.

I have listed here, and echoed critical reaction to, twenty books (many of which I haven't read) with the aim of providing a sort of cross-section of the better writing that, for the most part, languished in heat-emptied bookstores. There are, no doubt, dozens of books that could be added to this list and three or four that might well have been left off. Nevertheless, it is, I think, representative of the season's best. There are some new writers on the list, some old ones, and five Europeans. There is no attempt to present them in the order of their importance.

First, there are three novels about our occupation of Europe. If you're looking for a successor to Hemingway's "A Farewell to Arms" you won't find it in this trio. "The Steeper Cliff" by David Davidoff has received the loudest praise of the three. It has to do with one of our occupation lieutenants who balks at assuming the role of a conqueror. His principal objection seems to be that he does not have a high regard for himself. The occupation of Italy is somewhat different, as explained in "The Gallery" by John Horne Burns. This book has also been greeted gently by reviewers. Gordon Merrick's "The Strumpet Wind" is set in postwar Germany. It was a book club selection for July and a first novel. Merrick has not written THE war novel, but, if we may coin a phrase, watch for his next one.

Four women contributed books of interest to our hammock list. Daphne Athas leads the first by proximity, if not by merit. Her "The Weather of the Heart," written when she was 22, got benign nods from most of the reviewers, who hedged somewhat in their praise by repeated references to the talented authoress' youth and to the fact that this (oh sin of sins!) was a first novel. But the hard-hitting "New Republic" completely confused me by describing Miss Athas as "a deliberate artist and not just another young lady with a lyric gift musing over her childhood." Natalie Anderson Scott caused numerous readers to put down their long, cold ones with a rather detailed story of a male alcoholic. The book bore the unusual title: "The Story of Mrs. Murphy." (The missus, one discovers, is booze.) If "The Lost Weekend" must continue to spawn, we can only hope that all the off-spring are as well-formed as this one. M. F. K. Fisher's "Not Now But Now" is strictly for kicks. It's about a woman who sometimes wanted to "vomit with desire" for men with hairy arms. She also had tokay wine poured into her navel. Mrs. Fisher usually writes about things culinary. Most reviewers hinted that she would have done well to continue in that vein. Many American readers have turned to Monica Dickens' "The Happy Prisoner" out of curiosity. They wanted to see what the great-granddaughter of Charles Dickens could do with a novel. This young woman, who writes well, had two strikes against her; many readers looked for something of Charles in her work and failed to find it. And that, perhaps, is a consolation.

Four completely different novels were available. Ludwig Bemelmans' "Dirty Eddie" is a supposedly very funny satire on Hollywood. Maybe it is. If you like that kind of stuff you'll like this, because this is that kind of stuff. On the other hand, Harry Sylvester is a very serious young man who wrote a novel called "Moon Gaffney." The hero is an Irish-Catholic lad in Brooklyn, more than faintly reminiscent of one of James Farrell's Chicago boys. Sylvester, according to reviews, is also expected to do better next time. "The Big Sky" by Kentucky newspaperman A. B. Guthrie is about a hunter and trapper who went west in the 19th century. It's a first novel, but a mature work. Reviewers gave it a mixed reception, but those who liked it liked it very much. Those who didn't said some nice things anyway. Nathan Rothman got a book published called "Virgie, Goodbye." It's about a prostitute and we mention it simply because Rothman wrote in another book published this summer a very pleasant critical essay on Tom Wolfe, which proves that he knows good writing when he sees it.

Some good short stories got between cloth covers this summer, notably those by John O'Hara, Jerome Weidman and Somerset Maugham. Most of them had appeared in magazines but were apparently considered good enough to keep. O'Hara's collection is called "Hellbox." The brittle and brightly bitter little stories of New Yorkerman O'Hara are nicely indicative of the spirit of our time, as are the equally tough yarns of Jerome Weidman, who also knows his way around the "New Yorker" offices. Weidman has, in "The Captain's Tiger," written an acid about wartime Washington and the acid is strong enough to tarnish a lot of desk-bound Army brass. Maugham, the old master, calls his book "Creatures of Circumstance" and turns out the same brand of well-told tales for which he is famous.

Heavier summer reading (non-fiction) included two looking-backward books, a volume of essays on literary figures and southern anthology. Both Henry Seidel Canby, in "American Memoir," and Elliot Paul in "Linden on the Saugus Branch" looked at things past with considerable good taste. "Memoir" is about writers, writing and Henry Seidel Canby, who is one of the judges of the Book-of-the-Month Club and editor of the Saturday Review of Literature. The book about Linden town looks with nostalgia on the Massachusetts of the near past. Thomas Mann was represented by "Essays of Three Decades," said essays concerning Tolstoy, Wagner, Schopenhauer, Goethe, Freud and Cervantes. Allen Tate, "Sewanee Review" literary leader, has edited "A Southern Vanguard" which is not oppressively southern and yet contains good critical studies on such southern writers as Faulkner, Wolfe, Eudora Welty and Robert Penn Warren.

Good poetry was hard to find with a disappointing volume by Robert Frost and a book of light verse by Englishman John Betjeman leading the list. Frost's "Steeple Bush" seems to indicate to me that the man who is probably America's leading poet knows too much about poetry now. Betjeman's "Slick But Not Streamlined" is a sort of Auden-with-a-smile volume, or a happy Housman, although the talented Britisher is not so happy- happy as that might sound.

That's the best grain of the crop—or maybe I got fouled up and picked up the chaff.

EXCLUSIVE

man of the House Veterans Affairs committee and self-styled mother to the nation's ex-GIs, is already taking the pulse of Congressional opinion and pleading with her colleagues in private.

Asks Agitation

"We are winning several over to our side," she chirped happily to this columist. "We'll pass the legislation . . ."

Then she paused, adding darkly: "IF we get enough outside agitation."

Categorically, she blamed GOP Leader Charlies Halleck of Indiana for blocking the veterans benefit bills in the House after they had passed the Senate unanimously. Halleck, she said, plotted with Speaker Joe Martin and Rules Chairman Leo Allen to keep the bills off the floor during the final, hectic week.

"They promised me that some legislation would come out of Congress, but that promise was not filled," complained the lady from Massachusetts. "I think it would have been if agitation from the outside had been strong."

American Legion Blamed

In a private discussion with close friends, Mrs. Rogers flailed the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars for failing to back not only increases in students' subsistence and on-the-job training, but automobiles for the blind and amputees. She also warned that many veterans would be forced out of school by the rocketing cost of living.

"We have a contract to help those boys through school," declared the veterans' best friend in Congress, "and that contract has not been fulfilled."

Many veterans, impatient with reluctant veterans organizations, have formed their own independent lobbying campaign. They call it "Operation Subsistence," claim members from 350 campuses. They are working on a four-page circular to blast Congress, demanding an increase in subsistence to match the cost of living.

A group of them descended upon Rep. Robert Tripp Ross of New York, an outspoken veterans foe in the last session. He told them that many who voted against veterans subsistence will line up in favor when Congress reconvenes. He also indicated that the GOP leadership considered it enough to cash terminal leave bonds in one session, and was saving the subsistence bill for the election year.

What Happens in Congress

It may be of interest to students to recall what happened during the hectic closing days of the last Congress when thousands of stunned veterans searched the newspapers for word of an expected increase in students' subsistence, on-the-job training pay, plus promised automobiles for the blind and amputees. Though these bills had passed the Senate by unanimous vote, they never passed the House.

Inside story is that GOP bosses in the House quietly turned thumbs down on the veterans legislation. Strategy was plotted at a secret meeting of the Republican Steering Committee, where Indiana's Halleck argued that the Republican Party which had promised more economy than it had been able to legislate could not afford any more veterans benefits—at least not this year.

This caused a vigorous clash inside Republican ranks.

Rules Chairman Leo Allen obediently refused to grant necessary rules to permit a vote on the Veterans' bills. But Mrs. Rogers, also a Republican, refused to be bullied. For three days she struggled to force the bills before the House. Stubbornly she jumped to her feet at every opportunity, demanding unanimous consent to proceed. But Speaker Joe Martin shrugged her aside.

Finally Mrs. Rogers buttonholed both Martin and Halleck in private, trying every means of persuasion. But it was no go. Slumping into a chair in the cloakroom, she muttered bitterly:

"I don't know what to do. They don't give me excuses. They just get angry."

Slapping the Speaker

On the eve of adjournment, the lady from Massachusetts made a last desperate plea.

"I do not know how the members can go back and I do not know how I can go back," she cried, "and tell the veterans . . . 'No, the Congress has passed millions and millions of dollars for relief to foreign countries and never counted the cost but we are not passing legislation for the veterans because of the cost.' . . . I believe the leadership will bring up those bills for action tomorrow. I still have faith. I do not believe that faith will be betrayed."

But the session ended, and the bills were still bottled in Committee.

At the height of the battle, Washington's local AMVET post happened to select Speaker Joe Martin for an honorary life membership. Minority Leader Sam Rayburn was supposed to speak on the same program, but a last minute change kept him away, and Mrs. Rogers was hustled on the speakers' platform to take his place. Still smarting over the defeat of veterans' legislation and with the press safely absent, the lady from Massachusetts really let the honor guest have it.

"There have been times when I have hated Speaker Martin," she declared. "I suppose there have been times when he has hated me. But in a democracy we can disagree and still be friends afterward. . . . But I do wish he would let me be Speaker for a day."

Truman Was Lukewarm

At the closing day of Congress, Oregon's Senator Wayne Morse, who pushed the bills through the Senate, phoned Rep. Halleck, asking him to try to break the bottleneck. A Republican himself, he soundly denounced the Republican leadership for blocking action. Halleck replied by pointing out an excerpt from President Truman's State of the Union message: "Except for minor adjustments, I believe that our program of benefits for veterans is now complete."

"So you see," Halleck hedged, "the President won't sign those bills anyhow."

"If you really believe that," shot back Morse, "wouldn't it be wiser to pass the bills? It would be our chance to put the President on the spot."

Note—Although it was the Republican leadership that blocked the bills, most Democrats remained strangely silent throughout the battle. Minority Leader Sam Rayborn and Colorado's John Carroll publicly urged passage. But there was a reason why no one pressed the fight harder. A group of progressive Democrats, including Senator Claude Pepper of Florida, Congressman John Blatnik of Minnesota, and Congresswoman Helen Gahagan Douglas of California, called the Democratic National Committee, asking for a positive stand from the White House. Gael Sullivan's office then queried the White House, and received back a confidential memo which estimated that the proposed subsistence increase would cost approximately $250,000,000 annually which it termed "reasonable." But the White House memo went on to argue that, since it was late in the session, a message of support from the President would carry implication of support into the next session of Congress. The President could not commit himself that far ahead, the memo continued, since it was not known how much the Marshall Plan would cost.

Bumblebees wear a "fur coat" but usually die when Winter comes.

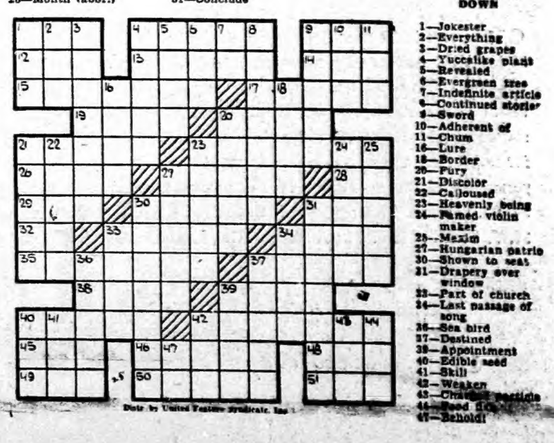
TOM ELLER

To Students!

Whether we are new students or old ones, we are entering something new—the academic year of 1947-48. Because we are a greater student body in number than ever before, we are obligated to be greater in spirit and accomplishment also.

It is more true than ever that our tranquility is interrupted and our facilities overtaxed. These adversities—insofar as they are adversities — should make us even more considerate of our fellow students.

Those of us responsible for campus government are looking forward to your support and help; we know we will receive it if we deserve it.



May I sincerely wish you all—from freshman to graduate student—a happy and educationally successful year.

Respectfully,

Tom Eller, Pres.

Tar Heels Set for 1947 Opener With Georgia Saturday

The Sporting Picture

By Billy Carmichael

The Big Question Mark

There is a question mark about the size of a Sunday morning hangover in the mind of John Q. Fan these days, and the whole problem boils down to the question of "Exactly how potent is the Carolina football aggregation?" On paper the Tar Heels look to be a powerhouse, with pre-season national write-ups rating the local entry everywhere from an optimistic No. 3 to a slightly more conservative eighth place position. But the nation's favorite fall sport will be played on turf, not wood pulp, this year, so Coach Carl Snavely's boys will have to prove themselves to everyone, including the silver-haired mentor himself.

Coach Carl, who has been sharing the crying towel with the rest of the country's leading football brains for the past weeks, has real cause for worry, and it is safe to attribute his facial expression of late of a back-breaking schedule, rather than possibly acute indigestion. Three of the Tar Heels' first four games are about national leaders: Georgia, Texas and Tennessee, and the fourth clash with Wake Forest won't be any Sunday school picnic. And if the Carolina club can ease by this quartet, there are still six more formidable opponents to cope with before trying to return down to the Creole country. It looks like ten busy Saturdays for eleven busy men.

The Silver Lining

Yet for those who must find the silver lining, there are a few bright spots in the whole picture, with the Tar Heel roster sporting both quantity and quality. Quantity, that is, if you count the top-flight material currently in casts and on crutches, for Coach Carl has as many men out on injuries as John L. Lewis has on strike. Nevertheless, position for position they have the potentialities if they can produce .

If the old adage that all's well that ends well holds true, the Tar Heels may do well, for the flank problem is no problem with an octet of big, fast ends ready to answer the opening whistle. The tackle spot looked good a few weeks ago, but Dame Injury has since taken her toll, and those left may have to play sixty minutes each in weather that makes such an undertaking quite a chore. The guard situation, though, is as bright as a summer day and leaves little to be desired. Center is a rat race, with four or five candidates climbing all over each other in competition for the starting berth. George Sparger, the ex-end has been shifted to the pivot post by way of blocking back, and has shown so much versitility of late, he will probably be called on to sell peanuts in the stands between halves.

The backfield prospect has that necessary tinge of class to it with the great one, Charlie Justice in the leading role, with a fine supporting cast headed by Pupa, Fitch, Camp, etc.

The Boys From Jaw-Jaw

Georgia, which has started breathing again after its affair with Furman last week comes to Chapel Hill minus its two Sugar Bowl stars, Gabe Hill and Charlie Trippi. The Bulldogs after playing dead last Friday for three quarters finally Frank Meriweiled themselves to victory with a 13-point spurt that sent chills up and down the spine of Carolina scout Russ Murphy. There is one thing to remember about these Peach state boys: when they start to move, they move.

The Carolina-Georgia game will be carried on possibly the largest sports radio hook-up ever assembled. Colorful Red Barber will be at the microphone for CBS on a 300-odd station network, and Harry Wismer, who saw Justice and injustice in the Sugar Bowl last year, will handle the duties for some 200 ABC stations. Add in two local networks and several independent stations with the Army Overseas circuit thrown in for good measure and you find that an awful lot of people will probably be listening to the battle. From the way they are building the game up, it might be worth taking in.

Cross Country Shows Promise Of Big Season

By Morty Schaap

Coach Dale Ranson starts his 23rd year as cross country coach at the University with one of the potentially best teams that has ever borne the blue and white over the hills and dales.

Of last year's Conference championship team the top eight men return. The schedule for the hill and dalers is not yet complete but most of the candidates are out working.

Coach Ranson is very anxious however to meet any men who are entered at the university that would like to participate in this sport. The coaching staff can be found at Fetzer field any afternoon after three o'clock.

Leading the harriers this year is last year's team captain and Southern Conference champion, Jimmy Miller. Miller one of the smallest men on the squad, was first in all of the meets run last year, and finished 13th over the five mile IC4A course in Van Cortland Park, N. Y.

Milne Back

Jack Milne, Junior from Toms River, N. J., returns to the turf with probably a better years ahead than the last one. When Milne reported last fall he had been away from running for five years as an officer in the Air Corps but blazed a winning pace in many a meet. When the outdoor track season came along Milne took 18 seconds off of the University two mile mark with a 9:20.5 mark at the Penn Relays.

Alvin Smith, a sophomore from Roanoke, Va., finished in the IC4A run to pace the Carolina team in that meet. Alvin was hot and cold during the season suffering from what might have been freshmen jitters, but the coaching staff is hoping that the slim Virginian will come through with top flight performances this year.

The Horatio Alger story of last year's harrier team was in the tale of Sam Magill. Magill came out for cross country the day that school started and was conceded little or no chance of making the grade. But persistent and dogged perseverence soon put him up with the best that Carolina could offer and he was a valued member of the team. Sam was 19 years old last year and now with a year's experience under his belt might well prove to be the best of the speedsters.

Mark Burnham, whom great things were expected from, never seemed to be able to get started last year but this may

42,000 Will Witness Return Encounter Of January 1 Sugar Bowl Opponents

By Bob Goldwater

The climax to four long and arduous weeks of pre-season practice is finally in sight for the 1947 Carolina gridmen and all appears in readiness for the season's curtain-raiser against Georgia here Saturday afternoon.

A sellout crowd of more than 42,000 will be on hand when the Sugar Bowl opponents of last New Year's Day take to the Kenan stadium turf for the 17th meeting on the gridiron between the two state institutions. The clash, rated as a tossup, will be the second of the year for the Bulldogs, who were not overly impressive in edging by Furman, 13-7, last Friday night.

Injured Players

Several injuries mar the otherwise good physical condition of the Tar Heels as they seek to gain revenge for the 20-10 setback suffered last January 1. Wingback B. K. Grow and tackle Paul Plunkett are on the sidelines with leg injuries that may keep them out all season, while the team's heaviest member, Bill "Earthquake" Smith, and blocking back Paul Rizzo possibly return to action next week. Joe Romano will also miss the Georgia tilt, having been called home because of death in his family.

As for the rest of the squad, most of last season's powerhouse is back for another rough-and-tumble campaign but the starting lineup will be considerably revamped from the eleven which opened in the Sugar Bowl. The backfield quartet of All-American candidate Charlie Justice, pile-driving Walt Pupa, shifty Jim Camp and Co-Captain Joe Wright remains intact but the forward wall is full of changes.

Sparger at Center

Chief of these is, without a doubt, the shifting of Co-Captain George Sparger from his customary berth at right end to the pivot spot at center. Coach Carl Snavely originally switched the versatile linesman to a blocking back position the need for a steady center resulted in the latest shift.

Another probable change appears at right guard, where George Roberts has moved in ahead of Sid Varney and Larry Klosterman. Bob Mitten takes over the left guard duties, upon the graduation of Ralph Strayhorn, while Len Szafaryn and Haywood Fowle occupy the tackle berths. A pair of new flankmen, Art Weiner and Mike Rubish, will anchor down the opposite ends of the line.

Allen to Start Soccer Drills Today at Four

Soccer makes its debut as a full-fledged sport at Carolina this afternoon when Coach Marvin Allen meets candidates for the 1947 team at four o'clock in room 304 of Woollen Gym.

Soccer, played as an experiment last fall has been raised to the level of a monogram sports this year by the University Athletic officials because of the large interest shown in the game last season.

A large squad of potential booters is expected to greet Coach Allen with several veterans of last year expected to be on hand. All students interested in the sport, whether having previous experience or not, are invited to tryout for the team.

This afternoon's meeting will be an organizational session with objectives and plans team being announced for the squad, after which time equipment will be issued to the candidates.

Impressive Schedule

Coach Allen announced that an impressive schedule has been arranged for the team with a two-day sweep into Maryland to play Loyola of Baltimore and Navy, the feature attraction of the card. Other contests listed on the schedule find home-and-home games with Duke and Virginia. Several more clashes will probably be added to give the locals heavy competition throughout the season.

Last season in its initial year at Carolina, soccer did not fare too well, losing five straight encounters, after copping the opening clash with Virginia. This year, though, Coach Allen hoped for better results with a year of experience behind.

Soccer is a fast-rising sport in this area with several Southern colleges adding it to its varsity program each year.

Gym Majors to Meet

There will be an important meeting of all male undergraduate physical education majors on Friday, September 26, at 2:15 p.m. in 304 Woollen, the athletic department announced yesterday.

Plans For Mural Program to Be Organized at Meeting Next Week

Tag Football, Volleyball, Wrestling, Table Tennis to Feature Fall Slate

By Taylor Vaden

The intramural athletic program, designed to provide every student in the University with the opportunity to paticipate in the athletic or recreative activity of his choice, will get under way with a meeting of all newly elected intramural managers of dormitory, fraternity, and independent organizations next Tuesday, October 7, at 7:30 p.m. in 302 Woollen, according to irector Walter Rabb.

There will be a meeting of all students interested in officiating in intramural tag football games in 311 Woollen gym on Tuesday, September 30, at 2 o'clock.

The fall quarter program will consist of tournaments in tag football, table tennis, wrestling, volleyball, and tennis, as well as recreational activity in badminton each Tuesday evening.

First Game

First tag football game is scheduled for Thursday, October 9, on the intramural field. Entry deadline for competing teams is Tuesday, October 7. One organization may enter up to three teams in each scheduled activity. Entries may be made at the intramural managers' meeting.

The tennis is slated to get under way October 8, with competition to be divided into open and novice groups. Whether intramural points will be awarded for this out-of-season activity will be decided at the meeting next week.

Tentative starting dates for other fall activities are: table tennis, Wednesday, November 5; wrestling, Wednesday, November 12; volleyball, Wednesday, November 19; Badminton, Tuesday, September 30.

The intramural department will again present a handsome twelve-inch silver trophy for permanent possession to the dormitory and fraternity managers voted best for the year in their respective divisions. The Grail will make a similar award to the athlete in each division who collects the greatest number of points for participating in intramural sports.

In the fraternity division, teams will compete for the first time for sports trophies donated by various fraternities. Winners will keep the trophies for one year.

BEEF TRUST. . . .

Tar Heels to Hold Slight Weight Edge Over Bulldogs in Saturday's Encounter

By Bill Kellem

A husky, all-veteran forward wall will be leading King Carl Snavely's vengeful eleven into battle in Kenan stadium on Saturday afternoon when they open the 1947 grid season against the University of Georgia Bulldogs.

Carolina's probable starting forwards will average 195 pounds per man and the backs around 184. If Bulldog Coach Wally Butts opens with the same starters he used in the Georgia-Furman contest, his line should average 196 pounds and his runners approximately 178 pounds. Thus, two rugged and evenly matched teams should put on a whale of a battle in the local stadium.

Art Weiner, 212, and Joe Romano, 200, were the leading candidates to open at left end. Weiner is rated as the best pass received on the squad and will probably see action mostly on offense, with Romano taking care of the defensive work. Dan Edwards, 185, the Bulldogs' top receiver and team captain will open at one of Georgia's flanks.

Bob Cox, weighing 195 and Carolina's extra point ace, will probably get the nod over big Mike Rubish, 206, at the opposite flank. However, "Rubo", Bill Pritchard, 190, and Dan Logue, 197, also will see quite a bit of duty.

Chunky Heywood Fowle, 195, definitely will open at left tackle for the Tar Heels. Gigantic Stan Marczyk, 242, and Jack Ross, 210, are other aspirants for Fowle's starting spot. Big Bill "Earthquake" Smith, 250, had been counted on by Snavely to play a lot of tackle this season but a broken ankle has sidelined him indefinitely. Carl George, 195 pound sophomore, will start at right tackle for the Bulldogs.

Len Szafaryn, 195, will open at right tackle for the locals with Ted Hazelwood, 230, Pete Rywak, 200, and Joe Gurtis, 205, in reserve. Sophomore Jack Bush, 215, will open at left tackle for the Bulldogs with Clayton Deavers, 190, ready to step in at any time.

Harry Varney, 180, the Tar Heels' "toy bulldog" will be ready to chew up any Bulldogs who try to run over him at his starting right guard spot. Larry Klosterman, 210, and George Roberts, 205, will probably see action at the same position also.

Big Bob Mitten, 198, will definitely open at the other guard spot for the Snavelymen with Bill Wardle, 189, Emmett Cheek, 190, and Max Spurlin, 198, in reserve.

Ex-end and blocking back George Sparger, 202, will probably open at the pivot spot for the locals but Dan Stiegman, 195, lanky Al Bernot, 204, and Joe Swicegood, 195, are also due to see action.

Five UNC Mermen Spearhead Tarboro Victory in Florida Meet

A swimming team representing Tarboro, N. C., and spearheaded by five boys from Carolina, splashed off with top honors in the first annual Daytona Beach, Fla., swim meet this summer. Dick Twining, who swam for UNC in 1945 and will return this year, also participated, gaining the individual high scorer's trophy.

Ben Ward led the Tar Heel contingent, finishing first in the breaststroke, second in the 50-year freestyle, and third in the 100-yard freestyle. Dan Breeden placed third in the 100-yard breaststroke, Mike Morrow had a third in the individual medley, and Garnett McCoy placed second in the breaststroke. Bill Ward, of State college, won the 50-yard freestyle and placed second in the 100-yard freestyle.

Sam McCauley, Morrow, Ben Ward, and Bill Ward won the 400-yard freestyle relay; and McCoy, Ben Ward and Bill Ward copped the medley relay. McCauley, Morrow, and Breedon were second in the medley relay.

Also in the Daytona Beach event were teams representing Cuba, Atlanta, Florida University, Lakewood, Fla., and an Army Air Force team from Texas.

A COACH DOESN'T HAVE TO BE TOUGH

While other coaches were fumbling with the perplexing G. I. problem in football last season, Illinois' obscure Ray Eliot (real name: Nusspickel) hit the jackpot in the Western Conference and in a decisive 45-14 rout in the Rose Bowl. He tries no top-sergeant stuff, yet he ended up as "Coach of the Year." For full details about Ray's sudden and surprising success, be sure to read A Coach Doesn't Have to be Tough, an exciting article in this week's Post . . .

Scott to Start Cage Practice In Two Weeks

Coach Tom Scott will begin preparations for the coming basketball season by issuing the first call for candidates during the second week in October. The first few days will be devoted to freshman and new students who wish to compete for varsity positions. All interested candidates should report for these first practices.

The White Phantoms will have to prepare themselves for a very gruelling schedule that includes games with some of the leading teams in the East. Among the opponents appear such standouts as Temple, NYU, Pennsylvania, Loyola, and Tennessee in addition to such traditional rivals as N. C. State, Duke, and Wake Forest.

The 1946 squad will return intact with the exception of Jim Hamilton, Jim White, and Jim Hayworth, who have used up eligibility time. Bob "Mr. Rebound" Paxton, all-southern forward, John Dillon, All-American center of 1945, Norm Kohler, stellar guard, and Nemo Nearman, who ousted Dillon from the pivot position last year, are the returning veterans from last season's runner-up team in the conference tournament at Durham.

Other returning lettermen include Taylor Thorne, Dick Hartley, and Roger Scholbe, all of whom saw much action last year and are being counted on for this year.

The 1947 quintet got off to a slow start but hit its stride about mid-season and registered a twelve-game winning streak before losing a 50-48 decision to State's Red Terrors in the finals of the Conference tournament.

Letter Courtesy

The Monogram club announces that in courtesy to the Monogram winners at the University no other high school or college letters should be worn on the campus.

Harvie Ward Invited To Play in Masters

Harvie Ward, rising junior from Tarboro, became the first Carolina student to receive an invitation to compete in the Masters golf tournament scheduled for next April at Augusta, Ga., when such a bid was tendered him earlier this week.

Ward was a member of Carolina's Southern conference championship golf team last spring. The 22-year old golfer stroked his way to the quarter finals of the National amateur meet at Pebble Beach, Cal., earlier this month.

Seven Veterans Return to Bolster 1948 Mat Team

Carolina's wrestling team will resume practice on October 15 with high hopes of successfully defending their Southern conference championship of 1947, according to Coach Hobie McKeever.

Returning from last year's championship team are conference title-holders Irving Zirpel at 155 jounds and Laurie Hooper, winner of the unlimited division. In addition to these defending champions, the following lettermen are returning: Oscar Gupton at 175, Bill Kemp and Lem Gibbons at 165, Doug Thompson at 121, and Tom Urquhart at 128. Although not a letterman, Carroll Fisher, a winner in last year's intramural tournament, has developed very rapidly and seems to be the leading contender for the 145 pound division.

Coach McKeever is very optimistic over the prospects of the team and is very hopeful of keeping the championship right here at Carolina. The team will sorely miss such stellar performers from last year's unit as co-captains T. A. Hearn, winner of the conference 128-pound class last year, and Dick Seaver, runner-up in the 145-pound class.

SUMMER SENSATIONS

Carolinians Star In National Events

Tar Heel sports enthusiasts had much to cheer for during the summer as competitors in three sports showed plenty of savvy and prowess in national competition.

Vic Seixas played the summer tennis circuit from the west coast to the eastern seaboard and made a fine showing in all the tourney play. He teamed with Sv Greenberg of Chicago in doubles and the tandem was a hard nut to crack. Tennis play wound up with the National Singles competition at the West Side Tennis Club in Forest Hills. N. Y. Seixas and teammate Clark Taylor both were entered. Taylor was eliminated in the first round by Frank Parker, former National champion.

Seixas defeated Jack Tuero of New Orleans, winner of the Sugar Bowl championship, in the first round. However after winning his way past the fourth round he ran into Mr. Frank "Tar Heel killer" Parker and finally succumbed after four grueling sets. Reports stated that it was one of the best matches of the tourney. Eventually Parker lost in the finals to Jack Kramer after five blistering sets.

Ward Excels

Out at Pebble Beach, California in the National Amateur Golf tournament little Harvie Ward blasted all competition aside and swept to the quarter-final round where he was ousted by Felice Torza of Connecticut. Ward was playing fine golf and the Tarboro flash, who is only a rising Junior, gave warning that he will be a menace to all on the links.

On the cinder paths Chunk Simmons, after capturing a second place to Harrison Dillard in the National AAU 110 meter hurdle event, was selected to make a European jaunt with an American squad. Chunk competed all through middle and southern Europe and was undefeated in the hurdles and set records at about every port of debarkation. He also threw the javelin, ran the sprints and competed in a relay team.

Other tracksters that were active over the summer were Jack Moody, who high jumped better than 6 feet 7 inches in the New Jersey AAU meet. Jack Milne and Jimmy Miller in the distances and Bob Seligman in the weight events.

JV Grid Drills To Start Today

Candidates for Carolina's 1947 jayvee football squad are requested to report to Coach Crowell Little in Woollen gym this afternoon at 3 o'clock for issuance of equipment.

Five games definitely have been scheduled for the jayvee squad, with several more contests under consideration. The slate will open on Oct. 10 against the "B" team of N. C. State. Other foes will be jayvee squads from South Carolina, Virginia, Duke, and Navy.

Missing from last year's strong Carolina squad will be such standouts as Chunk Simball this season, Joe Swicegood, mons, who is not out for footand Max Cooke, the latter two having been elevated to the varsity. Outstanding holdovers are Joe Kosinski, Jack Brasington, Bob Koontz, Kenan Rand, and Pete Rywak.

Coach Little's 1947 jayvees scored wins over the Navy "B" squad and the Newport News Apprentice school, tied Virginia and High Point college; and dropped their only tilt to the Duke Jayvees.

Cross Country

be the season that will put this amiable lad from Massachusetts up in the fore-front.

Julian Mackenzie, from Salisbury, showed promise in his freshman and sophomore years of being one of of the greatest distance runners that Carolina had ever had. But when he returned from service last year he never could quite gain his pre-war form. However this season may be the one that Mac has been waiting for.

Walt Francis turned in his best performance during the conference championships last year and may be a big help to the Tar Heel squad.

Halstead Holden, the last of the returning Carolina monogram winners, ran the long distances for the first time last year as a freshman and turned in some creditable times and performances. This big raw boned boy from Durham may well be the surprize of the Ranson combine this fall.

Undefeated Last Year

The harriers this season will be out to equal the all winning mark of last year's team which took wins over Quantico Marines, Navy, Coast Guard Academy, uke, State, Georgia Tech and Virginia, plus the conference championship and a fourth place finish in a twenty eight team IC4A run in New York.

However, Coach Ranson reiterates his call for all men to come down and workout as no places are actually sewed up on the team. Ranson maintains that hard work and perseverence are the main attributes of cross country running and any new man may find himself running on the varsity.

If sufficient interest is shown it may be possible to have a freshman schedule drawn up.

The coaching staff desires to have all men interested in managerial posts report to Fetzer field at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

MONOGRAM CLUB

There will be an important meeting of the Monogram club at the clubhouse at 7:30 Monday evening.

President Len Szafaryn urges all members to be on hand for this initial session.

Blue Dolphins Start Practice In Mid-Octobe

Swimming practice for Car lina's Blue Dolphins will get u derway on October 15 and pro pects point toward a successf season for the men of Coa Dick Jamerson. Carolina coppe the Southern conference tit last season.

Assisting Jamerson this yea will be Ralph Casey, who las year served as head couch o the VMI swimmers. Casey pil oted the Carolina frosh to a re ord of 31 straight wins in 193 42 prior to going to VMI. He the brother of Willie Cas head coach of the State colle swimming squad.

Several key men on Ca lina's conference champs of l year will be missing this se son. Warren Ficklen, Bud Crone, and Pete Hexner we lost by graduation, and Garne McCoy transferred to Virgini Returning lettermen are Nor Sper, the diving specialist, Je ry Cooke, conference brea stroke champion, co-captai Mike Morrow and Jesse Gree baum, Sam McCauley, Bob Hu ton, Ike Norwood, Dan Breede and Bob Elliot.

The team will be boosted the return of Dick Twining, wh was in the Army. John Thomas backstroke ace from Baltimor Ronnie Basescu, and Joe Wra ten are freshmen who are ex pected to figure high in th team scoring.

From JC Queen to Miss Durham IsHallie Dockery's Beauty Route

Former campus beauty and PiKA Dream Girl of a few years back barely missed being the North Carolina entrant in the Miss America contest held at Atlantic City this year. Five feet four inch Hallie Dockery of Rusk, N. C. became Miss Durham of 1947 at the Miss North Carolina meet at Wrightsville Beach last month.

Miss Dockery was the choice of radio station WTIK, Durham, where she is now employed as a continuity writer and where she also conducts an early morning program appropriately called "Tips and Tunes." The contest was held in Duke Park and last year's winner, Miss Betsy Crisp, crowned the new queen.

Although beauty contest winning is commonplace with Miss Dockery, the Durham beauty crown climaxed a career which began when she was chosen May Queen at Pfeiffer Junior College. As a Carolina co-ed Miss Dockery was not only an attendant in the May court, but two years ago her photograph adorned the pages of the Yackety Yack after she was chosen the PIKA Dream Girl.

Miss Dockery is also proud of the fact that although she is a consistent winner in beauty contests, her collegiate career was marked also by service with many campus groups, including the Playmakers, Sound and Fury, CICA, and the YWCA.

It's the smile that does it! Happy Hallie Dockery, who once (last year) graced the Carolina campus has been smiling for some time—ever since she took her first beauty title at junior college. Since then she's been the queen of anything at the drop of a blue ribbon. At the moment, though she's hiding her light under a bushel—as the unseen lady behind the mike at a Durham radio station. If anyone is interested the picture was taken at Wrightsville Beach while Hallie was shooting for the "Miss North Carolina" crown.

Institute Plans Unique Police Training Course

A four week school in Basic Police Procedure will be offered by the Institute of Government of the University this fall.

This course is to be the first of its kind in the state if not in the nation. Covering elementary methods of police procedure the classes will include arrest, search and seizure, use of firearms and patrol techniques. Among the more advanced courses will be the use of scientific aids in crime detection. Also photography, court room demeanor, use of evidence, preservation of evidence, public relations and fingerprinting.

The four week course of 200 hours beginning Nov. 2nd. will be limited to 50 new officers for each class. Enrollment will not necessarily consist of police officers from North Carolina only.

Students May Appear In Carnegie Concert

Students who are interested in appearing in a Carnegie hall concert under the auspices of the Associated Concert Bureau have been given more time to make their applications for auditions. As late as next Wednesday, piano, violin, and voice aspirants may enter the second annual ACB contest for which preliminary auditions will be held from October to March throughout the country, the Carnegie Hall concert presenting the finalists on April 13, 1948. Entry blanks can be obtained by writing to the Associated Concert Bureau, 1775 Broadway, New York 19, New York .

Combat veterans of the 100th Infantry "Century" Division in their first post-war convention in Raleigh last weekend reorganized a nucleus of the Century Association. Talks by R. Gregg Cherry, governor of North Carolina, and Josephus Daniels, former Ambassador to Mexico and publisher of the Raleigh News and Observer highlighted the three-day session .

Over 100 men from states as far away as Nebraska, Michigan, and Florida elected as president Roland Giduz of Chapel Hill in a business session held Saturday afternoon. A resolution endorsing a plan of universal military training was unanimously passed in the name of the Century Association.

Phi Assembly to Meet

A special supper meeting of the Phi Assembly has been called for this evening when all regular and associate-members will meet in the Carolina Inn at 6 p.m.

Acting Speaker John Giles states that plans are to be formulated regarding the election of officers for the fall quarter, and a tentative program adopted for the forthcoming year.

Delivery Complaints

If you failed to receive prompt delivery of your DTH this morning, please turn in a complaint to DTH Circulation Dept., second floor Graham Memorial, or drop it in the complaint box in the Y. Anyone wishing to air complaints to the circulation manager personally may call at his office in Graham Memorial between 12 and 2 o'clock daily, except Mondays.

Students who did not properly fill out the DTH address card in the registration line cannot expect delivery. You are entitled to receive the DTH—please send in your address so that it can be delivered to you. And notify the department promptly of any change of address, so that it will keep coming.

Traffic Signal Time Changed on Franklin

In an effort to speed movement of traffic through Chapel Hill's business district the interval of the spotlight at Franklin and Columbia streets has been increased from 20 to 30 seconds, Police Chief W. T. Sloan announced yesterday.

The longer duration of the signal will allow more cars to cross the intersection during a single cycle, eliminating much starting and stopping during busy hours, Chief Sloan explained.

Cole Orchestra To Record 'Hark Sound',

By JIM KLUTTZ

"Hark the Sound," the University's Alma Mater song, has been recorded for commercial purposes by Roy Cole and his 14-piece orchestra, which is composed of students—all war veterans.

This is the first time that the popular college song has been recorded since Kay Kyser did it a number of years ago.

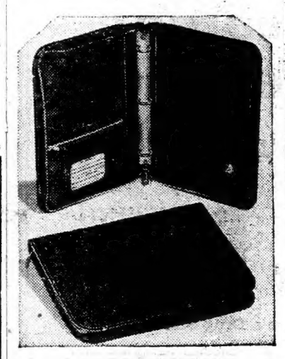
The reverse side of the recording is a medley of Carolina songs, including "Tar Heels on Hand," the "Victory March," and others. This record will be distributed to various radio stations in the State.

A native of Forest City, Roy Cole, although a youngster, is almost a veteran in the music business. Prior to the war he entered the University and played with the popular student bands fronted by Freddie Johnson and Ted Ross. He entered the service early in 1941, and served in the European theatre of operations.

Most of the men in his band played with him before the war, or were army friends of his. His pianist, Frank Settlemyre, has done arrangements for Dean Hudson, while his vocalist, George Demas, is considered one of the best singers in this section, and has had several offers to go with professional bands.

This fall Cole plans to enlarge his band by adding a string section, which, he says, would give him the only such band in this section. He will play a weekly radio program, sponsored by the University Radio department, which will broadcast over a network of North Carolina stations.

Radio Exams Slated



The qualifying examination for all students entering the Department of Radio in the Fall Quarter 1947 will be administered in the radio classroom, second floor, Swain hall, at 2:30 p.m. today.

Electricity is used on more than 3,000,000 U. S. farms.

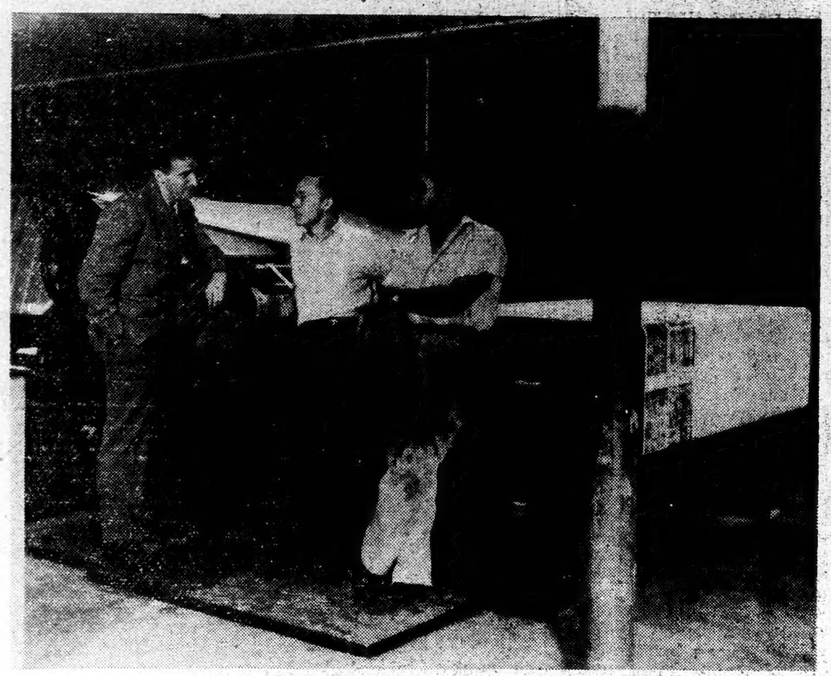
Ex-Tar Heel Editors Campbell, Carter Head New Printing Shop to Publish DTH

$30,000 Plant Is Located In Carrboro

By Bill Sexton

A printshop that in two months has grown from dream to newspaper plant becomes the new home for production of the Daily Tar Heel with this issue.

Two former editors of the DTH head the new plant, Colonial Press, Inc., which has been awarded a two-year contract by the Publications board. They are Orville Campbell, president, who served as editor in 1941 and 1942, and General Manager Horace Carter, 1944 editor.



New Equipment

Equipment valued at more than $30,000 has already been installed in the plant's new building in Carrboro. A Duplex newspaper press capable of printing, cutting, and folding 3500 eight-page papers per hour is in operation. Two linotype machines, new type, saws, router, and other equipment have been installed, and machinery for job printing is on order.

A just-completed building, destined till mid-July to house a grocery store and roofing company, is home of the plant. highway 54 near the Carrboro Constructed by J. J. Glawson of Chapel Hill, it is located on city limits.

Campbell, veteran of four years' Navy service, comes to Chapel Hill from Womens' College, where he was news bureau director. Also a Navy veteran, Carter has operated two weekly papers in eastern North Carolina since the war's end. The pair had considered opening a printing plant since they served together on the Daily Tar Heel staff, and the Publications board's search for adequate printing facilities prompted their organization of Colonial Press.

Charles E. Weaver, former DTH makeup man at the Orange Printshop, has been named foreman in charge of DTH production.

The three men and machine shown above will be big factors in publishing the Daily Tar Heel this year. Orville Campbell(left) is president of the recently established Colonial Press, Inc., which will print the student newspaper. With him are Horace Carter, general manager, and Ed Weaver (right) shop foreman. Both Campbell and Carter are former editors of the Daily Tar Heel.

GI Bill Benefits To Be Increased, AVC Head Predicts

By Ken Rothwell

During the last session of congress a bill to increase the amount of GI subsistence passed the senate without a single dissenting vote only to fizzle out anti-climactically in a house committee during the closing hours of the congress.

"That bill," says chairman Ben Rouzie of the Chapel Hill chapter of the American Veterans committee, "was sponsored by AVC alone among all the national veterans organizations. Its near passage, despite the relative indifference of the average veteran attending school, is an indication of what can be done when the veterans of World War II stand together for what they want."

Rouzie added that as a result of last year's spade-work by AVC's Washington representatives the bill is almost insured of passage early in the next session of congress.

Rouzie described the American Veterans committee as an organization of some 130,000 World War II veterans who believe that the war against injustice did not end when the last shot was fired. "To this end chapters all over the country," he said, "on and off-campus, work together for such things as improved housing, a sounder economy, and a more active participation in local affairs on the part of its membership."

"We will meet for the first time this quarter at 7:30 PM next Tuesday evening, Sept. 30, in the rear of the Presbyterian church. All veterans on campus are urged to attend," said Rouzie.

Men's Honor Council Decision Revoked By Faculty Appeal Board

In Music and Dramatic Art

Andrews, Ayers Get Kyser Scholarships

HAROLD L. ANDREWS

WILLIAM R. AYERS

Awards Established in 1941 Give Tuition, Fees, Books, and Board

Harold Lee Andrews of Durham, sophomore, and William Rufus Ayers of Roanoke, Va., senior, have been awarded the Kay Kyser scholarships in music and dramatic art, respectively for the coming year at the University.

These two scholarships, established in 1941 by Kay Kyser, famous band leader and radio personality, furnish the winners with tuition, fees, room, board, and books for one year at Chapel Hill. Basis of selection is character, scholastic rank, leadership achievements, and promise of future distinction in dramatic art or music.

Andrews, winner of the music award, graduated from the Durham high school in June, 1946, as valedictorian of his class, holding honors in the high school band and student government. He received a scholarship to the music school at Interlochen, Mich., for last summer, and returned to enter the University here last fall. He holds a four-year International Civitan scholarship and a University scholarship here. During the past year he participated in activities of the University band and orchestra and was an honor student.

Ayers, winner of the drama award, attended V.P.I. to study chemistry before 1944 when he entered the Navy V-12 program here at the University and became interested in the Carolina Playmakers. After a year of active duty with the Navy he returned to the University in 1946 where he has been an honor student ever since. During the past year he has worked in a technical capacity with "The Lost Colony" at Manteo.

SQUARE DANCE SET

Everyone is invited to an old-fashioned square dance Saturday night at the Presbyterian Church, 8:30 P.M. Greenhorns and old hoe-downers invited for fun, frolic and refreshments. Hibert Thatcher will do the calling.

TARNATION STAFF

All students, new and old, who are interested in working on the editorial and business staffs of Tarnation, college humor magazine, will meet this afternoon at 3 o'clock in Roland Parker Lounge No. 1, Graham Memorial.

Playmakers Book 'Saint Joan' As First of Five Productions

Five major productions will be featured during the 30th season of the Carolina Playmakers it was announced last night, and tryouts for the first play, "Saint Joan" by George Bernard Shaw, will be held in the Playmakers Theatre at 4:00 and 7:30 P. M. on Wednesday, October 1.

This season is the 30th consecutive year of activity by the Playmakers, a community theatre serving as a laboratory organization of the department of dramatic art. A full schedule of eighteen experimental plays, arranged in six bills, is planned in addition to the five major productions of full length plays.

Hans Rothe, guest lecturer, recently from Madrid, Spain, who will direct "Saint Joan," urges all students and townspeople who are interested in taking part in any phase of the production to attend tryouts. Scripts of the play are available now in the reserve room of the library to anyone who wishes to study them before tryouts. "Saint Joan" is to be presented on October 29, 30, 31 and November 1.

Tells Story

"Saint Joan" tells the story of Joan of Arc, burnt at the stake for heresy, witchcraft, and sorcery in 1431, but who was canonized in 1920. It is the story of a girl in her teens, a country girl, who became the most notable warrior saint in the Christian calendar.

It will be followed on the schedule by Henrik Ibsen's powerful drama, "An Enemy of the People," as the second major production, to be presented December 3, 4, 5, and 6. For the third full length production the Playmakers will go back to the famed Gilbert and Sullivan operatta, "The Mikado," which will be produced jointly with the music department on January 30 and 31. On March 10, 11, 12, and 13, a new full length play by a student author will be produced, and the Forest Theatre production will be "The Shoemakers' Holiday" by Thomas Dekker. This famous Elizabethan farce-comedy will be presented on May 21, 22, and 23, and is being specially adapted for presentation in the outdoor theatre.

The annual season ticket sale will start Monday with the price of season tickets set at three dollars, tax included. The regular price for admission to single plays is one dollar. The tickets may be obtained either from Ledbetter-Pickard's on Franklin street, or from the Playmaker business office in Swain hall.

University Will Be Host For Conference On UN

Leading Diplomats Plan Meeting Here Opening October 1

A three-day conference on the United Nations, with leading diplomats from several countries in attendance, is scheduled for the University from Wednesday, Oct. 1, through Friday, Oct. 3, Lincoln S. H. Kan, North Carolina Director of the Collegiate Council on United Nations, announced today.

Kan said four diplomats had agreed to attend the session, but that they would not be named until a later date.

The purpose of this first annual inter-collegiate conference on the United Nations, according to Kan :to provide special opportunity for the study of the United Nations through the media of speakers, class lectures with visiting professors and United States State department personnel. "The chief emphasis," he said, "will be on how the students of North Carolina can participate in making the United Nations strong."

Faculty Advisers

Dr. Frank Graham, permanent adviser of the North Carolina CCUN, will act as adviser for the special conference along with Dr. C. B. Robson, who heads a faculty advisory board.

Special committees announced today for the October conference: Registration, John Van Hecke; Faculty and Forum, Randall McLeod; Foreign Students, Benita Santes and Martha Manning; Reception, Charlie McCrae; Dance, Bob McCune and Harold Kastner; and Publicity, Harry Snowden and Art Milton.

The conference will have extensive radio coverage.

Set Deadline On Registering

The deadline for registering for this fall quarter and for dropping and adding courses has been set by South building officials as 5 o'clock, next Tuesday, September 30. All students who have yet to register must pay the customary fine for late registration to the University cashier and consult their advisers and deans before that time.

Course alterations must also be completed by Tuesday. After that, no subjects can be added or replaced if the student concerned expects degree credit for them. Necessary changes will be made not for failure of the prerequisite course, commuting from a distance, mistakes in the original registration such as conflicts of hours, verified conflicts with self-help work necessary to the student, and last chance at specific requirements for graduation.

However, students will not be permitted to change courses at one hour for the same courses at another hour in an attempt to dodge either professors or hours because of the inevitable chaos of records and class rolls such a procedure would create with 4,200 students preregistered for the fall quarter and approximately 2,800 others accepted since September 22.

DTH Meeting

Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock all persons interested in working on the news staff of the Daily Tar Heel will meet in the DTH office at Graham Memorial with Managing Editor Earl Heffner.

Applicants for staff membership, both new and old, must attend if interested in working on the newspaper.

Campus Club Is "Bigger, Better"

Candlelight Room of Graham Memorial Set To Open Tonight Under Name of Rendezvous

It's all new! Everything about it has changed, bigger, and better. Graham Memorial's new campus club, fomerly the Candelight room, will open this evening.

"We've whitewashed the place clean and turned it upside down," said Don English, erstwhile student manager of the recreation and social center. "The whole room is now in the traditional Carolina color and atmosphere. We want to make the Rendezvous the meeting place for everyone in their spare time."

Music by Gardner

Feature of tomorrow evening's grand opening will be Scotty Gardner's six-piece combo which will play regularly in the Rendezvous. Besides playing for the Y court dances this summer, Gardner and his group have been well-known in Chapel Hill for the past two years at the Terrace View, and with Johnny Satterfield's orchestra.

DON ENGLISH

Decorations throughout are all new, in a Carolina blue and white motif. A three-flight bandstand has been built in and a new enlarged refreshment bar installed. At the north end a comfortabbie lounge is set up around the fireplace. There is an entrance at the back end through the outdoor terrace, and whenever weather permits, tables will be set up there.

Opening at 6 o'clock every evening, the Rendezvous will feature recorded music or a juke box, and Gardner's orchestra on special occasions. Depending on student response to the present setup, English announced, the club may open during the afternoons later.

Student Talent

On the entertainment side, student talent will be utilized to the fullest. Specialties and smaller entertainments will be presented regularly by Sound and Fury, the campus musical comedy group.

At the refreshment counter an elaborate selection of sandwiches, pastries, cookies, soft drinks, ice cream, milk shakes, candy, coffee, and hot chocolate may be purchased. Student waiters will give table service to couples.

Sound and Fury to Present Frosh Show Tonight after Pep Rally Is Conducted

By Bill Buchan

Sound and Fury, Carolina's musical comedy organization, will present its first production of the season tomorrow night in the form of a Frosh Night Show in Memorial Hall immediately following the Carolina-Georgia Pep Rally at 8:30. No admission will be charged.

The show will consist of acts from "Weep No More," Sound and Fury's successful production, and new skits. Specialty numbers will include an Arabian spectacle number, "1102d Tale of Scherherazade," "In The Soap Opera," and "Music, Melodrama, and Magnolias," a large production number.

Fall plans of the organization include two shows, including a fall musical with original book and music, produced as a regular Broadway production.

Officers for the school year are, president, Douglas Gardner; secretary-treasurer, Nancy Tucker; musical director, Frank Matthews; sets and costumes, Pete Strader; stage manager, John McBride, lighting, Colbert Leonard and Jim Byrd; publicity, Jerry Weiss, Make-up, Ed Fleming. Sound and Fury offices for the present are located on the top floor of Memorial Hall.

National Radio Show Will Originate Here

Participating for the first time in a nationwide network program, the new Communications Center will originate portions of "Our Town Speaks" over WDUK and the American Broadcasting system Saturday afternoon at 1:30.

A regular Saturday ABC feature, the program comes to Durham as a part of the weekend Tobacco Festival. It includes on-the-spot reports from Duke and Carolina and a Durham tobacco warehouse, and speeches by Durham civic leaders.

The Communications center here will originate two portions of the program, an interview with coaches Carl Snavely and Wally Butts before the Carolina-Georgia game, and an authors' round table featuring Betty Smith, Noel Houston, James Street, and Paul Green of the Chapel Hill community.

Civic leaders Frank Pierson of the Durham Chamber of Commerce, Supervisor Luther Cheek of the Tobacco Market, and W. W. Couch of the Durham Hosiery Mills will represent the area's industry. The 100-voice Duke choir will sing directly from Duke chapel.

Portal-to-Portal Suits Show Climb

Washington, Sept. 25—(UP)—The Federal Court system today issued a report showing that the number of suits claiming wage-hour law violations has doubled during the past two years. The report says that this does not include more than two thousand portal-to-portal back pay claims filed in the last 12 months.

In Jamertown, New York some 250 CIO United Steel workers went on strike at the Chriscraft plant. The walkout was the first to be called by the union since the Taft-Hartley law went into effect.

In Boston, a former government employe convicted of concealing his membership in the communist party today said that the time has come for labor to fight back against big business. The appea lwas made by Carl Marzani, at the convention of CIO Electrical Workers.

Eminent Politicians Invited Here by CPU

Several outstanding political and diplomatic figures have been invited by the Carolina Political Union to speak on the campus this fall, Bill Kemp, CPU chairman announced yesterday.

Josef Winiewicz, Polish ambassador, is expected to speak sometime this fall in conjunction with the International Relations club. Sen. Robert A. Taft, Ohio's presidential candidate, a previous visitor to Chapel Hill, has shown much interest in coming here again this year. The union has contacted other notables, but their appearances are too indefinite to announce as yet.

The union's regular weekly meeting, held every Sunday night in the Grail Room of Graham Memorial at 8 PM, are open to the public, and topics to be discussed are announced in advance. At present there are several membership vacancies in the union, Kemp announced, urging anyone interested in joining to apply for membership.

A number of polls and forums have been planned for the year to stimulate interest in the major problems of the day.

Officials Explain Naming Procedure Of New Buildings

For the information of freshmen and other new students who have been puzzled by names of buildings on their class tickets such as "Hill X" and "Phillips Y," registration officials have requested that the following explanation be brought to light.

New students have undoubtedly noticed the "new" white frame buildings which dot the campus in the shadows of others which have been standing in some cases for more than a century. The structures are war surplus property brought piece by piece from Camp Forrest, Tennessee, a few months ago, and set up here as temporary relief from crowded classroom conditions.

Since they are not permanent, they were merely named after the campus building close to which they stand. For example, the three frame stuctures which were erected beside Venable hall are called Vensble X, Venable Y, and Venable Z.

R. H. Sherrill, UNC Professor, Dies at Durham

Robert Howard Sherrill, 44, professor in the University School of Commerce since 1929, died in Watts hospital in Durham at 8 o'clock last night following an illness of three months.

He is survived by his wife, the former Miss Elizabeth Frye of Statesville, and a daughter, Patsy, 14. He was the son of the late Rev. and Mrs. R. D. Sherrill.

Following cremation, graveside services will be held at the Chapel Hill cemetery at 10 o'clock today with Rev. E. C. Cooper of the Lutheran Church officiating.

A native of Morganton, Dr. Sherrill attended the University of North Carolina and received his B.S. degree in commerce in 1925. He taught here one year and then went to Columbia University where he received his M.A. degree in 1927. A certified public accountant in this state, he returned to North Carolina and became associated with the firm of Hashen and Sells in Charlotte until 1929 when he came to the University to teach accounting.

Claude C. Shotts Serving as YMCA General Director

Claude C. Shotts has taken over the position of general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. replacing Harry Comer.

Mr. Shotts received his education and training at the following universities: Alabama, Yale, Harvard, and Northwestern. He specialized in sociology, education, and social ethics.

He has held various positions comparable to Y. M. C. A. work at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Colgate, and Northwestern.

During the war, Mr. Shotts worked with the American Friends Service committee, serving in the States until January 1946 when he was sent to Germany as chairman of a group of eight men representing American relief Agencies Licensed for Operation in Germany, was attached to the welfare branch of the Office of Military Government of the United States. This agency was responsible for distribution of relief throughout the four zones in Germany.

In April of this year Mr. Shotts returned to America and since May has been speaking to German-American groups, civic, and religious organizations for the American Friends Service committee, to raise funds for relief in Europe.

Under his guidance, the Y. M. C. A. will works as a student organization to augment a democratic program, and to assist in all fields of activities where there is student interest. Plans are being made for study groups, speakers, conferences, and forums on social issues and world problems.

In his work, Mr. Shotts will be assisted by Joe Mac Arthur, associate secretary, who has come to Chapel Hill after preparation for this work at the Universities of Illinois and Oklahoma, Yale and Chicago.

On April 1, there were 366 million pounds of frozen fruits in storage. This is 45 million pounds more than on the same date last year.

A gasoline hose nozzle which automatically cuts off when an automobile gasoline tank is full has been developed.

Decision Overrules Verdict of Guilty By Student Group

By Chuck Hauser

For the first time in the memory of South building officials and student government leaders, a decision handed down by the Men's Honor Council has been reversed by a faculty board of appeal.

Student Dismissed

According to information released yesterday afternoon by Tom Eller, Student Body president, the case of a student who was charged with cheating in a laboratory came before the Men's Council during the second summer session. The student was found guilty and dismissed from the University.

He immediately appealed his case, which ordinarily would have gone next to the Student Council, to a faculty board of appeals, a quorum not being present in the Student Council ranks to review the action of the Men's Council.

Reinstatement

The faculty board, composed of one member chosen by the administration, one chosen by the president of the student body, and one chosen by the student in question, reinstated the accused man in the University.

Although the student has since withdrawn from school, the Men's Council has presented his case to administration officials for reconsideration of the faculty board decision.

Offices Open

In addition to the Honor Council case, Tom Eller also released other pertinent information for students, including the fact that the student government offices on the second floor of Graham Memorial are now open, but will not run on regularly scheduled hours immediately. The office is staffed by Eller, student body vice-president Jack Folger, and the clerk of the Student Legislature.

Other important points stressed by Eller during the interview included:

1. The constitutional committee, headed by Jim Volger, will very shortly distribute copies of the student constitution to all major campus organizations and to the library.

Vandalism Prevention

2. Extensive work will begin after this weekend to prevent vandalism during the periods immediately before the State and Duke football games.

3. Student government has been successful in having the problem of the reinstatement of intercollegiate boxing at Carolina placed on the agenda of the first meeting of the Athletic Council on October 2.

4. Appreciation is expressed for the initiative and hard work by Bill Shuford and Jess Dedmond in setting up the Student Activities Center in Graham Memorial, one of the original purposes for which GM war established.

33 Men Students May Receive Rooms

Thirty-three more men students have become ehgible for dormitory rooms and may receive assignments at the Housing office, 207 South building.

They are E. B. Horner, Jr., J. C. Morris, Jr., J. C. Walker, E. K. Cummings, H. A. McCullers, F. G. Heine, A. J. Uavin, F. L. Swartzberg, J. M. Nichols, E. M. Clark, J. W. Curlee, H. E. Whitehead, P. C. Henson, E. F. Wilson, W. S. Leinbach.

E. B. Harris, T. A. Hearn, I. F. Andrews, V. C. Taylor, Jr., M. V. Horton, Jr., A. M. Diggs, L. S. Green, R. C. Warren, D. H. Whittier, B. H. Thomas, G. B. Ward, J. C. Stephens, B. O. Lane, H. B. Covington, Jr., E. W. Talton, W. H. Stewart, J. E. Taylor, J. H. Dowdy.

Might Have Been Different Story

The first day of classes this year was quite different from last fall in that the professors could be heard above the roaring repercussions of the standing-in-line registration system. Members of the registration committee, headed by Mr. Ed Lanier, after being called everything in the book because of the systems employed last year, are due loud praise for the efficiency and care shown in expediting the registration ordeal, and the simplicity of the new system.

Naturally there are those who experienced an unpleasant couple of hours in lines this fall. With the tremendous task of preparing class schedules and the necessary records for nearly 7,300 students it would be impossible to run each student through in a uniform number of minutes. Then too, there are bound to be conflicting class schedules and other irregularities.

The pre-registration plan seems to be the closest possible approach to a speedy and gripeless process. Appointments with advisors and deans and pre-registration will dispense with the endless lines. Then, if the freshmen are processed in teams by appointment, there should be a minimum number of complaints.

Other Universities with enrollments swollen by the lure of the GI Bill have had registration problem to cope with and have been less successful in working out a system that would be advantageous to both the administration and the students.

Their registration planning committees have failed to devise a plan. Some Universities have resorted to registration by mail. Many other plans have been worked with some success, but there are indications that the new Lanier system is much more effective and efficient.

The following plaudit by Tom Eller is typical of the attitude of the student body:

"On behalf of what I believe to be the majority opinion, I should like to express through our student newspaper a sincere appreciation for the excellent job done by Mr. Lanier and his Registrations committee this quarter in the thankless and, at times, apparently hopeless job of registration. Those of us who have felt all along that he would do his best for the students now feel that these claims were justified."

The Thing Gromyko Walks Out of

On the first of September, the University lost, by retirement, one of its most valuable and best loved citizens. On that date, Harry Comer stepped down from his post as Secretary of the YMCA, a position he had held for the last 26 years.

His retirement, made necessary by a malignant heart ailment, was regretted by all who knew him, from the lowliest freshman to Dr. Frank Graham. Dr. Graham said of him: "Harry Comer, for over a quarter of a century, has been a central part of the intellectual, civic, and spiritual life of the University of North Carolina." Chancellor Robert B. House said, "Harry Comer has been one of the most creative persons in the University since I have been working for it. I see him retire with the utmost personal and official regret."

Comer, voted the school's most valuable citizen one year, has done much for the University and Chapel Hill. In 1927, he founded the Institute of Human Relations, out of which grew the Carolina Political union and the International Relations club. He established the student activity fee system, organized the Freshman Friendship council, and initiated the weekly bulletins on campus events. He was chairman of the Housing Bureau, director of rent control under the OPA, and also head of the USO recreation center here during the war. In February, 1946, under threat of a heart attack, he resigned from 19 different committees. However important these accomplishments, it is his kindly human touch, the helping hand so frequently lent, and his unfailing love of people that will be remembered long after he is gone by the people who loved him.

Mr. Comer and his wife are moving shortly to Abingdon, Va., where he says he will spend most his time reading and catching up on some writing that he has wanted to do. He wants to live in the little town because he says it is so much like the Chapel Hill that he knew 26 years ago.—C.S.

A Working Man

What's the United Nations? "Well, lemme see," Joe College muses, "Uh-h-. Well, they argue a lot and that's the thing Gromyko is always walking out of, isn't it?"

Yeah. It is. They do argue a lot and every once in a while Gromyko takes a stroll—or somebody else. But that's not all. Right now, we'll hazard, the survival of UN doesn't mean as much to you as a win in the Georgia game tomorrow. But French students worry about it; German students wonder whether or not it will make their country livable again; Italians want to know if it'll keep peace.

It can keep the peace. It can make Germany livable again. It can make France what it once was and help to feed a lot of Italians. IF you know about it and support it, it can do these things.

Energetic little Lincoln Kan has been working hard all summer to tell people about UN and to set up machinery to tell more people this fall. On Kan has fallen the burden of preparing a reception for United Nations week visitors; his is the job of controlling a three-day program at which diplomats from several foreign countries are to speak.

UN week—which is really just three days—begins next Wednesday, October 1; it closes on Friday. But in those three short days UN must be sold to Carolina students. Carolina students must learn that their support is vital to the organization and that the survival of UN may mean the survival of a civilization in which they can live.—B.S.

Uncle Has Trouble

By Bill Sexton

Elliot Washington, 35 years Zoology building janitor and a traditional figure at Carolina pep rallies, has had a heap of troubles.

Known to over a generation of alumni as "Uncle George," the 69-year-old dean of janitors had to leave work this summer when it was discovered he was suffering from a serious cancer condition. But despite his 35 years of service to the University, he is ineligible for retirement benefits.

His physician, Dr. J. B. Riggsbee, says an operation—in time—will help him. But the operation is very expensive.

"Uncle George's" illness is just the latest of his trouble. Two years ago his wife's sight failed completely. This spring he spent his savings—the money he had put aside to retire on—on a cataract operation for his wife. It restored sight to one eye.

Washington has been without income other than gifts of food and money from friends—just enough to keep alive.

Now Dr. R. E. Coker, Zoology chairman who himself retires this year, has initiated a fund to provide the operation Washington must have. Already $170 has been donated, but that, says Dr. Riggsbee, is not nearly enough to cover hospital bills. Dr. Riggsbee has donated his services free.

Dr. Coker is convinced that the generation of students that knew Washington will give enough to provide the operation. His worry is that the gifts may not come in time.

Gifts for the Elliot Washington fund may be sent to Dr. Coker at the Zoology department.

CAROLINA CAROUSEL

Football, Coeds, Rain

By R. Foo Giduz

It's really a pleasure to see all the happy faces . . . old and new . . . back in Tarheelia after a summer in Mexico . . . All changes seem for the better, and the whole campus seems to have an attitude of rarin'-to-go.

One thing that hasn't changed is the usual registration day rain.—Wanna make a sure beer bet???—Next time you're down Harry's way, just bet your roommate or no. 1 gal that it'll be raining comes January registration day. . . . We've been here some 20-odd years and haven't seen it fail yet. But things are looking brighter now. . . . Football prospects seem tops for the fall. (We're not exactly optimists, but we've already got reservations at the Roosevelt hotel in New Orleans for New Year's day.) . . . Coeds seem friendlier and prettier than ever. . . . Our first class is at 10 o'clock, and all are on the first floor. . . . Yep, things are really looking good.

Best recent addition to CH life: The Colonial House (similar to Durham's Toddle House) nearing completion down below the old bus station. The town's been needing a really good snack stand like this for years. . . . Bonne Chance to proprietor Whid Powell, and here's hoping he'll stay open 24 hours a day. . . . Those of us who "study" late can really use that good old 3 a.m. hamburger-java lift. . . . That's the collegiate necessity which CH, where they roll up the sidewalks at midnight, has been missing. . . . How 'bout it Whid???

You guys that outsmart the local cops back in Chittlin' switch had better watch out this fall. The local gestapo now has radio-equipped police cars; two of 'em! . . . Well, just got a good proposition from a guy who'll take Georgia-and-13! . . . Can't see that stuff at all, so we're gonna relieve him of some of that foolish scratch. . . . Pardon us while we go look out for our financial interests.

See y'all at the ball game tomorrow. . . . Let's help those Tar Heels get their long-deserved due for the Great Sugar Bowl robbery. . . . Yell!!!

Write Away

Miss Braun To You

Dear Sir:

After having established an International Correspondence Bureau, I—on behalf of members on my waiting list—take leave to apply to you. May I request you to put me in touch with readers of your paper interested in friendly correspondence?

Having been secluded from the outside world these long years, and yearning for a real democratic enlightenment and a personal contact from man to man across boarders, my members would only too gladly welcome and answer letters from abroad. Most of my members (among them scientists, students, experts, businessmen and other well-educated ladies and gentlemen, and also hobbyists, housewives and even young boys and girls) have a fairly good knowledge of English, but would also be pleased to write in German, if desired. I am sure, my members will try and give their pen-friends every satisfaction.

Individuals and groups of persons may communicate with me direct stating their particulars and interests. All letters will be attended o and all applications linked up. If possible, two or three reply coupons should be enclosed to cover expenses, and also—to save time—an introductory letter to future pen-friends over here will be appreciated.

Pen-friendships are a step towards the creation of that international friendship and goodwill that is so essential to understanding and peace, don't you think so?

Yours hopefully,
(Miss) Anna-Maria Braun.

DREW PEARSON

Life on the Missouri

Washington.—None of the newsmen travelling with President Truman on the battleship Missouri wrote anything about it, but they had quite a battle with the Navy over censorship of the press.

What the Navy wanted censored was not a military secret, but the fact that the battleship was equipped with a ladies toilet, plus certain details of Father Neptune's initiation of "Pollywogs" when the Missouri crossed the Equator.

The four newsmen on whom the Navy frowned were: hard-punching Windsor Booth of Time magazine; erudite Charles P. Trussell of the New York times; United Press correspondent Merriman Smith; and Joe Short of the Baltimore Sun.

Crossing - the - Equator ceremonies had been prepared by the ship's crew long in advance—in fact when they rented $400 worth of costumes back in Norfolk, Va. For days, also, those sailors previously initiated had been whittling paddles and shillelaghs, gloating over uninitiated victims. So the ceremony was rough. It was even rough for one of the top White House dignitaries, John Steelman, who was abruptly dumped backward, eight feet, into a pool of water. Steelman, however, took it like a sport.

For the 1,000 gobs who never before had crossed the Equator, it was even roughter. They underwent "mock" surgical operations with electrically charged knives on an operating table. They were ducked until they yelled "Royal Shellback!" And they had to run the gauntlet of 50 to 300 fellow sailors armed with paddles and canvas bags of water.

Decks got slippery. Men careened and fell. Finally the party got so rough, the Captain called the entire show off. But in the melee, several men got hurt—the Navy claimed 16; Booth of Time magazine claimed 18.

It was this and other realistic reporting of the initiation roughhouse that brought the Navy's demand of censorship. When newsmen balked, lethargic White House Secretary Charlie Ross called a special press conference, blasted correspondents for alleged "inaccuracy."

"I have a right to prevent the filing of such stories," he announced, "but I am not going to exercise that right."

Ross said he was "hurt" by the "reflection" on the Navy. But he permitted the news stories to be sent as written.

Official ire was especially heaped on the red head of Time magazine's Booth because he had reported the discovery of a ladies toilet aboard the battleship. This has come to be a much-debated subject in the Nation's capital ever since grandmotherly Mrs. May Craig, correspondent for the Portland, Maine, Evening Express, was refused permission to return from Rio on the battleship. Official reason: no ladies toilet facilities aboard.

So when Booth discovered such facilities plainly labelled "Ladies" in both the Portuguese and English languages, and proposed sending a dispatch to this effect over the ship's radio, the Navy hit the ceiling. Booth, however, insisted, and the Navy finally sent the story.

Note—When Herbert Hoover made his goodwill tour of Latin America just after his 1928 election, the Navy flatly refused to transmit critical news stories from the batleships Utah and Maryland. Newsmen had to wait until they got home to do this critical reporting.

Biggest question mark raised at President Truman's Cabinet food conference was: "Will the American people ration themselves to help out Europe?"

This question was debated when the President met with Secretary of State Marshall, Secretary of Agriculture Anderson, Secretary of Commerce Harriman and Presidential Assistant Steelman.

It was Mr. Truman himself who gave the final answer.

"Of course, they will cooperate," he declared, "when they know the truth. I have great faith in the American people. They may be calloused in some things but you can always count on them in times of disaster."

The President cited American support of the Red Cross as one example.

"If this food problem in Europe is serious and we get the truth over to the people, you don't have to worry about them responding in order to keep others from starving."

Truman said he realized that some people are always ready to "knock our efforts to help Europe" and that this vocal minority would cry out against food shipments. But this, he said would not cause too much interference.

He added that the job of feeding Europe's starving wasn't as great as many people thought.

With just a little cooperation on the part of the public, the job can be done," he said.

Veterans to Report To South Building

All veterans who for any reason missed going through the Woman's gymnasium during registration earlier this week should report to the veterans division of South building, which has moved from the first to the third floor.

With approximately a ten per cent increase over last year's records, 1,325,000 veterans are enlisted in universities throughout the country. Because of this evergrowing number and because of a national ruling of the University Veterans association prohibiting sending checks out after the first ten days in a month, October subsistance allowances cannot possibly be recorded and mailed in time.

To avoid any further delay, all veterans who desire to receive their checks by November 1 should contact the South building veterans division immediately.

The steering committee of the University Party, will meet at 4:30 this afternoon in Graham Memorial, Chairman Bob Perry announced yesterday. The meeting will be held in Horace Williams Lounge.

OPEN HOUSE TODAY

Open house will be held in all the women's undergraduate dorms this afternoon from 4 until 6 o'clock. Invitations have been extended to men living in dormitories and fraternity houses. Smith, Archer House, and the Town Girls' Association will hold an open house in Graham, while Alderman, McIver, and Spencer will be at home in the Parlors.

Justice Featured In National Mag

Charlie Justice, Carolina's tailback extraordinary, can be currently found residing on the cover of this month's Pic magazine now on sale at the local newsstands.

Within the mag is a story by Dave Camerer on the Asheville Flash entitled, Dream Boy in Cleats, in which Justice is discussed, and analyzed, amid accompanying pictures.

Another article on Justice appeared yesterday in the new issue of Sport magazine by Wilton Garrison, sports editor of the Charlotte Observer. The opus is entitled, Justice Triumphs.

FOURTEEN FRATERNITIES

The fraternities listed below have obtained chaperones and may entertain women students this week end. Fraternities and women students are reminded that, unless a chaperone is present in a fraternity house, women students are prohibited from entering. This plan is to be in effect only September 27 and 28.

The list of fraternities:

Delta Kappa Epsilon, Chi Psi, Phi Delta Theta, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Alpha Tau Omega, Kappa Alpha, Zeta Psi, Lamba Chi Alpha, Sigma Chi, Beta Theta Pi, Kappa Sigma, Phi Gamma Delta, Pi Kappa Alpha, and Phi Kappa Sigma (Saturday only).

OUR BABY

Collegiate Syndicate

Born last April, the Daily Tar Heel brainchild—a collegiate newspaper syndicate—was fully launched this fall as letters were sent to 11 college daily papers from the University of California to Harvard.

Former TH Editor Bill Woestendiek and Columnist Jud Kinberg dreamed up the syndicate idea to answer a need for closer understanding and cooperation among college students. Woestendiek, in a letter to prospective members of the exchange column syndicate, said that the establishment of such a syndicate would "give a national collegiate voice to important subjects and let each section of the country know what the others are thinking."

Early response to the suggested syndicate has been heavy and the DTH has sent out a final letter requesting that all those who will join the syndicate begin exchanging columns and editorials according to a specified pattern on October 1.

Bobbing In Sports

—with—

Bob Goldwater

F stands for Friday and also for Forecast day. For on this and the next nine Fridays, sports writers all over the nation will be consulting their crystal balls and ouija boards in an effort to foresee the results of the following day's activities on the gridiron. Not to be outdone, the Daily Tar Heel sports staff will also enter the prognostications field every Friday, starting with the predictions found elsewhere on this page.

Handling the forecasting chores each week will be a corps of experts (?), consisting of the two co-sports editors, staff members Morty Schaap and Bill Lamkin, and our featured guest, Jake Wade, sports publicity chief of the University and former sports editor of the Charlotte Observer. We will make our individual selections on 20 outstanding clashes of the week and then tally up the scores in the following Tuesday's paper.

THE NUMBER ONE tussle on this week's list is, of course, the local struggle between the opponents in the Sugar Bowl game of last New Year's Day. And here our five "experts" show a wide range of opinion, although all calling it in Carolina's favor. The difference comes in the margin of victory, ranging from Colleague Carmichael's impressive 21-7 count to Schaap's 28-27 thriller. Lamkin also sees things emerging rather close—13-7—while Jake and yours truly have upped the margin to a nice, safe eight points.

All five members of the board appear to have gone off the deep end on a few selections, with Schaap leading the way. The "Shadow," who carries the most weight around the DTH offices, picks Villanova to hand Army its first defeat since 1943; is likewise alone in thinking the Oklahoma Aggies will upset TCU; and tops everything off by calling a tie in the Minnesota-Washington tilt. The rest of the board is not as bold, being content with predicting one or two upsets.

THAT THE Kenan stadium clash Saturday will be the top contest in the nation for the day is indicated by the interest being shown by the nation's press, radio networks and newsreels. Over 60 scribes, the greatest number ever to cover a local game, will be on hand to overtax the pressbox facilities. As previously announced, five networks will give listeners all over the world the play-by play happenings. And on hand to record the big battle on celluloid will be cameramen from Universal, Paramount, MGM, Fox Movietone and Warner Brothers studios.

We have been asked by Coach Bob Fetzer, Director of Athletics, to publish the following request.

"Some students, through error, secured more than one athletic passbook when they went through the registration procedure. This applies particularly to pre-registration students who also had to go through the new student and cashier's ...

"This is a request that all students who did get two passbooks to return one of them to the Athletic office immediately. This will save confusion and possible embarrassment later.

"The Athletic office and the University will sincerely appreciate the students' cooperation in returning these extra books."

AMONG THE many who yesterday attended Coach Carl Snavely's final heavy drill prior to the Georgia game was the Tar Heels' number one rooter, University President Frank Graham. "The boys are certainly showing lots of promise," he commented, when faced with a request for his views on Saturday's battle. "You might also extend my welcome to the Georgia football team," he added.

Yesterday heralded the start of practice for two more Carolina teams—soccer and jayvee football. A large turnout of 55 candidates was especially gratifying to Coach Marvin Allen, whose first season as soccer mentor was handicapped by a shortage of experienced players. With seven returnees from last year and a host of promising newcomers, better things appear in store for the 1947 campaign.

Jayvee Gridsters Hold Inital Workout For Tough Campaign

Over fifty stalwarts greeted Coach Crowell Little's call for jayvee football aspirants yesterday afternoon.

The initial drill consisted of form blocking, fundamentals and familiarization with single wing plays.

Squad spirit was high as the boys were put through their paces by assistant coaches Jim Hagy and Chan Highsmith. Hard work was the order of the day as the first game with the South Carolina juniors is scheduled for Columbia, S. C., on October 10.

Coach Little emphasized that today would be the last day for men to come out unless they had specific permission from the coaches to join the squad later.

None of the men were assigned to starting berths, and the competition is expected to be keen before the initial tilt with the Gamecocks. The squad will undoubtedly be strengthened by the addition of those men on the varsity who do not quite make the grade.

Potentially the team should be a strong one and it will boast many members of last year's strong "B" team, plus a horde of freshmen and new students.

The schedule for the Tar Babies includes games with State, Navy, Virginia, Duke and the Bantams of South Carolina.

More Workers Needed For Game Saturday

More ushers and gate keepers are needed for the Georgia-Carolina football game Saturday afternoon.

All men interested in taking jobs for the game should contact Pete Mullis in 306 Woollen sometime today.

Those students who have signed up for work must report to Mullis at the employee's gate at 11:30 Saturday morning.

TWO IN SERIES...

Former Carolinians Do Well In Pro Ball

By Dick Jenrette

Carolina's rising sports reputation got another boost this summer as a host of former Tar Heel athletes turned up with top-flight records over the nation's baseball diamonds. In fact the University will be represented by two of her former baseball greats when the World Series opens in New York next week.

George Stirnweiss, of the American league champion New York Yankees, and Clyde King, Brooklyn Dodger pitcher, are the Carolina boys who are slated to be on opposite sides of the firing line when the Series opens on October 1.

In Leadoff Slot

Stirnweiss, who excelled as a football player here in addition to his baseball work, was again at his leadoff position in the Yankee batting order this year as the New Yorker marched to the American pennant with apparent ease. Ranking third in the loop in the matter of runs scored, he was a constant worry to opposing pitchers with his speedy base running.

King, a Goldsboro native, started the season as a relief hurler for Manager Burt Shotton's National league winners. However, he was elevated to a starting pitching turn in the late stages of the season and figured prominently in the Dodgers' successful dethronement of the St. Louis Cards. The youthful King appeared in 29 games, having a 6-5 won-lost mark according to recent league statistics.

Closer Home

There were many Carolina boys who did their playing much closer to home. Big Jack Hussey performed for Goldsboro of the Coastal Plain league, finishing with a .320 average. He slapped out 14 home runs, with his hard-hitting giving him the cleanup batting spot for much of the season. Monk Whiteheart, who played with Hussey on last year's Carolina baseball team, was also in Goldsboro. He turned in several well-pitched contests with his colorful, high-kicking delivery.

Hamp Coleman, a long-jointed moundsman who worked for Carolina in 1946, pitched for Roanoke, Va., of the Piedmont league this season. Several major league scouts are reported to be eyeing his fastball with favor. Coleman is in the Boston Red Sox organization.

UNC had only one representative in the Carolina league, that being Matty Topkins, who formed the keystone combination with Stirnweiss here several years back. Topkins was one of the outstanding players on the Greensboro team. And in another North Carolina loop, the Tobacco State league, there were two Carolina men—Tom Clayton, of Red Springs, and Nate Andrews, the ex-major leaguer now with Wilmington.

With Pennant Winner

Up Jersey City way the veteran Burgess Whitehead held up the school's reputation as his team copped the International league pennant. Carolina Coach Walter Rabb recalled that Whitehead was one of the few UNC baseball players to make Phi Beta Kappa. Lew Riggs, a former Brooklyn Dodger, and Tar Heel, did his playing for St. Paul of the American association that year.

In the Western Carolina league, Pitcher Frank Robinson and Sid Varney had excellent records. Jim Hayworth, Ray Blair, Rip Ryan, and Dallas Branch kept up their baseball work in the semi-pro Virginia-Carolina league

Student Gate Opens At Noon Saturday

The following important information regarding the admittance of students to the Carolina-Georgia game was released by the Athletic office yesterday.

The student gate on the south side of the stadium will be opened at noon and students will be admitted from then on.

All students must present their athletic passbooks and identification cards. At the ticket booth a half ticket will be issued in exchange for coupon one in the passbook. This ticket will designate seat in the reserved student section.

Students are urged to walk to the game and to get there at least an hour early in order to avoid a jam. The best seats will be available on a first-come, first-served basis.

Practice Begins For Soccer Crew

Fifty-five men, including fifteen returnees from last year's squad, answered soccer Coach Marvin Allen's first call for candidates yesterday afternoon in Woollen Gym.

Equipment was issued and Allen ordered them to report to practice at the far end of Kessing field tomorrow afternoon at four o'clock.

Allen stated that as yet he knows little about the newcomers but he expects the next week's practices to turn up several outstanding prospects. Included among the returnees who will probably see plenty of action this year are Al Williams, ace goalie; Al Singer, center forward; Mac Hagaman, fullback; Basil Jackson, outside right; Gus Johnson, center half; Frank Nelson, fullback; and Porter VanZandt, fullback.

Coach Allen also announced an eight-game schedule featuring contests with Loyola of Baltimore and Navy on their home fields.

The schedule:
Oct. 17 Loyola away
Oct. 18 Navy away
Oct. 23 High Point here
Oct. 28 Duke here
Oct. 31 Virginia there
Nov. 6 High Point there
Nov. 12 Duke there
Nov. 21 Virginia here

Tar Heels Taper Drills; Bulldogs Arrive Today

With Georgia's Bulldogs expected in nearby Durham today for their final tapering off drills, Carolina's Tar Heels stepped through their final paces yesterday afternoon and throughout the state tenseness prevailed on the eve of the new football season's first outstanding opener.

For at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in picturesque, pine-draped Kenan Stadium, the two teams which thrilled 73,000 in the Sugar Bowl on January 1 will come together for a fabulous second meeting before another sellout gathering of more than 42,000.

Johnny Rauch, Georgia's brilliant quarterback who tallied two of the touchdowns in the Bulldog's 20-10 conquest in the post-season game, heads the invading forces. He was the nation's leading passer in 1946 and he is expected to superintend another devastating air attack against his old chums of New Orleans.

Visitors are beginning to throng Chapel Hill today, and hotels and eating houses will be overflowing through the weekend. Athletic Association officials have requested those without tickets not to come as no tickets are available.

Game Regarded as Toss-up -BF

The game is regarded in most quarters as a toss-up and that's the sentiment in the Carolina camp. Georgia is expected to excel in the airlanes, Carolina on the ground.

In yesterday's drills, Coach Carl Snavely put the final polish on his 1947 Tar Heel edition, running both offensive and defensive dummy scrimmage. Special emphasis was placed on the passing game, with ground work confined to smoothing the rough edges on play timing.

This afternoon the local lads will take their last workout before taking the field tomorrow. The drill will probably be a short one, consisting mainly of final touches and limbering up exercises.

Exactly who will start for the Tar Heels is still somewhat indefinite with some last minute shakeups possibly being made before game time.

Fall Mural Plans Slated to Include Tennis Tourneys

The intramural athletic program, slated to get under way next week, will offer for all students a tennis tournament divided into novice and open divisions.

Registration is now open for the novice class, which includes persons who have never participated in a tournament, and the open class, consisting of varsity players and netmen with tournament experience.

All matches scheduled by the intramural office will be posted on the intramural bulletin board and listed in the Daily Tar Heel. Contestants will furnish three new tennis balls for their first match. Winner of the match keeps the three unused balls. Suitably inscribed trophies will be awarded to both singles and doubles champions.

For registration and complete details candidates should see or phone Coach Walt Rabb at the intramural office in 311 Woollen.

In the tag football division competition among the fraternities will be keener due to the fact that the fraternity division winner will receive the new Phi Gamma Delta football trophy.

Billy Herman Quits As Pirate Manager

Pittsburgh, Sept. 25—(UP)—Billy Herman today resigned as the manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, after weeks of comment and controversy.

The Pirate owner, Frank McKinney, made the announcement and added that Herman would be retained in a capacity as yet undetermined.

The Cadets are flying again!

The U. S. Air Force now offers you the chance of a lifetime to start your career in aviation.

If you want to learn to fly, you have one of the finest opportunities ever offered in peacetime. Aviation Cadet pilot training has been reopened to qualified applicants presently serving enlistments in the Army, and to civilian young men who can meet the same high standards.

In order to be eligible, each applicant must be: a single male citizen, between 20 and 26½ years old, of excellent character and physically fit. He must have completed at least one half the credits leading to a degree from an accredited college or university, or be able to pass a mental examination given by the USAF. He must now be living within the continental limits of the United States.

Upon successful completion of the training course, Cadets will be rated as pilots, commissioned Second Lieutenants, and assigned to flying duty.

Reactivation of Aviation Cadet pilot training is only one of the several choices open to outstanding men who want increased responsibility and advancement in the field of aviation. It is now possible for qualified men to apply for attendance at USAF Officer Candidate School—and thus be able to equip themselves for such important specialties as engineering, armament, administration and supply.

You have a real chance to make progress and build a sound career for yourself in today's U. S. Air Force. Talk it over with the Recruiting Officer today at any U. S. Army and Air Force Recruiting Station.

Wadsworth Announces Dorm Priority Plans

The policy for dormitory room assignments this year has been announced by James E. Wadsworth, housing officer, in answer to questions from many students.

Hereafter for the benefit of students on the waiting list for dormitory space, Mr. Wadsworth will post a notice of the first 50 names with ranking priority in his office at 207 South building. This will eliminate the difficulty of getting in touch with eligible students once space is available if those desiring dormitory accommodations will consult the list on the bulletin board regularly. To prevent further confusion, all students should inform the housing office of any change of address immediately.

In February of 1946 the University trustees established a priority schedule giving preference to the student presently enrolled in the University, to the old student returning to the University, and to the veteran just entering the University. In each category consideration went first to the State veteran, next to the non-veteran of the State, and then to the out-of-state veteran and non-veteran. Out of the 23 campus dormitories one was set aside for 1947 State high school graduates.

At present old students still waiting for housing space are on file in the chronological order of the date of their entrance into the University and their payment of room deposits. Mr. Wadsworth hopes to place all students who entered the September term, 1946, in dormitories sometime this fall. Since at least one new dormitory is expected to be completed by January, this should accommodate all students who were in school during the last year.

Chapel Hill Police Cars To Have New Radios

Chapel Hill's two police cars will soon be equipped with two-way radios, the city board of aldermen recently announced. The radios are war surplus equipment, which will cost approximately $350.

At the present time, the patrol cars contact headquarters by telephone. When the radios are installed, headquarters will be able to dispatch messages to either car at any time. An antenna, 25 feet high, will be placed on the Town Hall roof.

The new system will enable Chapel Hill to communicate with Durham police and will also provide immediate contact with any highway patrol car cruising within a radius of 12 to 15 miles of Chapel Hill.

Bonds Issued to Cover Cost of Street Repairs

In order to finance the cost of repairing the network of streets in the center of town, the Board of Aldermen voted for a bond issue totaling $12,000. Bids were received September 5 for the job of patching, resurfacing and seal-coating the 40,000 square yards of street.

Under the state constitution these bonds can be issued by the Aldermen, without a popular vote, because the amount is not more than two-thirds of the reduction debt of last year. Any question of the validity of the ordinance must be submitted to the Aldermen within 30 days after its enactment.

Due to the war and its resulting shortages the city's streets have been allowed to deteriorate, and the increased traffic on the streets adjacent to Franklin St. make it imperative that this project be completed as soon as possible.

Speed laws aren't the only good reason you're smart to know what you're driving at.

Man with a system

Simply pick up your telephone and you can route your voice through any one of thousands of central offices—some with dial mechanisms so complex they stagger the imagination, yet so efficient they seem to work like magic—others staffed by competent, courteous operators whose standards of work have long been a fine tradition.

You command, in effect, millions of miles of telephone wire and cable.

You can direct your call—one of some 110,000,000 that will be made today—to any one of some 53,000,000 telephones here and abroad.

The operation of this vast system is big business. It is a complex, many-sided business in which thousands of college trained men are working in their chosen fields—development or research, engineering planning, accounting or statistics, public contacts, supervision of operations or other phases of management. These men have found highly interesting and rewarding careers.

Mag Editor Predicts Improvement

"Because we have a year of staff experience, campus-wide interest, and a larger student body the Carolina Magazine staff is looking forward to a greatly improved publication this year," Editor Fred Jacobson declared yesterday.

In its policy to print the best of fiction, feature, humor, art, and photography the Carolina Magazine has consistently been the best medium for student writers and artists. With an experienced executive staff to guide the publication the Magazine hopes to draw many new workers into the field.

Little or no experience is needed. There are many new openings in established departments. Photography Editor Stan Croner is calling for camera men. Cartoonists and artists apply to John Davis, Art Editor. Literary contributions should be submitted typewritten to the office in Graham Memorial which will be open from two to five every afternoon. Men and women interested in business management see Business Manager Ben Perlmutter.

Executive positions are to be appointed in various departments. Openings for fiction and feature writers are available.

Tar Heels Open Tough Campaign Against Georgia In Kenan Today

By Bob Goldwater

The most highly rated Carolina football team ever to take to the gridiron makes its debut in Kenan stadium this afternoon when the Tar Heels open their 1947 campaign against their Sugar Bowl conquerors from Georgia. The kickoff comes at 2:30 p.m.

A sellout throng of over 42,000 will be on hand to view the second meeting of the year between the two state universities and another exciting battle—one that will match in thrills the post-season struggle that resulted in a 20-10 triumph for the Bulldogs—is predicted. The tussle has been rated as a tossup between Carolina's highly-geared ground attack and Georgia's brilliant aerial circus, with both offenses being headed by candidates for All-American honors.

Charlie (Choo-Choo) uJstice, the sophomore sensation who sparked the Tar Heels into their most successful season in years during 1946, looms as the player on whom all eyes—including those of the five major newsreel cameras—will focus. Written up in several national magazines as the prospective "player of the year," the Asheville speedster will be making his attempts to break into the clear against a rugged Georgia forward wall that has set up a special defense designed to derail the Tar Heel Express.

But by no means is Justice the only offensive threat in the Carolina backfield. The Tar Heels have a host of other fine running backs to use in the attempt to snap hte Bulldogs' 17-game victory string, put together over a three-year span. Accompanying Charlie in the starting backfield is the same crew that opened against Georgia on New Year's Day—Pupa, who tallied Carolina's lone touchdown that day, at fullback; Jim Camp, the game's biggest ground gainer, at wingback; and Co-Captain Joe Wright at blocking back.

Also certain to see action in the offensive operations are such capable replacements as Jack Fitch, Bill Maceyko, and Billy Britt at tailback; Johnny Clements, Fred Bauer, and freshman Fred Sherman at wingback; Bob Kennedy and Hosea Rodgers at fullback; and Don Hartig and Bobby Weant in the quarterback slot.

The double job of leading the Bulldogs' passing parade as well as directing the team's T-formation attack falls on Johnny Rauch, the nation's leading passer in 1946 and scorer of two of his team's

Payne, Borum, Cross Recipients Of Scholarships At University

RODNEY BORUM

ROBERT PAYNE

JACOB CROSS

By George Roberts

Three outstanding high school graduates of 1947 have been awarded scholarships at the University during the forthcoming school year. They are Robert Benjamin Payne of Gastonia who won the Herbert Worth Jackson Memorial Scholarship, Rodney Lee Borum of High Point recipient of the second Marvin B. Smith, Jr., Memorial scholarship, and Jacob Lewis Cross of Lexington who was awarded a special University scholarship of $400 for a year.

The Jackson scholarship, valued at $500 annually, is awarded bi-annually in the odd years to a native-born North Carolinian who is nominated by his high school as its candidate for the honor. The basis of selection is high scholastic rank, character, qualities of leadership, achievements, physical health and vigor, and promise of future distinction. The winner of this scholarship holds it for four years providing he maintains high standards in morals and grades.

Eagle Scout and winner of the Jackson award, Payne was active in dramatics, president of the senior class, sports editor of the school newspaper, and a member of the basketball and football teams. He also won the State health oratorical contest last year.

The Marvin B. Smith Jr. scholarship was established last year in memory of Mr. Smith, leading textile industrialist, who died prematurely a few years ago. This award is given for ability, character, and promise of future success.

Winner Borum received this award for his high school activities as president of the sophomore class and tennis club, vice-president of the Beta club, chief junior marshall, chairman to a committee to write the student council constitution, member of the glee club, representative to the Boys State, and winner of the State triangular debate last year.

Cross was given the special University award on the strength of his all "A" record throughout high school. He was president of the Lexington high school student government, represented this school at the Boys State last year, was drum major, a member of the National Honor society, the Beta club, and the Hi-Y.

Russian Radio Blasts University Press For Publishing of 'Reactionary' Books

A Russian radio commentator, broadcasting from Moscow, recently denounced the University of North Carolina as reactionary. What prompted the commentator's tirade was the University Press's publication of R. H. Markham's new book, "Tito's Imperial Communism," which was released earlier this month.

"Publishing Slander"

The Russian commentator asserted that "for two years the University's publishing department switched over from publishing scientific papers to the publishing of dirty slanders against Slav countries. Recently the University has published a book of slanders against the new Yugoslavia written by a certain Markham. It is sufficient to know the author to know something about the book."

The commentator proceeded at this point to describe Markham, a Boston newspaperman and foreign correspondent during and after the war, as a "typical American reactionary journalist for whom the highest measure of morality is the dollar. . . . This gangster of the pen paid particular attention to the Slav countries. He invented such provocative stories about the new Rumania that the Rumanian government was forced to deport him. Markham the slanderer lost his job in this country of new democracy, but found himself popular in reactionary America."

"Russian Symphathy"

The indictment continued against the University: "There is no sense in arguing with the wild ravings of this journalist who appears under the shield of a university. One can only express sympathy to the students of the University of North Carolina that such slanders are being forced into their heads.

"One can have pity on American readers who are at the mercy of slanderers of the Markham type, who should be kept away from any printed words. However, in the United States the Markhams enjoy popularity. Therefore it is no wonder then that other American journalists—among them those who are in Yugoslavia—are trying to follow in his steps."

New Men Asked To Sign GM Cards

All new students who have not filled out Interest Indicator cards for Graham Memorial should do so immediately. These may be secured at the student union information desk.

Purpose of the cards is to assist the Student Activities center in getting the new arrivals into the many extra-curricular activities on the campus. Each card has an index of 11 extra-curricular interests and hobbies, in addition to many special campus organizations. Check marks are placed beside each activity in which the student is interested.

Paratrooper Restores UNC-Georgia Grid Tickets, Student's Confidence in Army

Donald F. MacDonald, senior journalism student, has reason today for confidence in the post-war U. S. Army.

Two weeks ago while travelling from Chapel Hill to his home in Little Rock, S. C., MacDonald lost 18 tickets to today's sold-out Georgia-Carolina football classic.

The student purchased the general admission tickets for Carolina enthusiasts in Marion, S. C., and lost them along the highway south of Fayetteville. A search over a three-mile area that afternoon proved futile. Later in the week another attempt with the aid of Matt Harper, Bob MacDonald, and Arthur Jones—also Carolina students—ended in vain.

Then a miracle happened. Last week MacDonald received the following letter from an unknown paratrooper at Fort Bragg:

"Recently as I was hitch-hiking south of Fayetteville, I found 18 football tickets which bear your name.

"I am sending these back to you for a few reasons. I know of what value they are to me, as I could have easily sold them. I had plenty offers. My main reason is to show the civilians that soldiers and paratroopers are not low, cheap trash and bums who would swindle a person out of his last dime. Keep this in mind and let your friends know our opinion. So long, A Paratrooper."

To MacDonald there seemed a great deal of justice left in the world, even besides Choo-Choo.

CCUN Meeting To Hear Top Foreign Diplomats

House Group Would Deport Hans Eisler

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—(UP)—The House committee on un-American activities has asked the Justice department to deport Hollywood composer Hans Eisler.

The group also requests the department to prosecute Eisler for alleged perjury and passport fraud.

Eisler is the brother of the so-called Number One Communist agent in this country, Gerhart Eisler. He admitted during three days of committee hearings, that he was once a member of the Communist party in Germany.

The committee report adds these words:

"The record is clear that Eisler perjured his way in and out of the United States at will, going to Soviet Russia and other countries whenever he pleased."

The committee made no specific mention in its report of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, who allegedly interceded twice in an effort to get Eisler a passport.

Committee Chairman J. Parnell Thomas was asked if he did not consider both the Labor and State Departments at fault for letting Eisler into the country. Thomas replied and we quote:

"From the evidence given us, there is no question but that the Department of State was more at fault than anybody."

Highway Patrol Wants Safe Drivers

RALEIGH, Sept. 26.—(UP)—The commander of the State Highway patrol—H. J. Hatcher—has asked all drivers who plan to see a football game tomorrow to be unusually careful.

Hatcher says the traffic problem will be especially acute tomorrow because two major games will be played just a few miles apart. And then he says the crowd will start moving toward Wake Forest.

Hatcher warns that patrolmen will be stationed at close intervals along all routes leading to the Carolina-Georgia game and the Duke-Carolina North Carolina State game. They will have instructions to stop any driver who looks the least bit careless. Officers handling the Wake Forest routes will be reinforced as soon as the traffic at Durham and Chapel Hill clears up.

Aquinas Club to Open Activities Tomorrow

The Aquinas club will open fall activities tomorrow evening with a reception for Catholic students to be held in Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial from 7 to 9 o'clock. Vice-president Lucy Evans has issued an invitation for both new students and students not members of the club to attend the "get-acquainted" session.

In addition the Aquinas club will meet in regular session Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock on the second floor of the Y. M. C. A. All Catholic students are invited.

TO HOLD MEET

Students of Greek descent are invited to attend a meeting to be held in Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening.

RoyCole Orchestra To Present Concert Sunday Afternoon

ROY COLE

Roy Cole and his campus orchestra of 14 Tar Heels will present a free concert of popular sweet and swing favorites tomorrow afternoon from 3 to 4 o'clock in Graham Memorial's main lounge. Recently distinguished by making the first commercial recording of "Hark the Sound" since Kay Kyser's first discing some seven years ago, Cole's group has been popular on the campus since its organization in January 1946.

A number of Cole recordings, including "Sweet Lorraine," and "That Old Black Magic," may be heard on juke boxes in Graham Memorial and down town. This fall Cole plans to enlarge his band by adding a string section, which, he says, would give him the only such band in this section.

Boasts Library

The group boasts a library of musical arrangements worth well over $2,000, which were written exclusively for Roy Cole's orchestra. Chief arranger is Frank Settlemyer, former arranger and pianist for Dean Hudson. A native of Kannapolis, Settlemyer is now completing work for an A.B. degree in Music.

Vocalist George Demas is creating quite a stir among music critics with his renditions of tunes such as 'Prisoner of Love," "Temptation," and "Night and Day." Practically every member of the organization is featured in either vocal or instrumental specialties and the band as a whole has proved its versatility and showmanship by appealing to a wide variety of tastes.

UNC Law School Boasts Record Freshman Class

A record first-year class with 120 freshmen and a record enrollment of between 280 and 290 students registered in the University Law school this week, it was announced yesterday at the office of Dean Robert H. Wettach.

An unusually large number of sons of prominent North Carolina jurists and lawyers are enrolled in the first year group. Among them are J. Melville Broughton, Jr., Raleigh; O. Max Gardner, Jr., Shelby; Rivers B. Johnson, Jr., Warsaw; James B. McMullan, Raleigh; Fred D. Poisson, Wilmington; John M. Simms, Raleigh; Charles F. Warren, Washington; Stanley P. Winborne, Jr., Raleigh, and Luther Hamilton, Jr., Morehead City.

Also for the first time in the history of the Law School, a special two-day orientation program was held for the new students. Speakers at a convocation included Dean Wettach, who introduced all the faculty members; Bill Friday, Dallas, president of the Law School association; William B. Aycock, Selma, editor of the Law Review; Donald McCoy, Laurinburg, vice president of the Law association, and Mrs. Ruffin Bailey, Raleigh, president of the student wives' association. Following the introductory talks a reception was given in honor of the new students in Graham Memorial.

Announce New List Of Room Changes

The following men students have become eligible for dormitory rooms and may receive assignments at the housing office, 207 South building: John M. Nichols; Hal A. McCullers; Fred L. Swartzberg; P. C. Henson; Ernest F. Wilson; William S. Leinbach; Eugene B. Harris; Ike F. Andrews; Robert C. Warren; George E. Ward; James C. Stephens; Bernard O. Lane; John E. Taylor; James H. Yugoslav, British, Syrian Ministers Will Address International Conference

By Harry Snowden

Four top-rank foreign diplomats will highlight the program of the first International Collegiate conference, to be held here under sponsorship of the Collegiate Council for United Nations October 1-3, Chairman Lincoln Kan announced yesterday.

SIR JOHN MAGOWAN

International dignitaries who accepted invitations to the conference include Sir John Magowan, British minister to the United States; Alfred Stirling, Australian minister; George Tomeh, Syrian charge d'Affaires in Washington; and Sava N. Kosanovic, Yugosiav ambassador to the U. S.

Represent other Schools

In addition to these speakers, outstanding state and campus leaders as well as delegates from colleges throughout North Carolina have been invited to participate in the conference, which is planned to provide special opportunity for study of the UN through the media of outstanding speakers, class lectures with visiting professors and U. S. State department personnel. The chief emphasis will be on how the students of North Carolina can participate actively in making the United Nations strong. There will be an extensive study of the UN charter and its application as well as a study of the specialized agencies under the charter.

In addition, foreign students at the University have been invited to participate in the session. Arrangements for their part are now being carried out by Martha Manning, CCUN vice-chairman in charge of foreign student affairs, who has asked that students from outside the U. S. contact her at Graham Memorial before tonight.

Last Day

On the last day of the conference the delegates will meet in plenary session to discuss problems encountered during the conference. How to initiate chapters of the C.C.U.N. on other campuses will be a major item.

A United Nations dance for the delegates and invited guests will close the three-day session.

The C.C.U.N. was organized at Chapel Hill early this summer. Leaders include Lincoln Kan, state director; President Frank Graham, adviser; Roberta Sterling, secretary-general; and an executive council of Tom Eller, student body president; Editor Barron Mills of the Daily Tar Heel; Charles Long, Student Party chairman; Bill Mackie, and Bill Miller. The International conference climaxes three months of busy activity.

Eller Condemns Betting, Drinking

In a statement yesterday blasting student participation in parlay gambling and drinking at games, Tom Eller, president of the student body, warned that both were direct violations of the Campus Code.

Eller asked that students "not fall prey to professional gamblers and people who have no real interest in the University."

"I should like to advise all students that the popular device known as the parlay is against our campus code and violates the North Carolina General Statutes," Eller declared. "I seriously warn everyone against taking any part in these unlawful and detrimental practices."

"In regard to drinking at games," said Eller, "we have the duty of representing more than ourselves as individuals—we represent the student body of a great state university." He warned that the "general public will—and should—censure our indiscretions."

RECORDED CONCERT

Music by Candlelight, a concert of recorded symphonic music, will be featured in the main lounge of the student union tomorrow evening from 8:30-10:30.

Episcopals Meet

The first fall meeting of the Canterbury club will be held Monday evening at 6 o'clock in the Episcopal Parish house. President John Patterson announced yesterday. Patterson invited all students interested in Episcopal campus activities to attend the first of a series of weekly meetings.

CHORAL REHEARSAL

Students, faculty, and townspeople interested in vocal music are invited to attend the first rehearsal of the Chapel Hill Choral club, to be held in Hill Hall at 7:30 Monday evening. Paul Young, director of the group, has announced that no tryouts will be held.

Club To Be Open After Game

Over 1,000 Student Veterans Have Joined UVA Since Its Organization, Says President Wells

Over 1,000 student veterans have joined the United Veteran's Association, Hugh Wells, president of the organization announced today. This group which has been instrumental in lowering the cost of housing, rent, and other costs in Chapel Hill, is interested in voicing the veteran's needs and opinions at the University.

Purely a campus organization and not of a political nature, the UVA conducted a survey, in conjunction with the AVC, last spring of the high cost of living here. Following this survey, attempts were made to lower these costs and further attempts are being made to do this and to obtain a higher subsistence allowance.

The UVA announces that the clubhouse will be open to all members and their guests tomorrow after the ball game so they may meet to celebrate Carolina's victory over Georgia.

At this time letters were sent to all representatives from North Carolina in Washington campaign. Another function is to disseminate information to the veteran as to all activities and legislation which pertain to him and what action is being taken in these matters.

Wells stressed the fact that in order to obtain a higher subsistence allowance and to help lower the living costs, each individual veteran should actively participate in one or more of the many organizations which have been established to aid the former service man.

Drinkers, Gladiators, Excitables

There are always a lot of reasons why vandalism and hell-raising in general at a football game just doesn't make sense. Think of all the reasons you can. They all apply to the game this afternoon.

Maybe some of the folks in the psych department can figure out why it is that exposure to a little autumn air, two teams playing football, and some loud yelling brings out the destructive impulse in the student body. Maybe the psych department would figure that the individuals can cut up because they're protected by the mass. Maybe that's so. It's doubtful that any group of men could put a finger on every drunk or trouble-maker in a group of more than forty thousand people. (But they're going to try, incidentally. The word is that it's woe on any man who is picked up for drunkenness.)

Much of the trouble does come from drunks. It's a pretty well-known fact that a lot of brew is consumed in these parts. And it's also well-known that the boys with a little more scratch buy a fifth or two now and then. But that doesn't prove anything. It's not the big drinkers who cause the trouble. It's the boys with eyes bigger than their stomachs. To put it bluntly, the guys who can't hold their liquor. So that's one reason for taking it easy this afternoon: pride in your ability to consume and keep your head.

But drunks don't cause all the trouble. There are numerous gladiators. These are the lads who wear their tee-shirts on the cold days, the lads who like to mix it up with a rival fan. (Yeah, but they aren't rough enough to mix it up with a big guy out on the field. What can the psych department make of that? At any rate, when there's a point in question the "rough" guys tangle with somebody, swinging like windmills and fanning a lot of air. What do they get out of it? Well, maybe skinned knuckles. Maybe a broken tooth.

Of course, the gladiator class sort of overlaps into the drinkers, as does the final group: the excitables, those who are easily hypnotized by the action and the yelling. The excitables are in the majority and, though their individual cutting up isn't too destructive, their combined efforts at rowdiness cause more trouble than the boys with the bottles and fists.

Nobody likes to lecture; the eds of the DTH least of all. And we aren't lecturing. We just want to know what it proves.—R.S.

Park in Your Back Yard

State highway patrolmen did not sneak around last night removing distributor heads from local cars, as one officer jokingly suggested, but the necessity of keeping Chapel Hill-owned cars off the streets today, is almost urgent enough to warrant such drastic action.

Athletic officials predict that a crowd of nearly 45,000 persons—more than four times the normal population of Chapel Hill—will crowd the streets in a mad effort to reach their seats in Kenan stadium. To bring these fans here will easily require 8,000 or more autos.

It's these 8,000 cars—added to the already overpowering number of local autos—that may beat Carolina where Georgia cannot. For off-street parking fields can accommodate less than 4,000 cars under best of circumstances, the remaining 4,000 foreign cars will have to remain on the streets during the game.

Chief W. T. Sloan of the Chapel Hill Police department has a suggestion which he admits will only partially alleviate a terrific problem. Says Sloan: "If students and local citizens will drive their cars into driveways and dormitory parking spaces and leave them there Saturday, they'll be sure their cars will come through the traffic without bent fenders. And they'll get to and from the game much faster on foot as dense and slow-moving as the traffic will be."

Chief Sloan particularly urges Victory Village residents to find parking places in their front and back yards, for Mudville's narrow lanes will have to accommodate much of the game traffic from the south.—W.C.S.

Adds New Laurels

Guy Benton Johnson, famed both as a sociologist at the University and as target of an unsuccessful "purge" last spring for his liberal views, added new laurels to the UNC faculty Wednesday when he was named by the Catholic Committee of the South the person "who contributed most during the year to the South's advancement."

Johnson's award was based on his work as executive director of the Southern Regional council during a leave of absence from the University. For that same work several University trustees attempted to cancel Johnson's leave and end his professorship on the grounds that the Southern Regional council had "communist" sympathies. Surely no better vindication of intelligent and loyal leadership could be given than this honor bestowed by members of one of world communism's greatest enemies.

Sorry... It's Our Job

The Men's Honor Council story in yesterday's Daily Tar Heel has apparently caused no little grief to members of that group, although it was obviously not intended to discredit the members of the Council or their work in any way.

It appears that there are people who still think that they can control or affect the activity and integrity of the press. An issue such as the one reported yesterday is something which should have been and was presented openly and fairly to the student body for its consumption and opinion.

The Daily Tar Heel's policy, like that of any other newspaper, is to present the news for what it is worth. The DTH will not try to gloss over an unpleasant occurrence or cover up anyone's faults, but will cover the news fairly and print it at face value.

It is no one's fault that an unpleasant issue has to be brought out into the light. It can happen to anyone. Gentlemen of the Council, your case.—C.H.

Mag Wants Coed Editors

Mademoiselle, fashion magazine, is again sponsoring a college board, to be composed of style-minded women students on campuses all over the country. Submitting articles and ideas throughout the school year, the 20 best coeds become guest editors with expenses paid, to work in Mademoiselle's New York office during the month of June, attend the magazine's college forum and career conference, and get personal appraisal by the magazine's editors.

All interested coeds have until midnight, November 1 to become a college board member and compete for a place as guest editor. Applicants should prepare a trial report of approximately two typewritten, double-spaced pages on any new fashion, fad or activity of campus life. This report along with a snapshot with complete data on college and home addresses, class year, college major and minor, other interests and activities, and paid or volunteer jobs previously held should be submitted to the College Board Editor, Mademoiselle ,122 East 42 street, New York 17, New York.

'Tain't Necessarily So, But---

A Room Is A Room Is A Room

By Bill Buchan

Aside from a few individual grumblings on the part of luckless guys who are commuting from faraway places such as Greensboro, Raleigh, and Sanford and car-less students who sweat out the weather and rides from rooms four and five miles out of town, one of the largest problems to face the UNC campus in a long while has been almost, repeat, almost settled. At least to a larger extent than seemed possible a few months ago. The problem, of course, is that of adequate housing for Carolina's many students.

Those living in the quonset huts or crowded four in a room and especially those families residing in trailer courts, will greet such a statement with a great horselaugh, but they are at least living under a roof and not too many months ago, even a roof was in doubt.

The housing problem is one that can be blamed on any number of excuses, among them the grads were given bunks in prefcials were counting on the completion of the new dormitories to handle part of the overflow, but circumstances prevented their completion and their ready-for-occupancy date was moved to January. Now, the promise is for only one completely finished for the new term that begins then. Chapel Hill townsfolk, incidentally, did the school a great service in literally opening all their doors to students in search of rooms.

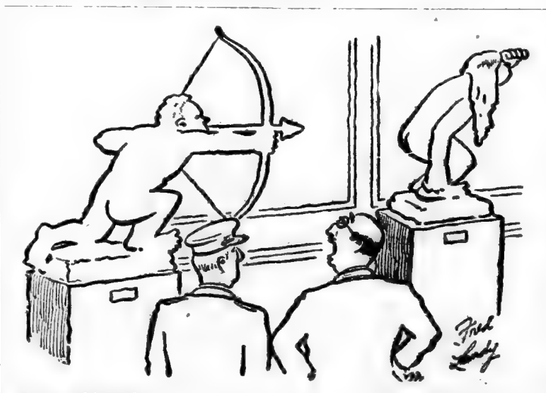
Eventually, those living in quonset huts will be moved into dormitories and those scattered over the state will be moved in the huts and at a date as yet out of sight, the quonset huts will be emptied altogether in favor of dormitories and town rooms. At least, that is what a great many people are hoping for.

One of the most bitter questions to a great many veterans is the unusual priority rating that gave 1947 high school graduates high rating over veterans who have lost from two to four years out of school. It was easily seen why those vets who had started at Carolina before they went into military service should get first consideration over those just starting, but easy understanding was not in order when high school grads were given bunks in preference to all others.

Surely, the board of trustees had good reasons for demanding that the boys should have a place to stay and perhaps, they were right, but in the eyes of the room-hunting vet, the reasons weren't very evident. Especially, when almost in final desperation, some were forced to take up living quarters in Durham or Raleigh.

The officials in South building were sympathetic to the questioning concerning this problem but could do nothing except that—sympathize. J. E. Wadsworth's housing office, receiver of the unhappy problem, could do nothing to help out but take names and promise to help in any way possible. And when a room stands between a fellow and education, even a sympathetic smile is encouraging. If a lot of blunders or errors have been made, there aren't many students who will blame them on the housing office, for no one can deny that they are not an earnest and conscientious staff, seriously interested in doing the most they can for all who come for help.

In years to come, students and faculty members will remember the seige of '47 with pain and with humorous memories. There'll probably be tales of woe and sacrifice to match a few that have come out of the recent war and are still being batted about in bull sessions.



That is probably the only solution to the current housing problem. Time. Time and a good strong sense of humor on the part of those who, of necessity, aren't living in what would be called the best of conditions.

Ping Pong Tournament Registration Begins

Officials of the Graham Memorial Student Union announced yesterday that an all-campus singles and doubles ping pong tournament will open on October 6 and all persons interested in entering are urged to do so at once by registering at Graham Memorial. Registration for the tournament ends on October 4.

The singles tournament will be a double elimination affair and the doubles crown will be decided on a single elimination basis.

First and second place winners in both divisions will be awarded prizes by the Student Union.

"I think one of these statues should be turned around"

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Rankin's Political Hurricane

By Drew Pearson

Washington.—It's an ill wind that blows nobody good, according to Congressman John Rankin of Mississippi, now running like a jackrabbit for the Senate seat of the late Theodore Bilbo. The potentate of Tupelo has now stooped so low as to make political hay of the hurricane and the devastation it brought to his home state.

Sunday, Rankin stayed glued to the radio in his Washington apartment, carefully noting the places damaged by floods and wind.

By noon he had a sizeable list of stricken Mississippi towns. Thereupon he prepared a press release demanding that the President call Congress into special session to aid the storm victims.

Not content with giving this to the press associations, Rankin telegraphed the statement to key newspapers in Mississippi.

In addition, he wired the mayors of Mississippi towns, telling them of his demand on the White House.

Monday, the ingenious gentleman from Mississippi went even further. He asked for an appointment with President Truman to register his demand for a special session. Truman, however, had just stepped off the boat from Rio, had already scheduled conferences with the Cabinet and Food Committee. So Rankin was informed by phone that Truman had ordered proper Government agencies to take appropriate steps to help the flood areas.

All this was grist to Rankin's mill. Although he voted against almost every Truman measure in Congress, John immediately wired Mississippi newspapers, giving the impression that hurricane aid was forthcoming only because he, John Rankin, was on the job in Mississippi's hour of stress.

No wonder Rankin is telling friends that the hurricane will blow him right into the Senate.

Note—Rootin' - tootin' John now is so confident of filling Bilbo's seat that he thinks he may not even go home to campaign.

Ferguson Loves Punishment

Pugnacious Sen. Homer Ferguson doesn't seem to mind asking for punishment. Unrelenting as a bulldog once he sinks his teeth in a Senatorial probe, the shaggy-maned Michigan Republican recently proclaimed that he would go through with his original plans for the Howard Hughes hearings in November. Well-wishing friends, remembering how the first probe had backfired, tried to persuade him against it.

"I postponed that hearing until November 17," thundered Homer, "and I will go ahead with it November 17 even if Congress goes into a special session the same day!"

Britain's Exit from Germany--bf

The State Department is frequently accused of being the tail on the kite of British foreign policy. This was decidedly not the case, however, when the Senate Appropriations Committee met in a closed-door session with State and War Department officials to consider who will pay British occupation costs in Germany.

It is already known that the British have served notice they will need help in financing their zone in Germany. But what is not known is that the State Department presented an array of figures in the secret session showing that the British are better off than generally realized.

Though the British are short of dollars, they are not short of sterling and many German occupation costs can be paid out of sterling. British industries, including coal and utilities, actually are above pre-war production, the State Department told Senators. Box-car loadings have also surpassed pre-war standards.

It was also revealed that the British employ 18,000 civilians to run their part of Germany, while the United States employs only 5,000.

These figures were one reason for the unanimous opinion of the Senate Appropriations Committee that if we have to shoulder part of Britain's occupation costs, we in turn must get a share in fixing British policy.

On this, Secretary of the Army Kenneth Royall, who inspired the special committee meeting, emphatically agreed.

Typical Honor Council Cases

Football Drinking Condemned

It has been the policy of the Men's Honor Council to print, from time to time throughout the year, cases which have come before it. No names are printed and these briefs contain just enough information to give an adequate picture of the cases and the decisions rendered. Following are a few of the more than 120 cases heard last year.

It might be well to begin with a case that occurred during football season. At this time there was a series of disturbances including fights and drunken conduct by students. Student Government can and will not condone such action and an effort was made to ascertain where the blame rested. As a result of thorough investigation of the activities of the afternoon the following action was taken by the Men's Council: For their varying degrees of participation, one student was suspended from the University, one student was placed on probation for as long as he remained in school and denied ten hours toward graduation, one student was placed on probation as long as he is a student, and one student was severely reprimanded for obvious failure to make any attempt to cooperate with the exercising of the Campus Code. This weekend let's show our friends from Georgia some true North Carolina hospitality and let the teams settle all rivalries on the gridiron.

Two students were accused of violating the Campus Code in that they went to Durham, broke and entered and stole certain goods while intoxicated . . . The action of the Men's Council was indefinite suspension. On appeal to the Student Council, this decision was upheld. . . . On appeal to the Faculty Appeal Board, the unanimous decision was to uphold the decisions of the Student Government.

It is a clear violation of the Campus Code for a student to display such conduct wherever he may be regardless of his condition. Drinking is never an excuse for misconduct. Students of U.N.C. will not tolerate it.

A student was reported to the Men's Council for a violation of the Honor Code. The student had taken a short story which another student had written and had returned to him. The story was handed in by the reported student as his own work. The same student was also found guilty of receiving aid on his exam in the same course.

Action: This student was suspended for an indefinite period of time and was give an F on his course.

A student on bad check probation (he had been found guilty of frequently overdrawing his bank account) was reported again for another check violation. During the course of the investigation it was learned that the student had had several other bad checks throughout the course of the year but that they had not been reported by the banks because he had made them good soon after they bounced. The checks had been returned to the banks for reasons varying from lack of sufficient funds to no account in the bank the check was written on. In some instances persons who supposedly had written the checks could not be located. In others, they denied that they had given him a check. After allowing the student time to locate these people, which he didn't, he was called before the Council again and at that time swore under oath that he was in no trouble because of bad checks written by him since his last appearance. Evidence in the Council's possession, however, proved that he had written more bad checks, and, furthermore, that he knew then that they had bounced. The student was suspended indefinitely for lying in the council room (a top offense) and continued bad check practices.

(NOTE: Last year the Council had numerous bad check reports from local merchants. In most instances it was pure negligence on the part of the students, and could have been prevented. Watch your Bank Accounts!!)

A student was accused of violating the Campus Code to the extent of creating disturbances in his dormitory, destroying furniture and other property, and having firearms in his room. After being warned and put on probation, he appeared before the Council again when it was learned some time later that he still had the firearms (he had been specifically ordered to get rid of them, and that further disturbances had occurred. For his failure to comply with University rules and his continued misbehavior while on probation, the student was suspended indefinitely. A later request for readmittance was refused.

The cases above by no means represent the wide variety of reports received by the Council, for space will not permit total re-printing now. But all cases will be printed at some time, usually after a long enough period has elapsed to allow no student's name to be connected with published facts. Your interest in these reports is most important, and ideas about Student Government, especially the Honor and Campus Code phase, should be expressed heartily. Actions you might have will be placed in the "Y" buildig soon. box for such ideas or any ques- Show your interest in your self-government by keeping this box filled!

The Sporting Picture

By Billy Carmichael

THE BIG SHOW

A horde of some 42,000 assorted persons will push, shove, and fight their way into scenic Kenan Stadium this afternoon and upon being seated, will be exposed to two and a half hours of football, bands, cheers and the antics of capering canines and soosed sportsmen. The whole show sounds well worth the price of admission.

At approximately 2:30 the feature attraction of the afternoon, a dog eat dog football game between arch rivals of only nine months standing will take the center stage and from then on anything goes.

All the elements of a great game are at hand. Georgia is on the rebound from last week's near holocaust with Furman, but the fact that Carolina is seeking revenge from last year's Sugar Bowl game balances the picture back again. The weather looks to be the envy of a California chamber of commerce. All is ready for a clash of clashes, but - - - -

ALFONSO AND GASTON

Down from Georgia comes reports that the Tar Heels are a sure thing to cop the contest by at least two touchdowns. Yet from Chapel Hill comes the word that the Tar Heels just aren't ready and will possibly take a sound licking. Both coaches are confident that neither of their teams has a chance, and the best thing to do would be to call the whole thing off. Yet the tickets are sold, so the game must be played to the apparent discomfort of the University of North Carolina and the University of Georgia.

The latter outfit arrived in Durham yesterday and took their last lingering look at practice before today's game. Coach Wally Butts, who looks like his mother might have been scared by a flying duckpin, waddled into the Tobacco City with his much-practiced look of worry in full appearance.

Accompanying the Peach state mentor were his corps of operatives headed by the logical successor to Charlie Trippi, one Johnny Rausch. Rausch, who can handle a football as he would a dozen of these 83 cent eggs, scored two of Georgia's three touchdowns in the Sugar Bowl affair and bears watching both by Carolina fans and footballers alike.

There are other stars among the Bulldogs, too numerously painful to mention, but who will give the local lads an interesting if not instructive afternoon.

Notably absent though, from the Georgia entourage was a suitable replacement for heretofore indispensable Gabe Hill. May the Lord preserve us this time!

MORE THAN A PRAYER

That the Tar Heels may have more than a prayer to win this afternoon's game seems obvious to this writer. There will be considerable talent dressed in the white jerseys, talent that can and possibly will, produce. Charlie Justice, whose name is becoming as nationally known as Wheaties will lead the local attack as previously advertised, but the lithe lad from the Land of the Sky will not be alone in his efforts. He will find strength up front with the injury-riddled tackles the only apparent weakness. The guards and ends show depth yet quality, and George Sparger has temporarily solved whatever problem there was at center with suitable replacements readily available.

As for backs, the Tar Heels have a galaxy of stars that run, pass, kick, tackle and block, but also have shown pre-season tendencies to stumble and fumble. Should they hit their stride in Kenan today, they could be the most devastating thing to hit Georgia since Sherman.

INTERESTING SIDESHOW

For those that may find the local contest too much for their blood pressure etc., it might be well to suggest the Duke-State tea party in Durham. Officials of the two schools have used everything short of a chorus line in an effort to sell tickets, and from the looks of things, they may come close to selling out, with the help of ten thousand high scholars getting in for four bits a head.

Duke seems the odds-on favorite to win the grudge battle, but State—who is first by far with John Huzvar—may surprise a lot of people including themselves. It should be a gay afternoon for everyone.

Henderson Tops Chapel Hill by 26-8

Succumbing to the powerful attack of a heavier Henderson eleven, Chapel Hill High's scrappy gridders dropped a 26-8 decision before a crowd of 2,500 fans on Fetzer Field yesterday afternoon.

Using their first team throughout most of the opening half, the victors piled up a 20-0 lead at the half and then coasted to victory with their subs bearing the brunt of the action in the final two periods.

Collier Cobb, Jr., tallied the locals' only touchdown when he cracked over from the four-yard line late in the fourth quarter after the Chapel Hillians had staged a sustained drive from deep in their own territory.

The visitors handed the Wildcats two points in the final minute of play when a Henderson back fumbled the following Chapel Hill kickoff in his own end zone and was tackled there for a safety.

Duke and State To Clash Today In Loop Opener

Sharing the spotlight with the North Carolina - Georgia game in the Southern Conference sports scene today will be the battle between Duke University's Blue Devils and the N. C. State Wolfpack, scheduled for Durham this afternoon before a crowd that is expected to reach 40,000.

Duke, trying for a comeback following a disastrous 1946 season in which the Devils dropped five of nine contests, will have an opportunity to avenge one of those setbacks. It was State who started the Dukes on the downward trend last year, with a 13-6 victory before a surprised audience in Raleigh.

Pre-season practices for both the State and Duke squads have indicated that each may rely extensively on an aerial game. State coach Beattie Feathers will counter with two dependable tossers in Charlie Richkus and Gwyn Fletcher, with a fine cast of receivers being found in ends George Blomquist and Al Phillips.

Clark Handles Passing

George Clark is expected to handle the brunt of the Duke passing from his tailback spot. Other backs who figure prominently in Coach Wallace Wade's plans for a potent passing attack are Bob Frye, Howard Hartley, and Rollo Hodges. Lanky Ed Austin has performed well in practices thus far and is rated as Duke's best pass receiver. Fred Folger, the long-kicking wingback, also looks good as a pass catcher.

The winner is expected to be one of the leading contenders for the conference title.

There are four other games scheduled for today that will have bearing on the conference standings. Maryland, in its first season under the direction of Jim Tatum, will journey down to Columbia, S. C., to meet the South Carolina Gamecocks. William and Mary, rated one of the loop's strongest outfits, will tangle with Davidson in Norfolk; and Virginia Tech will play host to Furman. In the only other conference tilt, Washington and Lee will play Richmond in the Virginia capital city.

Non-conference Slate

There are a number of Southern conference grid elevens that will meet teams from other parts of the nation. Over in Wake Forest, Coach Peahead Walker's hefty Deacons open their slate by meeting Georgetown, from Washington, in a night game. Clemson will journey up the coast to Boston, meeting a reportedly strong Boston College eleven.

Rounding out the day's slate for Southern Conference teams will be meetings between the Citadel and Presbyterian, George Washington and Virginia, and VMI and Catawba.

Down in the deep south, in the Southeastern conference, the Georgia Tech-Tennessee struggle in Atlanta will highlight the program of action. Louisiana State U., another team with championship aspirations, will go out of its loop to meet Rice, the Orange Bowl champion. Alabama, a national power in 1945 but somewhat of a disappointment last season, will perform in New Orleans against unpredictable Tulane.

THE TWO STARS of today's clash in Kenan are Johnny Rauch of the Georgia Bulldogs at left, and Carolina's own Charlie Justice.

Georgia Footballers Ready for Carolina

By Morty Schaap

The Georgia Bulldogs, 47 strong, rolled into Chapel Hill yesterday afternoon to take a light workout in Kenan Stadium in preparation for the game today.

This contingent is the largest that a Georgia team has ever carried on a trip. The squad went through calisthenics and light dummy drills.

Coach Wally Butts said, "I haven't much to say today except that my squad is in fine shape."

Georgia came out of the Furman game in fine physical shape and easy workouts was the drill schedule for the week. The only Bulldog that, probably, will not get to play is Eli Maricich, who is out with a bad shoulder. Don Gatewood, Red and Black halfback is expected to see action although a bad knee and shoulder have been slowing him down the past few weeks.

The visitors showed plenty of fight and the most talked about subject was, "taking the Tar Heels again." One of the Assistant Coaches remarked that the boys have lost what little overconfidence they had before the opener last week.

Georgia is carrying nine freshmen on their squad as compared to the three on the Carolina team.

Along the preparations line for this nationwide contest the stadium was the scene of much activity yesterday afternoon in the press box as the CBS crew headed by Red Barber and the ABC group led by Harry Wismer set up operations. On the writing front reporters were on hand from all of the leading papers along the eastern seaboard.

A new stand has been constructed above the press box to take care of the two leading radio network shows and also the many news-reel cameramen that will be on hand.

Ducats Available For Texas Game

Several hundred tickets for the Carolina-Texas game are still available at the Athletic office at $3.00 each, it was announced yesterday by athletic officials. All students intending to purchase tickets should do so immediately.

There are also several hundred ducats for the William and Mary game in Williamsburg still for sale at the Athletic office. According to the latest word from Williamsburg, the game is a sellout there and these are the only tickets still unsold.

touchdowns in the Sugar Bowl. His All-American teammate from last year, the brilliant Charlie Trippi, is no longer with the Bulldogs, but five members of the New Orleans forward line of defense are back to give Rauch and his backfield mates stout protection up front.

Other important cogs in Georgia's offensive machine include starters Lukie Brunson, Al Bodine, and Joe Geri, plus substitutes Billy Henderson, Jim Gatewood and John Donaldson.

Carolina Line

Co-Captain George Sparger, Len Szafaryn, and Art Weiner are the top operatives in a big Carolina line, which averages slightly over 200 pounds. Mike Rubish will accompany Weiner at the flanks, Haywood Fowle will fill the other tackle position, and Bob Mitten and George Roberts will be on either side of Sparger at the two guard berths. Should Carolina receive the kickoff, John Tandy and Sid Varney might open at right end and right guard, respectively.

Narrow Victory

Chief mainstay in the Bulldog line is Captain Dan Edwards, the big end who registered one of Georgia's two touchdowns in the narrow 13-7 squeak against Furman last week. Other linesmen in the starting array who opened against Carolina in the Sugar Bowl are tackles Jack Bush and Carl George, guard Herb St. John, and center Mike Cooley. The remaining starters are Weyman Sellers at the other end and Bernie Reid at right guard.

In the past, Carolina and Georgia have battled on 16 different occasions, starting in 1895, with the Tar Heels holding an 8-7 advantage in the series. The 1932 contest ended in a 6-6 tie. The biggest score made in the series was the 55-0 trouncing inflicted by the mighty Carolina team of 1900.

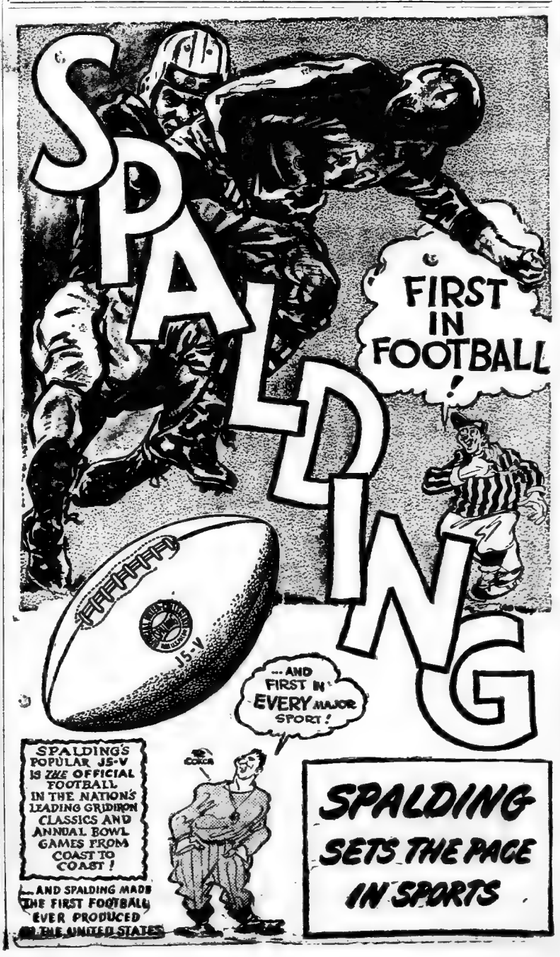
WAA Makes Cabin Plans at First Meeting

Plans to purchase a cabin were discussed at the first meeting of the Women's Athletic association council Tuesday evening in the WAA room of the Women's gym. The cabin, which will be located near Chapel Hill, will be open for use by all student groups.

All coeds are members of the WAA and are represented on the Council by a representative from each of the women's dormitories and sororities and a representative from the Town Girls' association. Representatives from each of the six clubs sponsored by the association are also on the council.



Tryouts for membership in one of the clubs, in hockey, tennis, basketball, dancing, softball, and swimming are held at the beginning of the fall quarter. At the end of the spring quarter, awards are presented to the leader of the clubs at the annual WAA banquet.

Officers of the association are Marshall Spears, president; Bill Lloyd, vice-president; Betsy Anne Barbee, secretary; and Janet Crinkley, treasurer. Miss Frances Burns is adviser to the group.

The Chicago White Sox won their last American League pennant in 1919 and the series resulted in what is known as the "Black Sox Scandal."

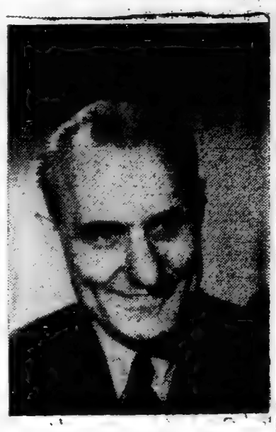
Vishinsky Hits U. S. Delegate

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y. Sept. 26—(UP)—Soviet delegate Andrei Vishinsky continued his blunt attack today on what he calls "American warmongers," adding three more — Walter Winchell, Publisher Frank Gannett, and Former Ambassador William Bullitt— to his vengeance list.



In an extraordinary news conference Vishinsky again blasted U. S. Delegate John Foster Dulles for followingDgna Dulles for following a policy which, Vishinsky says, "cannot but lead to war."

The Soviet delegate attacked the Marshall plan for European aid as an American effort to subjugate other nations to American will. He repeated his demand for criminal punishment of those responsible for war propaganda, but he did not make clear what he considered propaganda.

The new attack was somewhat softened by the Russian's statement that the Russian people believe the people of America—as contrasted to the "Warmongers"—are against a new war."

Henry Wallace Club Is Begun

Paul Moorehead, student from Little Rock, Ala., and chairman of the UNC "Henry Wallace for President Club," is expected to call a meeting in the near future of the club which was organized with some twenty students present late in August.

Dedicating itself to the support of Henry Wallace for president, through a Democratic party nomination, the group of some 20 students—largely veterans—held only one meeting, at which the following temporary officers were elected: Paul Moorehead, chairman; Bill McGirt, Hamlet, corresponding secretary; Phil Couch, Chapel Hill, recording secretary; Roslyn Ribner, Brooklyn, N Y., treasurer; and Joe Blake, Chadbourn, and Jim Stanford, Asheville, joint publicity chairman.

The policies of the club as explained in a statement written by former-student Manny Margolis and ratified by the group: to support the domestic and foreign policies of Wallace, his home-front principles such as government planning, full employment, farm security; to support constructive planning for peace "as elucidated by Henry Wallace, including active cooperation with the Soviet Union, Big Three unity, and a strengthened United Nations; to support Wallace's principles on jobs, democracy, and peace; and to dedicate themselves "to the century of the common man, to the fulfillment of the American dream."

The group stated its intention to work in cooperation with all other existing "Wallace for President" clubs and with any other organizations whose aims are similar.

Late Passing Attack Gives Carolina 14-7 Win Over Georgia

Lincoln Kan Announces Complete CCUN Schedule

Lincoln Kan, director of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations today released the complete schedule of events for the three day salute to the United Nations due to open here on Wednesday, Oct. 1.

The conference will open with registration of the delegates Wednesday afternoon, in Gerrard Hall and conclude with a dance Friday night in the Women's gym which will be open to all.

Highlighting the three days will be speeches by invited foreign diplomats, and other outstanding personalities.

On Wednesday evening, after a dinner at the Carolina Inn, Chancellor House will deliver the opening address in Memorial hall, followed by a speech by Alfred Stirling, Australian minister to the U.S.

Thursday morning various classes will be addressed by Dr. Sidney Smith of Cambridge University, England; Mr. Harding Bancroft of the U.S. State department; Counsellor John Reed, and Mrs. Reed of the New Zealand legation in Washington. Counsellor Reed formerly served on the United Nations Palestine committee. From 2 untill 4 o'clock an open forum will be held in Gerrard hall. That evening, after another dinner, the meetings will continue in Hill hall where Carlyle Campbell, President of Meredith college and George Tomeh, Syrian charge d'Affaires will speak.

On Friday, Oct. 3, there will be more talks to classes, as on Thursday. In the afternoon a plenary session is to be held in Gerrard Hall. Plans call for a band concert from 4 until 5 o'clock in the afternoon, but no word has been received as yet from Mr. Slocum.

Friday Banquet

Friday evening a banquet will be held in the Carolina Inn starting at 6 o'clock in honor of Sir John Magowan, British minister to the U.S. and the Yugoslavian ambassador, Sava Kosanovic. These gentlemen will make addresses later in Memorial Hall.

Climaxing Carolina's United Nations week will be a free dance in the Women's gym.

Lincoln Kan has announced that all sessions will be open and questions from the floor will be welcomed at all times. Interested students desiring to attend the dinners can secure further information at CCUN headquarters in the basement of Graham Memorial.

United States Ready ForPush-ButtonWar

—Any push-button war of the future will find the U.S. well grounded in the latest scientific methods of warfare.

President Truman's Scientific Research board in a report issued tonight declared that the government is spending more than 600 million dollars on research. Preparation for war of three dimensions—of the atmosphere, supersonic speed, and of arctic cold is described.

The board reported that vast sums are being spent in the development of guided missiles, jet and rocket aircraft, atomic weapons, agents of poison and bacteriological warfare, and a host of electronic devices.

Tonight's report, which covers civil as well as military research, lists a total of half a million dollars being spent on military projects alone.

Hannegan Resigns

Washington, Sept. 27—(UP)—Robert E. Hannegan resigned today as chairman of the Democratic National committee because of ill health. Senator J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island was chosen to succeed him. Hannegan probably will retain his post as postmaster general.

Chairman Carroll Reece of the Republican National Committee, said the appointment of McGrath serves to confirm Democratic tie-ins with the C.I.O.

Price Hike Is Seen

Washington, Sept. 27—(UP)—The President's committee on foreign aid says the administration must decide quickly whether to hold prices down or see that Europe gets enough food. Help for Europe, the committee says, inevitably will mean higher prices at home.

Coeds Must Attend Gerrard Hall Meet

There will be a meeting of all new girls interested in joining one of the five sororities this afternoon at 2 o'clock in Gerrard hall. Those girls interested, but cannot be there are asked to contact Margaret Jean Taylor at F-3071 by Monday morning.

The five sororities are: Alpha Gamma Delta, Alpha Delta Pi, Delta Delta Delta, Pi Beta Phi, and Chi Omega. Members of the Pan-Hellenic council will be there to explain rushing and the organi-

Wesley Foundation Meets This Evening

The Wesley Foundation will hold its first Sunday night supper and program for the fall quarter at 6 o'clock this evening, with the topic of discussion being "Religion in Transition."

"Religion in Transition," chosen for the first program because of its importance to new students, will be led in discussion by Jim McAllister, WF president, Jack Grant, and Jim Brockman.

The Wesley Foundation, directed by Rev. J. Robert Nelson, is a student religious organization sponsored by the Methodist Church but open to students of all denominations.

Recorded Concert Will Be Given Tonight

A concert of classical recordings, "Music by Candlelight," will be presented this evening in the main lounge of Graham Memorial from 8:30-10:30. The first in a series or classical programs, "Music by Candlelight" will feature records from the collection of over 2,000 recordings and transcriptions owned by the student union.

The following six selections will be played in order as listed: Handel, Water Music Suite; Mozart, Symphony No. 10; Weber, Overture to Der Freischitz; Tschaikowsky, Piano Concerto No. One; Ibert, Escales (Ports of Call); Wagner, Overture to Die Meistersinger.

Carolina Political Union Holds Meet Tonight

The Carolina Political Union will hold its first meeting of the year tonight at 8 o'clock in the Grail room of Graham Memorial.

The meeting will be strictly a business session and will not be open to the general public. All CPU members are urged to attend because of the important matters to be discussed.

Playmakers to Meet In Theatre Tonight; Selden Will Speak

Samuel Selden, director of the Carolina Playmakers, will give an illustrated talk, "Adventures in Playmaking," outlining the history of this nationally-known play producing organization at an informal meeting tonight at 8.00 in the Playmaker theatre. Students and townspeople who are interested in working with the Playmakers during their 30th season are cordially invited to attend.

The meeting will be an informal get-together of old and new Playmakers, and emphasis will be placed on the fact that the Carolina Playmakers is not a closed organization and that it is a community theatre which also serves as a laboratory for the department of dramatic art. Persons interested in theatre work are eligible in plays produced by the groups, either as actors or technicians.

During the meeting, members of the staff will explain the different phases of theatre work which will be done, and plans for the new season will be discussed.

Swings Into High Gear

Student Activities Center Ready to Open Final Drive

By Roland Giduz

The Student Activities center will swing into high gear tomorrow afternoon in a final drive to round up all new students who have not yet gone through the new extra-curricular orientation center. Fifteen campus organizations have recruiting and information tables in the center, which will be open from 2-5 o'clock every afternoon this week.

"Response this far has been pretty good," said SA director Jess Dedmond. "We intend to continue open as long as interest indicates we should, but we want to concentrate on this week."

A count yesterday showed that over 250 new students had been steered into campus organizations through the work of representatives in the center. Lo for the 1600-odd new students, however, its facilities are open to all.

Excellent Results

Excellent results have been reported by World Federalists, Sound and Fury, and Yackety Yack, three prominent organizations with tables set up in the lounge.

Most important feature of the Center is the permanent file of interest indicator cards, now being compiled by the Graham Memorial staff. These cards, which were filled out by each student going through the fall orientation program, contain a list of over 100 activities, hobbies, and campus groups. Students place a check beside every activity in which they feel an interest.

The cards are now being broken down and cross-indexed and will be available for checking by any recognized campus group as soon as the file is completed. Through this, any extra-curricular group that so desires, may take the names of students who have expressed an interest in their organization, and arrange by postal card to have an interview with them in the SA center.

Revive Interest

Formation of the Center came through the necessity for a revitalization of student interest in all extra-curricular activities. "We believe there is a great need for developing a stronger interest in student activities on the campus," stated union director Bill Shuford, in a recent letter to campus activities leaders. "We estimate that only 250 to 300 students out of the entire student body of 7,000 have, in the past year, been active in student government or other student activities."

"We believe that many new students have ability and interest but are hesitant about seeking admittance into various organizations."

Carolina Magazine Feature, Fiction Staffs Plan Meet

Meetings of the feature and fiction writing staff of the Carolina Magazine will be held tomorrow, Monday, in the Magazine office on the second floor of Graham Memorial.

John McDowell, literary editor, invites those interested in short story and poetry writing to meet at three o'clock. If possible authors are asked to bring their latest efforts.

Feature Editor Bookie Jabine will hold a conference for feature writers at four o'clock. Writers are urgently needed for special projects.

It was made known that there are many openings left in the various departments of the Magazine. Office hours for the Carolina Magazine last from two to five o'clock any weekday afternoon.

Cox and Weiner Register On Long Aerials by Pupa

By Bob Goldwater

Its powerful ground attack stifled for the major portion of three quarters, a fighting band of Carolina gridders took to the air in the final 16 minutes to register two touchdowns and thus gain a thrilling 14-7 triumph over the Bulldogs of Georgia before an opening day, Kenan stadium throng of close to 44,000.

Behind 7-0 with less than a minute remaining in the third quarter, the Tar Heels suddenly caught fire when Walt Pupa tossed a 35-yard aerial to Bob Cox, who made a nifty catch on the Georgia 20 and galloped the remaining distance to pay-dirt. Cox converted to tie the score.

Then, one quarter later with less than three minutes remaining, Pupa pitched another perfect pass, this time a 25-yard heave to big Art Weiner, who grabbed the pigskin on the Georgia two and proceeded across the goal line with the winning points. Cox again converted and there it was—the Tar Heels had gained revenge for the 20-10 setback suffered in the Sugar Bowl last New Year's Day.

Billing Reversed

Originally billed as a clash featuring Carolina running power, topped by Charlie Justice, against Georgia air strength, headed by Johnny Rauch, the game's statistics show that the opposite was true. The Bulldogs' hard-charging eight-man line kept the Tar Heel ground gains to a scant net of 39 yards, with Carolina's candidate for All-American honors being throttled throughout most of the tilt. But Charlie also proved his worth in the late surge, slicing off yardage on the ground and through the air, and decoying the Bulldog defenders on several occasions.

Nevertheless, it was Pupa in the backfield and the entire forward wall that walked off with the lion's share of the honors. Special credit goes to tackle Haywood Fowle, the only player on either team to stay in the entire 60 minutes; tackle Ted Hazelwood, who blocked one of Rauch's punts; guard Sid Varney, who recovered two loose fumbles; and the three pass-snaring flankmen, Cox, Weiner, and Powell.

Although it took nearly 20 minutes of play for the Kenan crowd to witness its first touchdown of the season, the Tar Heels came close to providing

Scalpers Turn Franklin Street Into Jammed Open Black Market

By Bill Sexton

Yesterday was sucker-day for a mass of ticket scalpers who turned Chapel Hill's main business section into a black market rivaling the busiest in Europe.

Evidence of a well-organized syndicate of Carolina students plus an invasion by professional scalpers were ample evidence that big city-style racketeering had moved—at least for a day—into little Chapel Hill.

Taken by Surprise

Local law enforcement officers were taken by surprise as the Franklin street sidewalk became a curb exchange involving hundreds of transactions yesterday morning. When the large-scale public scalping became evident, Police Chief W. T. Sloan ordered his officers to keep the crowds moving and discourage scalping wherever possible. But local officers were more than busy with traffic control, and scalping continued up to game time unmolested. No arrests were made

Two Orange county sheriff's deputies in plain clothes reported that the busiest scalpers held federal licenses for ticket brokerage.

There were practically as many Georgia red-and-black buttons worn by sudent scalpers as Carolina, and one Wake Forest student boasted clearing $40 in a single hour.

The Carolina scalpers appeared well-organized, with a supervisor dealing out tickets and change to his salesmen. The scalpers hawked literally fistfulls of seats in all sections as though they were newspapers.

The professional operators—this reporter observed one group of three in continuous operation from early yesterday morning until the starting gun of the game—shouted their offers to buy, sell, or exchange ducats. One member of the group concentrated on buying the others dispersed the wares for as high as $12.50 a single seat.

We've tried before to stop open-air scalping," said Chief Sloan. "But people will get tickets if they want to bad enough, no matter the cost or the risk of violating law."

Sloan's officers reported that the curb market, which rendered the Franklin sidewalk almost closed to traffic, was the most open and brisk in their experience.

Spectator Dies Of Heart Attack

L. P. Matthews, 64, prominent Myrtle Beach, S. C., attorney and real estate operator, died in the stands today at the Carolina-Georgia game. Death was attributed to heart disease by Dr. W. C. Brann, a spectator at the game, who pronounced Matthews dead shortly after 3 p.m.

Feeling ill, Matthews had left his seat in end zone section to seek medical aid. He was stricken before he reached the ground. When Dr. Brann responded to a call over the stadium public address system, Matthews had already succumbed.

DTH Meeting

All persons interested in working on the news staff of the Daily Tar Heel should meet in the DTH office on the second floor of Graham Memorial this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Applicants for staff membership, both new and old, must attend if interested in working on the newspaper this year.

Roy Cole with his band of 14 Carolinians will make their fall debut this afternoon in a free concert sponsored by Graham Memorial. Though scheduled to begin in the main lounge at 3 o'clock, the concert will be held outside, weather permitting. Organized 18 months ago on the campus, the group is composed almost entirely of students.

Education Here and There

Stories continue to circulate around the campus about luckless would-be students who have been accepted by the University but have found it impossible to find a place to live during their stay here. For the benefit of any such unfortunates, we wish to pass on a reminder from Russell Grumman, head of the Extension division in Swain hall, about the University's statewide College Center program.

This program was initiated last year for the purpose of giving a year of college work to students who found themselves squeezed out of regular institutions by heavy post-war enrollments. Twelve such centers operated in North Carolina cities last year, and five have already been started for the current term. The University will try to provide this instruction to any group of university candidates numbering 30 or more who will sign up with the Extension division. Director Grumman has said that there is hope that some of this year's Centers will provide the full two years general college curriculum.

It seems to us that, in these days of small college towns throughout the nation being jammed with students in a fashion never dreamed of a few years ago, the college center idea is a program to be nourished and fostered. Presbyterian College is now running an off-shoot of its campus at Maxton on a former Army flying base procured from the government surplus property services. There are numbers of these abandoned bases over the countryside where educational centers such as these could function. The facilities of an Army post, such as recreation halls and movie houses, are all being operated at Maxton "College" and provide students there with all the normal advantages of university life without the current problems of overcrowded classrooms and unsanitary living conditions. —STANFORD.

Mr. Coates and Civic Responsibility

The Wedgewood room of the Waldorf-Astoria hotel has played host to many distinguished personages, but perhaps none has contributed as much to his state government as Prof. Albert Coates who will speak at a conference on "The Citizen's Participation in Public Affairs." This subject is one that is indelibly stamped on Coates' mind. Several years ago, inspired by a great incentive to teach the duties of responsibility to the new office holders in the State, he almost single-handed established the Institute of Government here in Chapel Hill. As a result of his indefatigible efforts, the Institute has become one of the most important functions of our state government. In the training of county, local, and state officers it is second to none. The newly-organized school for traffic and highway officers is expected to be a tremendous step in decreasing the number of accidents in the state.

Coates' association with the University and the state has not been an easy-going chain of events, and he was not received with outspread arms. He was forced to prove the merits of his system. He has. And the State is greatly indebted to Coates for his ingenuity in working out the Institute and for his orientation of its elected officers.

The members of the Conference, held under the auspices of the American Bar association, the American Political Science association, and the School of Law of New York university, are indeed fortunate in being able to have Coates with them a few pointers. The "Citizenship Clearing House" will inevitably be a success.

On Skyscrapers

Has anyone ever wondered why the Daily Worker's New York office is in a small building? Well, quit wondering; the word is out. The Communist party line: American skyscrapers are dangerous. They sway so much that water sloshes in the bathtubs and pictures bounce on the wall.

That somewhat frightening bit of information was printed in the Moscow Literary Gazette, under the byline of a Russian engineer. Seems to us there might be some truth in it. Last time a fellow we know was in the big city he was staying a-way up yonder on one of the top floors of a hotel. Coming home in the wee hours from a brief tour of 52nd St., he went to his room and fell onto the bed. And, would you believe it, it seemed that that room, bed and all, was doing inside loops. He sure does appreciate that Show Was Good, But. . .

The Audience Was Bad

By Bob Sain

There is not much use in trying to give last evening's Sound and Fury Freshman Night Show an ordinary review. It was not an ordinary show.

First of all, the show—which was not up to the best that the campus musical comedy organization can produce—was played to one of the largest groups ever to crowd into Memorial hall. Unfortunately the audience was well spiced by townspeople's twelve-year-olds who heckled the performers without mercy and who made very impolite noises with little horns. Perhaps children under sixteen shouldn't be admitted without adult supervision.

But that is neither here and we hope it won't be there again.

In the best tradition of the stage, Sound and Fury's standout showpeople—Coline Smith, Doug Gardner, Gray Adams, Pete Strader, Ben Kistler—gave the big, noisy audience a good fight. Coline, perched on a piano and warbling her "Love for Sale", sold her number as usual while the people out front greeted her every phrase with horns, whistles, and coins thrown on the stage. Most any other singer would have cut the tune after one chorus.

Doug Gardner ran through an Eddie Cantor style harem number with his usual energy and spirit. Dancers in the skit were Grace Blades, Nancy Tucker and Anies Daye, Jr.

Gray Adams was at home in front of the heckling, cat-calling audience in a comic routine. His jokes weren't very funny, but, as usual, he knew his way around behind footlights.

Pete Strader, lanky director of the show and more-or-less emcee due to the late arrival of Ben Kistler, fought the good fight against the tough audience.

His work in "Love That Soap Opera," the summer - show "Blip" skit, and in the finale was outstanding. Equally outstanding in the finale were Coline Smith, who presented the amusing Kern tune, "Life Upon the Wicked Stage," with almost perfect comedy technique, and Forrest Covington. Covington's summer-show holdover, "Old Man River" was the top number of the show. The audience was impressed by his voice and dramatic appeal. Their applause was what had been missing through the show.

Workmanlike performances were turned in by June Matthews and her brother, Frank. June sang one of Frank's songs, "Moonlight" with what may well have been careful regard for the notes. We couldn't say for sure since it is not one of composer Matthews' best tunes. June has a competent voice and an agreeably subdued stage personality. If she has luck she should be tops in the organization within a year. Frank worked as hard as, if not harder than, most in the show. His piano accompaniment to all the songs was excellent.

The Sigma Chi sextet was well received by the audience. The reception was probably due to the fact that their six voices could be heard, while earlier numbers were presented without mikes. S&F should remember that next time.

Considering the early presentation of the show following fall vacation, Sound and Fury did well. But, if it was their plan to make a good impression on new freshmen, they could have started work a little earlier and worked a little harder.

Russian guy telling him why that happened. He was sort of blaming it on the street's $1.25 shots.

As a parting note, the Russian engineer adds that the buildings lean so much in the wind that they remain permanently lopsided. (Maybe he was the character who stood in a 5th Avenue canyon and looked up, saying, "Goodness, the buildings come together up there.)

Student World

National Organization Launched

Madison, Wis. (Special)—The National Student association, launched at a constitutional convention on the University of Wisconsin campus from August 30 to September 7, gives the American college student unprecedented representation in the educational world.

Some 700 delegates officially representing 1,100,000 students in 351 leading colleges and universities throughout the United States worked day and night in Madison to write the NSA constitution and plan a dynamic and comprehensive program of activities to improve education and promote friendship and understanding among students both at home and abroad.

The new-born NSA, with permanent headquarters on the University of Wisconsin campus in Madison and six full-time national officers, is starting immediately with its activities on campus, regional and national levels.

The aims of NSA, as presented in the preamble to the constitution, are to "stimulate the development of democratic self-government; promote international understanding and fellowship; and aid in securing for all people equal rights and possibilities of primary, secondary and higher education regardless of sex, religion, political beliefs or economic circumstances."

These aims will be pursued through such activities as collecting and disseminating information and statistics, working out student tours and cultural exchanges, and bringing students together to discuss and plan projects for the improvement of education in all its phases.

The NSA constitution is to be ratified by the member student bodies within nine months. The national organization is divided into 26 geographic regions, which have already elected their officers. Depending upon the number of students in each, the regions will have one or two representatives on the national executive committee. Only the officially constituted student governing bodies on the respective campuses will send representatives to the national congresses to be held each summer.

The convention authorized the executive committee to begin negotiations for NSA affiliation with the International Union of Students, with reservations which will preserve the purely educational nature of the NSA and prevent the NSA from being bound by political actions which might be taken by the international group. Admitting political complexity of the IUS, argument was made that "staying out of the international organization would put American students in danger of becoming isolated from the international student community."

The knottiest problem before the convention involved NSA's method of carrying out its stated purpose of "securing eventual elimination of all forms of discriminatory educational systems anywhere in the United States."

Southern white delegates were concerned lest their regional autonomy be impaired by by-law provisions on the elimination of discrimination. Negro delegates and others desired that the NSA should be enabled to act on such problems on a national level without leaving them to the initiative of regions.

The final compromise solution provided that NSA "will take action on national, regional, and campus problems through the corresponding organization of NSA to implement its stated principles, with regard to the legal limitations involved."

The constructive activities of IUS with which the NSA plan cooperation are: educational and student exchange; national and international tours; exchange of student publications and information; world-wide sports events; student relief; reconstruction and study of educational facilities; faculty conferences and exchanges; and joint projects and exchanges on art, drama, and science.

The organization has been giving a special send-off by President Truman. His statement:

"The people of the United States have long manifested an outstanding interest in higher education. Our colleges and universities are now crowded beyond their capacities with an unprecedented number of students, eager to prepare themselves in the best possible manner for meeting the problems of the future. It is a pleasure to send greetings to the Constitutional Convention of the National Student Association.

IRC PLANS ELECTION

CAROLINA CAROUSEL

Trains, Jail, Texas

Never seen anything to beat the pre-game enthusiasm of a Tar Heel grid set-to. . . . Here it is Sat. ayem and the whole town's on millenium-high-pitch. . . . We are, too . . . since we took a nice piece of that Georgia-and-13 proposition one of our more reckless cohorts was mouthing around the other day! . . . A thousand-odd Georgians who arrived in Durham on a special train from Peachland at 8:30 this morning are helping keep things interesting. . . . And on the last topic: Here's hoping the athletic bigwigs will arrange special Tar Heel trains to Florida, Richmond, and Washington this fall.

Things are tough. Proof: Ace DTH newsman Bill Sexton, who classifies himself as a "highly respectable local citizen" had to sleep in the local jail Friday night. Reason, says respectable citizen Sexton, was the housing shortage. . . . But he's moving into the quonset huts today, fellows.

Perusing the Daily Texan yesterday, noticed an encouraging sign for the year. A recent series of lectures on "How to Study" drew overflow crowds of eager studes every night. . . . More: They've got flying courses at UT; why not here???? . . . Ordinarily we're not particularly nosey, but, can't help wondering how come there's a bright red - and - white striped cushion in the middle of the beautiful comfy maroon sofa in the lobby of E. Carrington Smith's local movie emporium. . . . Owell. . . .

In closing, here's the hand of the week to Don English, promoter extraordinaire. The Rendezvous, revival of the defunct Candlelight room, packed in over 1000 at the grand opening Friday evening. Thanks to Don for making a fine start as Jack-of-all-trades manager of the Rendezvous.

Over-lite

Many are the puns concerning the distaste for army life in all of its various stages, but the cream of them all really happened. A state convict, who escaped last year and joined the army, surrendered himself to the Commanding officer of his base in California requesting that he be permitted to finish his two to three year sentence for larceny.

Curious women the world over are eager to learn of the design and cut of the dress, but the men of American would prefer for the women folks to think of the cut of their own dresses—several inches off the bottoms, or lock themselves behind bars.

THE HARD WAY

To win a football game the way Carolina's Tar Heels did yesterday afternoon in Kenan Stadium, you must either be mighty good or mighty lucky and the lads of Coach Carl Snavely were a little bit of both. They won their game, but they did it the hard way, adding a few more grey hairs to the now-silvery head of Coach Snavely and shortening the life of this correspondent some five to ten years. Nine more Saturdays like that and they probably will be looking for a new coach and a new sports writer.

For the first three quarters the Tar Heels' offense was definitely nothing to write home about. In fact, there were times when the local lads gave the impression that they had little or no interest in what was going on. Early in the first quarter the Tar Heels were handed a brilliant chance to score the initial six points of the season, but were shy in their actions and did not counter.

They continued in this frame of mind throughout the first half, threatening here and there, but never getting up the courage to shove across the touchdown. In the meantime the referees, tired of the lack of action, set up Georgia's first touchdown with a pass inference ruling that brought back lingering memories of Gabe Hill. This decision prompted the Bulldogs to march the remaining 17 yards to payland, with the majority of the yardage being carefully consumed by Johnny Donaldson, who at the time, was playing under the alias of Chuck Magoni thanks to a typographical error in the programs.

DEVILISH DEFENSE

Coach Wee Wally Butts of Georgia threw a clever defense against the Tar Heels, jamming his line backers up so close that for all practical purposes, the Carolina boys were forced to cope with an eight man line. This was the stifling point of the local running game, and when the Tar Heels finally decided to get into the ball game, they were forced to take to the ozone. This they did with amazing prowess, which would have been more so, had not jovial Art Weiner, juggled two nifty tosses that looked like sure scores from any point in the stadium.

Starting the second half the Tar Heels did not immediately show any great rejuvination, except their continuance of staunch defensive play. With these appalling conditions most of the third quarter passed, until suddenly a clothes-line Pupa aerial fell into the arms of Bob Cox who danced into the end zone to bring the tally in round number to 7-6. Cox immediately continued his personal scoring campaign by versatilely adding the extra point, and Carolina was once again a competitor for the final victory.

On the next kickoff the Tar Heels got right back into scoring position by knocking a somewhat befuddled Georgia halfback loose from the kickoff return and it looked as if the Tar Heels had finally got down to business. Yet then followed a series of confused and garbled plays which saw the home boys twice fail to score from what announcer Dick Jamerson dramatically called the six inch line, and minorly disgusted Carolina fans and six pointer bettors sank back into their seats.

MARCH TO THE SEA

The next time the Tar Heels got their hands on the ball, it was somewhere inside their own twenty, a position that they were fast to improve. With the Justice one and Pupa running and passing to some form of perfection, the Carolina lads rolled merrily up the field, with everyone wondering how long it could last. As it finally was, the whole thing eventually developed in a winning score with Weiner gathering in a Pupa toss just to prove if nothing else, that he wasn't to be a three time loser. From then on it was pure routine with the local boys extinguishing a final, flickering Georgia flame of hope and there was nothing left to do but play "Hark the Sound" and go home.

That the Tar Heels emerged the eventual winner can possibly be attributed to the outstanding planning of Coach Carl Snavely, and the fine right arm of Walt Pupa. There are others who must receive outstanding accommodations on Carolina's glory train, too, the hard-driving guards who spent the afternoon chasing Johnny Rauch from one end of the field to the other, continually banging the Georgia ace to the ground before he could do much of anything with the pigskin. Still other bouquets should be tossed in the direction of the Carolina's defensive secondary which followed potential Georgia pass receivers around in a manner that must have made the visitors feel at least somewhat self-conscious.

The Tar Heel show of the day was rounded out by a top-notch performance by the band, which did everything that the two teams didn't.

Georgia had one consolation. They won the toss.

WAA Discusses Plans For Swim Awards

Plans for awarding plaques and a trophy to winners of the Women's Athletic association's swimming meets were discussed at a meeting of the WAA council Thursday evening in the Women's gym. A committee composed of Nina Moseley, Carolyn Driver, and Butch Goodwin, was appointed to draw up a point system for the awarding of the trophies.

The following senior managers of women's intramural sports were also elected at the meeting: Bill Henderson, swimming; Jo McMillian, volley ball; K. D. Durham, basketball; Helen Crockford, Hockey; Sibyl Mitchell, horseshoes. Junior assistant managers will be elected later in the quarter.

Coeds interested in joining the hockey club, sponsored by the WAA are asked to meet in the lecture room of the Women's gym, Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Skill in hockey is not necessary to join the club, Miss Frances Burns, adviser, said.

Snavely and Tar Heels Jubilant Over Victory

By Dick Jenrette

"Boys, that's the kind of ball game I like to win," exclaimed Coach Carl Snavely as he burst into the jubilant Carolina dressing room a few minutes after his Tar Heels had stopped the Georgia Bulldogs with a thrilling second-half rally.

But the Tar Heel dressing room was already in a state of confusion before the pleased Carolina coach made his appearance. On all side were heard remarks such as "congratulations" or "wonderful game."

Here is what several of the Carolina huskies said as they shed their football togs. Walt Pupa, the hard-plunging fullback, first let out a satisfied "oh" before surmising that "we played team ball" to win.

Pat for Pupa

Charlie Justice, bearing a broad grin, said at first he didn't have anything to say, but the little scatback reversed his decision to exclaim, "that Walt Pupa sure played a swell game." Charlie then went on to state that "you've got to give our line plenty of credit."

Sid Varney, who saw plenty of action at guard said the most expressive comment he could give on the game was an "ugh." Co-captain Joe Wright said that he was "just glad to win." He thought the Tar Heels all played good ball.

Ingenious Defense

Coach Snavely, after lauding his own team, had much praise for the Georgia squad, particularly that Bulldog line which forced Carolina to resort to a passing attack to score both its touchdowns. He said that Georgia Coach Wally Butts had devised "a most ingenious defense." "It was really smart," he added.

Coach Carl continued, "We had to change our tactics to cope with Georgia's eight-man line. In the first half our boys played like a team usually plays in its opening game. We were forced to turn to passing to win—Georgia's line spread out and the backs came through and rushed our passers in the first half."

Coach Butts, after congratulating Snavely, left for Durham, where he was to appear on a broadcasting program before returning to Athens, Ga., tonight.

"Tough One"

And over in the Georgia dressing room immediately following the game there were only a few mumblings in evidence, as might be expected. The Bulldogs exchanged remarks with one another such as "tough one" or "too bad." Georgia seemed to have accepted its defeat calmly, although substitute Homer Hobbs became involved in a little skirmish with the Carolina players just before the final whistle.

The football that was used in the game will be sent to the mother of Cotten Sutherland, Carolina quarterback who was killed in a highway accident last spring.

Durham, Sept. 27.—Duke's Blue Devils started off their 1947 season on the winning side of the ledger here today by edging out N. C. State, 7-0, after 53 minutes of scoreless ball.

Big Louis Allen, Duke tackle, provided the 38,000 fans in attendance with the only touchdown of the afternoon when he intercepted a State pass in the fourth quarter and rambled 40 yards for the score that meant the game.

The Devil victory avenged a 13-6 loss to the Wolfpack of Coach Beattie Feathers in Raleigh last year.

For Duke, it was a hopeful start on a new season after last year's poor campaign when Coach Wallace Wade's once mighty team lost five games and won only four. Fred Folger, shifted from wingback to tailback in a surprise move, supplied most of the Duke offensive punch this afternoon.

State came into the game after a two-week polio quarantine, imposed when blocking back Don McCormick came down with an acute case of infantile paralysis recently. The Wolfpack was also without the services of Charlie Richkus for most of the afternoon. Charlie was carried off the field with a concussion after the first few minutes of play.

Ground Attack Lags, Carolina Takes to Air

the spectators—and themselves—with one before five minutes had passed. Varney's recovery of a Georgia fumble gave the Blue and White gridders a first down on their opponents 23-yard line. And when Jim Camp sped seven yards on a reverse, it appeared as though the Tar Heels were on the way.

But they weren't. On second down, the ball slipped out of Justice's hands and although recovered by Weiner on the 28 yard stripe, the threat fizzled and the Bulldogs gained the ball on downs. Neither eleven came close during the rest of the first quarter.

Georgia began its touchdown drive after an exchange of punts between Justice and Joe Geri had put the Bulldogs on their own 48-yard stripe at the start of the second stanza. With Johnny Donaldson, who tallied Georgia's final touchdown in the Sugar Bowl battle, leading the way, the visitors drove their way in two successive first downs up to the Carolina two. A ruling of interference on one of Rauch's aerials picked up 26 yards for the Bulldogs during the march.

Once at the two yard line, it took Georgia two plays to register the game's first score. The Carolina line stiffened to keep fullback Floyd Reid from crossing over, but Donaldson dove over center on the next play for the score. Geri's placement was good and the Bulldogs took the lead, 7-0.

After the score, Carolina moved within the Georgia 30-yard line twice before the end of the first half but bogged down each time. The home forces reached the Georgia 13 on the second penetration but were thrown back for successive losses on attempted pass plays.

With the start of the third quarter, the Tar Heels began their air attack but the usually glue-fingered Weiner let a Pupa pass get through his fingers for what might have been a score. Bad luck again dogged Carolina several plays later when Powell, on an end-around maneuver, picked up 23 yards to the Georgia 26 only to have the play called back on a clipping penalty. Carolina was not to be denied, however, and received its big break in exactly eight plays.

That play was, of course, the first Pupa pass play. With the ball on the Georgia 48, Pupa faded back past his own 45 and let go with a man-size heave on the Georgia 20. Rauch, playing in the safety position, made a futile attempt to grab the speeding end but Cox made it across the line without a hand touching him.

On the kickoff which followed, the Snavelymen received another big break when Donaldson fumbled and Varney recovered on the Georgia 25. Justice passed to Weiner for 10 yards and a first down on the 15. From there Justice and Pupa powered their way to another first four yards from paydirt and Justice added another three to put Carolina one yard away. But here events took another bad hop—in the form of a bad pass from center that lost seven yards and a triple reverse that followed with a loss of 20 yards.

And then came the final aerial surge—Pupa to Weiner for 10, Pupa to Cox for 16, Justice to Cox for 11, and finally the payoff on Pupa's toss to Weiner for 17 yards and six big points.

Manchester, Conn., Sept. 27—(UP)—Little Junior Cavagnoro is a cut-up who almost came between his pop and a great love.

Fascinated by the brilliant colors of some pasteboards, Junior took a pair of scissors and thoroughly converted the bright cardboard pieces into paper dolls.

Junior's dad, sports writer Steve Cavagnora, salvaged enough pieces to get himself into Ebbets field. The bright colored pasteboards were world series tickets.

New Group Undertakes Ambitious Program To Interest United Nations to Stude[nts]

The Collegiate Council for the United Nations, is an organization new to most students at the university. Formed early this summer by Carolina students interested in furthering the cause of the United Nations and the principles to which it is dedicated, the CCUN is rapidly becoming a power on the campus.

Initial Meeting

How did it get its start? Everything started, or more accurately began to bear fruit in June of 1946 when students from all over the nation met in New York at the First Annual Intercollegiate Institute on the United Nations. These young men and women had a threefold purpose in forming this council. They desired to awaken college students to an understanding of their part in the United Nations and what its success or failure might mean to each individual; to enable students to understand and appreciate the peoples of the world who make up the United Nations, and in this way make it possible for the UN to cope with the problems which beset it; to give college students better understanding of the purpose, scope and functions of the UN.

Student Oponion

This ambitious plan has already matured. As a result of this conference and subsequent meetings and plannings student public opinion will be sent to the American and appropriate UN delegations. These opinions will be heard, will be considered!

Present at this meeting was Lincoln Kan, a university student, who has since become state director for the CCUN in North Carolina. When he returned from New York he met with Roberta Stirlingn, now secretary-general, Charlie Long, Barron Mills, Bill Mackie, Bill Armstrong and Randall McCleod, at the latter's home. As a result of this the CCUN entered the picture at this University, becoming one of over a hundred such groups at colleges all over the nation.

Miniature UN

On Oct. 1, 2, 3, the CCUN will present to the students outstanding diplomats from several countries in a miniature United Nations week. Among the dignataries who will be heard are Sir John Magowan, British Minister to the U.S.; Alfred Stirling, Australian Minister; George Tomeh, Syrian charge d'Affaires in Washington; and Sava N. Kosanovic, Yugoslav Ambassador to the U.S.

Director Lincoln Kan urges all persons interested in actively supporting and aiding the CCUN to join and help insure the success of the UN. CCUN's program is enormous in its scope, and willing, capable workers are needed to insure its success.

Two Separate Explosions Mark More Violence in Ancient Holy Land City

Jerusalem, Sept. 27—(UP)—Two explosions and a sea battle today spelled continuation of Zionist violence in Palestine.

An explosion near the storied Damascus gate of Jerusalem broke windows in St. George cathedral and the Swedish consulate, and alarmed nearby residents. A second blast in the center of Jerusalem was a harmless bomb designed to scatter propaganda leaflets. Neither bomb caused more than minor damage.

Another refugee ship was captured by British sea forces today but only after a gunfight. In the battle beween refugees and a naval boarding party one jew was shot to death and seven others wounded. The captured ship is now headed for the refugee detention camps at Haifa.

This further violence in Palestine followed by a day British announcement that troops would be withdrawn from the Holy Land as soon as the United Nations agree on a plan of action, or within two months if UN action is stalled.

G.I.'s Are Returned

Trieste, Sept. 27—(UP)—The three American G.I.'s seized by Yugoslav soldiers were returned to Trieste tonight. The men included lieutenant William Van Atten, of East Orange, New Jersey and Private Earl Henrick, of Arlington, Virginia.

Britain's Attlee Explains Soviet Charges Against U. S.

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Sept. 27.—(UP)—Russia's recent attacks on the United States and Britain during U-N debate were the subject of a speech by Prime Minister Clement Attlee of Great Britain today.

In a speech prepared for delivery to a gathering of Laborites at Leicester, Attlee said the Russian attacks were motivated by troubles at home. Attlee claims that Russia is attempting to divert the attention of the Soviet peopie away from their own troubles by heaping abuse on the western democracies.

The Soviets sparked their diplomatic offensive in the U-N yesterday with demands for removal of American and British troops from foreign soil, as well as further charges of American war-mongering.

Two weeks of debate in the Assembly meeting have served to do little thus far but intensify the East-West diplomatic war to a fever pitch.

The Russian campaign against alleged United States "warmongering" may be extended to next spring's Geneva conference on freedom of information.

Today—at a meeting of the social committee of the Assembly—Russia pressed for changes in a list of basic principles of a free press. High up on the Soviet list is a call for exposure of "warmongers."

Yugoslavia's Marshal Tito has issued a plea for the popular fronts of the world to stand united against Fascist tendencies.

In a speech delivered to a people's front Congress in Belgrade today Tito scored what he called "Fascism fostered by international reaction under the leadership of American monopoly and capital." The Yugoslav chief of state charged that international reaction is repeating its previous performance—bringing back Fascism and turning it again into an aggressive force.

Housing Racket, Victory Village Rent Abuse Inquiry on AVC Agenda Tonight

Student President Tom Eller to Talk At Meeting of Phi

An address by President of the Student Body Tom Eller will highlight the opening of the 153rd session of the Philanthropic assembly tonight at 7:30 in the Phi hall, fourth floor New East. In a 15-minute speech, Eller will deliver his first "State of the Campus" message to the student body.

Eller's address will be followed by a talk on the Phi portraits by Mrs. Albert Coates, wife of Professor Albert Coates, head of the Institute of Government. Well-known for her knowledge of interesting facts about the 39 portraits which the Phi possesses, Mrs. Coates will tell the members and visitors about the artists who painted the portraits, and gave interesting sidelights about the distinguished men whom they portrayed.

Twelve Portraits

Twelve portraits now adorn the walls of the Phi Hall. They included ones of Commodore Johnston Blakeley, the "John Paul Jones" of the South; Rev. Joseph Caldwell, first President of the University; Hon. T. C. Manning, Chief Justice of Louisiana in the 1860's; Brigadier General James Johnson Pettigrew, leader of Pickett's Charge at Gettysburg; William Gaston, Supreme Court Judge, 1934-44; Major General Bryan Grimes, leader of the Confederate Forces in Eastern North Carolina, John Jerritage Bryan, Representative in Congress, 1847-49; John Y. Mason; Joseph John Daniel; William Miller; and James C. Dobbin.

Student Party To Meet Today

A meeting of the Student party will be held this afternoon at three o'clock in Roland Parker lounges one and two.

The meeting follows a preliminary steering committee meeting held last night for the consideration of party organization and policy. Open consideration for December legislature candidates, plus a discussion of several nonpolitical matters will take place.

Chairman Charlie Long urges all members of the party to be present and extends an invitation to all persons without political affiliations to attend and observe the party in action.

"The Student party's policy," said Long, "has been, and will continue to be open meetings, with the entire campus at liberty to attend. I urge every student, no matter what his interest may be, to take an active part in campus politics in order that we may continue to insure representative student government."

GLEE CLUB WILL REHEARSE AT 7

The Women's Glee club will rehearse at 5:00 this afternoon.

Tryouts will be held in Hill hall all this week from 2:30 until 4:30. All old members and new women who are interested and have not tried out are urged to do so as soon as possible. No special training is required to sing in the Glee club, and tryouts are short and simple.

Plans for this year include broadcasts, a combined Christmas concert with the Men's Glee Club and a spring tour.

Better Housing One Chief Aim States Rouzie

Investigation of housing rackets in Chapel Hill and alleged abuses in Victory Village rental practices will be the primary item of new business on the agenda tonight at the first meeting of the American Veterans committee.

The meeting of the Chapel Hill chapter of the national organization of World War II veterans will be held in the Presbyterian Church at 7:30 and will include an introduction to the work and aims of AVC.

Primary Aim

"Better housing has been one of our chief aims all over the nation," Chairman Ben Rouzie said in commenting on local AVC projects, "and in Chapel Hill we feel the housing situation is worse than is necessary even considering the problems involved. We intend to see what can be done about it."

Declining to place the blame for unfair practices until a thorough investigation is conducted, Rouzie said that "a lot of honest veterans with families have sweated out the waiting list for Victory Village only to see their places go to couples who weren't even on the list at all.

Sub-Renting Racket

"Some of these cases were made possible," he said, "by lax rules on subletting. In some instances students have transferred to other schools and still kept their apartments in the Village. They then subletted directly at rents much higher than the standard sums—and if this isn't checked, it could turn into a bigger racket than it is now."

Rouzie emphasized that "AVC is not charging the Administration with laxness or political finagling" in renting units to veterans, but that "if the rules are inadequate, AVC intends to

SymphonyOrchestra Begins Rehearsals

The University Symphony orchestra began rehearsals last night in Hill hall under the direction of Earl Slocum of the music faculty. Players are still needed, particularly for the string section, and students interested are asked to see Mr. Slocum in 105 Hill hall or to attend future rehearsals.

The group will meet twice weekly, on Monday evening at 7 o'clock and on Wednesday afternoon at 4:30 in preparation for the three formal concerts which it will present throughout the year, as well as appearances with other groups. It will accompany the Chapel Hill Choral society in their concerts at Christmas and at commencement, and will join with the music department and the Playmakers in the production of the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, "The Mikado."

The orchestra was composed of about 60 players last year, and, according to Mr. Slocum, should be even larger this year, since there are many new players available.

COL. W. A. RABORG above) and Col. Carlyle Shepard will address a meeting tonight at 7:30 o'clock at 101 Davie hall of the reserve officers 320th Composite group.

Boxing Return On First Agenda Of Legislature

The Student Legislature, in its first meeting of the year Thursday night, will consider a resolution which will give its backing to the reinstatement of boxing at the University. A number of students have petitioned for the return of the ring to the field of sports here and the Student Legislature will be asked to give its endorsement when it convenes Thursday. The decision itself, however, on the future of boxing on this campus will rest with the Athletic council.

It is expected that other legislation will be introduced contesting the constitutionality of the Student Record book, a publication established (never released) to inform the student body of the proceedings and action taken in the legislative, judiciary, and executive branches of the government.

The meeting Thursday night at Gerrard Hall will necessarily use much of its time in reorganizing its committees. During the summer, many were members by proxy, while still others have not returned for the fall term.

Series of Recitals Will Begin Tonight

First of a weekly series of classical recorded concerts of sonatas, complete operas, and chamber music, will be presented from 8 until 9:30 tonight in the Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial. These Tuesday evening programs will be in addition to the two-hour Sunday evening concerts in the main lounge. Tonight's program will include the following works: Boccherini, Quartet in G Minor; Mozart, Quintet in A Major for Clarinet and Strings; Beethoven, Trio No. 7 in B Flat Major ("Archduke").

Rhodes Scholarship Awards To Be Made in 1947, Spruill

By George Roberts

Rhodes Scholarships will again be awarded to American college students during the year 1947, Dean Spruill announced today. Applicants who desire this scholarship should apply immediately to Dean Spruill who will forward their applications to the Secretary of the Committee of Selection for the state of North Carolina, Dr. William Blackburn of Duke university.

Temporarily abandoned during the war years, Rhodes scholarships to Oxford university will be offered to 48 applicants throughout the United States instead of the usual 32. An important innovation is a special provision for men who served during the war years in any type of duty. This includes scientific research, education, and positions in industry or agriculture which contributed to the war effort. To be eligible for a "War Service Scholarship," the following requirements are necessary.

1. Be a male citizen of the United States (marriage is no bar)
2. Be between the ages of 19 and 33 on October 1, 1948.
3. Have completed at least one year of war service.
4. Have completed at least one year of college work.

The usual pre-war requirements will be necessary for those who have not served in any type of war work.

The value of a Rhodes scholarship is basically set at approximately $1600 per annum which at present is supplimented by an additional $400 a year due to existing conditions.

Qualities forming the basis of selection as specified by Rhodes are:

1. Literary and scholastic ability and attainments; 2. Qualities of manhood, truth, courage, devotion to duty, sympathy, kindliness, unselfishness, and fellowship; 3. Exhibition of moral force of character and of instincts to lead and to take an interest in his schoolmates; 4. Physical vigor as shown by interest in outdoor sports or in other ways. Particular emphasis is placed on the first two qualities.

Picture-a-Minute Is Yackety-Yack's New Schedule as Photographers Work Rapidly

A picture a minute is the schedule for Yackety-Yack photographs these days, with two photographers working full time on Graham Memorial's second floor putting out 120 pictures per hour and 850 pictures per day.

The most surprising feature of the Yack photographic policy, however, is the fact that no one has to pay a cent for their photographs. Unlike last year, when fees ran from one to five dollars depending on the student's class, a readjustment of the student fee structure and new legislative appropriations have made possible this service without charge.

Urge Students

All students who have not already made appointments for their photographs are urged to do so immediately by editorial board members Ruth Evans, Gene Johnstone, and Harold Bursley. No individual pictures will be taken at any fraternity houses this year.

For the photographs men are asked to wear light-colored shirts, preferably white, dark coats and ties. Coeds are requested to wear V-necked dresses.

Issued Call

The board of editors has issued a call for all persons interested in working on the Yack staff to attend a staff meeting this evening at 7:30 in the Yack office in Graham Memorial. Staff positions will be filled by those attending the meeting or those who have been previously interviewed.

There are openings on the staff for photographers, artists, writers, and typists in particular, and for anyone else who is interested and willing to work, say the Editors.

Knapp Foundation Presents $250,000 For NC Development

A gift to the state of North Carolina of $250,000 to be used for state development, has been made by the Knapp Foundation, Inc., Governor Gregg Cherry announced yesterday.

The program of state development, described as having come to North Carolina through the initiative and cooperation of the Knapp Foundation and President Frank P. Graham of the university, will provide for improving the North Carolina public schools, the fishing industry of Eastern North Carolina, and the Technical Institute of N. C. State College at Morehead City.

Public School Survey

Included in the grant was $100,000 to the North Carolina Education Commission, for a public school survey that will be made over a period of two years. This is added to a fund of $50,000 that the State of North Carolina has appropriated for this purpose.

$25,000 a year for four years for a North Carolina fisheries research survey was granted.

The foundation allotted $40,000 to the University of North Carolina for capital investment or as flexible funds for the Fisheries Research program and the Technical Institute, of which $10,000 is earmarked for capital investment at the Institute and $30,000 as capital investment or a flexible fund for the fisheries research program.

Technical Institute

A grant of $10,000 was assigned to the University for maintenance of the Technical Institute of State College at Morehead City.

"With the State Department of Conservation and Development I have been glad to set aside for this program the valuable Naval properties at Morehead City acquired from the Federal Government and also to specify State funds provided by the legislature for the State School Survey and for fisheries research and development to match the Knapp grants," Governor Cherry said.

Elections Group To Meet Today

An urgent meeting of the elections committee of the student legislature has been called for three o'clock this afternoon in the Grail room of Graham Memorial.

In calling the meeting Committee Chairman Miles Smith said it is imperative that the following members of the committee be present: Tag Montague, Walt Talley, Benson McCutcheon, Ken Lineback, Cam West, Ben Wood.

SAVA N. KASONOVIC (above) ambassador from Yugoslavia to the United States and Mexico will appear here Friday night, October 3 on the program of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations. Nephew of the famous Nikola Tesla who pioneered in the field of alternating current, Kasonovic has represented his country at United Nations conferences in London, Paris, and New York.

Lincoln Kan Cites Functions Of Foreign Students' Group

In an interview yesterday afternoon, Lincoln Kan, director of CCUN gave out some informal talk on the Foreign Students' Committee, to be organized under the auspices of the CCUN.

Pointing out that not all foreign students at the University have the advantage of learning American moves, Kan cited the committee as a channel, through which these students may become familiar with customs and language, while contributing what they have to offer from their own countries. Mr. Kan was emphatic in stating that this was not merely a social group. The members will be given the opportunity of writing for various magazines and publications.

The CCUN feels that they should initiate this movement, being within their scope, but will welcome the assistance of any group on Campus, since the CCUN belongs to all organizations.

The director of the group is Benedicta Santos, who formerly worked for the Inter-American office in San Paulo, Brazil. Her address is Smith Dormitory. Working with Miss Santos as co-chairman, is Martha Manning, a transfer from G. C. in Greensboro, and an active member of the Wesleyan Foundation.

All foreign students are requested to contact the CCUN office today, or after the conference. They are also invited to attend the banquets Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week.

CCUN Head Reveals First Fall Meeting

Director Lincoln Kan, of the Collegiate Council of the United Nations, has announced the initial fall meeting for all members of the executive council. This evening at 6:45 in the CCUN office at Graham Memorial. All other members, friends or interested persons will be welcomed at 8:00 tonight in the Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial.

This meeting will give the finishing touches to plans for the Conference that is being held on October first, second, and third. This conference will be attended by delegates from the Australian, New Zealand, Yugoslavian, and British embassies and legations.

The purpose of this conference is to bring about a better understanding of the United Nations and the problems which face its members.

Party Names Board To Be Candidates For Vacant Position

By Chuck Hauser

Ruth Evans, Gene Johnstone, and Harold Bursley have been nominated by the University party to run as a Board of Editors for the Yackety-Yack, University yearbook. The three have been serving temporarily in that capacity since the resignation of Bill Moffitt, editor-in-chief elected last May, left the position open.

Moffitt Married

Moffitt, who was triply endorsed by the University, Student, and Campus parties in last spring's election, was married this summer, and has not returned to the University this fall. His resignation was officially accepted in August.

Evans, Johnstone, and Bursley joined forces as a Board of Editors to begin work on the yearbook on schedule. They were officially approved as temporary editors by the Publications Board last Thursday. The editorial election will probably be called within two or three weeks, according to Miles Smith, chairman of the Student Legislature Elections committee.

Fit for Job

The three members of the Board offer a combination of qualifications that seem to fit them well for the job.

Ruth Evans, aside from being Managing Editor for last year's Yack, is Editor of this year's Woman's Handbook, put out by the Coed Senate, and president of the YWCA. Ruth's home is in Fort Knox, Kentucky.

Gene Johnstone has been Editor of the Yack for two years in the past, 1947 and 1945. A senior from Haleyville, Alabama, he is the present president of the Publications Board.

Frat Editor

Harold Bursley, a native of Charlotte, was fraternity Editor for the 1947 Yackety-Yack, and edited the Central High yearbook in Charlotte in 1944.

The Board has already put in a great deal of work on this year's annual, the dummy having been completed, an extensive advertising campaign already underway, and a $45,000 budget having been drawn up.

According to Gene Johnstone, "We're further along after one week of classes than we were last year after two months work."

YACK STAFF MEETING

The Yackety-Yack staff will hold a meeting for all applicants for staff positions this evening at 7:30 in the Yack office in Graham Memorial. All interested persons are urged to attend, photographers, artists, writers, and typists being particularly needed.

Nation-Wide Aptitude Tests for Approved NROTC Candidates Booked to Be Given on December 13

By Paul Rothman

Nation-wide aptitude tests will be given to all approved candidates for the Navy college training program on December 13, 1947.

Applications for, and full information concerning, the tests may be obtained at the Naval armory on this campus and must be mailed in time to be received by the approving officer not later than November 10, 1947.

Those persons entering the training program will receive 4 years college education with all books and fees paid and a $600 yearly subsistence allowance. Upon receiving degrees, the trainees will obtain a commission in the Navy or Marine Corps and will have the opportunity to apply for Naval flight training.

All those interested in flight training will be interested to know that the aviation college program has been suspended for the fiscal year of 1949. Graduates from the Naval academy and reserve officers' training program will be eligible for flight training if they physically qualify.

Giduz, the Perpetual Optimist, Gets Negative Reply to His Request for Ducats to Sugar Bowl

By Jane Mears

The perpetual optimist, Foo Giduz, just received some very sad news from the New Orleans Mid-Winter Sports Association. It seems that the hopeful lad has already written for tickets to the 1948 Sugar Bowl game, and finds that all tickets have been allocated and that no tickets will be available for general sale.

To obtain any of these allotted tickets you have to be practically a stockholder in the Sugar Bowl. At least you should have known about the recent bond issue when you could have bought yourself a permanent priority on the 50-yard line. At any rate, there are so many stockholders in the Association that very few will be left for supporters of the competing teams.

The Roosevelt hotel in New Orleans threw further cold water on Foo's hopes. All reservations have already been taken. The Roosevelt is holding space for press representatives, however, so Daily Tar Heel scribes are in hopes that by flashing their press cards. . . . Anyway, the Roosevelt expressed the hope that they might have the pleasure of having us stop there on some other occasion.

The Sports Association wrote the following letter to Giduz:

"In reference to your request for information about tickets to the 1948 Sugar Bowl game, we regret to advise that all tickets have been allocated and no tickets will be available for general sale this year.

"The number of [illegible] required for the purchasers of our recent bond issue added to those necessary for the old bondholders and guarantors is the reason for this condition.

"All tickets remaining after fulfillment of the above obligations have been allocated to the two competing teams and will be sold by them.

We sincerely regret that we are not able to accommodate you and the many thousands desiring annually to attend the game. We also hope this condition will change when the stadium is enlarged with about [illegible] more seats for the 1949 game."

Some of Your Classmates Are Racketeers

Bill Sexton's disclosure of the scalping of football tickets on a gigantic scale is enough to make any true Carolina student want to hid his face in shame. It is not difficult to accept the fact that professional operators are able to swarm into Chapel Hill, and apparently without any difficulty, hawk their goods up and down Franklin street. But when we see our own classmates and students from neighboring schools organized into a mob to resale tickets at exorbitant prices to our parents, friends and alumni, then we begin to realize the dangers of commercialized athletic events. We are brought to face the cold fact that there are students among us who are not interested in football as a clean, wholesome sport, but as a method of getting money from the suckers.

The students and the big-timers that participated in this illegal operation were treated with too much kindness and were only reprimanded by local police deputies. The big operators were able to flash federal licenses that virtually entitled them to operate. They too escaped punishment or fines. Next time the business begins, and there will probably be a next time even though some reason that this large scale scalping was due only to the greatly-publicized Georgia-Carolina classic, we trust the local authorities will not be so lenient on the participants in the ticket racket. The ducats specifically state on their surface that they are not to be resold for a price greater than the price printed thereon.

Sometimes it is difficult for the authorities to prove that a ticket has been resold at a higher price. But there is another law that the local officials can enforce against the racketeers. The ticket hucksters must have a retail license authorizing them to sell within the city limits—a license that must be obtained from the Town of Chapel Hill authorities.

What has amazed us is this. How were the bosses of the rackets able to obtain fistfuls of tickets to keep their student and professional clerks well stocked?

Preparing for the Fireworks

Members of the election committee are taking precautions against doing a rush job in formulating the election laws. Tomorrow, about 10 days before the Student Legislature will meet for its initial session, the committee will go into a confab to begin compiling the rules for conducting elections. It will be no easy task. Reports from various sources have it that at least representatives from the three political parties will be submitting their own versions, stating the manner in which elections should be conducted. No doubt several other bills originating from individuals will be turned in.

It would alleviate much confusion if the authors of the bill clarify each statement and turn out a set of rules that are not ambiguous. Last spring such ambiguities arose as to the meaning of the phrase regarding the displaying of campaign material near the polls. The conductors of the election interpreted the "polls" to mean the ballot box itself. Another faction believed the phrase to mean the building in which the ballot box was housed. This, and other confusion clauses, should be specifically stated in the final draft of the legislation.

Last fall the last-minute-Larrys of the Legislature passed a bill to create additional polling places, but allowed the election date to sneak up on them and the bill was vetoed by Dewey Dorsett, president of the student body. Although the additional ballot boxes were urgently needed in order to insure a heavy balloting, Dorsett reasoned that there was not enough time to organize the polling places in the manner in which an election should be conducted.

But the committee and the Legislature will need plenty of time to compile laws that will be acceptable to enough members to carry the vote. There will be many new ideas and suggestions—probably the one that will be most discussed will be a gerrymandering movement.

Don't Break Yack Appointments

If you have an appointment with a doctor, dentist or the beauty parlor you would not even think of breaking it without first giving due notice. From the editors of the Yackety Yack comes word that students are continually neglecting to show up for the appointments to have their pictures made for the yearbook. The Yackety Yack is a business. It is under contract with a commercial photographical concern to get the pictures out in a minimum amount of time. If students persist in failing to keep their appointments then it will throw the complete yearbook off schedule, and in addition will probably increase the photography costs.

This year's students are extremely fortunate in being able to get their photos taken for the annual without having to pay special fees. Last year, and in the past, students whose pictures appeared in the book were charged a special fee. This fee will not be assessed as the costs will come out of the blanket student fee paid a the beginning of each quarter.

Treat the Yackety Yack with the same respect that you would your dentist or beauty parlor and notify them if you find that you are absolutely unable to keep your appointment.

IDeal Situation

This time last year only a few members of the student body had received their ID cards. Today already one-half of the student body have their new cards in their possession, a record that is a feather in the cap of the Communication center. Ross Scroggs, the man in charge of picture taking for the identification cards, has a wide knowledge of the new techniques in photography and has been familiarized with new slants by working with Eastman Kodak.

Another advantage over last year's method is the fact that there is a close check on those who obtain cards and there are very few retakes. In the past no identification was required to be able to get in the line and have your picture made. This is remedied by an authorization slip that is given to the student at the time of registration. ID cards are important credentials. They are vital property to identify you when you cash checks, pay bills, and enter athletic events. Keep them in your possession.

ONE SMELL AFTER ANOTHER

By Paul Berdanier

By The Way

Soldiers, Sailors, Marines

By Jim Spence

I hear Coed complaints that of the men who wear veteran's buttons they cannot distinguish sailors and soldiers. The formula: If he likes to sit with you on the forecastle of his fraternity house, asks for a kiss on your starboard cheek, then makes love like a madman, that's a sailor. But if the gentleman in question takes you for a romantic stroll on a moonlight night while he softly sings "Hut, two, three, four, Git Along Little Doggies," then lady that's a soldier. Marines? Well, anyone can spot a leather neck.

Who says the younger generations aren't following in their pappie's footsteps? Look over in Law School. Names like J. Melville Broughton, Jr., O. Max Gardner, Jr. and so on down a list of some twenty or thirty. The "impressions of childhood linger" don't they?

What's this I heard about Carolina Coeds being "snooty?" Gentlemen, a woman is one creature who above all things must retain her dignity. If she turned you down for a date, try again. Remember there are six other guys somewhere who are after the same girl (merely an average), and if you were in that position you'd be choosy too!

Sunday's DTH article on the new National Student organization should make students here proud of their student government. One of the NSA aims: "To stimulate the development of democratic self-government." You see, hundreds of schools all over the nation are yearning and striving for just an embryo of what we at Carolina already have. But not only should we be proud. We should also be resolved that each year will bring a better and more efficient student government.

Carolina Carousel

Cheers, Tarzan and the AVC

By R. Foo Giduz ——BF —

Head cheerleader "Myrt" Sherard reports Friday evening's pep was really the best and most spirited he's ever seen. . . . But not so, Saturday. . . . Says Myrt of Saturday's cheering: "For the first half, while Carolina was behind, cheering was very poor. But when the Tar Heels pulled ahead in the last quarter, spirit picked up." . . . Personally, we hollered so long and loud Saturday, that we're just regaining our voice. . . . Wassamatter with the rest of you guys. . . . Let's don't disappoint Myrt and the team again!

Most heartening sight at the ball game besides the Tar Heel's beautiful revenge, was seeing "Tarzan" Lath Morriss again. "Tarzan," Carolina's unofficial head cheerleader for more than a decade now, is the hefty hogcaller from Farmville, N. C., who precedes the cheerleaders on the field by a few minutes every game. . . . He's a part of the ball games now, and they wouldn't seem right without him. Many thanks, Tarz, for your help. . . . See you around.

All in all Carousel is most content over the outcome of the contest. . . . But natch, since we won a nice piece of that Georgia-and-13 wager which a local pessimist was indiscreet enough to bet us a week ago. . . . (Wonder if he's got any more money like that for the Texas tilt this weekend.) . . . It's not particularly significant, but did you notice that the Georgia-Carolina scores were exactly double the loser's total both times: 20-10 in the Sugar Bowl, and 14-7 last Sat.

AVC, only national vets group on the campus, has their first meeting of the term tonight at 7:30 in the Presbyterian church. . . . Whyn'tcha come by??? Tonight's session is especially for prospective members, as a sort of introduction to AVC. . . .

. . . Friend commented that the new press box in the Stadium looks like the bridge of a battleship. . . . Yeah, and we were packed in like dogfaces on a troopship!!! . . . How 'bout you?

Eisenhower Keeps Parties Guessing

Washington, Sept. 29—(UP)—The political question of the year—will Eisenhower run for President of the United States?—has both Republicans and Democrats on Capitol hill stirring restlessly in anticipation on the 1948 campaigns.

Terming this question a "bombshell," Washington observers and other interested parties predict that when the present Chief of Staff and wartime Commander in Chief retires from military service to don cap and gown as president of Columbia university, he will also identify himself with the Republican party and possibly announce his candidacy for nomination. The general is at present under heavy political pressure from both close friends and members of the ever increasing Eisenhower for President campaign.

A know aspirant for the nomination, Senator Robert Taft of Ohio, has already given a preview of one of the Republican 1948 planks. He says that his party will criticize what he calls the "past mistakes" of the administration's foreign policy, despite bi-partisan agreements.

Rumors are still rampant about the Democratic party's high command for the 1948 campaign. It is evident that Harry Truman will head the party, but there is one known change in that California's famous oil magnate, Edwin Pauley, emphatically denies that he will return as national treasurer when the party's reorganization is completed.

New Center Prepares For Opening

SWAIN HALL—

Swain hall, known to many Carolina Alumni as "Swine Hole", where family-style meals were once sold for 25 cents, and better known to University workmen as the most converted building on the campus, has recently been converted into the School's latest addition, the UNC Comunication Center.

Earl Wynn, director of the new project, is a graduate of Augustana college and Northwestern university and before the war was an assistant professor in the Department of Dramatic Art, with classes in speech and radio production—the latter, his favorite hobby. During the war, he was assigned to the Navy's Training Film and Motion Picture Branch where he directed two widely distributed films, "A letter To Mary," and "The Story of the De-733."

While working with the Navy training aids, Wynn began working on the idea of using such training methods to teach in civilian schools. Seriously interested, he conferred with Professor Samuel Selden, who had a large part in developing the idea. University officials became enthusiastic over the scheme and plans were drawn and presented to the University Trustees. These plans were approved in September, 1945 and the Communication Center was born.

Swain hall was designated to house the new Center and the Extension Division, jointly. After Wynn won approval for his plans, he began a search for talented help.

Charles Milner, head of the University Bureau of Visual Education was selected to direct the Center's Division of Utilization and Distribution. Jane Grills, already teaching radio courses here, was given the Radio Division assignment.

As technical director, Wynn picked O. W. Hungerford, former designer of equipment for RCA and director of pictures for Erpe Films. During the war, he was a colonel in the OSS. Rhoda Hunter was selected as executive secretary and Ross Scroggs, a Carolina graduate, came from Kodak's photo research lab to head the Still Photographic Lab. Robert Schenkkan, a graduate of the University of Virginia and Carolina, joined the staff as a radio writer.

With his staff selected, Wynn began the conversion of Swain into a communication center. For radio, three studios were designed, one large enough for audience participation programs, orchestras, and other complex progams. For small dramatic productions, medium sized studios were designed, with an announcer's booth completing the suite. The control room was centrally located so that the vision from one studio into another and into the control room was unobstructed.

For recording, there will be a specially equipped room with the latest professional recorders in addition to a radio classroom with its own control booth. Plans also were made for dark rooms, printing and enlarging rooms and a drying room. For motion pictures, a shooting stage and an accompanying sound control room were constructed.

As construction has progressed, so has the planning. Wynn has started turning out plans for radio programs, academic work and photographic services. The lack of publicity was on purpose, though, Wynn explains, because he doesn't believe in talking about what he's going to have, but only about what he already has. The opening date for the latest in advance learning on the Tar Heel campus has been slated for the fall.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Wallace Versus Morgenthau

By Drew Pearson

Washington. — Hawk - eyed Henry Morgenthau casually meandered into the office of his ex-Cabinet colleague, Henry Wallace, the other day for an informal chat which may have been their last for a long time.

As the chat ended, Wallace stood up from behind his small, dust-cluttered editor's desk and said:

"Henry, why don't you and Mrs. Morgenthau come over to our farm tonight and have some supper with us?"

Morgenthau said that he couldn't accept the invitation because Mrs. Morgenthau wasn't well.

"I'm sorrier than I can tell you that we can't accept," Morgenthau added, with a nervous twang in his voice like the ticking of a bomb about to explode.

"You see, in a few days I don't think you're going to be talking to me anymore, Henry."

Wallace was shocked, asked why. Morgenthau then told how he had turned his famous 900-volume diary over to Collier's to be published in a series of articles. He added that the first article would be on the newsstands in a short time.

"I'm afraid you won't like it very much, Henry," explained the doleful ex-Secretary of the Treasury, who with good reason FDR nicknamed "Henry the Morgue." "It seems that in my early days in the administration I thought you were quite a spender and said so. Collier's picked that out. They're using it in my first story."

When Wallace heard this, he didn't quite realize just how devastating the Collier's attack under Morgenthau's name would be, and merely laughed at Morgenthau's comment. Now that he has seen the articles, the close-lipped ex-Vice President hasn't even permitted his close friends to learn his real reaction.

Note—When Morgenthau signed up with Collier's, the magazine agreed to permit him to cut out any objectionable portions of the diary. Morgenthau sent the section on Mrs. Roosevelt to the former First Lady for her approval. He did the same with the part on Harry Hopkins, referring it to Hopkins' Boswell, famed playwright Robert E. Sherwood. Somehow, Morgenthau forgot to clear with Wallace.

Here are more statements which certain statement-makers would like to forget—this time from some of the barons of business who descended upon Washington to demand that price controls be lifted:

Arthur Bruce, President, National Lumber Manufacturers Association:

"I am personally of the opinion that we would be better off if the Office of Price Administration were to die a natural death June 30th." (One year later, lumber had swept upward 73.4 per cent over the 1945 Price Control average.)

Wesley Hardenberg, President, the American Meat Institute:

"What is needed is for Congress to do away entirely with all OPA meat and livestock price regulations of every description so that consumers again may get the kind of meat they want, when they want it, at a fair competitive market."

John E. Jaeger, President, National Association of Retail Grocers told the American Wholesale Grocers Association:

"We (retail grocers) feel that the time has arrived when . . . . actions must be taken . . . . to prevent renewal of the Price Control act. Competition will benefit the consumer by making available ample food at reasonable prices."

Robert R. Wason, President, National Association of Manufacturers:

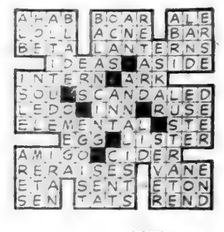
"If OPA is finally dead, women . . . . will now use the canned meats and other goods they have on their shelves to see them through any temporary period of price rises. If OPA is eliminated entirely, prices of automobiles may be expected to reach normal within six months, while rents might take at least a year."

Al Guckenberger, Executive Secretary, New York State Food Merchants Association:

"Prices . . . . will level off shortly as they had begun to do last August before controls were reimposed."

Herbert U. Nelson, Executive Vice-President, National Association of Real Estate Boards:

"We've got a gang in power who thinks solely of the consumer, and usually in terms of 'protecting' him."



Worse political break General MacArthur has received so far: Gerald L. K. Smith has launched a campaign for "MacArthur for President." . . . . Western politicos say Taft's tour through California was a flop until his wife Martha jumped into the breach . . . . Ed Pauley, the big Democratic finance man, has moved his family from California to Washington. Despite this, he contends that his job in the War Department is only "temporary" . . . . Senator Taft and Harold Stassen have agreed to speak on the same platform for an Iowa State bankers convention in Des Moines, October 8, but it took some deft maneuvering to arrange it. Taft was willing to appear with Stassen but Stassen's advisers were scared. Finally Stassen overruled them. However it's been agreed backstage that the two men will not clash . . . . (The Stassen people would be quite happy to go along on a Taft-Stassen ticket) . . . . John L. Lewis has already engaged three suites, three double-rooms, and three single-rooms at San Francisco's Palace Hotel for the forthcoming AF of L convention. The suites run from $14 a day up to $30.

The brawny tight-lipped men charged by Congress with protecting the President of the United States are flashing mental daggers at one of their ex-colleagues.

Object of Secret Service wrath is ex-chief of the White House detail. Mike Reilly, who has just written the inside story of how to guard the president.

YOU CAN TAKE George Radman's word for it—the Tar Heel gridders will be in for one rough afternoon of football come Saturday when they attempt to rope the Longhorns of Texas down Austin way.

Not that everyone doesn't know that fact already. But it just so happens that George knows it better than anyone else. For those who have never heard of him, George is a former star halfback for Carolina way back in the late 1930's—'37 to '39 to be exact. Moreover, he is now an assistant backfield coach to Carl Snavely and had the weekend assignment of travelling almost 4,000 miles to Portland, Oregon, to see Texas in its tilt with Oregon last Saturday. Returning to Chapel Hill, he brought the Tar Heels plenty of bad news regarding the explosive ground and air attacks possessed by the Longhorns.

"Texas is the fastest college team I've ever seen," Radman declared, pointing out that several of its backs can run 100 yards in about 10 seconds. "In addition to the fast backs," he continued, "there's a six-foot five-inch, 205-pound tackle named Tatom who's just as fast. He's a star sprinter on the relay team."

Radman, a backfield mate of George Stirnweiss and quite a runner himself, expressed the opinion, also held by the nation's sports writers, that the Longhorns have one of the country's best passers in their T-formation engineer, Bobby Layne. "He was really pitching strikes against Oregon," George exclaimed. "And Layne's substitute, Paul Campbell, is almost as good."

Regarding the Texans' all-around offense, Radman stated that the Longhorns have a "very well coordinated team, both in running and passing. They had to be pretty good to whip Oregon by as much as 38-13 and Texas Tech by 33-0," he concluded.

ALL OF WHICH means that the Tar Heels will need to be at their best if they are to remain among the nation's undefeated teams when they come flying back home next Sunday. And toward that end, Coach Snavely drilled his team's passing attack during yesterday's light drill with the emphasis in today's heavy session expected to be on the ground offensive. The squad will break camp after Thursday's practice, leave early Friday morning by air, and work out in Austin Friday afternoon.

Looking back on Saturday's workout against Georgia, we definitely agree with backfield Coach Russ Murphy when he says that Charlie Justice played one of his very best games. Points out Murphy, "Georgia was using a defense that no backfield in the nation could run against. And yet Charlie managed to get through for a few yards several times."

OTHER FACTS overlooked in Saturday's rush of writing up the game: Haywood Fowle was the only linesman, but not the only player, to perform the full 60 minutes. Jim (Crazylegs) Camp was also in the game all the way. . .The defeat was the first for Georgia in 18 contests, the Bulldogs' last loss having come in the middle of the 1945 campaign . ..Only 22 Tar Heels saw action, but it's a sure thing that more will get into the fray against Texas.

BEING AS HOW today is Tuesday, it becomes our sad duty to report the results of last week's prognostications. Sad, because yours truly didn't exactly get off to a flying start. In fact, of the five-man board, we brought up the rear with 12 correct out of 20. Morty Schaap led the parade with 14 and almost scored an astonishing hit with his call of a tie on the Minnesota-Washington tussle, which was won by the former, 7-6. Jake Wade, Billy Carmichael, and Bill Lamkin all tied for the runner-up spot with 13 right. As they always say, though, "Wait 'til next week."

Shea, Branca Chosen To Hurl Series Opener

New York, Sept. 29—(UP)—Two righthanders are the probable mound starters tomorrow afternoon in Yankee stadium in the opener of the 1947 World Series. Chubby Frank Shea, the New York Yankees' rookie mound sensation who had been sidelined by an arm injury for much of the season, and big Ralph Branca, the Dodgers' only twenty-game winner, are expected to open in the first game of the "subway" series.

According to latest reports, New York bookies have rated the Yanks 2-1 favorites over their interborough rivals. However, after a strenuous three-hour batting practice session at Ebbets field yesterday morning, Dodger Skipper Burt Shotten confidently predicted to reporters, "We won the tough ones in the National league and we'll do the same against the Yankees."

Manager Bucky Harris of the favored Yanks was also far from gloomy when queried about the Yanks' chances. Harris commented, "We're not worried about the Dodgers, and they don't seem to be worried about us."

Although both teams look about even on paper the general consensus of opinion among experts appears to give the nod to the Yanks on the basis of their past series' records, their current home run punch, and their superior pitching.

The Yanks will be counting on the big bats of Joe DiMaggio, Tommy Henrich, Johnny Lindell, George McQuinn, Bill Johnson, and Yogi Berra, plus the stellar chucking of Shea, Allie Reynolds, Vic Raschi, Bobo Newsom, and their ace fireman, Joe Page

The Dodgers hope to "run away" with the series title and they will be depending on such speedsters as Jackie Robinson, Pete Reiser, Pee Wee Reese, and Carl Furillo. The veteran Dixie Walker and burly Bruce Edwards will supply the distance punch for the "Bums."

Joe McCarthy Named New Red Sox Pilot

Boston, Sept. 29—(UP)—Joe Cronin's failure to lead the 1947 Boston Red Sox to a second straight American League pennant apparently has had mild repercussions in the Hub City because it was announced today by owner Tom Yawkey that Joe McCarthy has been signed as the Red Sox manager for the 1948 season. Cronin has been kicked upstairs and is now the Beantowner's general manager in place of the ailing Eddie Collins.

Jayvee Grid Squad Holds Long Session For Tilt Next Week

Carolina's Jayvee football squad went through a lengthy workout at Navy field yesterday with a squad of 62 aspirants on hand for the drills.

There was little contact work during the afternoon, with the Carolina coachs still attempting to round the team into top physical condition. Much of the day's work consisted of running through the team's plays.

The starting lineup for the Jayvees is still indefinite, and the coaches report that they have no idea who will be in the opening lineup on October 19, when Carolina will meet the South Carolina Jayvees in Columbia. One of the most encouraging factors about the squad is the fine spirit that the boys have been displaying in the practices thus far.

Crowell Little, one of the best players ever to perform with a Carolina football team, is coaching this season's Jayvees. He is assisted by Chan Highsmith and Jim Hagy.

There have been no scrimmages between the Jayvees as yet, but the Carolina mentors hope to get down to heavy work soon.

Returning from last year's strong Carolina junior outfit are a number of boys who would form the nucleus of another good team, but many of these are now working out with the varsity, Joe Kosinski, blocking back; Kenan Rand, an end; Jack McDonald, husky center; Pete Rywak, veteran tackle; Bob Koontz, fullback on last year's Jayvees; and Jack Brazington, flashy halfback also from the 1946 squad are among the returnees in camp whose status on the varsity or jayvee team has not been determined.

Tar Heel Trackmen Start Work Today

All aspirants for the indoor and outdoor track squads are invited to attend the first workout and organizational session this afternoon at 4 o'clock at Fetzer field.

The coaching staff is anxious to get in as much fall work as the weather permits as the 1947-48 tracksters will have a hard schedule in front of them.

The team last year, like its brother cross country outfit, went through an undefeated dual season and annexed the conference crown. The meets against Georgia Tech and Navy were decided by less than two points and these two teams plus other foes loom as potent threats to the Carolina team.

St. Louis, Sept. 29—(UP)—Eddie Dyer will be back at the helm of the St. Louis Cardinals in 1948 with a boost in pay, it was announced today by the Redbird front office.

Tar Heel Gridmen Back to Work After Report on Longhorn Power

Carolina's Tar Heels recovered from the scare they received from Georgia last Saturday, went back to work again yesterday in preparation for their weekend clash with the Longhorns of Texas way down in the Lone Star state.

Scout George Radman returned from the Texas-Oregon game and gave the lads of Coach Snavely an idea of what they can expect from Bobby Layne and company. With the third team running Texan plays, the first and second squads familiarized themselves with the enemy attack in a light dummy scrimmage workout.

The rest of the afternoon the Tar Heels spent polishing up their running game which faired none too well against Georgia's "eight man" line; and adding a final touch to their aerial offense which proved to be the lifesaver in the Bulldog encounter.

Meanwhile in the local athletic office elaborate travel plans for the Texas clash are being completed. Not a stone is being left unturned to assure the fact that the Tar Heels will make the air trip in safety and comfort. The weather question, which could be a trouble maker, looks pretty good, with the weather man promising favorable flying weather for the next week.

According to plans now formulated the majority of the Carolina squad will leave the Raleigh-Durham airport early Friday, arriving in Austin in time for an afternoon drill. An advance vanguard of Tar Heels will leave Thursday, also by air, to complete the necessary arrangements at the Texas end before the team's arrival.

Smith Returns

A bright note was injected into the Tar Heel camp yesterday by the return to heavy drills of Earthquake Bill Smith who has been sidelined with a broken foot. This alleviated the shortage of left tackles, which caused Haywood Fowle to play the entire 60 minutes last week.

Intramural Tennis Entries Due; Tournament Play Opens Thursday

By Taylor Vaden

Entries for the all-campus tennis tournament, sponsored by the Intramural department, must be in to Coach Walter Raab in 311 Woollen gym not later than five o'clock tonight.

The tournament, which is open to students and faculty, will get under way Thursday, October 2. Designed to accommodate all comers, the contest will be divided into two divisions. Participants in the novice class must not have had any other tournament experience nor any varsity experience. Varsity and tournament players are eligible to compete in the open class. In both divisions there will be singles and doubles play.

On Clay Courts

All games and matches will be scheduled by the Intramural department and will be published in the Daily Tar Heel. Contests will be scheduled from four to six o'clock. In the event that contestants who have been scheduled for a match by the

It is the responsibility of the winner of each match to submit the results of each match to the Intramural office in person or by phone. Intramural phone number is F-3321.

Single Elimination

All tournaments will be based on single elimination. Matches will consist of the best two-out-of-three sets.

Cups presented by the Intramural department will be awarded the winner of each division of the tournament.

Monogram Club Holds Meeting

With "Service to the Campus" the keynote, the Monogram Club held its first meeting of the year last night at Woollen gym.

President Len Szafaryn told the club members about the freshman orientation program that the club held. He also outlined the plans for the present year which call for member cooperation in bringing this organization up to par with the other honorary organizations on the campus.

A resolution was passed unanimously by the members to back the reinstatement of boxing as an intercollegiate sport on the Carolina campus.

Other business discussed included plans for a dance on the Wake Forest weekend if approval can be obtained from the Order of the Grail. Both football teams will be guests of honor.

A large turnout of members was on hand for this session, and from all appearances it looks as if the club will have a banner year.

The clubhouse construction of a kitchen, dining room and scuttlebutt is expected to be completed after the start of the Winter quarter which will act as an added incentive for binding the club together.

Officers for the year are Szafaryn, President, Jess Greenbum, Vice-president, Morty Schaap, Secretary and treasurer and John Dillon, Representative to the Athletic council.

Ping Pong Tourney Starts Next Monday

All registrants for the all-campus singles and doubles ping pong tournament must file their name with the Graham Memorial office on or before Saturday, October 4.

Play begins on Monday, October 6, when opponents will be listed on the G. M. bulletin board. Entrants must contact each other and play their matches on schedule or forfeit chance for advancement. Matches are based on best two out of three series and winners report to the G. M. office for another opponent.

The summer tournament champs were Bob Goldwater in the singles and Goldwater and Jim Jackson in the doubles. Graham Memorial also announced that it has formulated plans for tourneys in horseshoes, darts, chess, and checkers.

Dance Lesson Series Set To Start Tonight

Dr. Oliver K. Cornwell, director of physical education, has announced that tonight at 7 o'clock the first of a six week series of classes in social dancing will begin at Woollen gymnasium.

Bill Townsend, former Arthur Murray dancing star in New York City and Miami Beach entertainer and dancing instructor is teaching similar classes at Duke University and State college and will instruct the classes here.

Waltz, foxtrot, jitterbug, rhumba, tango and samba will be offered to the students participating. Class hours will be divided into 20-minute periods, and the dance that the majority of pupils wish will be covered for each period.

The American dances will be taught on Tuesday, beginners from 7 to 8, and advanced from 8 to 9, and on Thursdays at the same hours, the Latin dances will be given. With the exception of the first two weeks when a required groundwork of tango, foxtrot and waltz will be taught, the choice of the dances to be taught will be up to those attending the classes.

"This series of dancing lessons is part of the regular physical education program," said Dr. Cornwell, "and there will be no charge made to students and their wives."

All women employed in college offices, as well as town girls, are invited to compensate the shortage of girl partners.

'He's My Friend', Says Jailed Cuban, But Charlie Justice Laughs It Off

Miami, Fla., Sept. 29—(UP)—Charley Justice figures in the news in a new way tonight, but the Carolina Choo-Choo says there's nothing to it.

The National sports director of Cuba, Manola Castro, was arrested here today on charges of smuggling arms from this country to Cuba. The Cuban claimed to be a close friend of Justice and asked reporters how he could get in touch with him.

At Chapel Hill, the Choo-Choo was bewildered when reporters asked him about his "friend" at football practice. "I've never even heard of him," said Charley.

Then he laughed the whole thing off as a bad joke.

Al Barth Picks 18 Correct Game Winners To Place First in GM Football Contest

Missing only two predictions out of 20, Al Barth, 3 Vance, is the winner of a book of Carolina theater movie ticket coupons in last week's Graham Memorial football contest. The Dartmouth - Holy Cross tie, which none of the 900 contestants correctly predicted, and Tech's upset of Tennessee, were the only stumbling blocks for Barth.

Contest blanks for this week are printed on the sports page of today's Daily Tar Heel, and extra blanks will be placed in the Graham Memorial and YMCA offices tomorrow morning. All entries must be placed in the ballot box in the main hall of Graham Memorial by noon time Saturday.

Tying for second place last week were Robert Cloyd, Quonset hut 34, and Daniel Lipman, 309 Grimes. Both missed only three prognostications and correctly guessed the Carolina-Georgia score. James E. Hall, 110 Aycock, copped third place.

Optimist prize for the contest went to Stanley Smity, 114 Grimes, who blithely devined a 68-0 Tar Heel-Bulldogs score, in UNC's favor. Smith, by the way, missed only three other predictions. All told there were 19 correct guesses for the Georgia-Carolina score.

Incidental fact worthy of note was that out of the entire lot only two entries predicted Carolina would lose Saturday's ball game.

Student Party Nominates Melton For Yack Editor

Group Decides To Investigate Trailer Rents

Yack Photographer Art Melton was unanimously nominated by the Student Party for editorship of the Carolina yearbook yesterday afternoon. Melton will run in a special election early next month to fill a vacancy created by withdrawal of Editor Bill Moffitt.

A journalist who has followed photography through three colleges, in the Navy, and on a daily paper, Melton served last year as a member of both the Daily Tar Heel and Yackety—Yack staffs. He was an independent candidate in the spring elections for editorship of the DTH.

Melton served on the photography staff of the yearbook at Lenoir-Rhyne college in 1940 and was in charge of photography and layout for the 1943 Salem College annual. In 1941 and 1942 he was sports editor of the Hickory Daily Record and operated a professional photo studio at Hickory.

Combat Photographer

During wartime he served on the public relations staff of the Navy recruiting service in North Carolina, Tennessee, West Virginia, and Ohio. As a combat photographer he saw action on Iwo Jima, Okinawa, Philippines, and Tokyo during 1944 and 1945.

In accepting the SP nomination, Melton said that photography had become a number one concern of yearbook production.

"Nearly 8,000 different pictures appeared in last year's Yack," Melton said; "that's more space than occupied by advertisement and straight copy together."

The Student Party at its meeting yesterday, the first of the fall quarter, voted to investigate high rents now being charged for student trailer space. Chairman Charlie Long was directed to consult with the housing office on relief for trailer occupants, who now pay same rent as dorm students plus utilities charges.

Ancient Fire Engine Tried, Acquitted In Greenville, Mich.

Greenville, Michigan, Sept. 30—(UP)—The Greenville City council today tried and acquitted an ancient fire engine of all charges.

The trial steamed from the failure of the vehicle, fondly called "Old Eureka," to respond to an emergency fire alarm several days ago. The jury found the engine not guilty and pinned the blame on the real culprits.

It came to light that the machine, which was housed in an open garage, had been used as a necking-ground for teen-agers, who had also been playing with the lights and other fixtures.

When the fire alarm was sounded and the fire engine manned, the dead battery just wouldn't respond, resulting in "Old Eureka's" trial and subsequent acquittal.

Eller Plans New System For Honor Council Cases

By Chuck Hauser

Student Body President Tom Eller outlined a new appellate system for student Honor council cases in his first "State of the Campus" address which he delivered to the Philanthropic assembly last night.

Eller said that since 1910, when the Board of Trustees minutes recorded students' right to choose faculty members to sit on appeal boards, the custom has degenerated into a board of arbitration and, not a court system as it was intended.

As the system now stands, the accused student who is appealing his case reserves the right to choose one member of the board, the administration chooses one member, and student government chooses one member.

Involves Board

The new system Eller proposed involves a seven-man board chosen and oriented by the Student Council following general campus elections each year. The Council would arrange for appeals to the board and would be responsible for the channeling of evidence to it.

According to Eller, Chancellor House, representing the University, has agreed to yield his right to appoint a member of the three-man board if the new system is established.

The new method "would be advantageous in several respects," said Eller. "It would eliminate haste of formation of the faculty board, which I am convinced resulted in the reversal which occurred this summer. It would also insure a higher degree of student control of the appeal to the faculty."

"The defendant's rights," continued the student body president, "will be in no way infringed upon by this provision. . . While I believe that a student should have representation in the form of witnesses, I do not believe that he should choose one of the judges to sit on his case."

Expressed Hope

Eller expressed his hope that the Student Council and all interested persons will favor the proposal which he said he considered 'a practical solution to a hitherto dangerous and error-infected system."

Aside from the appellate method discussion, the speaker expressed hope for better interdormitory government and a stronger Interdormitory council through help and cooperation of the political parties.

According to Eller, the Interdormitory council will work with the Order of the Grail to sponsor the Duke week-end dance, 70 per cent of the proceeds of which will go to the Council for their proposed recreational building.

Strong Council

"Men in dormitories want conscientious representation," stated Eller, "and they deserve it. If they will give us good dormitory presidents, we can hope for a strong Interdormitory council."

Commenting on work accomplished during the summer months, Eller pointed out that students are not sitting along the 50-yard line at football games, and that grass has been sown in places on the campus due to student committee action.

The president of the student body also stated that he thought complements were in order for behavior of students at the game Saturday, but that council action might be taken against scalping and parlays, in addition to outside action, if the practices continued unabated.

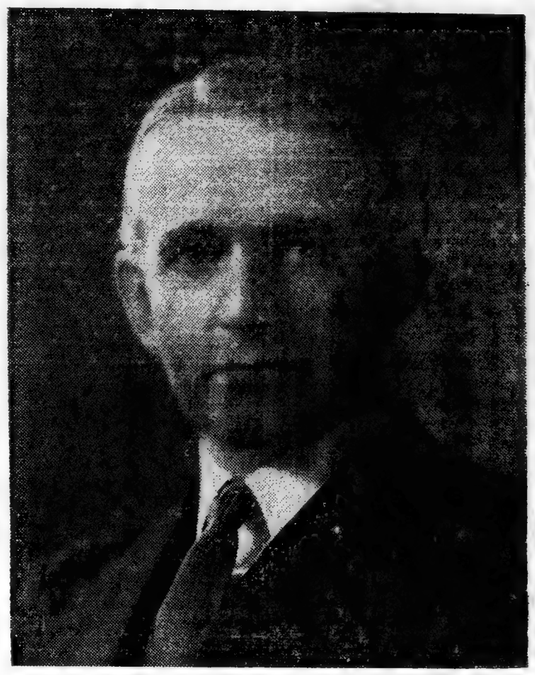
Radio Center Sets Tryouts Of New Talent

The University's Communication Center today announced student try-outs for all phases of radio broadcasting, particularly announcing, acting, writing, engineering and music.

Tomorrow, each actor, announcer and musician will be scheduled for five-minute microphone tests to be held within the next few days. The center will provide all dramatic and announcing scripts for the try-outs.

Prospective engineers, including studio operators and electronics technicians, will be assigned interview appointments with the technical director. Sound effect men, radio writers and composers will meet with appropriate staff members.

The Communication Center's radio division is moving into high gear in preparation for the opening this month of University broadcasts through key stations in a state radio hook-up.



"Major responsibility for the success of University of North Carolina broadcasting this season will rest with students who participate in those broadcasts," explained Communication Center Director Earl Wynn. "We are hoping, therefore, for an excellent turnout of talent in all fields of radio broadcasting."

The Swain hall headquarters of the Center will be open from nine tomorrow morning until 5 o'clock in the afternoon to issue appointment cards to students.

EXAMINATIONS SET

The German reading knowledge exam for graduate students will be held October 4 at 2 o'clock in 109 Saunders.

The French examination will be held October 18 at 2 o'clock in 314 Murphy, and the Spanish examination October 18 at 2 o'clock in 312 Murphy.

ALFRED STIRLING (above), minister of the Australian Embassy to the United States will be the principle speaker at today's opening sessions of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations.

Three-Day Meet Begins In Hill Hall at 8:30

By Bob Rolnik

Australian Minister Alfred Stirling will address a Memorial Hall audience this evening at 8:30 as the first International Collegiate Conference for the United Nations starts its three-day whirl of forums, banquets and speeches. During the crowded schedule of special events sponsored by the Collegiate Council for the United Nations, the spotlight will fall on such foreign diplomats as the Australian and British ministers to the U. S., the Yugoslavian ambassador, the Syrian Charge d'Affaires, the counsellor of New Zealand's legation in Washington, and a representative of the U. S. State department.

Following a dinner at the Carolina Inn tonight, Chancellor Robert B. House will welcome delegates from colleges throughout North Carolina in Memorial hall and officially open the conference. He will be followed by the principal address of the Australian minister, Mr. Stirling.

Conference Schedule

Today's schedule of conference events is as follows:

2-5 p.m.—Registration of delegates.

5-6 p.m.—Orientation of delegates by Dr. K. C. Frazer and Jess Dedmond, student activities chairman. This meeting in Gerrard hall is open to visitors.

6-8 p.m.—Dinner for the Australian minister at the Carolina Inn Faculty room. All interested students are invited to attend this dinner.

8:30 p.m.—Opening conference session in Memorial hall with Chancellor House's welcoming speech and address by Minister Stirling. All students are welcomed to this evening program.

Drawing on his many years of diplomatic experience, Mr. Stirling is expected to emphasize his country's long-standing fight for a more potent United Nations organization.

John Reid, Legate From New Zealand, To Address CCUN

John S. Reid, Counsellor of the New Zealand Legation, and Charge d'Affaires pro tem, arrives in Chapel Hill Wednesday to address the CCUN Conference on World Affairs.

In recent months, Mr. Reid, named Counsellor at the Legation, has represented the New Zealand Government at meetings of the Far Eastern Commission in Washington, and also as a member of the United Nations Committee on Palestine at Lake Success.

This Conference speaker was born in Petone, North Island, in 1901. He practiced as Barrister and Solicitor until 1936, after graduating from Victoria College in Wellington, with a Bachelor of Laws degree in 1923. For four years thereafter, until 1940, he was Assistant Parliamentary Law Draftsman, becoming at this time Assistant to the Treasury Solicitor. For the next three years, he served as Acting Solicitor for that department, and supervised [illegible] able war legislation.

RADIO MAJORS MEET TONIGHT

A meeting of all students majoring in radio has been called by the department for 8 o'clock this evening in Swain hall.

Students Learn 'Cold' Facts In Temporary Class Buildings

By Bill Sexton

When a room is so cold that a stenographer's fingers are too stiff to type, it's time to turn on the radiators. Only what does one do, a lot of students are asking, when there aren't any radiators to turn on?

The case of the missing radiators is the case of the week for the hundreds of students who have classes in the new temporary classroom buildings. It's a matter of cold fact that these frame structures are completely unheated. And though it may not yet be time for overcoats and gloves, still extra blankets and a few morning hours of steam heat have become downright necessary.

Barely Habitable

Under the climate prevailing lately the new structures are barely habitable until 11 o'clock when the sun begins to take effect. But classes begin in them at 8 o'clock.

Hardest hit are clerks and stenographers in the new registration building. They spend all day in a drafty, hardly-insulated building without heat. It is no coincidence that most have colds.

"We wear our overcoats in the morning," said Carlyle Markham, student clerk in the registration building. "And we go outside to warm up."

Another employee, who asked not to be identified, said that all work takes twice as long in the morning's polar climate. "Some of us have taken our work outside," she said; "our fingers have been too stiff to file, too cold to type, too cold to write."

She said she didn't see how they could continue to work under the circumstances.

Uncomfortable

Students with afternoon classes in the buildings find little to complain about in the temporary buildings. But those with morning classes—particularly the early ones—have to undergo 50 minutes of uncomfortable and unhealthy weather, even when sunlight outdoors has made walking between classes quite comfortable.

Officials in South Building have not been available to give information on when heating will be installed. Unofficial word is that it will be middle October, however, before the work is done.

Until then, uniform for classes—overcoats.

International Relations Club Chooses Patterson President

The International Relations club held its first meeting of the year Monday, September 29, in Graham Memorial. Officers were elected and plans for the coming year outlined.

Officers for the year who were elected Monday night are Bill Patterson, president; Ed Hecht, vice-president; Bob Rolnik, secretary; and Fred Bates, treasurer.

In addition to the four executive officers Jim Burwell was elected progrma chairman; John Bristow, membership; Randy McCleod, forum speakers; and Willie Greene, publicity.

During World War II the Carolina IRC acquired attention with schedules of top flight speakers. The group plans to continue this service contributing to their own knowledge and to the campus knowledge of international affairs.

Retiring officers include John Bristow, president; James Burwell, vice-president; Stuart Lu[illegible] cas, secretary, and Bill Patterson, treasurer.

Meetings of the group are held each Monday night in Graham Memorial.

Mocksville Girl

Raleigh, September 30—(UP)—Governor Gregg Cherry has picked a young Mocksville girl, beautiful Mary Neil Ward—to represent North Carolina at the 14th annual Christmas festival in Birmingham, Alabama.

Miss Ward, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grady M. Ward of Mocksville, will be invited to attend the carnival November 25 to 29 at the expense of the Birmingham Junior Chamber of Commerce.

AQUINAS CLUB TO MEET

There will be a meeting of the Aquinas Club on the second floor of the YMCA tonight at 8 o'clock. All Catholic students are invited to attend this first meeting of the year.

Dr. W. S. Newman's Articles Published

Dr. William S. Newman of the music faculty has recently had published in various music journals several articles dealing with the subject of his forthcoming book, "A History of the Sonata Idea," to be published this spring by the University press.

"Origins and First Use of the Word Sonata" appeared in the September issue of the "Journal of Musicology," and in the July issue of "Musical Quarterly" there appeared, "Concerning the Accompanied Clavier Sonata."

Dr. Newman also wrote the articles dealing with the various aspects of instrumental music for Colliers encyclopedia which is to appear in 1948. The University press has published "Thirteen Keyboard Sonatas of the 18th and 19th Centuries," and Music press is publishing "Keyboard Sonatas by the Sons of Bach."

Carolina Playmakers Will Hold Tryouts Today and Tonight For 'Saint Joan', First Full-Length Play of New Season

By Mark Sumner

Public tryouts for "Saint Joan" by George Bernard Shaw, the first full-length play of the Carolina Playmakers thirtieth season, will be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock and tonight at 7:30 in the Playmakers theater. All townspeople and students who are interested in taking part in any phase of the production are invited to attend.

"Saint Joan," which is to be presented on October 29, 30, 31, and November 1, is the story of Joan of Arc, the French girl in her teens whose convictions and enthusiasm led her to become the most notable warrior saint in Christian history and who was repaid by being burnt at the stake. It is the first of five major productions on the Playmaker calendar.

The play will be directed by Hans Rothe, guest lecturer, recently from Madrid, Spain, who formerly directed for Max Reinhardt in Berlin. Last spring, Mr. Rothe directed one of his own plays, "Innocence," as a special Playmaker production.

The annual season ticket sale for Playmaker major productions is now in progress, with season tickets priced at three dollars. Tickets may be obtained either from Ledbetter-Pickard's on Franklin street, or from the Playmaker business office in Swain hall.

Last night an informal get-together of old and new Carolina Playmakers on the University campus and a number of interested villagers was addressed by Director Samuel Selden in the Playmakers Theatre here.

"Adventures in Playmaking" was the subject Mr. Selden discussed at the meeting which served to launch the Playmakers' 30th season.

Members of the staff explained different phases of theater work and discussed plans for the new season.

Yack Photographers Average 800 Daily With 4,000 Pictures Yet to Be Taken

With 4,000 student pictures yet to be made, Yackety-Yack photographers are now turning out over 800 per day as they work to complete their task by the October 11 deadline.

To facilitate the making of student appointments, there is an agent of the staff on duty from 9 to 4 o'clock daily in the lobby of the Y building. Appointments may also be made at the Yack offices on the second floor of Graham Memorial.

The dummy has been set up, and all activity now hinges on the completion of individual pictures. All students are urged by the Yack board of editors to make appointments immediately.

Board Member Gene Johnstone pointed out that an early appointment will eliminate standing in line and cause proofs to be returned much sooner. He emphasized that the costs of these pictures have been covered by the new student fee system and that consequently there will be no charge for them

Activity is proceeding on schedule, and according to Johnstone, student cooperation in prompt making and keeping of appointments will permit the job to be successfully completed in the eleven remaining days

Carolina Needs a Journalism Fraternity

Since there are quite active professional fraternities in commerce, medicine, law, pharmacy, pre-medicine, and several other fields on campus we have recently explored the advantages and possibilities of establishing a Journalism fraternity on campus. During the past summer we addressed inquiries to large universities in different parts of the country to find out if their campuses have journalism frats and if so are they national or local.

From all quarters came back praises for Sigma Delta Chi, national professional journalistic fraternity. One of the most enthusiastic replies was written by Walt Mordaunt, editor of the Syracuse Daily Orange. Editor Mordaunt was so interested in our letter that he offered to persuade the Syracuse chapter to act as our sponsor until we were able to get an active chapter, then be wrote to national headquarters and told them that we had expressed an interest in setting-up a chapter here.

Here is only a small section of his two-page reply. "Even with a careful and selective process we are not snobs, and we rate as high as any honorary or professional group here at Syracuse, excepting only Phi Beta Kappa, which of course is unique. For that matter we are far more active than Phi Beta Kappa ever could be. We hold monthly meetings during the regular school year, at which we always have a professional newsman as guest speaker, as well as calling at will on our own faculty members for information from their own professional pasts. I should add that every member of our journalism faculty is an interested member of SDX. They all carry their keys with pride.

"Aside from our meetings we sponsor an annual awards banquet, at which time we honor outstanding persons from all University publications. We also award an Orange Beret to the faculty member from the University who we feel has done the most for the School of Journalism that year. I may say without boasting that these awards are highly sought, and incidentally receive plenty of space in both downtown papers.

"Our chapter of SDX also runs a statewide contest for high school papers each year, as well as taking part, along wiht Theta Sigma Phi and the School of Journalism's student council, in sponsoring our annual Journalism day."

From Dick Eshleman, editor of the Daily Trojan at Southern California, comes this bit of information: "Since the national organization carries on a program of scholarships, a personnel bureau, and a monthly professional magazine (The Quill), besides speakers and dinner-programs of professional interest, affiliation with it has definite advantages."

These are only excerpts from a few of the letters we have received. In addition, the national organization sent us a copy of the constitution and by-laws and has expressed an interest in taking us into the fold. There are definite advantages of becoming a member of a national professional fraternity such as SDX for both the University department of Journalism and the individual journalism majors. These must not be turned aside and forgotten.

VA Is Not Out of Step

The Veteran's Administration, like the Armed forces, is infamous for being always fouled up or out of step with the rest of the troops. But unlike the armed forces the VA's reputation is not a true picture of what really takes place in their offices in Winston-Salem. Veterans that are unfamiliar with the facts, have retorted harsh replies to the announcement that they should not expect to receive their subsistence checks before November 1. This is not an announcement unique to this University or locale. Campus publications throughout the nation carried similiar notices.

It takes little thought to produce the reason for the inavoidable delay in the checks. This fall the enrollment of American universities is greater than ever before—a situation due mainly to the tremendous number of former servicemen taking advantage of the GI bill. The increased enrollment will overtax the facilities of the VA offices in qualifying the veterans for subsistence allowances. The VA can neither train nor employ enough employees to meet every demand. A veteran, under ordinary circumstances, is not entitled to receive a subsistence check until he has been attending classes for 30 days. If the checks reach here by November 1, as VA officials expect, then it will be only a two-week delay—a short length of time considering the innumerable forms that have to be completed and filed for each veteran. The students who attended the second session will probably receive their checks on schedule.

In any event you can be certain that the Veterans Administration in Winston-Salem, although it is a regional office and keeps the records of other colleges besides the University, will make every effort to mail the checks as soon as they are prepared.

Worrying Is Too Worrisome

Today, when you drop into your favorite movie house for a little relaxation, you have at least one chance in ten of viewing the spectacle of someone going bats or already in that condition.

The psychiatric movies once served the purpose of making people more conscious of the different mental ills. We think they have served this purpose and have gone beyond it. Now the public it too conscious of the diseases of the mind. Today, when someone indulges in the perfectly normal pursuit of worrying a little, he thinks about that last movie he saw and then makes a beeline for the nearest psychiatrist, who already has a waiting line as long as the average theatre queue. People have enough to think about these days, without having to worry about their worries.

Nowadays, when someone has a bad dream, instead of laughing about it and telling a friend, he puts both hands to his head, looks in a mirror with wild eyes and thinks he has one foot in a loony bin. If a really unbalanced person should happen to see some of these "mental" movies, they would surely push him the rest of the way across the threshold of insanity.

The movie-makers of Hollywood are in a rut so deep and so filled with their own fat egos that they can hardly manage to produce even this kind of so-called entertainment. They are definitely shirking their responsibility to the public when they continue to turn out these dreary, yet dangerous sagas of the psychopathic. —C .S.

Wanted: Funny Midwives

There's nothing funnier than humor. So if you're humorous, you're funny. And if you're funny, there's a place for you here. There's always a place for funny people.

Young Matt "Tookie" Hodgson is now in labor. Along with a number of faithful cohorts, he is giving birth to a humor magazine, the name of which is "Tarnation." "Tookie" needs someone to help him. You might say "Tookie" needs a midwife.

Since there is now, and, of course, always has been rapport between campus publications, we are only too happy to sound the buglehorn for "Tarnation." We will even go so far as to strike the gong and ring the claxon for Hodgson's new baby.

And we are sure it will do some good, because in every gladstone there is something—a poem, a short story, a cartoon—that the owner thinks is very amusing, not to mention downright uproarious. The gladstone is probably not benefitted from having the aforementioned funny thing in it; but "Tarnation" will. Anyway, "Tookie" wants to see what you've got.

You don't have to be a James Thurber, or an Ogden Nash, or even Dorothy Parker to submit your stuff. Of course it would help if you were.

"Tarnation" will soon have an office in Graham Memorial. Hodgson is in pain. Humorists rally round.

Tain't Necessarily So, But. . .

Concerning the Frauleins

By Bill Buchan

Some or America's more patriotic citizens probably ooohed aahed in distress this past week with the announcement from Army headquarters in Frankfurt, Germany, that over 3,000 Americans have made application to marry German girls.

The most frequent complaint is that our young, teen-age soldiers in Deutschland are falling for sucker hooks, baited by smart German girls who know a good thing when they see it. What the people here don't know is the fact that the majority of guys, GIs and civilians, who are marrying Frauleins are men who have waited for as long as two and three years for the no-marriage ban to be lifted.

Love is a crazy thing that happens and no one, not even General McNarney, could prevent it. It took various organizations and soldiers from V-E Day to last December, however, to convince the War Department that McNarney could be wrong, and he was quietly returned home and the ban lifted. For the men, most of them combat men, who had waited for months and months in that sorry land for just such an event, it was indeed a day of rejoicing. Even then, the privilige of marrying the girls of their choice was not free for the asking. Long, difficult questionnaires and interviews were in store for both the future groom and his fiancee and the final ceremony could not be performed in most cases until the man was slated to return to the United States.

Actually, most observers in Germany who saw romances spring up between Americans and Germans and also between Americans themselves, will readily agree that there seem to be far better chances for the American-German marriages to pan out, rather than the marriages between GIs and Wacs or Red Cross girls, inasmuch as the Germans are forced to go through so much red tape and waiting that by the time the ceremony is performed, both parties concerned are positive about the step or either call it off. The Americans, however, can often be married on 24 hours notice.

This isn't a propaganda story for German war brides, but rather a defense for certain American men. We, as much as anyone else, resent the German people and their ideals and their past way of life, but no one can seriously believe that all people in a nation are evil. And certainly, if an American soldier feels that the girl is his ideal partner for life, the least his fellow citizens can do is accept her.

After all, the number of marriage applications is still below 4,000 with only 1600 of them approved. That seems an awfully low percentage when hundreds of thousands of American troops were scattered throughout Germany from the day they first went into Aachen in 1944, until our own zone was set up after victory.

CCUN Credits and Policy

By Lincoln S. H. Kan

Today marks the opening of the first United Nations Conference to be held in North Carolina. It has been the honor of the University to be the site of the State Headquarters of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations which is sponsoring this conference. The meeting will extend from Wednesday Oct. 1 through Friday Oct. 3.

Happily, this conference has come when the United Nations is at the very cross-road of its existance, when public opinion is vitally needed to back our United States delegates who are fighting to make the United Nations a basic factor for future world government. Mr. Marshall, our very able commander during the war and equally able statesman now, has proposed two pertinent revisions within the United Nations. The first was the much discussed, deliberated and argued European Marshall plan. Today Marshall's second proposal the "Little Assembly" or "Interim Committee on Peace and Security" faces fire from the great power to the East.

We as students are probably asking "What has all this to do with us here at the University?" We are all members of this United Nations and individually responsible for its success. "What can we do about it?" This last question has been answered in part by what other students and student leaders on this campus have already done about it.

It is the purpose of this writer to tell you about what has been done by students for the United Nations.

In the past few days much publicity has been given to the C.C.U.N. and nearly always identified with the writer. It is true that the responsibility has been vested in us; however we wish to inform the readers that if it were not for those who have unselfishly given their time, energy and experience, the Collegiate Council for the United Nations would never have succeeded on this campus or on the other college campuses which are sending delegates to our Salute to the United Nations Week. Those who have given their help in aiding the United Nations by helping create a service organization to bring about Public Opinion, are too numerous to mention. However we would like to give special thanks to the original Executive Council composed of Roberta Wright Stirling, our Secretary-General for the State CCUN; Barron Mills, editor of the Tar Heel; Charles Long, President of the Dialectic Senate; Tom Eller, president of the Student Body; Randall McLeod, Speaker and Forum Chairman of the International Relations Club; Bill Mackie of the Student Finance Committee; Bill Shuford, Director of Graham Memorial. Among the students who were not on the original executive committee, we want to mention Fred Bates, Harry Snowden, Art Melton Chet Zumbrunnen, Benedicta Santos, Martha Manning, Bob Rolnick and the many new members who have recently joined us in our work and are actively participating.

Let us repeat that if it had not been for the unselfish and cooperative contributions of these people, the CCUN could not have become the strong factor it has become in Student opinion, which is to play such an important part in helping the United States Delegation fight for a strong United Nations.

As you can see, the Students play an important part in the United Nations. The CCUN State Headquarters and University Chapter, will carry on its work and convictions for the good of all. Our purpose and primary duty is to gather and deseminate all available information on the United Nations. It is our desire to help all other organizations on this campus and the other colleges in any way possible in their programs related to international subjects, and domestic subjects which influence our action in world affairs. The CCUN is non-political, non-partisan and non-profit. We gain our strength in wide representation as evidenced by the many campus organizations which are on our new steering Committee. We have built and will maintain good will by being non-partisan. We have struggled in our work and have been assisted by generous financial contributions from interested people who could not give their personal services.

We believe that the CCUN is here to stay and will become a contributing factor in the world peace which we all desire.

Come to the Conference of the CCUN this week, participate, listen, learn, and spread your reactions. See us at Graham Memorial where you can find out in what capacity you can assist in making your own ideals come true.

Swain Hall Conversion

Radio Shows To Begin Soon

Earley in October, the New Carolina Communication Center will originate about six radio programs a week on the three campuses of the University in Raleigh, Greensboro and Chapel Hill, which will be offered on a non-exclusive basis to all of the commercial radio stations. In this way, programs will reach all sections of the state.

Already in operation in Swain Hall is the Utilization And Distribution Division of the Center. Organized seven years ago as the Bureau of Visual Edcation, this division has a film library with 1400 titles and a delivery service which carries its representatives into nearly every North Carolina county every two weeks. According to figures recently released, more than 1500 motion picture projectors are used by North Carolina schools. With small budgets for such projects, the schools are dependent upon the UNC film library to supply films.

During the past summer, the Extension Division and the Education Department arranged for special summer courses in the use of audiovisual aids for elementary and secondary teachers. Although the course was taught for the first time this summer, response on the part of state teachers was gratifying.

Another section of the center, already in operation, are the recording studios. Since recording equipment was installed several months ago, there has been a great demand for services by foreign language and public speaking classes, and by classical and popular music groups. The Still Photographic Laboratory, headed by Ross Scroggs, is another active branch of the new Center. Their most recent commendable job was the excellent work done on ident photos.

Edward Freed, of Washington, D. C., joined the staff in September as Motion Picture Director-Writer, and plans to begin production soon on training films and film strips, to be used by the various University departments and worthy city and state foundations.

The many services of the Communications Center will be distributed to the people of the state through the work of the Distribution Division, headed by Charles Milner. This office will act as a clearing house and library for films, recordings, photographs and graphics, produced and directed by the Center.

Later in the fall, when the production phase is reached, students and townspoeple will be invited to an "open house" at the new Center. There, they will be able to see the progress that has been made in Director Earl Wynn's two-year-old organization, one that will continue to grow and become some day a vital part in the life of the University, the state and the South. A trip through the Communication Center will be time well spent.

With Subsistence, Too

Learn With The Latins

By Paul Rothman

Have you ever spent a summer in Mexico? What—you haven't? Then you are missing an opportunity, especially if you are studying under the G.I. Bill.

This past summer quite a few ex-servicemen took advantage of the fact that Uncle Sam will pay tuition and subsistence to those veterans wishing to study in foreign countries.

This writer had the pleasure of being one of several North Carolina students studying at Mexico City College, where classes are held in both English and Spanish. MCC is an American university, and only a desire to learn Spanish is required of the students attending. The courses in Spanish are on a higher level than most courses taught in the United States, but that is not the only advantage to Spanish students in Mexico.

While studying at either MCC or the summer school of the National University, students may live in Mexican homes, where they pick up much Spanish not taught in elementary courses. Using the Spanish language in the homes and on the streets enables one to converse fairly fluently within a short space of time.

There are many interesting towns throughout Mexico, and the universities allow students class cuts to make trips to all points. In fact, the universities will arrange such trips at much lower rates than the tourists pay.

For those people who like music, there is quite an advantage to living in Mexico. If you appreciate classics, summer is the season for both the national opera and the national symphony. If you like modern Latin music, you will hear it everywhere. The Mexicans love music, and it is almost impossible to walk down the streets without hearing it. For those interested in folk dancing and music, there are classes offered and exhibitions held.

You say that's all fine, but the Mexican weather is too hot? Don't be fooled by the southerly position. Mexico City rests 7500 feet in the air, and it is a wonderful place to escape the summer heat. Incidentally, those Mexican mountains afford camera enthusiasts many opportunities for excellent shots; the cathedrals, volcanoes, pyramids, old buildings, parks, latin senoritas, bull fights, and modern architecture supply many other subjects for photography.

It isn't necessary to stay in the mountains all of the time though. Perhaps you have heard of Acapulco. You romantic people can find some of the finest beaches in the world there. Or perhaps you'd rather swim in a pool filled with cut gardenias; just stop at Fortin if you would.

You've heard of the moonlight rides in Venice. Perhaps you won't find gondolas with singing Italians, but there are plenty of boats to take you through Xochomilco. The mariachis are more than willing to play and sing for you as the boats are poled through the gardens, and vendors will sell orchid corsages for the equivalent of 20 cents in American money.

It would take years to write about the things we saw in three months in Mexico. If you are interested, make the arrangements and see for yourself what our southern neighbors have to offer.

The Rights of Roomers

In Durham a landlady wants to oust a couple from a one-room apartment in her home. The case went before Durham Superior court this morning, after the roomers had appealed a decision against them by an earlier court.

The DTH knows nothing about the circumstances of the case, except that the landlady says she needs the room for her own personal use and that one of the roomers says the landlady had complained about them being too noisy and staying up too late.

We know, as we say, nothing about the case—but we do know that the decision on it may well apply to many students and their wives who are living in private homes here in Chapel Hill. And so we will watch the case.

Let's take a hypothetical case. Supposing a landlady finds she can get more money for a room in her house if she bounces her present roomers and installs new ones. What's to prevent her from telling the current customers to scram? She could make up a reason, maybe. It's not illogical to suppose that lots of roomers would leave without that.

However, the housing situation is tight. It will be interesting to find what a superior court judge has to say on the rights of roomers and the rights of landladies.

POST POST-MORTEM

To anyone reading the assorted post-mortems of last week's Georgia affair that have appeared in the state and national newspapers, there can be found only one point of agreement: the fact that the Tar Heels won the ball game. Each of the scribes seems to put forth a different line of commentary on how well or how badly either or both teams played, all of which chatter boils down to the little-mentioned, but obvious conclusion that it was one whale of a ball game.

'Tis time that much credit is reflected on both coaches who each in his own way plotted a fiendish defense in an effort to reduce one another's high-rated scoring punch. That both succeeded is positively demonstrated by the final score. Wee Wally Butts, the sage of Georgia, threw the well-known wrench in the high-geared Tar Heel machine with his plan of charge the backers-drop the guards, vice versa with tackles doing likewise and a pair of drifting ends thrown in to add to the confusion. It was as complete as it sounds. The defense is an improved version of what the College All-Stars stopped the Chicago Bears with at the very start of this season. It almost stopped the Tar Heels too.

Crafty Carl Snavely, not to be outdone, countered with an even more successful antidote for the Bulldog passing game, a rather aged, but dreadfully effective method of rushing the passer and hawking the receivers. Hawking that is, with a capital H.

THE SCALES OF JUSTICE

There were those who left Kenan last Saturday with the feeling that little Charlie Justice was not quite the football player that he was cracked up to be. After all, he had not raced 60 or 70 odd yards to any touchdowns, nor had he dramatically gathered up any punts and scampered goalward with them. To these possibly misguided fans can be pointed out that Georgia was forced to stack eight defensive men in one form or another to retard the forward progress of the Asheville Ambler. Any team forced to do this leaves itself open to something, most probably the handy right arm of Walt Pupa. On defense Justice turned in an almost faultless game and was a sparkplug with his constant chatter throughout the ball game. Also note the punting averages for the afternoon which gave Carolina, with Justice doing all the kicking a slight average over some fine Bulldog booting. Not that the Choo Choo is any one man team; he would find the going rather rough without those extra ten teammates. But he is the nucleus of a great team whether decoying or tallying those needed six points himself. Let us give credit, etc.

All of which boils down to the fact that a great team is a team in every sense of the word. Yea, team—which is enough said of the Georgia game.

THE EYES OF TEXAS

Not only the eyes of Texas, but the eyes of the nation will again be focused upon Carolina's Tar Heels this weekend when the local entry journey goes south with the birds and in the same manner too, to tackle the torrid Longhorns of Texas University.

The Tar Heels who showed their air-mindedness last weekend, will continue along the same line this week even before game time by making the trip to the southwest by Capitol Airlines, establishing a first in Carolina sports transportation.

Upon arrival in Texas and following a good night's sleep the Tar Heels will take the gridiron against one of the nation's most formidable teams. The Texans are equipped with one of the greatest passing arms in the game in the person of blond Bobby Layne, who knocks silver dollars off a stake at fifty yards for lack of something smaller to throw at. But Tar Heel fans should not get the idea that the Longhorns are living up to the reputation of being a Lone Star state for they have a boxcar full of additional attractions who can hold their own in the fastest of company.

Still there are those in this office who will bet an ink well to an oil well that the Tar Heels will successfully ride herd over the Longhorns come Saturday. Or are we heading for the last roundup?

Tar Heels Emphasize Offense in Grid Drill

King Carl Snavely put his gridders through another long, rough workout yesterday as he continued his feverish preparations to whip the Tar Heel eleven into shape for Saturday's meeting with Bobby Layne and company in Austin.

The afternoon's session, held under an overcast sky in cold, damp weather, was spent mainly in running and passing drills as the Snavelymen strove to polish their offense for the Longhorn tussle. Charlie Justice and Billy Hayes shared the brunt of the running for the first team while Justice and Walt Pupa split the passing.

Snavely also gave the first two elevens another taste of what will be in store for them in the Lone Star tussle when he sent the third and fourth teams, using Longhorn plays, against them.

The status of burly blocking back Joe Wright, sidelined on Monday by a swelling condition caused by a reaction to some penicillin taken for a burst eardrum, is still doubtful.

The news that brawny tackle Bill Smith will probably be ready for action against the Longhorns cheered Snavely. Also flankman Joe Romano is back in town after an emergency trip home last weekend. The rugged defensive ace has shone in drills this week and should be ready to go on Saturday.

Between 35 and 40 players will make the trip to Austin by air. Snavely will not announce the traveling squad until Thursday night. The probable hot weather on Saturday will also cause the Tar Heel mentor to use more than the 22 men who saw action against Georgia. Jumping Jack Fitch and hard-running Hosea Rodgers are expected to make their 1947 debut against the Texans.

The Longhorns' powerful showings against their first two opponents and Carolina's ragged performance against Georgia has caused the host team to be installed as a slight favorite.

Soccer Squad Preps For Opening Tussle

Coach Marvin Allen's soccer squad continued its first week of activities yesterday with a strenuous workout which lasted into the twilight hours.

With such returning veterans as goalie Al Williams, fullback Mac Hagaman, and center forward Al Singer, the 1947 soccer squad is expected to show an improvement over last year's aggregation.

Polishing up on offensive and defensive plays, Coach Allen is preparing his squad for the fall schedule which opens in Baltimore against Loyola October 17. The first home game of the season is scheduled against High Point October 23.

Rabb Cancels Fall Baseball Practice

Due to the ditch which has torn up Emerson field, baseball practice usually scheduled for the early part of the fall quarter will not be held this season, according to Coach Walt Rabb.

In place of the outdoor drills, Coach Rabb expects to have the team working out in the Tin Can during the winter session. Rabb hopes to have the pitchers and catchers work out for several weeks before the outdoor drills get under way in March.

The only lettermen from last year who will definitely not return for the 1948 campaign are pitcher Monk Whiteheart, infielders Dub Johnson and Bo Hackney, and outfielders Jack Hussey and Tom Clayton. All five were lost through graduation.

Among the returning veterans will be Co-Captains Jim Hamilton and Jim Hayworth, Rip Ryan, Vinnie DiLorenzo, Frank Robinson, Harry Beason, John Gregory, and Buck Hardee.

Graziano Muddle

Patterson, N. J., (UP)—Middleweight champion Rocky Graziano may be a boxing king without a kingdom.

The National Boxing Association has announced that it will bar Graziano if it is proven that he received a dishonorable discharge from the Army.

Until now the Middleweight Champion has been barred by the New York Boxing commission for failing to report a bribe offer. If the NBA bans him, Graziano will be unable to box in any of the recognized boxing areas in the country.

The Illinoi Boxing commission started the current rhubarb yesterday when it announced that it would bar from its rings any fights who had been dishonorably discharged from the service. This followed published reports that Graziano had received a dishonorable discharge for being AWOL from the Army.

Yanks Take 5-3 Win Over Brooks In First Game of World Series

Five Runs in Fifth Decide Contest; Record Crowd of 73,365 Jam Stadium

New York, Sept. 30—(UP)—Although the mighty New York Yankees were held in check for eight innings they did manage to break out with five runs in the fifth to take a 5-3 decision from the Brooklyn Dodgers in the first game of the World Series here today. The game was played at the Yankee stadium before a record crowd of 73,365.

Ralph Branca took the hill for the Brooklynites and was opposed by rookie Frank "Spec" Shea. Branca, 21-year-old sophomore National leaguer, started out impressively by getting the first twelve batters in order. However, the fifth inning proved his undoing.

The fatal fifth was Joe DiMaggio beat out an infield hit on which Reese made a fine stop. This was the first Yank hit of the game. Branca, apparently rattled, walked George McQuinn on four straight pitches. His next pitch to Bill Johnson hit the New York third-baseman on the wrist to load the bases.

Johnny Lindell then came up with a ringing double down the left-field line to score DiMaggio and McQuinn. Brooklyn Manager Burt Shotten, after a hurried conference with Branca, decided to leave the young righthander on the hill. The Brooklyn pitcher walked Phil Rizzuto to reload the bases and after he pitched two straight balls to pinch-hitter Bobby Brown, Branch was replaced by Hank Behrman.

The World Series will be broadcast every afternoon in Graham Memorial Lounge, Director Bill Shuford has announced.

Behrman completed the walk to force in run number three. George Stirnweiss grounded to Jackie Robinson who threw to Bruce Edwards for the force at the plate. Edward's relay to first was just too late to get a double play.

With two strikes against him, Tommy Henrich hung a clothesline single to left to bring in Rizzuto and Brown. DiMaggio, up for his second time in the inning, was out on a long fly to center, to end the rally.

The Dodgers drew first blood in the first inning as they pushed across one run. Stanky was out on a fly to Lindell. Robinson walked and stole second. Reiser hit a comeback ball to Shea who trapped Robinson between second and third and, by the time the Brooklyn first baseman was retired, Reiser had gone all the way to second. He scored as Dixie Walker punched a single to left field.

Joe Page, lefthanded relief artist for the Yanks, took over in the sixth after Shea had aggravated his arm injury. The Brooks greeted him with a single tally when Stanky singled, was forced at second on Robinson's grounder, and scored on Furillo's single to center.

The "Bums" added their final marker in the seventh when "Pee-Wee" Reese dropped a Texas leaguer single into center, stole second and scored on a wild pitch.

Both Page and Hugh Casey, who took over the Brooks mound chores in the seventh, held their respective teams scoreless for the remainder of the game.

The line score:

Brooklyn 100-001-100—3—6—0
N. York 000-050-00x—5—4—0

Batteries:

Branca, Hank Behrman (5), Hugh Casey (7) and Bruce Edwards.

Frank Shea, Joe Page (6) and Larry Berra.

Intramural Badminton Club Begins Play With First Meeting at Woollen Tonight

Intramural director Walter Raab announced yesterday that the first badminton open house will be held tonight from 7 to 9 o'clock in Woollen gym.

Expressing hope that veterans and their wives, new students, and all other campus personnel will take part in some athletic activity, Raab said that badminton, as a part of the intramural program, is designed especially for Carolina students that otherwise would not participate in an athletic activity.

Beginning late in the fall quarter or the first part of the winter term, Coach Raab hopes to arrange badminton matches between University students and teams in Raleigh, Durham, and possibly Greensboro.

Instructors on Hand

Experts will be on hand at the gym during the open house to assist novices in badminton technique and rules.

Concerning other intramural activities Director Raab said that the intramural fields, located on the east side of Woollen gym will be open for team practice from 4 o'clock until dark. He also stated that particular attention should be paid to the election of team managers in the dormitory buildings. A trophy is awarded annually to the best team manager in the intramural circuit.

As the final hour for tennis registration approached, 104 students and faculty members had signed up to play in the tournament.

Any questions concerning the intramural program should be addressed to the Intramural office, room 311 Woollen.

Managers Needed

All men interested in managerial positions in varsity or jayvee football are asked to report to George Hogan, head manager, at Navy field at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Harriers Open Season Against Georgia Tech

Candidates for Carolina's cross country team are now working out each day on Fetzer field in preparation for the team's first meet, with Georgia Tech here October 18.

The entire schedule for the Carolina harriers is not complete as yet, but arrangements are underway for a full schedule. A freshmen team also will be organized, with approximately four meets being scheduled for the yearlings.

All boys interested in cross country are urged to come out for the team.

Coed Hockey Group Organized by WAA

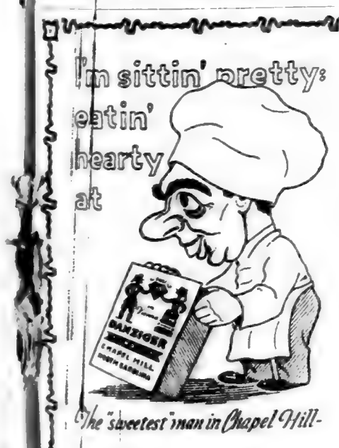
A group of coeds interested in forming a hockey club met with Miss Frances Burns, adviser to the Women's Athletic Association, yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the WAA room of the Women's gym.

This club will be one of the six sponsored by the WAA and any coed is eligible to become a member. Skill in hockey is not a requirement for membership. The five other athletic clubs sponsored by the association are basketball, swimming, tennis, volleyball, and dancing.

All coeds are members of the WAA and are represented on the WAA council by a representative from each dormitory and sorority and a representative from the Town Girls' Association. Officers of the association are Marshall Spears, president; Bill Lloyd, vice-president; Betsy Anne Barbee, secretary; and Janet Crinkley, treasurer.

Alumni Review Continues Football Supplements With 'Honestly Carolina-Biased' Game Reports

With its four-page football edition covering the Georgia-Carolina game, "The Alumni Review" resumes its coverage of varsity football games for dues-paying members of the University Alumni Association. Inaugurated in 1930, the alumni football reports this year will be mailed each week to alumni members in 95 North Carolina counties, 24 other states and the District of Columbia, and 17 foreign countries.



Jack B. Saunders, University '43 graduate of Williamston and at present a member of the staff of the University Press, will again be sports writer for the football editions of the alumni magazine, edited by Alumni Secretary J. Maryon (Spike) Saunders.

Following the practice of former years, the alumni football weeklies will be mailed each Wednesday following Saturday's varsity games. They will contain an "honestly Carolina-biased" story of the game, team and individual player statistics, an "alumni quarterback" gossip column, and action pictures of the week's game. The special weekly editions supplement the regular magazines numbers of "The Alumni Review."

Among North Carolina newspapermen and former student writers who have edited the alumni sheets are Smith Barrier, sports editor of the Greensboro Daily News; Ray Howe, sports editor of the Charolotte News; Orville Campbell, President of the Colonial Press which prints The Daily Tar Heel; Pete Ivey press representative of the Serboard Air Line of Washington, D. C.; C. W. (Buck) Gunter, of the Textile News, Charlotte; and Westy Fenhagan, formerly of the Greensboro Daily News.

Jack Saunders will be editing the football news for his third year, one of which was in 1942 before he entered service. He was the sports editor last year.

Denver, Col.—(UP)—A lightning bolt struck the University of Denver's freshman football squad late today, killing one student and injuring ten others.

Two Graduates of University Have Had Novels Published

In scanning the recent book reviews it will be found that two University graduates have had new novels published within the past few weeks.

Robert Ruark, who was graduated from the journalism department in the class of '35 has written a burlesque on the styles of the recent rash of sensuous historical novels entitled, "Grenadine Etching, Her Life and Loves" (Robert E. Ruark. 270 pages. Doubleday. $2.95)

Mr. Ruark has followed a varied career, since leaving the environs of Chapel Hill where he was art editor of the late "Buccaneer." He soon became sports editor of the "Washington Daily News." At the same time writing short stories for several leading national magazines. Following service as an Ensign in the Navy, he conducted a searching investigation of the Army in the Mediterranean Theatre.

In contrast to the gaudy, frivolous setting of Ruark's book; Peirson Ricks, another University graduate, has written a novel entitled "The Hunter's Horn, (Chas. Scribner's Sons, New York. 361 pages. $3.00) which is centered in the rural section of our own North Carolina as it was just before the turn of the century.

Although this is one of Ricks first novels, he is, in the words of Walter Spearman, book reviewer for the "Greensboro Daily News," ". . . no new writer who merely shows 'promise' . . . an author who has something to say and says it well."

Library authorities say that as yet these two new books have not been secured by the University library for circulation.

SQUARE DANCE

Practice for the Saturday night square dance sponsored by Graham Memorial will be held tonight at 7:30 in Roland Parker lounge. Betty Doss, P. A. Lee and Taylor Dodson, callers, will be present to teach the uninitiated. The dance itself is scheduled for the "Y" Court at eight o'clock, Saturday night.

THE GIANT ZEISS instrument, (pictured above) which has some 250 projectors, will be an important part of the Morehead building and Planetarium now being constructed on campus. Standing in front of the instrument are John Motley Morehead, donor of the $2 million gift, and his cousin, John L. Morehead, Charlotte manufacturer. The instrument was secured by the pair after negotiations in Sweden.

Y Plans Meet Ot Freshmen

All freshmen interested in working with the YMCA Freshmen council are asked by Ed Hamilton, Y cabinet member in charge of first year class organization, to attend a meeting tonight at 7:30 in Gerard hall.

"We will get our council organized this evening," Hamilton said in explaining the meeting. "Officers will be elected, programs will be formulated, and committees will be appointed to carry out the work."

Functions of the council during the coming year to be discussed will probably include orientation programs to acquaint freshmen wiht features of campus life, and the possibility of future social gatherings, the Y officer concluded.

STUDENTS MAY GET YACKS

All students enrolled in the University last year who have not yet received their 1947 Yackety-Yacks may pick them up in the Yack office this afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock.

But Radiators Are Here

Pipe Shortage Hinders Heating of Classrooms

By Raney Stanford

"It isn't missing radiators," said John S. Bennett, University building supervisor, in explaining the coldness of the new temporary classrooms, "it's pipe."

The radiators and heating units are all installed in the wooden structures, Bennett said, but contractors have been unable to obtain the necessary pipe to bring the heat in from outside sources.

"We contracted with J. L. Powers of Bennettsville, S. C., to do the work two months ago," Bennett went on. "It was scheduled for completion by October 1, but the factory has shipped no pipe, due to steel production bottlenecks, and doesn't know when any will be available."

Chilly Occupants

Chilly occupants of the buildings perhaps can find some solace in distinguished company in their suffering, for President Frank Graham's residence on Franklin street is in the same predicament. Construction gangs took out Dr. Graham's furnace this summer, expecting to have the elusive pipes in place before chilly weather.

"We are looking everywhere for pipe," Bennett concluded, "and have even tried to procure oil stoves for temporary use, with little luck. We are hoping to have something worked out shortly, though."

As soon as pipe can be obtained, connection between the old heating outlets and the new buildings should be a speedy procedure. University building authorities will endeavor to heat the buildings being used the most first, then the structures closest to the heating outlets.

Speed Continues Keynote

Yackety-Yack Sets October 9 Deadline For Campus Organizations to Make Plans

By John Stump

Speed and the early completion of preliminary work continue to be the keynotes in the Yackety-Yack board of editors offices on the second floor of Graham Memorial.

Latest deadline set in conformance with this policy is one week from today, October 9, which is the last day that campus organizations can arrange with the Yack for the space which they are to occupy in that publication. This was announced in a letter sent yesterday to all groups involved by Dick Gordon, Yack business manager.

Gives Reason

Any organization which has not either contracted with the annual or made special arrangements by that time cannot be included in this year's book. Commenting upon the speed-up, Yack editorial board member Harold Bursley explained that it had been made necessary by competition with other annuals for scarce materials and printing facilities.

There is not a sufficient supply of these items, and consequently only those annuals which bid first will have all their requirements satisfied.

Brown and Gold

In compliance with the advanced deadlines thus set, all preliminary work on the book is in the final stage. Brown and gold have been selected as the dominant colors in carrying out the "spirit of Carolina" theme. The budget of $45,000 has been drawn up, and the dummy copy has been completely set up.

However, the other Board of editors members, Ruth Evans and Gene Johnstone have joined Bursley in urgently requesting the utmost in student cooperation especially in the matter of individual and group photographs. "If this co-operation is given the Yackety-Yack editors and staff are confident that they can give Carolina the biggest and best Yack of all," concluded Bursley.

Newest Night Club, The Terrace View, Will Open Tonight

Chapel Hill's newest night club, The Terrace View, will hold its official opening Thursday night. The club, operated by George J. Captain, is located about four miles out the Greensboro highway.

The new building, having all modern conveniences, has been added to the old, which is now available any night for private parties. Tables are available on both the main and mezzanine floors.

Since the club has been enlarged to four times its old size, the nightly capacity is over 200 persons.

Music for the opening will be provided by Jim Marshall's Carolinians.

Student Federalists Plan Meeting Today

The student chapter of United World Federalists will meet this afternoon at 5 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge No. 2 of Graham Memorial. All students who are interested in world government are invited to attend.

There are two important items on the agenda: Officers for the coming year will be elected, and plans for the radio program to be sponsored by the Duke and Carolina chapters of World Federalists will be discussed. Several students from Duke will be present to take part in the discussion.

It is especially urgent that all old members be present since this is the first meeting of the new school year and important decisions must be made at this meeting.

Russell Baldwin, president duting the summer session, will preside until a new president is elected. He will make a report on the activities of the chapter during the summer and also on the forthcoming radio program to be broadcast by a Durham radio station.

Stirling Says Australian Interest Centers In Pacific; Bancroft, Reid To Discuss How To Unite United Nations

University President Will Represent U.S., Handle UN Dispute

Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the Greater University, was appointed by President Truman yesterday evening as the United States representative to a special United Nations committee to investigate the current dispute between the Dutch and Indonesians.

Dr. Graham will work with delegates from Belgium and Australia in an effort to settle the argument in the Netherlands East Indies. The committee was set up when the U.N. offered the services of its security council as a perogative for the peaceful conclusion of differences which have already flared into civil war in Java. The independence the Indonesians seek the Dutch are unwilling to give.

Other National Tasks

This is not the first occasion which Dr. Graham has been called to do a job for the federal government. During the war, especially, he held positions on many advisory committees, including the War Labor Board and the National Labor Mediation board.

At the time of his latest national appointment, Dr. Graham was attending a university conference in Virginia and could not be contacted for a statement to the DTH before presstime. However, Governor Gregg Cherry said in a news release that Dr. Graham, in addition to his regular duties as Greater University president, would probably be kept busy with the work to be done on this special committee for the next five or six weeks.

As yet it is not known when Dr. Graham will leave to assume his new duties, but some decision upon his flying to U.N. headquarters in Lake Success, N. Y., is expected today.

Dance in Woollen Gym Will Climax UN Week

Lincoln Kan, director of the CCUN, announced today that the dance to be given in the Women's gym Friday evening to close the United Nations week will be financed through a donation by the Order of the Grail.

Jack Fitch, delegata of the Grail, informed Kan that the Grail would donate 200 dollars to the CCUN as an endorsement of its good work. Of this amount 150 dollars is earmarked for the dance, the other 50 to be used to further the cause of the CCUN.

Johnny Satterfield's band, under the direction of Nelson Bennett will play for the dance which is scheduled to last from 9:30 until 12:30 o'clock. The affair will be semi-formal.

Johnny Clampitt will serve as master of ceremonies. The usual dance committee rules will be in effect.

Campus Party Backs Nomination Of Evans, Johnstone, Bursley

The Campus party has endorsed Ruth Evans, Gene Johnstone, and Harold Bursley as a Board of Editors to run for the editorship of the Yackety-Yack. These candidates were nominated by the University party earlier this week.

The three have been serving in their board capacity since the resignation of Bill Moffitt, elected editor of the publication last spring, left the position open.

In addition to the endorsement, Campus Party chairman Jess Dedmond announced at the last party meeting that all complaints concerning dormitory room allocations will be reviewed by the party.

The executive committee of the party has been chosen as follows: Margaret Jean Taylor, Ralph Sherrill, Walt Arnold, Marriot Stewart, Tom Lockhart, Colene Smith.

Quonset Hut Students Believe Life in Dorm Would Be Cleaner

By Wallace Kirby

If you happen to be one of Carolina's lucky gentlemen with a dormitory room, don't feel discouraged or down-trodden because your roommate isn't co-operative about helping keep your room clean and the boys up and down the hall insist on noise sometime, but drop down to Quonset Hut stretch and get a glimpse of real college life.

You needn't be formal, just walk into anyone of our 30 or more boudoirs and make yourself at home. We require no introductions, just "Hello, Joe" or "My name is Smith."

You'll find there are two levels on our society—that of the upper tennis courts and one of the lower. We have two study huts, one on each level, serving occupants of sixteen huts or about three hundred and twenty boys. Then there are other huts set aside for additional requirements, one for laundry and dry cleaning, one for mail, and two or so to help the fellows keep looking like people.

Each hut houses 20 boys, so if you happen to drop around when one or two of the roommates are out, come again for you may catch them in. With twenty boys in one hut, you would expect some squabble as to when the lights should go out, who occupies what section, and how much noise should be allowed. Such doesn't exist around the area, for each fellow is considerate of his buddy, and so on down the line. Usually, unofficial taps are sounded around eleven, and with the exception of late daters, late studiers, and general night owls, the area quiets down.

The big event breaks each morning as everyone searchs through the DTH to see if their names have been added to the dormitory list. It is a common occurrance to see a buddy lugging his belonging down the stretch and out to higher society.

Beat Texas Rally Slated for Tonight

A "Beat Texas" pep rally will be held tonight at 7:30 in Memorial hall.

Present at the rally will be the entire squad, coaching staff, band, and cheerleaders who know that all loyal Carolina fans and students will be there to cheer the team on their long march to Texas and victory.

Remember: all students cannot be at the game, so be there tonight and let our team know that they have a 100 per cent backing.

NROTC Students In First Drill

The 129 men enrolled in the NROTC program at the University of North Carolina reported to the NROTC Armory yesterday for the first drill session of the fall quarter.

Most of the drill period was spent in getting the records of the men in order. Some new uniforms were issued to the newly enrolled men, while the new freshmen saw a movie on military courtesy.

Out of the group of men in the NROTC who are returning from last year, many of them went on cruises this summer. Two midshipmen went on the same cruise that the Annapolis men went on, going to Europe and the Mediterranean. Thirty-five midshipmen visited ports in the Caribbean, Nassau, and disembarked in New York. Fourteen of the men went on a cruise to Newfoundland and the North Atlantic, sailing on four destroyers and an aircraft carrier. Two men, desiring commissions in the Marine Corps, went to the Marine Barracks, Quantico, Virginia, for summer training.

Captain D. W. Loomis is in command of the unit here in Chapel Hill, with Commander A. G. Schnable serving as executive officer. Lt. Commander Goldsmith, newest addition to the staff, is engineering officer. Three officers and eight enlisted men compose the rest of the staff of the unit.

PLAN MEETING

There will be an organizational meeting of law students' wives tonight at 7:45 in the Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial. All interested wives of legal students are invited to attend the first meeting of this social group.

U.S., New Zealand, Syrian Officials Will Speak Today

By Bob Rolnik

"How can we unite the United Nations again?" . . .

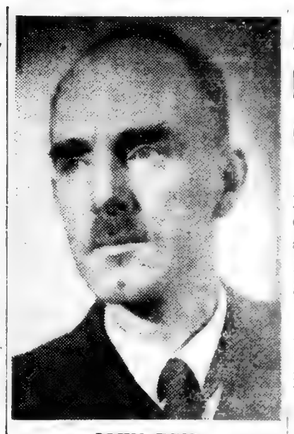
Harding F. Bancroft, the State department's representative to Carolina's three-day world salute, will thrash out this problem tonight at 8:30 with John S. Reid, New Zealand's Counsellor to the U. S., and Syrian Charge d'Affaires George Tomeh in Gerard hall.

The three diplomats will join at this evening's forum with Meredith college President Carlyle Campbell and Dr. Sydney B. Smith of Cambridge University, England, as the Inter-collegiate Conference for the UN whizzes through its second day of special events.

Same Speakers

During the afternoon, the same speakers will dig into the Palestine question at the town meeting-style forum at 2 o'clock in Gerard hall. The entire conference is sponsored by the Collegiate Council for the United Nations.

Schedule of today's conference activities is as follows:



9-12 a.m.—Diplomats will speak to all political science classes.

2-4 p.m.—Palestine forum with Reid, Smith and UNC faculty members, Dr. K. C. Frazer and Prof. Goro Deeb. This Gerard hall meeting is open to the public.

6-8 p.m.—Dinner for all the dignitaries in Carolina Inn. All interested students may attend.

8:30 p.m.—United Nations conference with Syrian Charge d'Affaires Tomeh, Bancroft and the other diplomats in Gerard hall. Open question period. Everyone is invited to attend this evening session.

In his position as associate chief of the World Security Affairs division, Harding Bancroft has been one of the State department's top foreign policy planners. He attended the first session of the UN General Assembly last year in London.

JOHN REID

Minister Reports European Affairs Get Less Notice

Pointing out that Australia is primarily interested in the Pacific and secondly in European affairs, Alfred Stirling, Australian Minister to the United States, said last night that "Great Britain today regards Australia and New Zealand as trustees for the British Commonwealth's democracy in the Western Pacific.

"We are proud to think too that this conception has the support of the United States," he said.

Mr. Stirling addressed the opening session at the University last night of the first International Collegiate Conference, which is being sponsored by the Collegiate Council for United Nations.

Following a dinner session for visiting dignataries, Mr. Stirling addressed a public audience in Memorial Hall with Lincoln Kan, University senior and state director of the CCUN, presiding. Chancellor Robert B. House of the University gave a welcoming address.

Sums up Ties

Summing up Australia's ties with Europe by referring to the development of Australia as a member of the British Commonwealth and to the occupation of New Guinea by Germany from 1884 to 1914, Mr. Stirling said that "despite these vital European ties, it is within the Pacific that we live and the Pacific has become a matter of our survival.

"Following the great lesson of the New Guinea episode (Germany's occupation) for the Australian colonies was thus twofold: 1. they determined to become a single nation, and 2. they resolved to play a part in decisions of international policy," he explained.

Describing his country's participation in international affairs, Mr. Stirling pointed out that Australia endeavored to obtain modification of the veto power as written into the draft charter

Student Legislature May Begin Tonight On Elections Issues

The Student Legislature may see some action when it meets this evening at 7:30 in Gerrard hall, according to Jack Folger and interested campus political bystanders.

Folger, the Speaker of the Legislature, plans to push through the election of a Sergeant at Arms for the law-making body before the hot issues come to the floor.

The pending election bills seem to be looming as the most likely bills for disagreement tonight. These include a bill coming directly from Miles Smith's Elections committee involving the time element in special elections, and a bill alleged to be coming from the floor concerning voting districts.

As to the resolution endorsing the reinstatement of boxing at the University, not too much debate is expected.

All students and faculty members, particularly those who are new on campus, are invited to attend this and all legislature sessions in order to become better acquainted with student government procedure.

INTERFRATERNITY CARDS

All men interested in joining a fraternity this fall are urged to drop by the "Y" office this week and fill out the interfraternity cards if they have not already done so. These cards must be completed this week.

Governor Cherry Lauds Collegiate Council of United Nations As 'Designed to Bring Understanding Among Peoples of World'

Raleigh, Oct. 1—Lending official support to the first North Carolina international collegiate conference which opened in Chapel Hill today, Gov. Gregg Cherry lauded "any project designed to bring about understanding among the peoples of the world."

The Governor's office in the capitol was scene today of a conference on United Nations activities between Cherry and Arthur Melton, publicity representative of the Collegiate Council of the United Nations. Purpose of the conference was to discuss means of implementing the CCUN's program in North Carolina.

Cherry said he was "proud" that North Carolina had an active group "engaged in bringing UN to our people."

After Melton explained current plans of the Carolina CCUN chapter, the governor recommended another goal:

"If you can inform officials of UN how strongly we look to them to bring peace," he declared, "they will be better able to accomplish their business."

Governor Gregg Cherry and Art Melton, CCUN publicizer.

Cherry branded as "unfortunate" recent parliamentary tangles the UN delegates had found themselves in, but he added the fact that "ordinary people everywhere want peace even though some governments follow policies far from peaceful" should urge UN delegates to full cooperation.

French-Born Singer, Yves Tinayre, to Highlight Hill Hall Music Events for Month with Concert to Be Given Oct. 28

By Sally Woodhull

Chief musical event scheduled to occur in Hill hall this month is the appearance of the French-born singer Yves Tinayre on October 28. Sponsored jointly by the music department and the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge foundation of the Library of Congress, the concert will have no admission charge. Tickets will be distributed at a date to be announced later, probably about a week before the concert.

Singing seldom-heard music from as far back as the 11th century, Mr. Tinayre strives to interest his audience in the music rather than in the quality of his singing. He was well received at several appearances last year in Durham.

Organist Robert Baker will appear on November 20 in this same chamber music series, and the student entertainment series will present "Madame Butterfly" on November 5.

Also in November will be the presentation by the Chapel Hill Choral society of the Autumn and Winter sections of "The Seasons," by Haydn. The Choral society is composed of students, faculty and townspeople, and rehearsals are held Monday evenings from 7:30 to 9:30 in Hill hall. Mr. Paul Young directs the group, and tryouts are not necessary for admittance.

A Christmas concert by the combined Glee clubs will be presented in December, and on University day the combined Glee clubs will sing Randall Thompson's "Allelulia" and the Men's Glee club will sing "Interger Vitae," a traditional part of the University day service.

Tryouts for Men's and Women's Glee clubs are being held this week from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. in Hill hall, and will close on Friday.

Laws-- And Ways Around Them

Texas has just instituted a separate division of the University especially for Negro law students. To date they have one student and five professors attending classes in the basement of an Austin residence, which has been remodeled into three rooms. The lone student is Henry Eman Doyle, a well-educated former grocery store owner of Austin who sold his business to study for a legal career. Doyle, a former school teacher, traveler, and Boy Scout official who went to Europe to attend a World Jamboree in 1939, seems to be fairly well satisfied with the training that he is receiving.

Here is a statement by Doyle that expresses his attitude—an attitude that is quite justifiable: "It's just like having a steaming plate of chicken on a box in the back yard. I'd rather have it in the house here, but chicken is chicken, and it's better in the back yard than not at all."

Texas was forced into establishing a law school for Negro students when a Negro mail carrier filed a mandamus suit seeking entrance to the University of Texas. The suit aroused intense discussion on the question and the separate school was the choice the Texas officials made.

Naturally Doyle would rather attend law classes in which he could benefit from classroom discussions and assistance from other students —although he states that his professors are extremely willing to "go out of their way" to help him both in and out of classes. The state of Texas is burdened with the expense of supporting two law schools, two libraries, additional instructors and numerous other financial obligations.

Doyle wants it clearly understood that he did not enter the law school as part of a split in the ranks of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. He emphasized that "I would just be cutting my own throat if I didn't take this opportunity."

This situation could easily apply to North Carolina. The time when the authorities will have to decide on admitting Negro students to the law school is not far off. It will be interesting to see if North Carolina, the State which is allegedly the most progressive in the South, admits Negro students or resorts to building a separate institution for training Negro lawyers.

Little Boys with Empty Palms

Yesterday marked the beginning of National Newspaper Week: a week that honors the reporters on the beat, pays tribute to the men who fill the columns of the editorial page, greets the managing editor and his fat cigar, congratulates the men in the composing room, and takes its hat off to the young generation of newspaper boys. But the praise for the latter is such that they have set a whole day (October 4) aside for them. For after the papers leave the press it is the indefatigable crew of newsboys who take charge and see that they are delivered to the homes of the readers or hawked on the streets.

The newsboys of a morning paper deserve the most credit. During the week they find it mandatory to get out of bed before six in the morning, lest their subscribers become angered at not finding their newspaper at their breakfast table. Then there is school attendance, another stipulation that necessitates early rising.

Sunday is the day of rest for most of us, but to the newsboy it means additional worry and trouble. Not only are the papers ladened with at least three extra sections, but the colored funny papers and the magazine sections have to be tolerated. The funnies and the mag sections have to be inserted by hand into the papers. In many cities young boys perform this task. Sometimes it is the same fellow who delivers your paper. It is a long day when you begin working around 2 o'clock in the morning, especially for a young fellow in his teens.

But for all of his hardships and denials, the newsboy gains something that is invaluable to him in later life. He gets his first taste of the world. He is thrown into contact with the parsimonious creatures that keep telling him to come back tomorrow with the hope that he will forget to come back and collect his wages. There are the cantankerous souls that do not want the newsboy to ride his bicycle over their walks or throw the paper on the porch. Instead, the newsboy must dismount, walk up the sidewalk, up the steps to the door, open the screen and place the paper inside.

The newsboy does get a taste of the world, the sweet and the bitter. He is a great little businessman.

A Parable

Once there was a little animal that did not know what it was. That would have been okay, but nobody else knew what it was either. This much, however, it and they did know: it was either a sheep or a cow.

So this little sheep—or cow—was wandering around one day on a grassy hill, nibbling grass and wondering what it was. It looked to its right and saw a lot of cows; it looked to its left and saw a lot of sheep. The cows were going moo and the sheep were going baa.

The little animal that didn't know what it was went moo more or less for the hell of it. It was sort of an experiment because the little animal really wanted to know what it was. So it went moo and that was too bad.

Because right close by there was a campfire around which a lot of cattlemen were sitting, poking at the coals with big vicious branding irons—and when they heard that moo you can imagine what they did.

Of course they got right up and ran up to the little animal and branded it and put a bell around its neck and named it Bossy and said now give milk.

That would have been all right too, but the little animal was really a sheep. Now that is a sad story if ever there was one.

Later the little sheep wanted to run around with the other little sheep but they would have nothing to do with him, and he wanted to have a shepherd to take care of him—but who ever heard of a cow with a shepherd. The cows didn't like the little sheep, either. So the little sheep had a rough time and didn't belong to anyone.

Moral: never figure a sheep is cow just because it makes noises before its too young to know what kind of noises it really wants to make. Goes for humans and students, too.—R.S.

Now that butter and sugar are reasonably plentiful again, the dealers are discovering that a lot of people learned to get along without them while they were scarce and cannot break the habit.

When the Communists are being investigated, they call it a witch hunt; when they are making other people uncomfortable, they regard it as an enterprise in behalf of the ideals of democracy.

The Soviets are hoping for a depression in America and the "compse" of capitalism here as a direct consequence of unemployment. But who will they borrow from, if their hopes are justified?

Floods in the Middle West have damaged the corn crop. But as yet there is nothing to suggest that there will be any noticeable shortage of the kind of 'corn" that comes in bottles.

Luckman Gets Brass Ring

Washington.—Last week two members of Mr. Truman's Cabinet argued back and forth over who was to head up the all-important Food Committee—the Committee which is to work out a plan for rationing the American public and then make the public like it.

Secretary of Commerce Averell Harriman argued for Wisconsin's ex-Senator Bob LaFollette, a thoroughly trusted, experienced public servant. Secretary of Agriculture Anderson, on the other hand, argued for meteoric young Charles Luckman, whom the venerable Lever Brothers Soap Company of England picked to head its far-flung properties (Pepsodent, Rinso, Lux, Lifebuoy, Spry) in the United States.

In the end, Anderson won out. Chuck Luckman, aged 38, one of the miracles of American business, was made Chairman of the Food Committee.

The Secretary of Agriculture had come to know Luckman at the close of the war when the soap companies, the American housewife, and the U. S. Government all were worried over the scarcity of fats. At that time Luckman came in to see Anderson, offered to make a survey of the world fat situation. The survey probably cost Luckman $5,000 but he didn't even keep a copy for himself.

"It helped us beat the fat shortage," Anderson says. "For, as a result, we were able to encourage rapessed in Europe, nut oils in England, and so on. It was one of the best jobs I've ever seen."

Not many people had heard of Chuck Luckman until about a year ago, when suddenly Lord Leverhulme, inheritor of the vast Lever soap empire which bears his father's name, called him to London. And at a meeting of Lever directors, Luckman was told he had been selected to head Lever's immensly profitable properties in the United States.

But you don't know me," countered the 37-year-old Luckman.

"We know all about you," replied chairman Geoffery Heyworth, thumbing through a thick report on every phase of Luckman's life.

In that report was the story of a Kansas City boy who began life selling newspapers, jerking sodas, delivering groceries, and after working his way through the University of Illinois, finally selling soap for Colgate's. In fact, Luckman has been selling one thing or another all of his life, and eventually made such a showing for Colgate that he was snapped up by the Pepsodent Company. Result: Pepsodent's gross profits rose from $600,000 to $3,000,000.

Later, Lever Brothers bought up Pepsodent. And it has been said in the soap trade that Lever bought Pepsodent out only to obtain the services of Chuck Luckman. (His present salary: $300,000 a year.)

Only instruction the Lever directors gave Luckman when he took over his new job was to "operate as he thought best."

One of the first things he did after taking over his new assignment was to turn the soap world topsy-turvy by insisting that the Association of American Soap and Glycedine Products be headed by a "small soaper."

For years there had been rivalry and bitterness between the three big soap companies of the USA (Lever Brothers, Procter and Gamble and Colgate's) on one hand, and about 400 small soap companies on the other. Always in the past, the big three had rotated as head of the soap association—much to the resentment of the "small soapers."

Great was the astonishment in the soap trade, therefore, when Luckman, newly appointed head of the largest soap company in the USA, calmly announced that though it was his turn to be president of the soap association he would step aside in favor of a little soaper.

For the first time in years, peace now reigns between the big soapers and the little soapers.

Luckman recently signed a contract with the Chemical Workers Union (AFL) which H. A. Bradley, head of the union, called "one of the best examples of good collective bargaining in the United States."

"If we had more mutual understanding of this sort, Bradley said, "the so-called labor problem wouldn't exist."

Luckman, however, is not one to kowtow to labor. In fact, he leveled some caustic barbs directly at labor-union chiefs in the place where it hurts most. After consideraable research, Luckman discovered that out of 600 labor newspapers in the USA only seven had bargaining contracts with their own employees.

"It is doubtful whether as many as 20,000 of the 110,000 people who work for the unions are protected by collective bargaining and enjoy the benefits which organized labor demands that we establish for our employees," announced the man whom labor has praised so enthusiastically.

That, briefly, is the young business man picked to head one of the most difficult and thankless of committees, which decides how much the American people should eat and then sells them on the idea of staying within the limits prescribed.

Life withLife

Life magazine, a pretty well-known little weekly mag, wants to know if anybody here (particularly the Henry Wallace for President club) is going to picket or throw rocks at the visiting British, Australian, Yugoslav, and New Zealand diplomats. The gentleman began arriving today to attend the International Collegiate Conference for the United Nations and so far not one brick has been heaved.

The "Wallace" club members sent Life a flat no in answer. They were not going to demonstrate — not because they approved of the British foreign policy, but because they had no grudge against the United Nations. That is not the important point, however.

It seems to us that Life sort of jumped the gun in asking if a University organization was going to picket a UN conference. It seems to indicate that the University is getting quite a name for itself: as a troublemaker.

Of course, we cannot condemn a newsmagazine for keeping on its toes and trying to anticipate the news. That's good newspapering, but it seems to add another straw to the burden of bad publicity

Village Dust Settles Again

By Dan Sapp

The large pile of dust shaken from the feet of departing citizens has been tracked into the apartments of the newly arrived, and tranquillity has returned to the village. Even the Georgia game caused little disturbance except in one or two cases where out of town guests confused by the similarity of the buildings, got into the wrong rooms. These situations however were handled with tact and delicacy and no casualities were reported.

During the breakdown between the summer and fall quarters the stork, who by the way is not being subsidized by Duke hospital, visited the Allen Keens and brought them a baby boy, William Allen Keen by name. Mrs. Keen (Harriet) is known to Chapel Hill play goers for her excellent work in several major Playmaker productions last year. When asked what plans she had made for her son's future, Harriet replied, "He'll have to be a Carolina man; he was born with 30 hours in renaissance literature."

Back on the job Monday night were a few faithful members of the village council. A regular meeting could not be held due to the absence of a quorum but some information was exchanged by those present. Mrs. Charlotte Hayes, one of the most active council members, cleared up a point that may have bothered some. According to Mrs. Hayes, money for Village maintenance now comes exclusively from the University. Mrs. Hayes based her information on a letter which she recently received from the Atlanta Federal housing office.

Carrol Walden reported that progress is being made toward requiring all pedlers who operate in the Village to be licensed.

All of which brings up the story of the frustrated salesman. It seems that complaint had been made about the noisy hawking of a certain Sunday newspaper salesman. The offending salesman was informed of the complaint and told to be less noisy. The following Sunday the salesman was not heard at all. On Monday he was accosted by a group of Sunday funny fans who demanded to know why they had not received their papers. At this writing the salesman has probably gone back to shouting or given up the business. In any event this should be an interesting commentary on our civilization; but I doubt it.

What Happened to Bills?

By R. Foo Giduz

Memo to the Student Legislature: We dunno what ever happened to a couple of bills introduced last spring to organize (1) a campus community chest, and (2) a central campus events booking-scheduling agency. But both are of top importance now. . .If they're now in committee, gentlemen, it's way past time they were dusted off, checked, revised, and some action taken on them.

Harried DTH office workers of last year headachingly remember how directors of a half-dozen fund drives—Red Cross, tuberculosis, WSSF, etc—primed the paper's news channeling pumps dry with belated pleas for contributions. . .And they also remember how tired everyone became of being solicited several times daily for contributions; and how tired the staff was of writing the same old hackneyed news about each drive in DTH columns.

Obvious solution is a campus community chest; the only practical and proven successful method for collecting funds annually for all worthy community projects. . .People don't mind kicking in a sizeable amount to one large drive annually, when they know they won't be pestered by some other drive the next week. . . .

There are 110-odd student organizations on the campus and a half-dozen or more conflicting campus events nightly. . . .A central campus calendar has been half-heartedly in effect for years now. . . .Peggy Jurgensen in the Y office keeps a record of all coming events, on which she is notified. But there is no OFFICIAL agency for the whole campus.—Only lots of cheap talk about setting up one. Graham Memorial is the logical place for this long-needed service and GM is prepared to do the job. . . .Enough cheap talk gents. . . .Why not make it official???

Our tipster reports the latest odds for the weekend are Texas and-six. . . .Dunno, but we're nigh tempted to take it—And would definitely do it if we could get down to see the Saturday show in Austin and cheer the lads on. Really envy you guys who are going down. We'll hate to miss this one.—Anyhow, at last report Myrt and another cheerleader were Austin-bound. Team headquarters is the Austin Hotel, so all you south-bound Tar Heelers rally 'round down thar, and cheer 'em on.

GM GRIND:

Square dancers got off to a good start last evening with a warm practice session in the student union. . . .Put Saturday evening in your Blue Book. That's the date of the first GM square dance for the fall. . . . Vets of 1941 will remember the days of former union director Fish Worley who put Carolina on a nationwide map with his renown catch-all Graham Memorial square dances.

Confidential memoranda: The Rendezvous (ground floor of the student union) has the biggest, best, and most reasonably priced club sandwiches in town. And incidentally, this new campus social stomping ground has some of the neatest interior decorating yet seen for student projects. . . .Open from 6 o'clock each evening.

If it's radiologically possible, GM will air the Tar Heels-Texas grid game this Saturday afternoon in the main lounge. . .If the broadcast can't be picked up, you can still get the very latest wire reports on the game's progress there.

What Are Women And Why?

By Tookie Hodgson

First of all, let me get over the point that there is a whole sex composed of nothing but women. Contrary to popular opinion women are not necessarily composed of "a rag, a bone, and a hank of hair." The man who said they were—Rudyard Kipling—is now dead, which only goes to show that when you don't know what you are talking about, you'd better shut up.

There are a number of differences between women and men. One of the biggest is that women are not human; they are much to smart for that. Another difference used to be that women wore skirts instead of trousers. Now they wear either blue jeans of a new type garment which sweeps the ground and closely resembles a shroud. (1)

According to an anthropologist I know, the chief function of women is to have offspring. (2) This used to be a single process, but modern civilization being what it is, things are now rough all over. Not so with lady (sheep) dogs, monkeys, and three toed sloths. When they want children, they just go ahead and have them, and to hell with this horsing around. Women, however, can't do this because somebody once told them that they possessed what is arbitrarily called "reason". (3)

Men shouldn't chase women the way they do, because it makes them feel wanted. Of course, they are wanted, but that's neither here nor there.

If a man really wishes to win the affections of a woman, he should have a million dollars on hand. (4) This should not be so much trouble, as a number of men make a million dollars before they are sixty-five. The flaw here is that at sixty-five, most men have lost interest in women and are concentrating on their stamp collections. I don't think I will, though. (5)

(1) Scottish Highlanders also wear skirts, but one shouldn't call them women, if one desires to enjoy good health.

(2) Women don't think so. They'd rather play bridge and drink oldfashioneds.

(3) I don't think so.

(4) Two million would be better.

(5) Not unless I'm dead, anyhow.

Back Tracking In Sports

Lest We Forget

With all the fervor and excitement going on over the current edition of the football Tar Heels, the other sports seem to have fallen in the background. The fact of the matter is that many of the varied athletic teams are already out on the practice fields and those that are not at work now, will begin in a week or so.

The cross country team is now out working over the hills and dales in preparation for the opening meet with the Engineers from Georgia Tech at Chapel Hill on October 18. Eight of last year's lettermen are back and they include such stars as Jimmy Miller, Jack Milne, Sam Magill, Alvin Smith, Walt Francis, Julian Mackenzie, Mark Burnham and Halstead Holden. This octet along with some of the newcomers will probably be the key men on Coach Dale Ranson's harrier squad.

The schedule is not yet complete, but meets with Tech, Tennessee, State, Duke, Virginia, Conference and the IC4A affairs are on tap and the coaches are dickering with several other leading schools for dates. November 17 is the date the harriers have set their eyes on since that is the date of the IC4A meeting.

Last year running for the first time in National competition the Carolinians took a fourth place to NYU, Manhattan and Penn State. This year the boys are eyeing bringing the trophy back to the southland for the first time in the history of the run. It would also be the first time that a University team has ever captured National honors in any sport.

On the tennis front, even though Coach John Kenfield has not returned to Chapel Hill, his racquet weilders are out on the courts under the tuteledge of Jack Kenfield. Jack is the coach's son and was a valuable member of last year's tennis team. With a group of men composeed of Vic Seixas, Clark Taylor, Ray Morris and many promising newcomers, things may be pointing for the return of the loop tennis title to Chapel Hill.

Rumors have it that the strong William & Mary netters who handed the Tar Heels their only net loss of last season have lost their ace, Gardner Larned. If this is true it may well be Carolina's year again on the courts.

Cage Capers Begin

Basketball practice has been called for next Monday afternoon, but a quick visit to Fetzer Field sees such cagemen as John Dillon, Nemo Nearman, Dan Nymicz leading a host of new basketball material in windsprints on the track. A very early prediction by this correspondent selects the White Phantoms to take the N. C. State Hoosier Hot Shots into camp and move on to the Conference come winter.

While down on Fetzer field we stayed a few minutes and watched Coach Marvin Allen and his soccer squad through their paces. Interest is high and it may more than make up for the lacking experience. Soccer is the newest addition to the monogram sports, and with an ambitious eight game schedule ahead for this fall, should prove to be an interesting game for the average spectator to see. In Europe soccer draws crowds in the excess of 100,000 and the games are rough and ready and the sport is now establishing itself in this country as evidenced by the huge crowds that were drawn by the foreign teams last summer.

While talking to genial Coach Allen a couple of the members of last year's wrestling squad jogged past and waved hello. They were Oscar Gupton and O. T. Simpson and these lads are wasting no time in getting in shape to try and retain the loop title in the grunt and groan game.

Baseball members from last year's hot and cold team, even though having no place to hold an official practice, can be seen in odd corners of the campus limbering up the old soup bones.

Track candidates have been out on the cinders for the past few days limbering up their muscles and joints and if sufficient help in the sprints and middle distances can be added to the squad, this may well be the Tar Heels' best year in that sport. On the track scene the date for the huge indoor carnival has not as yet been set but it promises to even surpass the brilliance of last year's banner affair.

Down at Bowman Gray pool many of the members of Coach Dick Jamerson's Blue Dolphins are going through preliminary conditioning and workouts to get in shape to beat off the State College or any other team that threatens their supremacy of the waves.

Muralists Tell All

We ran into Coach Walter Rabb who is also the University intramural director and his chief assistant, P. A. Lee, who babbled to us the huge plans for this mural season. It seems as if most of the dormitories and fraternities have elected their mural managers and are raring to go in the tag football league. This, however, is only one of the many activities the mural department is setting up for campus participation. Rabb also added that Tuesday and Thursday night's will be set aside for dancing lessons under the direction of Bill Townsend, former Arthur Murray instructor.

So, as the sun sank beneath the pines that surround the Carolina athletic fields, the many athletes returned to the mammoth Woollen gym to shower and dream of their many expected triumphs on the friendly field of strife for the coming year; and this reporter journeys back to his typewriter to record another day in Tar Heel sports.

ART MATERIALS AT ABERNETHY'S

Yanks Top Bums, 10-3, Behind Allie Reynolds

New York, Oct. 1—(UP)—Blasting four Brooklyn pitchers for 15 hits which included one homer and five other base raps, the New York Yankees pounded out a one-sided 10-3 victory over the rapidly slipping Dodgers. Another crowd of over 73,000 raving fans jammed Yankee Stadium this afternoon and witnessed the Yanks break loose as in the days of Ruth and Gehrig with a devastating barrage of extra base hits which drove three Brooklyn hurlers to cover to cover.

Pint-sized Vic Lombardi's sharp-breaking curves held the big Yankee bats fairly well in check until the fifth inning when Tommy Henrich's circuit clout into the right centerfield bleachers and Johnny Lindell's ground rule double in the left field stands sent him to the showers. Fire-baller Hal Gregg, his reliever, forced Joe DiMaggio to ground out but George McQuinn chased in Lindell with the final tally of the inning when he singled sharply to center field.

The Yanks added another tally in the sixth when winning pitcher Allie Reynolds opened the inning with a single to left, and moved to second on Gregg's free ticket to Stirnweiss. Both runners moved up one base on Henrich's sacrifice bunt, and then Reynolds tallied when Lindell flied deep to Hermanski in right.

Hank Behrman replaced Gregg at the beginning of the seventh and was the victim of the New Yorkers' biggest scoring outburst. McQuinn's single, a wild pitch by Behrman, Johnson's run-scoring one-baser, which Reiser booted in center, Berra's intentional pass, and Reynold's run-producing bunt single, swiftly routed Behrman.

Rex Barney then replaced Behrman and George Stirnweiss was presented with a gift single when nobody covered first on his grounder to Jackie Robinson. Berra scored on this play. The Yanks ended their game's scoring when Barney uncorked a wild pitch which allowed Reynolds to cross the plate for his second run of the game.

The only bright spot of the game for the Dodger fans came in the fourth inning when the Flatbush's favorite son, Fred "Peepul's Cherce" Walker, smacked Reynold's opening pitch of the fourth inning into the right field bleachers to knot the score at 2-2. This was the last time that the Dodgers were in the ball game for the Yanks came right back in their half of the fourth to go ahead on Johnson's tremendous triple and Phil Rizzuto's pop-fly double into short left which scored the former.

STARTING PITCHERS

New York, Oct. 1—(UP)—If Yankee Manager Bucky Harris's hunch is as right this afternoon at it was yesterday, then southpaw Hank Behrman will be on the hill for the Dodgers in tomorrow's contest at Ebbets Field. Harris also disclosed that Big Bobo Newsom will open on the mound for New York.

Ping Pong Field Reaches Eighty

A talented field of over eighty paddle-wielders has already entered Graham Memorial's big fall ping-pong tournament, and more entries are being received daily to promise one of the best tourneys ever sponsored by the Union.

A breakdown of the total figure finds 62 potential champions listed in the singles division with ten pairs of doubles team set to begin play.

First round matches in both competions will get underway Monday with the pairings to be posted on the Graham Memorial bulletin board in the main lobby. All entrants are asked to check the board in order that the tourney may be conducted without unnecessary delays.

Anyone who has not signed up to play in either division may do so anytime between now and Saturday which is the closing date for all entries.

Roll of Brown Paper May Help Texan Coach to Defeat Tar Heels Saturday

A roll of brown wrapping paper may hold the solutions to the problems that will face J. Blair Cherry, the University of Texas' first new head football coach in ten years.

The roll of wrapping paper, today hidden in a well-packed desk, has Cherry's first notes on the "T" formation, begun when Clark Shaughnessy's style caught his eye in 1943. Cherry is basing his plans and hopes on the self-same "T" offense this fall, as he steps into D. X. Bible's position as head coach of the Steers.

It is Cherry's first collegiate head coaching job, although he's turned down several choice chances since he became Coach Bible's top adjutant ten seasons ago. But if the new mentor's high school record is any indication, the Longhorn grid fortunes aren't due to suffer. Cherry earned his reputation with seven sensational seasons as the head of the Amarillo High Golden Sandstorm football squads. His teams, during those seven seasons, lost but four games, and for three consecutive years, his Sandies won the coveted Texas schoolboy championships with as many undefeated teams.

Came to Texas

In 1937, at the end of those three years, he came to the University of Texas as assistant to Bible, who arrived at the same time from Nebraska to begin the task of reviving the Longhorn's sagging grid fortunes.

Officially, he took over his big new job on January 1, 1947. He immediately took a series of bold strokes that set the style for his first season that has started with wins over Texas Tech and Oregon. Most important of these was discarding Bible's wingback system for the "T" formation, a near-revolutionary move in the face of such facts as: (1) virtually all '46 personnel returning from a team that had won 8 and lost 2; (2) with all-American Bobby Layne back for his old fullback job. But Cherry took the "T" because he deems it a more "modern type of offense," because he has (and has had for several years) a number of fast backs; and because he thinks Layne will make a successful "T" style quarterback.

At Texas, he has worked at all phases, but has concentrated frequently on the Longhorns' end play. In the past six seasons, Cherry had a bona fide All-American end every year but one, with Malcolm Kutner, Joe Parker and Hub Bechtol doing the work.

Tar Heels Add Polish To Offense For Texas

Coach Carl Snavely added a few more polishing touches to his Carolina football machine yesterday as the Tar Heels drilled for their intersectional tilt with Texas in Austin on Saturday.

A chill autumn afternoon spurred are Tar Heels through a heavy workout, and the boys displayed plenty of spirit. The Carolina squad will depart for Austin on Friday morning via the airways. The Tar Heels chartered plane will leave from the Raleigh-Durham airport.

Particular emphasis was placed on Carolina's aerial game in the lengthy scrimmage. The Blue and White gridders displayed a potent passing attack in their 14-7 victory over Georgia last week, but Snavely evidently believes the Heels will need to be even better in the airlanes when they invade the Southwest Conference, notable as a land where the pass is the most popular offensive method.

Still More Passes

Choo Choo Charlie Justice and Walt Pupa were doing most of the passing, and occasionally one of the two were on the receiving end of the other's passes. The running game, which was somewhat off against Georgia's eight-man line, also received considerable attention.

The squad is in fairly good physical condition, although co-captain and blocking back Joe Wright has been laid up for several days with a swelling condition.

The Texas-Carolina tilt will be only the second meeting between a UNC team and a Southwest Conference club. Texas Christian University met the Tar Heels in Chapel Hill in 1941, and Carolina won by 21-14. The game will mark the first time that North Carolina has played in Texas.

Approximately 50,000 spectators are expected to turn out for the game, which will be one of the top games in the nation.

The Carolina Jayvees also held an elongated workout yesterday, but the Tar Babies do not have a game scheduled until next Friday, when they will perform in Columbia against the South Carolina Jayvees.

Mural Program Hits Full Pace

Climaxing a day of varied activities, the Intramural department closed last night after two hours of successful badminton in Woollen gym.

Many people turned out for an evening of enjoyment and exercise as the Intramural-sponsored badminton play got under way. Instructors were present to assist novices with the official rules and to give advice on playing techniques. The next open house will be held Wednesday evening, October 8.

There will be an important meeting of all boys living in quonset huts this afternoon in front of hut 13 at 4:30 o'clock to discuss methods of organizing and joining Intramural football teams.

The tennis program, slated to get under way this afternoon, will open with competitors for the championship in the novice singles division. The matches will continue throughout the week. No matches are scheduled for Friday of this week, due to various weekend activities. All scheduled matches will be published in the Daily Tar Heel the day of play. Contestants unable to compete at the scheduled time should get in touch with their scheduled opponent and the Intramural office.

Graham Memorial Becomes Headquarters For Student Extra-Curricular Activities

Graham Memorial, "the corner of the campus," is truly becoming the center of activity this fall with the building bulging over during all opening hours as old and new students set up their extra-curricular headquarters there.

From top to bottom there is a revitalization of old features and an abundance of new activities. The union's objective, according to new director Bill Shuford, is to use the building to the utmost, and be of every possible service to all students.

From the bottom up one finds: On the ground floor of the building in the old barber shop, a complete art, paint, and poster shop. A brand new feature of the building, the shop is directed by Roy Ritzell. Here murals, posters, displays, and any other decorative publicity features may be made for any recognized campus organization.

In the main lounge the furniture has been upholstered and 10 new floor lamps installed to aid bridge players and readers. New drapes will be installed shortly.

All kinds of game equipment are available in the office for use around the building and in the main lounge, where card tables are always set up. During odd hours all through the day programs of recorded music are played.

"We have placed a suggestion box in a most prominent place in the main hall," stated Shuford, "in the sincere hope that all students will feel free to contribute ideas for the betterment of Graham Memorial and its activities, with particular emphasis on methods of serving the student body."

The office staff and services have been greatly expanded. One of the top new features is the mimeographing service for student organizations. Copy will be handled here quickly at a minimum cost and may be turned in to Mrs. Cook at the office information desk.

In addition to being the nerve center of the building, the union office is now set up to act as an information center. All possible information on campus affairs is being complied here, and any group which wants their information publicized may leave it on file in the office. "If we don't know, we'll try to find it out," said one staff member. The lost and found department continues to operate at the information desk, in conjunction with the YMCA, and any found articles should be turned in at one of these places.

Appropriate instruction will be arranged regularly for classes in ballroom, folk, and square dancing. Dr. Richard Weaver, of the sociology department, will be in charge of this instruction.

A well rounded program of many entertainment features is being planned by the staff to include dancing, concerts, student participation programs, games, carnival nights, card games and open houses.

Other special features will include recorded programs of classical, popular, and light opera concerts, religious music, and dramatic presentations. From time to time there will be stunt and carnival nights, and community sing competitions.

Bridge, always one of the top attractions of the union, is again under the direction of Howell Peacock. Instruction is held every Monday evening and tournaments every Tuesday.

Roy Hedrick Receives Naval Air Citation

At an informal ceremony here yesterday afternoon, Roy E. Hedrick, Jr., now a student at Wake Forest, received a gold star and a permanent citation at the hands of Commander A. G. Schnable, USN.

Mr. Hedrick's award was made in line of a second air medal. The citation received is as follows:

"For meritorious achievement in aerial flight as air crewman of USN Patrol Bomber Plane in Anti-Submarine Operations in the Bay of Biscay and the Western Approaches to the United Kingdom from May 15 to June 25, 1944. Completing his fifth mission during this period, Hedrick contributed materially to the success of his squadron. His courage and devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the U. S. Naval Service.

More than 1,000 observers took part in the 1947 waterfowl inventory of the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

of the United Nations Organization at San Francisco in 1945.

"Since then, for Australia, as for the United States, support of the United Nations Organization has been in the forefront of our foreign policy."

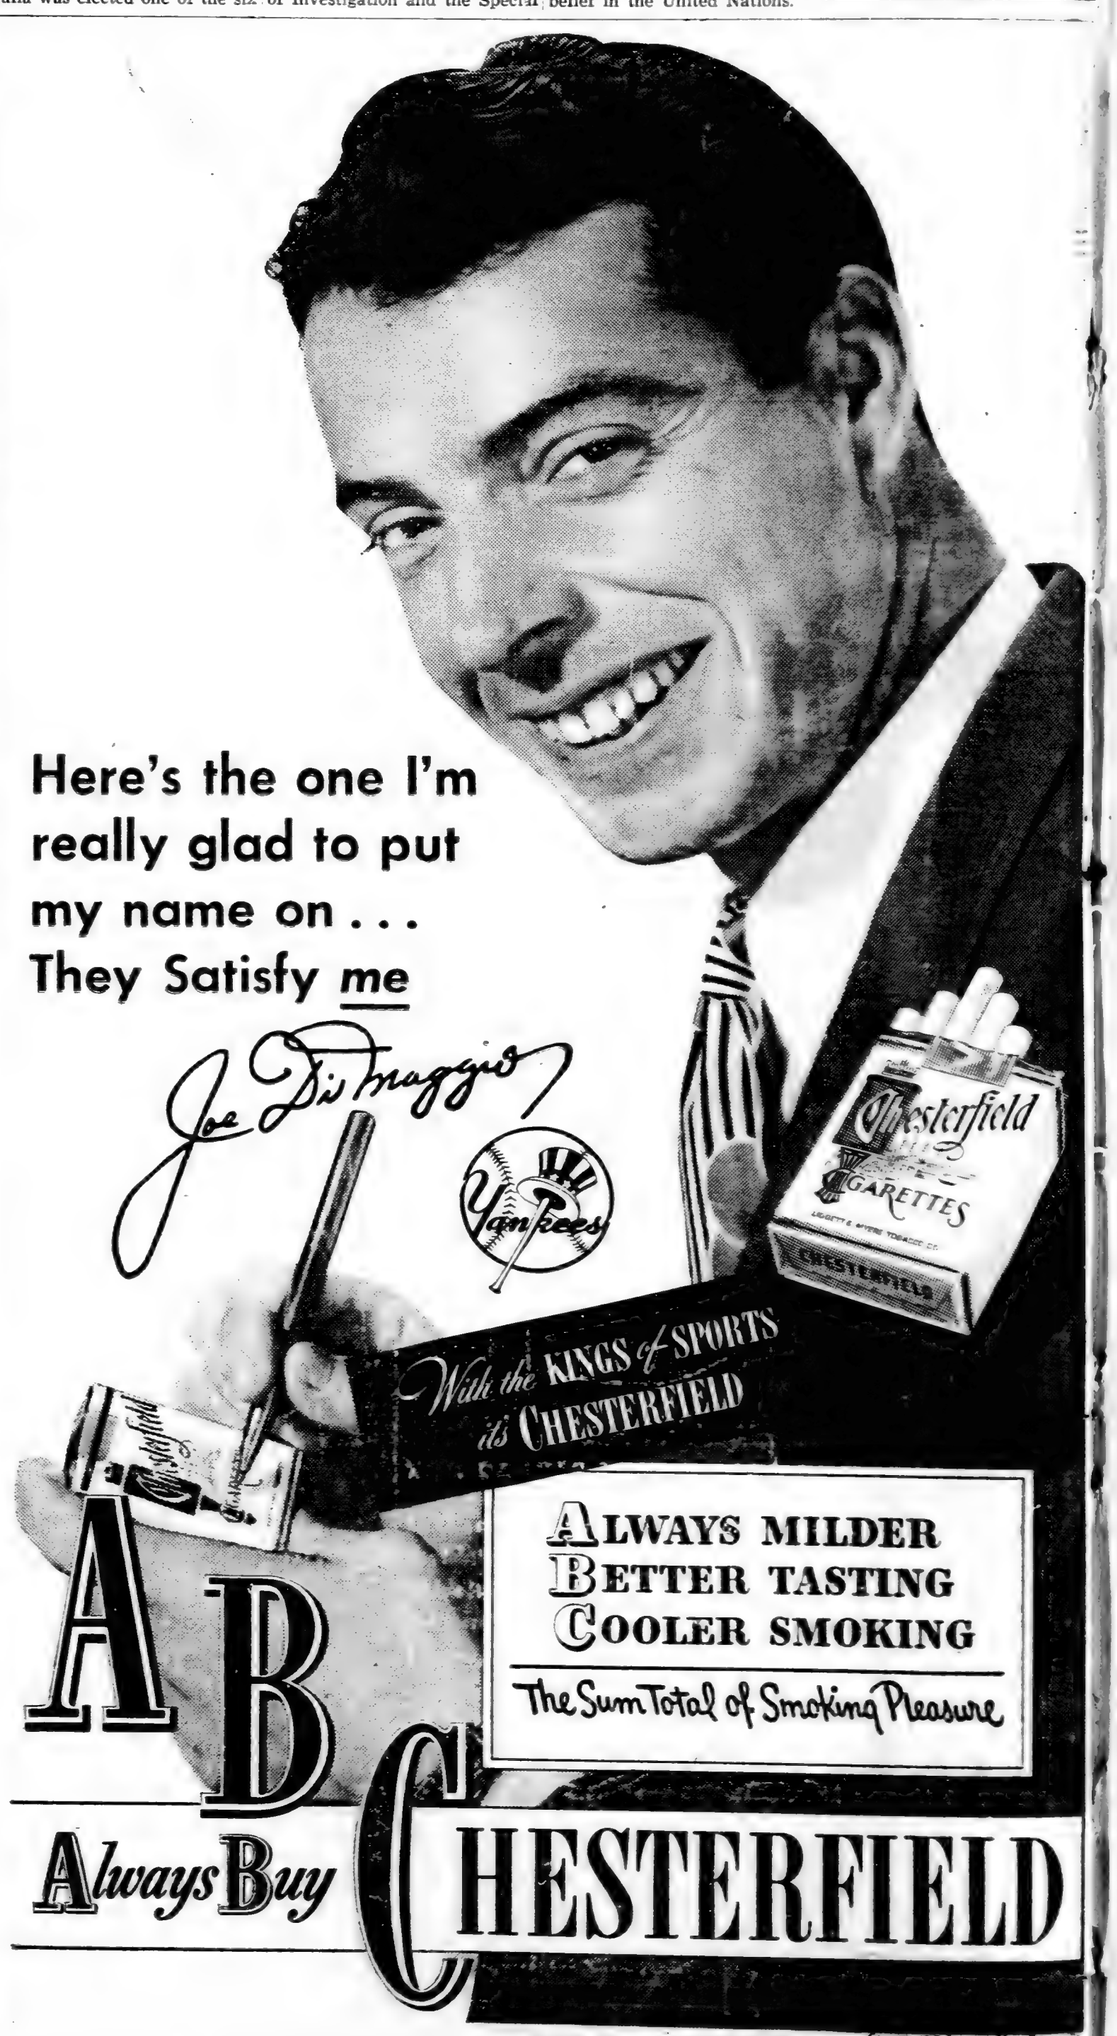
He also pointed out that Australia was elected one of the six non-permanent members of the Security Council at the first meeting of the General Assembly in January 1946 and that late last year when UNESCO formally came into being, Australia was elected one of 18 nations on the executive board.

"During this year Australia has been on two major investigation commissions of the UN —first, the Balkan Commission of Investigation and the Special Committee on Palestine. As regards the present troubled situation in Indonesia, it was an Australian resolution which resulted in the appointment of the six Consular representatives to report on the carrying out of the Security Council's stop-fire order in Indonesia."



Mr. Stirling emphasized that his people are still "looking towards New York" and still have belief in the United Nations.

Student Legislature Sets Yack Editorship Election For October 14

Resolution Backing Return of Boxing Passed Unanimously

By Jim Spence

In an unusually quiet session last night, the Student Legislature passed a bill creating a special election for editor of the Yackety-Yack to be held Tuesday, October 14.

The second important accomplishment of the meeting was the unanimous passing of a resolution to the Athletic council for the reinstatement of boxing at the University. The resolution was introduced by Tag Montague, dubbed by colleagues "the Happy Legislator."

The bill asking for the October 14 special election was introduced by Charlie Long, speaker pro tempore of the Legislature. By means of suspension of the rules, a vote was immediately taken. The measure was passed by a vote of twenty to one.

The boxing issue was opened as Montague read a petition from boxers and students of the University asking for the reinstatement of the ring to intercollegiate sports here. It was pointed out by the petition that boxing has become more safe with new developments of protective equipment and that University teams have had a very fine standing in the South for well over twenty years. The resolution was passed unanimously and signed by Jack Folger, speaker of the legislature. It will now be forwarded to the Athletic council for consideration.

Devore Gets Office

The first business brought before the meeting last night was the election of a Sergeant-at-Arms, an office set up by a bill passed during the summer. After the duties of the office were explained during discussion by Ernest House, a vote was taken and Jack DeVore was elected to the new position.

Expected to be a hot issue, the vote on Tom Eller's list of student government appointments was referred to the Rules committee for presentation to the Legislature at next weeks' session.

Med Applicants May Take Test

The first 100 applicants for the professional aptitude test will be registered by the medical school in room 103 Peabody.

The registration period has officially closed; but because the information concerning the examination was not generally known, the testing service has ordered 100 extra tests.

Registration will take place from 8:30 to 4:30 Monday through Friday of each week.

Those persons interested in entering the 1948 freshman class in any medical school must present results of the aptitude test upon application for admission.

The aptitude tests will be given October 25, 1947 and February 2, 1948. It possible, all eligible students should plan to take the examinations on October 25 and should, therefore, register immediately.

LEGION PLANS LADIES NIGHT

The American Legion Auxiliary will meet on Friday next at 8 o'clock with the Legionnaires at the Hut on Rosemary Street. Wives, sisters, and any other women eligible for membership are especially invited to attend for a social gathering and to join if they wish.

Board of Trustees Meeting Names New Department Heads

Three new department heads for the University were named by the Board of Trustees this week, following the recommendation of President Frank P. Graham and Chancellor Robert B. House.

They are Dr. Arnold S. Nash, who heads a new Department of Religion; Dr. Harry Davis Bruner, formerly of the University of Pennsylvania, now head of the Department of Pharmacology in the School of Medicine, and Dr. Donald P. Costello, who succeeds as head of the Department of Zoology Dr. Robert E. Coker, who at the time of his retirement from this post this year was made Director of the University's new Institute for Fisheries Research and Development. Dr. Coker will continue to teach.

Dr. Nash, who comes from Chicago where he has been associate professor in church history in McCormick Theological seminary, is a native of England. He received his B. S. and several graduate degrees from the University of Liverpool and the University of London and was awarded an honorary Doctor of Divinity degree by Coe college last year.

Came To U. S.

He came to the United States in 1939 to teach at the Berkeley Divinity school, New Haven, Conn., and subsequently lectured at Yale Divinity school, the Pacific School of Religion, the Church Divinity School of the Pacific, Berkeley, California, Union Theological seminary, New York, and the University of Toronto.

Dr. Nash is author of the widely discussed book, "The University and the Modern World," published in 1943.

Dr. Bruner, in addition to his duties as head of the Department of Pharmacology, will also serve as professor of pharmacology. An assistant professor of pharmacology at the University of Pennsylvania since 1946, he served as assistant professor at the University of North Carolina here on a temporary assignment from 1939 to 1942. He received his S.B., M.D., and S.M. degrees from the University of Louisville School of Medicine in 1932, 1934, and 1936, respectively.

Taught in S. C.

From 1936 to 1938 he was an instructor in the Department of Physiology, Medical college of South Carolina, and the following year was a Fellow in the Department of Physiology at Chicago.

Dr. Costello, who came to the University as assistant professor of zoology in 1935, is a native of Detroit, Mich. He received his A. B. degree from the College of the City of Detroit (now Wayne university) in 1930 and his Ph.D. in 1934 at Pennsylvania. In 1941-42 he was a Rockefeller Fellow at Stanford university and in various summer terms he has instructed at the Marine Biological laboratory, Woods Hole, Mass., of which he is now a trustee. In 1943 he was elevated to a full professorship at the University. He is a member of the Society of Sigma Xi, being president of the North Carolina chapter in 1943-44, the American Society of Zoologists, the American Society of Naturalists, the Western Society of Naturalists, and a member of the editorial board of The Biological Bulletin.

Council for Religion in Life Announces Tentative Plans for Forthcoming Year

Plans which include a campus-wide European relief drive, a Sunday evening hour of religious talks, and a proposed address by Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy are now in tentative stages, Russell G. Baldwin, chairman of the Council for Religion in Life, announced today.

Although the Council, composed of representatives from all student organizations on campus—has not officially met, Chairman Baldwin said that the program for CRIL's coming year has been unofficially discussed.

At a meeting to be called early next week Baldwin will present to the group a proposal for a campus European relief drive. "Claude C. Shotts, new director of the YMCA who has recently returned from Germany," said Baldwin, "will be present to give a first-hand report on conditions in Europe."

Evening Hour

As soon as arrangements can be completed, CRIL will present a Sunday evening hour each week in Graham Memorial which will consist of singing by choirs, quartets and soloists. Informal talks on religion will be conducted at each meeting.

Outstanding speakers will be invited to the campus again this year, but no complete list of speakers can be announced at this time. "Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy has expressed a desire to come here," said Baldwin, "if his court schedule will permit."

To facilitate a more widespread campus response to the activities of the Council, Chairman Baldwin requests any organization which does not have a CRIL representatvie to appoint one, or to cause one to be elected, as soon as possible.

VA Investigates Site For Hospital

Four representatives of the Veterans' administration met Wednesday with University and local officials to consider potential sites for the 1,000-bed neuropsychiatric hospital authorized by the government for location in North Carolina.

The VA representatives were James E. McMurrer of the real estate service, James P. Haynes, engineering service, Temple Thomason of the department of medicine and surgery, all from Washington, and John C. Donahue, attorney from the Richmond office.

They met at a luncheon to discuss plans with Mayor R. W. Madry of Chapel Hill, Clyde Hornaday, Dr. James C. Andrews, of the medical school, J. S. Bennett, supervisor of operation, and J. Maryon Saunders, alumni secretary, Howard Bennett, president of the Merchants' association, and Clyde Hornaday.

After lunch they joined president F. P. Graham, Chancellor Robert B. House, and other University officials before continuing the inspection.

Today the VA party will continue westward to Burlington in their coverage of the state. The number of sites is limited since the project will require approximately 250 acres.

Yugoslavian, British Ministers To Talk Syrian Diplomat Voices Arabian Plea

Voicing a strong plea for the Arab states against the Zionist movement, George Tomeh, Syrian Charge d'Affaires in Washington, declared here tonight that "we (Syria, Egypt, Iraq, Lebanon, Saudi Arabia, Transjordan and Yemen) have one binding, lawful and sacred duty: to defend ourselves against all agression. We ask for no favors and we desire nothing that is not ours by birthright.

"The Zionists are conducting an aggressive campaign, in fact, an invasion. For no matter with what apparel it is clothed, religious, humanitarian, or political, the Zionist movement for the posession of Palestine is nothing but an invasion that aims by force at securing and dominating a country that is not theirs by birthright."

Main Speaker

Mr. Tomeh was the principal speaker tonight at the first International Collegiate Conference being sponsored this week at the University by the Collegiate Council for United Nations. Student delegates from Duke University, Davidson, Lenoir-Rhyne college, Flora McDonald, Montreat college and the Woman's college of the University are in attendance.

Presiding over the sessions is Lincoln Kan, University senior, Army veteran and State director of CCUN.

In an afternoon dress-rehearsal for the evening speech, Tomeh cross-fired ideas with U.S. State Department planner Harding Bancroft and New Zealand Counsellor John Reid at an open forum. The informal US-UK block sharply backed the right of the United Nations to formulate any final settlement of the Palestine problem, although Reid admitted that he was not yet certain that the proposed partition was the workable answer.

Answers Query

Rising to answer a question from one of the many UNC students who attended the session, Bancroft insisted "too little attention has been paid to the humanitarian aspects of the controversy. Certainly we must think of the plight of the 150,000 displaced Jews now in Germany seeking settlement in Palestine."

Forum Speaker Goro Deebe of the Carolina faculty repeatedly returned to the factor of "simple majority" to support his demands that the numerically greater Arabs be fully consulted in the solution of the trouble in the Holy Land.

Mr. Tomeh asserted in the evening address that the "raison d'etre" of the United Nations is to assist self-defense against ag-

Two Men Stuaents Call Protest Meet Over Long Skirts

Two men students have called a meeting for this afternoon of students interested in staging a protest against the current invasion by long skirts.

Emile Saleeby and Bill Stubbs, announcing organization of a "Knickerbocker club," request that interested students join them in Gerrard hall at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Declining to comment on significance of the new club's title, Co-Founder Saleeby explained that his group was determined to take "drastic action against long skirts."

SIR JOHN MAGOWAN

John Reid Assails Veto Power in UN As Undemocratic

"The Security Council veto is vicious, undemocratic, and impractical," pointed out the Honorable John F. Reid, Counsellor of the New Zealand legislation in Washington, at the Palestine forum in Gerrard Hall, yesterday from 2 to 4 o'clock.

However, he warned that removing the veto power did not mean that conflicts would disappear, and that an improvement must be made and made soon. This was confirmed by Harding F. Bancroft, associate chief, division of International Security Affairs, of the State department. Mr. Bancroft also pointed out that the UN machinery was not being used to its fullest advantage; that if it were, the veto power might not have to be changed.

Food Needed

Dr. Sidney B. Smith, visiting professor from Cambridge university in England, mentioned that food is needed in Europe to insure democracy, and that hungry people cannot concern themselves with international politics.

A possible substitute for the veto was suggested by Mr. Reid —that a regional veto, based on wealth, population and other such factors be worked out.

The Palestine question was brought into the limelight, as Goro Deeb, professor here, asked that the Arabs be considered as a nation, and as natives of Palestine, who lived there before the Jews and who with the Jews are no longer a nation. The Arabs were willing to share in a solution of the Palestine problem, but not at the expense of the existence of their land.

George Tomeh, Syrian Charge D'Affairs, mentioned that the humanitarian problem had to be taken into consideration, and that the solution must be just to both the Arabs and the Jews.

Lincoln Kan, who opened the forum brought it to a close, after the last questions had been asked from the floor, and presented to the speakers by the moderator, Randy Mac Leod, who also introduced the speakers.

HOUSING READY

All men students who were enrolled in the University during either six weeks of the past summer term may now be housed in the quonset huts. Interested persons should contact the housing office, 207 South building, this Saturday.

By Bob Rolnik

Eastern Europe's communism is expected to clash with western democracy tonight when Yugoslavian Ambassador Sava N. Kasanovic speaks from the Hill hall platform at 8 o'clock along with Sir John Magowan, British minister to the U.S.

Climaxing the three-day United Nations salute, this evening's session will feature the top representative in this country from Marshall Tito's regime.

Moscow radio recently lambasted the University's Press for publishing R. H. Markham's new book, "Tito's Imperial Communism."

"One can only express sympathy to the students of the University of North Carolina," the Russian radio commentator said, "that such slanders are being forced into their heads."

Lincoln Kan, chairman of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations, stated yesterday that he will try to arrange a meeting between Kasanovic and Miss Porter Cowles, director of the University Press.

Schedule of today's events is as follows:

9-12 a.m.—The foreign diplomats will visit political science classes.

2-3 p.m.—Plenary session in Gerrard hall open to everyone.

6-8 p.m.—Banquet in honor of Yugoslav ambassador and British minister at Carolina Inn. Dress will be semi-formal and all students are welcome.

8 p.m.—Conference in Hill hall addressed by Kasanovic and Magowan. Audience questions. All students and faculty are cordially invited to attend this last CCUN session.

8:30 p.m.—UN dance in Women's gym attended by the diplomats and their wives. Johnny Satterfield's band will play and the dance will be free to everyone. Dress will be semi-formal or informal.

"The CCUN hopes that this United Nations salute has made students more conscious of world affairs in these critical months when peace hangs in the balance," stated Lincoln Kan.

VA Changes Rule On Wage Reports

Veterans studying full time in colleges and universities under the GI Bill will no longer have to make periodic reports of earnings, the VA announced. Instead, an estimate will be made at the time of registration, for the veteran's earnings for the full period of time he plans to be in school.

The amount of subsistence allowances will be based on these estimates.

Will Seek Solution To Indonesian Crisis

By Bill Sexton

Dr. Frank Graham is scheduled to be sworn in as United States delegate on the U. N. Indonesian Commission here this morning.

Appointed Wednesday by President Truman to be one of three statesmen designated to investigate and if possible resolve the Netherlands—Indonesian Republic crisis in the Pacific, Dr. Graham will receive his oath of office from J. A. Warren, University treasurer and notary public.

President Truman's commission to Dr. Graham, forwarded from the White House Wednesday evening, was due to arrive in Chapel Hill late last night.

Tentative plans call for Dr. Graham's departure from Chapel Hill Sunday. He will confer with State Department officials in Washington, then proceed to United Nations headquarters at Lake Success, N. Y.

His first duties with the U. N will be meetings with representatives of Belgium and Australia, other members of the Indonesian commission, on arranging assembly of the commission members. Paul van Zeeland, former Belgian foreign minister, is now in Brussels, and Richard Clarence Kirby, member of the Australian Commonwealth Arbitration court, is at Canberra.

DR. FRANK GRAHAM

Joseph W. Scott, Indonesian expert of the U. S. Department of State, indicated that the commission probably would assemble for its first meeting outside the U. S., either enroute to Indonesia or actually on the troubled island.

Fraternity, Sorority Photograph Dates Announced Yesterday by Yackety-Yack

The dates for this year's fraternity and sorority photographs were announced yesterday in a letter sent to each of the local chapters by Yackety-Yack Board of editors, Gene Johnstone, Harold Bursley, and Rush Evans. Because of the poor results obtained through last year's practice of taking these pictures in the various houses, they are to be taken in Graham Memorial this year.

Although individual photographs are to be used again this year, each fraternity has been asked to come down in a body on the assigned day. No man or woman whose class picture has already been taken need come, however, as these will also be used in the fraternity section.

As an additional reminder, posters advising the date of that fraternity's appointment will appear on each house's main bulletin board. The first day, October 6, has been set aside for the five sororities, A. D. Pi, Alpha Gam, Chi O., Tri Delt, and Pi Phi.

The balance of the schedule is as follows: Tuesday, October 7, Phi Delt, Phi Gam, Phi Kap, and PiKA; Wednesday, October 8, Pi Lamb, SAE, Sigma Chi, and Sigma Nu; Thursday, October 9, Pi Epsilon Phi, ZBT, Zeta, SPE, Chi Phi, and Chi Psi; Friday, October 10, DKE, Delta Psi, Delta Sig, Kappa Sig, and KA.

Phi Assembly Elects John Giles President

The Philanthropic assembly, modeled after the North Carolina General Assembly and one of the oldest debating societies in the nation, opened its 152nd session this week with the election of John Giles of Glen Alpine as its new presiding officer. Speaker-elect Giles is an accounting major in the School of Commerce.

Chester Zum Brunnen of Salisbury was chosen speaker protem. New officers-elect are Charles Cowell, Washington, treasurer; Peter Gerns, Canton, O., parliamentarian; Page Harris, Durham, sergeant-at-arms; James McNider, Hertford, critic, Margaret Goodman, Concord, clerk, and James Hill, Germantown, chaplain.

Inaugural ceremonies will be held in the historic Phi Hall on October 7 at 8:30 p.m. when State Treasurer Charles M. Johnson is scheduled to make the principal address.

Square Dance to Feature Mountain Music In Preparation for Sadie Hawkins Day

In preparation for Sadie Hawkins day, now scarcely a month away, mountain music will be the keynote in the Y court tomorrow evening as the first square dance of the season gets under way, sponsored by Graham Memorial. Recorded music will be furnished for the affair, announced Nancy Tucker, student union recreation director, and round dance numbers will be interspersed with the square dance records.

Leading off and calling the dances will be P. A. Lee, Betty Dosson, and Taylor Dodson, all of the intramural department. In case of inclement weather the hop will be held in the Rendezvous on the ground floor of Graham Memorial.

"Previous knowledge of square dancing is not necessary," said director Tucker. "Instruction will be provided at the beginning of the dance and everyone is invited to join in the fun."

It is expected to hold the dances at regular intervals, and string bands will be on hand for future occasions.

SP Special Session Held Tonight

The Student Party will meet in a special session today at 3 o'clock in Roland Parker Lounge No. 1 of Graham Memorial, Charlie Long, SP chairman, announced yesterday.

Long stated that the changing political picture necessitated the special meeting and that several important matters must be considered immediately.

All persons not associated with other parties are invited to attend this session of the party and participate actively in the work of the Student Party on the campus.

Frankie and Nellie

Once upon a time there was a big boss man named Unie Carol. He was a big and powerful man, kind, amiable, and famous for his liberal views. Now the symbol of all of his views was Frankie, an enormous tar baby. Almost every time that Unie Carol's name was mentioned so was Frankie's. Frankie was a symbol. He stood for the rights of all men, a liberal education and the good things in life. Frankie, also, was like a mascot. He was carted around from place to place—to conventions, and places of activity. On several occasions he was carted even to the White House to inspire the President. There was a certain quality about Frankie that inspired people to get things done. When Frankie was around, people had a tendency to do some deep thinking. They thought of things, some more worthwhile than others.

But Frankie, like all people who create thinking and tend to make people realize their mistakes, had some enemies. It was unfortunate, but, nevertheless, true that some people hated the things Frankie symbolized, and despised his guts.

One day Frankie was placed in his usual place of inspiration to Unie Carol when a disturbance took place. There was nothing extraordinary about the disturbance. A dame named Nellie, who was hunting for a battle, and she thought that a little argument with Frankie would make good conversation around the bridge table. So she approached the tar baby, who symbolized all of the high and liberal ideals of Unie Carol, and began. "I hear your boss Unie Carol wears red flannel underwear on cold days. Why a man such as he should wear only silk union suits. Do you deny this?"

Naturally Nellie, who was hunting for a battle to relate to her bridge club that met each week, expected Frankie to stand up for his boss, and immediately enter into a heated discussion. Nellie was disappointed. Frankie kept his lips tightly closed and ignored the question.

Nellie became furious. Never before had her questions been treated with such unconcern. She gave the tar baby a hearty slap on the face. It didn't even faze Frankie, but surprisingly enough her hand stuck to his face, and try as hard as she could she was unable to pull herself away.

Nellie, who was seeking a battle, realized that she would be the laughing stock of her bridge club if they found out she had not produced some choice gossip and had, instead, come to play bridge with tar-stained hands. So she asked her question again. Not even a sign of a tremble was evident on Frankie's lips. So Nellie swung again. This time her other hand was merged firmly in the tar.

Nellie's anger sprung from its bounds, and she kicked first with one foot and then the other. But before each kick she screamed the same words, "Does he wear red flannel underwear when it gets cold?" Not a word, Frankie uttered. With one last frantic effort she butted the tar baby in the stomach with the only free movement left in her body. She received no answer.

With the night's cold air the tar baby began to become brittle and the weight of her body was enough to break the tension of the tar. She fell back to the ground to wander unhumiliated back to her weekly bridge games, but clothed with gloves on her tar-stained hands and a dread of sitting down for fear that the tar would prevent her from ever rising again.

Haste Makes Blunders Too

Haste often makes more than waste! In yesterday's editorial columns we made a terrific blunder in regard to North Carolina's Negro Law School. The last paragraph, containing the blunder, was added after the editorial had been completed and had "jelled" overnight in our desk. Upon rereading the edit the next afternoon, we were dissatisfied with the message, as we quite often are.

The final paragraph was added in a great haste—and in our haste came the great blunder. After pondering over the situation at the University of Texas Law School our mind was saturated with the thought of LAW SCHOOL and LAWYER. What should have been inserted in the place of them was MEDICAL SCHOOL and DOCTORS, in the final paragraph.

If you read the last paragraph of the editorial with these corrections, it has a very pertinent meaning.

Quiet, But a Good Job

Gerrard hall was relatively quiet last night for a Student Legislature meeting. In fact, the pep rally at Memorial hall next door could be heard far above Carolina's law-makers, who when in good form can usually drown out Myrt Sherard and his crew in a walk-away.

But even though the meeting was brief and toned down, the Legislature passed two very commendable bills. A special election for the editor of the Yackety-Yack was set for October 14, a week from next Tuesday. This issue has been strong in the minds of many students in and out of politics and publications since Bill Moffitt, who was elected editor last Spring on a triple endorsement, resigned. So far, two nominations have already been made for the position. Art Melton will be running on the Student party ticket, and Ruth Evans, Gene Johnstone, and Harold Bursley have been nominated as a board of editors by the University and Campus parties.

Number two bill passing the assembly was a resolution, which was passed unanimously and sent on to the Athletic council, to reinstate boxing at Carolina. Obviously the legislators agreed with last year's boxing team and many other students who signed the reinstatement petition that there is no reason for the sport to be taken from the University's athletic agenda. One of the biggest arguments against the ring sport was the recommendation of an infirmary official that it be crossed off the list because of physical danger to the participants. But, as was argued in Gerrard hall last night, new protective equipment has been instituted to guard against any bodily injuries to the boxers and, besides, as was also pointed out, football is obviously and openly a more dangerous game than a ring match.

Tag Montague, the "Happy Legislator," introduced the bill, sharing with Charlie Long, speaker pro tempore, the honor of being one of the few persons who raised their voices at all during last night's session .

All Rooms Should Be Locked

Saturday's football classic with Georgia created many undesirable disturbances in Chapel Hill—at least one of which is just being made public. Students are now reporting missing articles which disappeared from their rooms while they attended the game. Ray Jefferies, manager of the Quonset hut area and the lower quadrangle, advises all students to lock their rooms when they leave them, even if they are only going to take a shower.

The authorities believe that the theft was done by outsiders who just operate during the weekends. Evidence shows that articles and money were stolen from more than one dormitory, and the theft occurred only on the weekend when people were lax in locking their rooms when the dormitories were vacant.

You should take every precaution to see that the door to your room is locked even though you are going to be gone only for a short period.

Go Home -- Or...

Are You Gifted?

By Bob Sain

Out in California there is a big, noisy man named Robert Gordon Sproul and he is president of the nation's largest university: California. Aside from getting his grinning face on the cover of this week's Time magazine, Mr. Sproul is notable for another reason. He would like to get rid of half of the students at the University of California in Berkley. That, you will agree, is a notable admission for a university president to make.

In Time this week Mr. Sproul was quoted this way (he was addressing new students: ". . . there are 10,000 too many of you. You would all be happier if somehow the 10,000 could go elsewhere."

Mr. Sproul's opinion about enrollment is not an unusual one; it is gaining favor all over the country. It is gaining favor, we might add, with many of the students themselves. (They, of course, think it's 10,000 other people who should go away. Not them.)

Now it is well known that it is crowded here in Chapel Hill. Anyone who has stood in line at Lenoir, anyone who has lived in an uncomfortably cluttered room, anyone who has wondered whether he couldn't learn more if there were fewer students in class will grant that it is too crowded here in Chapel Hill. But who will admit that he shouldn't be here? Not this writer. Not you. Certainly not the vets, who, under the GI Bill, do most toward making the university uncomfortably crowded.

Of course it is worse in California. There is one class in which there are 947 students. But that doesn't make you feel any better about the situation here. It doen't make standing in line for quite a long time (for registration, books) any the more entertaining.

All this talk about too many people in school will be completely pointless if you hold with the group that says anyone is entitled to attend a university if he can afford it. It will be pointless, also, if you believe that every boy and girl in the country should be able to flaunt a sheepskin. But that is not what Mr. Sproul and numerous other educators think. They think that there are plenty of young men and women who are not (in Sproul's words) "properly qualified by native ability, or previous training, or even social attitude" to attend a university.

There are, apparently, a goodly number of young men and women attending colleges and universities because there is nothing else to do or because it is supposed to be a comfortable, carefree life. That is all well and good, as the saying goes, if some of the students who want to accomplish something aren't hindered.

It is somewhat like a California chemistry professor says in the Time story: "The big institution must be content to be a place of opportunity rather than a place of compulsion. It is no place for a student of unformed character and uncertain purpose. But the presence of a mob need not seriously interfere with the education of the gifted."

It is pretty hard to determine if there are any gifted students around here. There are, of course, those gifted with tremendous beer capacities and others who have a talent for shooting the bull, but as for discovering gifted students it is best to leave that up to gifted administrators.

But it stands to reason, according to the law of averages, that there are some gifted students here, gifted, that is, with the desire to learn—not to mention the ability. Since many of us who don't deserve the tag gifted are uncomfortable, the gifted must also be uncomfortable. Your psych prof will tell you that that doesn't make it any easier for them to learn.

So it all boils down to this: there are a lot of people here who shouldn't be here. There are a lot of people taking up dorm space and dining room space and classroom space that shouldn't be taking up that space. These people, perhaps, should be in a vocational school or out making a decent living.

If you are taking this personally and feel insulted, don't. Because this writer is wondering just what the hell he is doing here himself.

Same Old Line

Lanier's Lottery Doesn't Exist

By Chuck Hauser

Gripes used to be directed toward Mr. Ed Lanier constantly, but compliments are flying his way thick and fast these days.

No longer bitterly branded "Lanier's Lottery," his pre-registration system installed last year and just recently smoothed out has proven itself efficient.

For example, any man who pre-registered last spring to take courses this fall walked into Woollen Gymnasium's east door, was handed a couple forms to fill out (which took possibly five minutes), picked up an envelope containing his class tickets, received an athletic pass book, and a minute or two later was free. Veterans were necessarily detained 10 or 15 minutes in separate processing, but non-veterans breezed through in a matter of five or 10 minutes total time.

The blame for the only gripe directed against registration—and it was the usual big one—should not be shouldered by Ed Lainer. It was the fault of the General college.

Freshmen and other new students in General college had the usual long, slow-moving lines to stand in, taking them as much as five and six hours or more to complete their registration.

The fault, we repeat, rests upon the General college faculty. According to Dean Spruill's office, 15 people were working in their department in Woollen gymnasium every day, including Spruill, the seven advisors, and approximately seven other people in the department. This number was obviously not nearly enough to cope with the hundreds upon hundreds of students registering every day.

Provisions should be made for each advisor to have as many as four or five assistants, each working on student's schedules—after all, its relatively simple to make out the program of a person in General college since he has a certain number of specified courses which he must complete—and if a difficult or confusing situation arose, the student could have been referred directly to the advisor for aid.

The General college would be wise to look to the future.

GM GRIND:

—Lots of new recreational equipment coming into GM every day now. Recreation director Nancy Tucker (sociology major, 315 Alderman, telephone 3071) said yesterday they are hoping to get the old Graham Memorial grill kitchen cleaned out soon, and set up a new game room there, with pool tables, shuffleboard, etc. In the meantime, there are two new ping pong tables set up in and around the building, one in the hall on the ground floor, and the other outside at the north end of the building.

And if there's anything—any game, activity, or what-have-you—that you'd like for the Student Union to have, drop down and tell the office staff about it. They'll do their best to get it—After all, it's your building! New game equipment which will be available Monday includes six chess and checker boards, carom tables, chinese checkers, marble solitaire, and the renowned monopoly game. Arts and crafts material is now on order.

Parting note to wise students: It's none too early to make travel reservations for Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays. (Also football weekends).—Just tell Bob Watson, the GM travel agent about it, and forget your worries—Hours: 2-5 daily, in the Student Union office on the Main floor.

Movie Review

How Green Was My Valley

It is often disconcerting in a motion picture to notice that when there is a family involved that few, if any, of the actors representing members of that family have any family resemblance. Sometimes the discrepancy is startling. I can think of the first Deanna Durbin film (A Thousand Men And A Girl) where the family was as follows: Adolphe Menjou, father; Mischa Auer, son; Deanna Durbin, daughter. My only realistic conclusion toward explaining such an arrangement of dissimilarities is that the story of what happened to bring about such family in-breeding would be a story well worth telling, of not believing. A good example of thoughtful casting in regard to resemblances is Life With Father. I mention this in regard to How Green Was My Valley because it is one of the apparent weaknesses of its casting. In a non-realistic play, perhaps, I wouldn't balk at such a matter, but where realism of detail is prized, as it is in this picture, it is worth consideration. There are at least three members of the Abbey Theatre (formerly of Ireland) in the show: Barry Fitzgerald, Maureen O'Hara, and Sara Allgood (and I'm not sure of Patric Knowles). Needless to say, it is not quaintness alone that rubs your ears when you hear Welsh folk speaking with an unmistakable Irish lilt.

The picture itself, which was a winner of five academy awards ..an impressive but dubious honor, is concerned with the memoirs of a young Welsh lad in his early years in his home coal mining community, I should guess, just before the turn of the century. There is plenty of room for widespread sentimentality in such a story and there is much of it, but there are some fine effective scenes and some excellent choral singing. When our hero (Roddy MacDowell--another Welshman) attend a neighboring school for the first time, the strangeness, intense aloneness, and accompanying hostility is well protrayed up to the time the schoolmaster bares his fangs. What I mean is: as long as the camera works independent of dialogue, the story is telling and moving.

Some of the simplest things in the picture are the best (and I mean to give full praise to John Ford for getting the most out of a poor script). When Angharad (Maureen O'Hara) marries the local richboy against her heart's best instinct, the fact of her anxiety and pain is photographed subtly and beautifully (perhaps suggested accidentally) by the wild flutterings of her windblown marriage headress and her total disinterest in her appearance. Following this immediately is another thoughtful piece of camera-work where in the lower right foreground a group of gossipy wedding watchers are chatting busily about nothing and small in the midbackground under a frame of overhanging leaves the silhouette of the local minister (Walter Pidgeon) who is in love with Angharad paces thoughtfully and sadly.

There is a lot of affable gentle humor tossed around to good advantage especially by the father, Mr. Morgan, (Donald Crisp) and his wife (Sarah Allgood). The scenes with these two are all memorable for exemplary performances. The sister-in-law, Braun, (Anna Lee) is gifted with a perfect smile for close-ups ond a very agreeable face. The brothers, (headed by John Loder—with a rare Welsh accent) are well done. Patric Knowles is delighted as the effervescent fighting coach as is Barry Fitzgerald as his drinking partner.

The only undistinguished performance is that of Walter Pidgeon who seems to be disturbed by the lines allocated to him and considering their naive simplicity, it is understandable, but more than that he is surely in the wrong part and picture.

I applaud the oldtimers for displaying their versatility and beauty of execution, particularly Sara Allgood, (with her wonderful voice of poetry) and Donald Crisp, stubborn and proud. It is a pity indeed that Hollywood cannot discover the classics for dramatic entertainment, if only to give these talents a worthy receptacle.

The general simplicity of interiors helps stress the characters and the fresh landscapes invigorate with sunlit tenderness the mood of the picture. A large number of the shots are taken from below, accentuating the nature of a community based on mining. Only when the scenes take place above the mining world does the camera look down from overhead. There is very little static camera work, the camera varying from close-up and angle to the scarcely moving panorama-type of shot.

Although How Green Was My Valley displays very little depth of character or meaning, it does have rich surface play and distinctive camerawork. The varity of pace, mood, and view retain the audience's attention when combined with the near-perfect acting of the Abbey Theatre representatives plus Donald Crisp. A tighter story, perhaps, and certainly a better play of words and a more penetrating script would have added tremendously to lasting respect for this production.

Carry 5 and Drag 10

This'll be a column of chatter. Strictly chatter. It may mention names or it may not; I don't know what I'll write so how can I tell you? This is sure: you might find it a little spicy like sage, or in your hair like Sandy. That's your personal look-out however. Here we go!

With summer past and suntans fading it looks like a long time between Georgia and Duke, but we're off to a terrific start. Still think it should be winter, spring, summer, and football.

Number one topic here 'bouts is class. Some carry 20 hours, but most carry 5 and drag 10 like me. Helen Crockford was moaning t'other day 'cause Music Appreciation ain't all it's cripped up to be. Ah yes, the best laid courses of coeds and men

The Wise Emergency Fund is a friend in need. My roommates will now eat till Nov. 1. It's not hard to float a loan, just go up to South armed with your great grandpappy's middle name and blood type. Bon Voyage!

Been having nightmares lately? Sadie Hawkins Day is stalking ever nearer. Ugh!!!

The Bookateria sure proved itself this fall. No strain, little pain. Congrats to all helping develop this really efficient system. It's sure a big step in the right direction.

A play like Saint Joan to be given at Playmaker's is predestined to have a good cast.

Most fascinating sight of the week: scaffolding on the spire of the Methodist Church.

Which brings up the great face lifting Cripple Hill has gotten. Hardly recognized my old haunts under all the new paint. At my afternoon lab in the Carolina I missed a laugh from Joan Caulfield and realized the inside had been completely redressed. Not too bad. The Village is open again after all these years too. It's sure better than the Pick, but with the mob in town these days why not try all three? Personally, I'd like all foreign films at one. 'Course I don't understand half of them, but I know it's good from the laugh the guy in back lets out.

Do you feel like a knight in tarnished armor crossing the moat into Lenoir?

The album Manhattan Tower by Gordon Jenkins can recapture all you remember of your last terrific trip to N. Y. Wonderful village BAR none.

Seems good to see such crowds in Graham Memorial these days. That's as it should be. Which brings a thought. I shall go down and dig up a game of Combat Bridge.

GASTON STUDENTS

The Gastonia-Carolina club will hold a meeting for all Gaston County students Monday, October 6 at 7:30 in the Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial.

Hillel Foundation To Hold Services

Paul L. Furgatch, president of Hillel foundation on the campus announced that Friday evening services will be held in Roland Parker lounge at 7:30, second floor Graham Memorial.

The Hillel foundation, a national organization devoted to religious, cultural, and social activities among Jewish students in American universities, has its Chapel Hill office on the second floor of the Y. M. C. A. building.

Until the arrival of a new director the office will be open from 11 to 1 each day. The adjoining lounge with phonograph and radio will be kept open until further notice.

FACULTY RETIREMENT

Nathan H. Yelton, secretary of the Teachers and State Employees Retirement System, will speak at 4 o'clock in 103 Bingham hall this afternoon, explaining the retirement system to faculty members and University employees. The discussion will be informal, and anyone, especially, new faculty members of the various departments, is invited to attend.

The Sporting Picture

By Billy Carmichael

The Sporting Picture has as its guest columnist today, Roy Edwards of the Daily Texan, the University of Texas newspaper, who knows all, sees all and prepares to tell all about the Tar Heels' Saturday opponent. Mr. Edwards. . . .

Texas Calling

AUSTIN, Tex.—The Eyes of Texas will be on the 300-foot Tower of the Main Building Saturday night, looking for the soft glow of the Orange Lights which will signify another Longhorn victory—this time, over the North Carolina Tar Heels. The tradition of the Orange Lights, turned on for each major victory by Texas athletic teams, is one of the first things freshmen learn on the Forty Acres.

No one is quite sure when or why the Orange Lights were first turned on, but it is generally agreed that they first burned Thanksgiving Day, 1938, after the Longhorns beat their arch rivals, the Texas Aggies, to preserve another hallowed Texas tradition—no Aggie football team wins in Memorial Stadium. The victory over the Aggies, led by all-Americans Dick Todd and Joe Routt, was the only game the Steers won that year, and it was a fitting time to start a great tradition.

The Orange Lights custom grew, and now the lights are turned on after each Texas victory in football and basketball, and after teams in other sports win Conference or national championships. Nothing is quite so satisfying to Texas fans as the spine-tingling beauty of the Orange Lights during the football season, and nothing seems quite so pitiless as the stark coldness of white light on the Tower after the Longhorns have lost.

The leading prospect to short circuit the Orange Lights this year, as far as the Texas coaching staff is concerned, is Carl Snavely's power-packed North Carolina team. Charlie Justice, Walt Pupa, and other talent on the Tar Heel squad, are highly respected in Texas, and, if Blair Cherry's Model T gets wrecked, Saturday may well be the day. However, the Steers will probably be at their peak for the North Carolina game. Cherry started drilling for the Tar Heels when he stepped up to the head coaching position in spring training, and the slogan of fall training has been "get ready for the Tar Heels."

Model T Touchdowns

Running from the T formation for the first time, the Steers did not show too much against Texas Tech and Oregon, but they did not have to. They struck for three quick touchdowns in the first quarter and coasted to a 33-0 victory over Tech. Last week, Layne's passes clicked for three touchdowns early in the second quarter, and the Longhorns breezed by Oregon, 38-13. But the North Carolina game will call for sixty minutes of all-out effort, and the Longhorns hope to be prepared.

The Longhorn T attack is directed by top-passer Bobby Layne, an all-Conference tailback from the single wing formation for the past three years. Layne has surprised even the most optimistic fans with his great performance this year, and has been even better from the T than from the single wing. Texas's prime choice for all American honors this year, Layne has completed 11 of 17 pass attempts for 217 yards and 3 touchdowns in the two Texas games this year. He scored one touchdown against Tech on a quarterback sneak and has kicked six extra points.

Longhorn fans expect good passing from Layne, but they have been pleasantly surprised by the ground game Cherry has developed this year. A host of speedy backs, including two Southwest Conference 100-yard dash champions, and several hard-charging line-plungers, give Texas its best running attack in years.

The real find of the year is little Byron (Puppy) Gillory. A 146-pound junior, Gillory has two varsity letters, but he was never particularly outstanding until this fall. He did not figure in Cherry's plans in spring training, but Gillory took to the T like it was tailor-made for him, and he is already being compared to Jack Crain, probably the greatest running back in Texas history. Gillory's speed and elusiveness have carried him 167 yards in 10 tries from scrimmage, tops for Longhorn backs, and his four touchdowns lead Texas scorers. As good as he is, Gillory has to share the left halfback post with another speedy runner, Billy Pyle, a 165-pound sophomore. Pyle, not quite so deceptive as Gillory, runs harder and, for all his lack of size, is one of the best defensive backs on the squad.

Unique Feature

The Texas team has one unique feature—three tackles are in the line-up on defense. Dick Harris drops back behind the line, and George Petrovich comes in at left tackle. Harris, a 212-pound junior, was an all-Conference center in 1945 and 1946, but Cherry moved him to tackle this year to strengthen a position which has caused the downfall of several otherwise good Longhorn teams. Harris has no equal as a line-backer in the Southwest Conference, and he is so consistently good that Texas fans take his outstanding performances as a matter of course.

When the Longhorns kick off, Charlie Tatom, a converted end, checks in at the other tackle post. At 206 pounds, Tatom is tagged "the fastest tackle in the country." He was a member of the Texas track team's undefeated 440-yard sprint relay team in the spring, and he is the first man down the field on kickoffs.

To stop the Tar Heels, Texas will field a line that averages 205 pounds, and a fast, hard-charging backfield that averages 183.5 pounds.

And, when darkness falls, Texas supporters will look up at the Tower, hoping to see it bathed in Orange light.

Quonset Huts Elect Athletic Managers

Three Intramural managers were elected at a Y.M.C.A. sponsored meeting yesterday to represent the quonset hut area in tag football. Elected were "Red" Graham, Jim Meade, and Bob Tucker. Any boy living in the quonset hut area that is interested in playing tag football in the mural league should contact one of the three newly elected managers as soon as possible.

Yesterday, many teams took advantage of the fact that all intramural fields were open for team practice after four o'clock. Several groups were on the field working out plays and perfecting defenses gram got under way with sev-

Meanwhile, the tennis proeral matches being played on the clay courts late yesterday afternoon. No matches are scheduled for today or over the week end. Next scheduled matches will be played on Monday, October 6. Watch the Daily Tar Heel for the best of all matches.

All men living in town who are interested in playing intramural tag football, which starts next week, are requested to leave their names at the Information desk of the YMCA before Monday.

There will be a meeting of all the town men interested in participating, Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the "Y."

Carolina Booters Working for Opener

Intra-squad scrimmages were the order of the day for Coach Marvin Allen's soccer squad yesterday afternoon as he continued his efforts to whip the booters into shape for their opening tilt with Loyola University on October 17 in Baltimore.

The squad now numbers over sixty candidates but the members' heavy lab schedule have kept the daily turnouts down to around forty men. Regulation size goals have been erected at each end of Fetzer Field, which has been taken over by the Allenmen for their workouts. Two goals have also been placed along each sideline and are used for cross field scrimmages.

Coach Allen had little definite to say about the season's prospects when queried, but he did comment, "The men are all working very hard and are displaying a lot of interest. However, I still don't know how good they'll be."

Allen did mention that among the first-year men, Joe Bach, Hank Pallulat, Bob Plumb, Bill Moore, G. T. Williams, Al Moore, Jesse Greenbaum, and ave Boak have all been standouts in practice this season and will probably see plenty of action this year.

Cross Country Practice

Cross country workouts are scheduled for 11 o'clock Saturday morning along with the track practice.

The coaching staff is hoping that a good turnout will be on hand so that time trials can be run.

The newsreel pictures of the Carolina-Georgia clash of last weekend will be shown Saturday only at the Carolina Theatre, it was announced yesterday by theatre manager E. Carrington Smith.

Bums Top Yanks, 9-8, In Slugfest; Casey Turns In Fine Relief Job

Brooklyn, N. Y., Oct. 2—(UP)—Exploding for six runs in the second inning at the expense of Bobo Newsom and Vic Raschi, the Brooklyn Dodgers added another in the third and two more in the fourth to outlast the New York Yankees, 9-8, in a marathon contest at Ebbets Field that had 33,000 fans on the edge of their seats until the final out.

Fireman Hugh Casey was the Dodgers hero as he silenced the booming bats of the New Yorkers during the last three innings by his sterling relief job. Casey had replaced Ralph Branca in the seventh inning with none out right after Yogi Berra had hit the first pinch-hit home run in Series history. Newsom was charged with the Yankee loss.

The Dodgers opened the scoring in the 26 hit slugfest when they bunched six hits, a walk, and a passed ball to tally six runs off Newsom and his rather ineffective reliever, rookie Vic Raschi. A pass by Newsom to Hermanski, Edwards run-producing double, Reese's single on which Edwards scored, Hatten's single, a passed ball by Sherman Lollar advancing both runners, and Eddie Stanky's two-run double meant four Dodger runs and Newsom's exit.

Jackie Robinson promptly greeted Newsom's successor, Raschi, with a single on which Stanky moved to third, and then both runners tallied on Carl Furillo's tremendous double off the scoreboard in right field. Raschi finally retired the Dodgers when he got Dixie Walker to make his second out of the frame on a grounder to Stirnweiss.

The Yanks put together Lollar's single, pinch-hitter Al Clark's pass, Johnny Lindell's single, and Joe DiMaggio's single in the third to close the gap to 6-2.

They added two more in the fourth but the Bums came back in their half of the same inning to serve twice and run the score to 8-4. Joe DiMaggio then brought the Yankees up to within two runs of the winners in the top of the fifth when he with Johnny Lindell, who had slammed one of Joe Hatten's slants into the left field stands reached first via a base on balls, scoring ahead of him.

DiMaggio's round - tripper brought in big Ralph Branca as Hatten's replacement. He was touched for one run in the sixth on a double down the right field line by pinch-swinger Bobby Brown and another two-baser off Eddie Stanky's glove in short right by Tommy Henrich.

George Stirnweiss, former Carolina football and baseball star, now performing for the New York Yankees in the World Series and leading both teams with five hits. He added two yesterday and turned in two of the best fielding plays of the day at his second base spot.

Jayvee Footballers Hold Hard Session

The jayvee footballers were sent through their most strenous session up to date, yesterday afternoon, in preparation for their opening game with the South Carolina Bantamcocks next Friday afternoon at Columbia.

Coach Crowell Little had been negotiating for a contest for this weekend but plans fell through and a heavy scrimmage session is on tap for this afternoon.

Little told the 55 candidates, many of them varsity men who did not make the trip, that he expects the scrimmage to show good results.

Yesterdays drill was devoted to the learning of plays and getting precision into their play.

The genial jayvee mentor said, "My team is rounding into shape very rapidly and I expect them to be more than ready for their opening game.

Tar Heel Football Squad Flies To Austin Today

By Morty Schaap

A Carolina football contingent some 40 strong, led by Coach Carl Snavely, will depart by air for Austin, Texas, this morning.

This will mark the longest jaunt ever taken by a Tar Heel football squad and the first ever made by air.

The contest between the men of Snavely and the Texas Longhorns is the first meeting of these clubs, and the lads from the Southwest have been installed as slight favorites.

Coach Blair Cherry, in his first year as head coach at the Texas institution, has rolled over two foes, Texas Tech and Oregon, in the club's first two games of the season.

The orange and white are playing from the T-formation, which will be no novelty to the Tar Heels as the Georgia club which they whipped last Saturday also operated from that same maneuver. However, the lads from Austin are sparked by All-American Bobby Layne who is one of the country's leading passers. Last week in the battle against Oregon he completed seven out of eleven air strikes.

Practice in Texas

The Tar Heels will make their headquarters at the Hotel General Austin upon their arrival this afternoon. The trip is being made in Capitol airlines 'DC-4. They expect to work out in the huge Texas stadium late today.

Yesterday afternoon Coach Snavely sent his charges through a light drill and pronounced everyone in good shape except co-captain Joe Wright, who is still suffering from after effects of a penicillin shot last week. He is listed as a doubtful starter.

The line, however, will be bolstered by the return of Bill (Earthquake) Smith from Lexington, who has missed the last three weeks of practice due to a broken foot. This big boy will be used to relieve Haywood Fowle at tackle.

GRIDIRON NOTES:

Texas probably boasts the fastest tackle in college football in the person of Charlie Tatom, who was a regular member of the Texan 440-relay team which was undefeated last year. Also in the speed picture the Longhorns boast two other speed merchants in the form of Perry Samuels and Allen Lawler who have both been clocked for the 100-yard dash in 9.5 seconds.

The officials for the game have been announced as: Mr. Harry Viner, Missouri, Referee; Gus Tebell, Wisconsin, Umpire; Gene Bedford, SMU, head linesman; and Quintus Hutter, Virginia, Field Judge.

MR. TRUE-TOE BOB COX, Carolina extra-point and field goal specialist who is now leading the Conference scoring parade with eight points.

gression . . . This attachment of the States of the Arab League to the United Nations needs no argument in support of it. In a world still ruled by power politics there is no hope for the Arabs or for any other people, large or small, except within a sound international organization in which the Arabs and other people can work for a better life. Thus, we look to the United Nations for justice and equity, and we pin our faith and find our salvation in its Charter.

For Integrity

He emphasized that the Arab states "are for the independence and territorial integrity of each state whether or not it is a member of the United Nations. It is a principle from which we ardently hope we shall never stray. We are also for the freedom of nations to determine their life and destiny."

Mr. Tomeh declared that the importance of the Middle East as the crossroads between the various parts of the world and the role of the Arab states in determining the peace of the world "is becoming more and more obvious. And the significance of the part to be played in the United Nations by the six Middle Eastern Arab states which are its members has been correspondingly increased," he said.

Bull's Head Book Shop May Be Described As 'Intimate Nook for Browsing', Says Writer

By Raney Stanford

"An intimate nook for browsing" is the descriptive phrase that has been applied to the Bull's Head book shop down through the years since its origination in 1928, and its tradition of service to the members of the University community is flourishing quietly today.

Breaking down this service rendered into things that are done for you, you, and you, Mrs. Charles Valentine, Jr., manager of the shop, explains how it becomes very personal indeed.

Buy Many

"Many of our books are bought with special people in mind. I'll be looking through an order list and I'll see something that I know John will like, or somethin, Sue is interested in, so we'll order it."

People don't forget things like that. Mrs. Valentine hears from many of the shops habituees after they leave school, and many drop in again whenever they get the chance.

There is a book to suit almost every taste in this little corner of the library building; all the best-sellers are here and also things that a graduate English student would be pleasantly surprised to find.

"We keep all the Thorne Smith, S. J. Perelman, and things that everybody likes; but also many out-of-the way books, things not ordinarily seen in the everyday commercial shop," says Mrs. Valentine .

One of Them

The Bull's Head, one of the few college shops of its kind in the nation, is able to keep a stock of around 3000 volumes on hand through its unique system of sale and rental. All the books are for sale, and almost all of them are also for rent. The reader rents one at 10 cents for four days, and each time it is rented 10 cents is removed from the retail price until the book reaches a minimum sale value of 25 cents.

"This keeps the stock moving, helps prevent our being stuck with a book if the demand for it suddenly falls away. After a few rentals a book almost pays for itself.

Attached to the University library extension under the supervision of Nellie Roberson, the non-profit book nook has been in its present location on the ground floor of the library, since 1935. One of the functions of its parent, the extension library, is to send out material, on request from various parts of the state, and many of the volumes requested come from the shelves of the Bull's Head. As Mrs. Valentine puts it:

"So any of the people out there that want to can read about John Steinbecks' bus."

In downright "browsability" the shop lives up to its reputation. As a matter of fact, Mrs. Valentine is afraid the comfortable over-stuffed furniture appeals to many besides the bibliophile; people who seem to have their browsing mixed up with drowsing .

Housing Office Ends Last Sebtember List Of Room Applicants

All students who entered the University in September, 1947, and who made a dormitory deposit at that time have room accommodations arranged for them, according to an announcement released today by J. E Wadsworth, housing director.

Wadsworth warns, though, that these men with dormitory space priority at present must contact the housing office, 207 South building, by tomorrow and pick up their room keys. Otherwise, after tomorrow their room deposits will be refunded and their names taken off the waiting list so that other students who came to the University in January may be assigned rooms as soon as possible.

The following men are again urged to contact the housing office immediately in case they have not yet done so by press time: Baddour, Robert A.; Barnes, Francis N.; Burgess, Robert L.; Carter, Leonard C.; Caudle, Richard H.; Constable, John; Crow, Kenneth M.; Ellis, James E.; Graham, Jack B.; Harper, James B. Miss Horne may be called at 9741 for interview and enrollment.

Union Needs Students For Volunteer Work

Everyone interested in volunteer work with Graham Memorial is asked to meet this afternoon in the Roland Parker lounge No. one, of the student union, at 5 o'clock. Chuck Hilty, assistant director of the union, announced that positions are open for student assistance in the departments of entertainment, dancing, music, and recreation.

"We have innumerable activities planned for the year, and this is a good chance for people to get into interesting work," said Hilty. "Graham Memorial work will enable them to make contracts and get good experience in the extra-curricular field."

A teaspoon in the toe of each nylon or silk stocking will keep them from wrapping around the clothesline.

terday in conference with President Graham, said that the commission was empowered by the U. N. Security council to use any means to resolve peacefully the dispute between the neophyte Indonesian Republic and the Netherlands. "They may investigate, mediate, or arbitrate," he said.

Describing the U. N.'s action on Indonesia as the only recent situation which found the U. S. and Russia in agreement, Scott emphasized Dr. Graham's responsibilities as "highly important in setting a pattern for settlement of disputes under U N." He said that two months would probably be required for the commission to complete its work.

Scott, an official in the Division of International Security Affairs of the State Department, was sent to Chapel Hill to brief Dr. Graham on past developments in the Indonesian crisis and to convey state papers to the new delegate.

Dr. Graham, named by President Truman under the United Nations Participation act of 1945, is subject to confirmation by the U. S. Senate if Congress meets before the commission's work is completed. However, no session is expected.

Ed Joyner Will Serve as New DTH News Editor; Chuck Hauser Named Campus Editor for Paper

In conformity with an election campaign promise of Editor Barron Mills, the Daily Tar Heel news staff has been completely analyzed and re-distributed in order to insure students of complete coverage of campus news.

Following a meeting of old and new staff members Sunday, Managing Editor Earl Heffner announced several promotions and a number of new assignments.

Promoted to the position of news editor was Ed Joyner, former telegraph editor of the Wilson Times, who last year served on the Daily Tar Heel as a reporter and night editor.

Hauser Promoted

Reporter Chuck Hauser also was promoted to the position of campus editor, a post analagous to city editor of a city newspaper. He will review all political copy as this newspaper seeks to employ nonpartisan coverage of campus political news. Hauser last year served as a reporter and night editor, also worked as a desk editor at times.

Both Joyner and Hauser will continue to serve as night editors. Other night editors and reporters will be Bill Sexton and Charlie Gibson. Both men served in these capacities last year. This year they have been assigned to larger news sources in recognition of the reportorial excellence.

Another old staff member who will cover a major beat is Raney Stanford, South Building reporter.

New members of the staff who have been assigned reportorial or desk positions follow:

Marine Reserves

Persons desiring to join the Marine Corps reserve may do so by contacting 2nd Lt. Morris N. Jenkins, USMCR, at room one Brockwell building (across the street from the Carolina Theatre) or calling 3066, it was announced today.

Lt. Jenkins pointed out that in most cases, rank equivalent to that held at time of discharge will be returned, and in all cases opportunity will be given for advancement in rank. All that will be needed, said Lt. Jenkins, is a copy of discharge papers.

U.S., Soviets Said to Hold Key to Peace

There can be no peace without basic agreement between the United States and Soviet Russia, Sava N. Kosanovic, Yugoslav Ambassador to the United States, asserted in an address tonight at the University.

Speaking at the final session of the first International Collegiate Conference, sponsored by the Collegiate Council for United Nations, Marshal Tito's top diplomatic representative in this country lashed out against "those who need this war atmosphere" and "make use of every weakness, emphasize every mistake, in order to create the impression that the United Nations organization does not and cannot exist."

Devoting a good portion of his address to a defense of the veto power in the United Nations Security Council, Ambassador Kosanovic insisted that the veto be preserved.

"If this right of veto did not exist—under the present circumstances—the United Nations organization would be weak, its future problematical, its decisions unreal. The great powers might even abandon it if the general policy did not suit them."

Sir John Magowan, British Minister to the United States in charge of trade relations, shared the speaking program at tonight's session. Naming peace and prosperity as the long term objectives of the United Nations, he maintained that "these two ideals are too apt to be regarded as separate and distinct.

"The maintainence of peace is regarded as the task of political leadership, while prosperity is too often regarded as a matter solely for the individual efforts of businessmen and their customers, as far removed from political influence as possible," he asserted. "Surely however in the modern world, peace can only be made secure if prosperity, or rather, the opportunity for achieving it, is first estab-

GM Rendezvous

By Margie Taylor

Bigger and better entertainment is being offered this weekend by the new campus center, the Graham Memorial Rendezvous. Continuing its outstanding success, the Rendezous will present Scotty Gardner and his band tonight from 9 o'clock to midnight and tomorrow night from 10 to 12 .Tomorrow afternoon the doors will open at 2:30 o'clock in order that students may listen to the Carolina-Texas football game.

Among new features is the large fireplace at the south end of the room, surrounded by comfortable lounges, where marshmellows may be toasted. The refreshment bar is open from 6 o'clock in the evening through midnight each day, featuring Rendezvous specialties in sandwiches, priced from five to 30 cents, pastries, soft drinks, and ice cream.

Formerly the Candlelight room, the Rendezvous is located on the ground floor in Graham Memorial, and may be reached through the front entrance or by the walk leading from the front of the building to the back en-

Dr. Hardin Craig Will Give Address On University Day

By Raney Stanford

The celebration of the 154th University Day and the first convocation of the new year will be held on the campus the morning of Oct. 10. Dr. Hardin Craig of the English department will deliver the convocation address, and his talk will be preceded by the traditional academic procession under the direction of Dr. J. C. Lyons, faculty marshal.

University Day commemorates the laying of the cornerstone of Old East, the oldest building on the campus, on Oct. 12, 1793. This year's celebration will be held two days earlier to place it in the regular scheduled week.

The convocation talk and the faculty procession officially marks the opening of another year at the University. It is one of the two times during the year when the school's professors appear clad in their academic caps and gowns

Music for the occasion will be provided by a men and women's glee club, and memorial exercises will be held for alumni and students who have died since the last University Day.

Classes will not be held during the hours set aside for the event.

Veterans Must Submit Eligibility Certificates

All veterans beginning in or transferring to the University this year from another school should have turned in their certificate of eligibility during registration, Colonel F. Carlyle Shepard, University veterans Director, warns. Those who have not yet done so should contact room 316 in South building immediately.

Veterans failing to submit the official form 7-1950 to prove their rights to subsistence may suffer unnecessary delay in receiving checks for this month.

The regional headquarters of the Veterans Administration in Winston-Salem has notified Colonel Shepard that many veterans enrolled here now have incomplete records for the forthcoming pay roster.

Former Record Set Last Year Now Shattered

By Charlie Gibson

The University these days is loosening its belt and just continues to grow, grow, and regrow, according to the latest release from South building on this term's enrollment.

Last month 7,528 students came to Chapel Hill so set an all-time high for the number to attend the University during one term. The last winter quarter had set the former record peak at 6,893. In September, 1946, only 6,802 were on hand, making the student body slimmer by 726.

As yet there has been no breakdown of this term's figure either into various classes and departments or between men and women students.

If

If the enrollment grows on and on annually at this 10.7 per cent increase over the beginning of last year, there will be approximately 8,333 students here by 1948; 10,198 by 1950; more over-crowded dormitories, longer lines, worse registration problems, and a future mathematical prediction which the DTH will leave for Einstein to calculate should he ever exhaust his study of the fifth dimension.

Geology Fraternity Holds Initial Meet

Opening its second active year since the war in a business meeting Monday night, the Alpha Alpha chapter of the honorary geological fraternity, Sigma Gamma Epsilon, elected Harry M. Peak to serve as president during the coming year.

Highlighting the meeting was the initiation of eleven new members by the faculty, plus the election of James Jordan as vice-president, Henry L. Berryhill as secretary-treasurer, and Ralph C. Heath as corresponding secretary and editor. Plans were formulated for the redecoration of the chapter room and the organization of future social events.

Wright, Bernot Not in Lineup For Tough Foe

By Bob Goldwater

Austin, Texas, Oct. 4—North Carolina and Texas, both undefeated, clash for the first time this afternoon at 2:30 (CST) in an intersectional contest between two of the nation's top grid machines. A crowd of over 45,000 is expected to jam the Longhorns' Memorial Stadium to witness the game.

Texas, because of two impressive victories in early season games and the fact that the contest is being played in Texas, rules as a slight favorite over the North Carolinians, participants in the Sugar Bowl last season.

The football game today between Texas and Carolina will be broadcast over station WDUK, Durham starting at 3:15 (EST).

The play by play will be called by Ray Reeves for the Tobacco State network. Game time is 2:30 (CST).

The Tar Heels snapped an 18-game winning streak belonging to the Georgia Bulldogs last week, 14-7, in Chapel Hill. Texas' record thus far lists wins over Texas Tech, 33-0, and Oregon, 33-13.

Two Out

The Tar Heels will be minus two of their top performers for today's game. Co-captain Joe Wright, who was counted on to start at blocking back, did not make the trip because of a swelling condition that is an aftermath of a penicillin treatment. Don Hartig is expected to replace him as the offensive quarterback, with Bobby Weant filling in on defense. Al Bernot, reserve center, also missed the trip.

The game will provide an interesting meeting between two of the nation's top candidates for All-American honors this year. Those two well-known gentlemen are Charlie Justice, Carolina's renowned tailback, and Bobby Layne, Texas' brilliant passing quarterback. Both boys were named on many probable All-American outfits prior to the season's start, and the fans will be expecting quite a show from the two.

Justice and Layne are each backed up by fine supporting casts. Walt Pupa, burly Tar Heel fullback, demonstrated his ability quite conclusively against Georgia by tossing two touchdown passes that meant the game. Jim Camp, speedy wingback, is another Carolina

Club To Form

Two boys from Wilmington, "Doc" Clark and Paul Baschon, have anounced a plan to form a social club among their fellow Wilmingtonians here on campus, it was annonuced yesterday. If enough interested persons will attend a meeting next Wednesday afternoon from 3 to 4 o'clock in the Roland Parker lounges No. 1 and 2, the Wilmington club can be organized properly, get officers elected, and arrange its policy.

The Wilmington club is to be formed very similarly to clubs already established among University students from Winston-Salem, Charlotte, and Gastonia. Everyone from Wilmington is urged to attend this Wednesday's initial meeting.

University Law Professor Made Graham's U.N. Aid

By Bill Sexton

Henry P. Brandis, law school professor, has been appointed by Secretary of State Marshall, special assistant to Dr. Frank Graham, U. S. representative-designate on the U. N. Indonesian Commission.

Brandis, promoted this fall to full professorship, will accompany Dr. Graham to Indonesia as a member of the personal staff assigned by the State department to the American representative.

The president of the Greater University, set to leave Chapel Hill Sunday, will begin his duties with conferences at State department headquarters in Washington. An official source indicated he would attend sessions with Secretary Marshall and far eastern affairs experts beginning Monday.

Then Dr. Graham's assignment will carry him to United Nations headquarters at Lake Success, where he will confer with U. N. Secretary Trygvie Lie and the secretariat staff on details of the journey to Indonesia and the commissions operations. Other conferences will bring him in contact with delegates of the other two nations sending representatives to the commission, though it is expected that the members of the commission will not assemble in the U. S., but rather enroute to Indonesia or on that troubled island.

Special assistant Brandis is a graduate of the University of North Carolina (B.A.) and of Columbia University (LL.B). Before joining the faculty of the University he served with the N. C. Revenue Department. During the war Brandis was connected with Naval Intelligence. He is now a member of the North Carolina and New York Bar associations.

Yack Pictures Have Tied Up GM Darkroom

Though the Graham Memorial student darkroom is now tied up by Yackety Yack photographers, it is hoped that regular operations may be resumed shortly, and the facilities of the laboratory will be opened to the entire student body.

In the meantime, darkroom manager Bob Coulter announced, all students holding membership cards entitling them to use of the room, should have these reissued for darkroom work this year. This is being done to make a check on which cards are to be used actively this year, since a great number were issued last winter. Anyone having chemicals stored in the room at present should also check with Coulter immediately.

He will be in the Graham Memorial office from 8 to 9 o'clock on Monday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings, and from 10:30 until 12:30 Saturday mornings. Free lessons in darkroom procedure may be arranged through him.

Guest of Tau Epsilon Phi

New Zealand Counsellor John Reid Calls the United Nations 'No Short Cut to International Amity' at Informal Session

By Jud Kinberg

Speaking at a fraternity "bull session" Thursday night, New Zealand Counsellor John Reid called the United Nations "no short cut to international amity. It is a young organization trying desperately to solve in a few years problems that have caused world eruption for centuries."

Reid and Dr. Sydney Smith, both speakers at the Carolina Council for the United Nations three-day rally, were guests of the Tau Epsilon Phi house after appearances on the CCUN rostrum Thursday night. Other greek societies at the informal refreshment-and-rhetoric affair were Alpha Tau Omega, Lambda Chi Alpha, Zeta Beta Tau, Pi Lambda Phi and Alpha Epsilon Pi.

With questions coming from the college men numbering over 50, Reid and Smith brought out important aspects of the problems facing not only their own nations, but the entire family of nations. To the New Zealander, one success already scored by UN is arousing of militant public opinion. He cited the resultant action taken in the Iranian and Indonesian turmoils to point home the role that informed and articulate peoples can play through influencing of their representatives at Lake Success.

When discussion swung to obstructionist tactics of Soviet Russia, Reid quickly scotched any idea that "there can be any international control body with Russia. We've got to face facts about current friction: Russia has cause to distrust the Western nations."

Dr. Smith, Cambridge educator currently touring the United States, frankly admitted the need for American aid in the near future if his country is to ride out current economic storms. Swinging to politics, he predicted a split in the ranks of the Labor party rather than any fall from electoral power for the Atlee government.

"They seem to constantly fear themselves and the result is that we get things done far too late. Why for months we knew we had to stop luxury importation of those Hollywood films, but it was only after almost a year of such talk that the present plan was imposed. When Labor gets special powers, they seem rather ashamed of them and recalcitrent in putting such laws into effective use. We can't keep up that sort of thing."

Accompanying the two speakers to the TEP reception was Mrs. John Reid.

Yugoslav Ambassador Sava Kasanovic Steps Off Airplane With Controversial Book, 'Tito's Imperial Communism'

"Tito's Imperial Communism," controversial fall publication of the University Press, stepped off a plane at Raleigh-Durham airport in strange company today.

The book, which blasts the present government of Yugoslavia in no uncertain terms, was carried by Sava Kasanovic, Yugoslav ambassador to the U.S. and U.N. delegate. Kasanovic was bound for Chapel Hill as guest speaker at the International Collegiate conference which ended last night.

In terms no less uncertain than those of the book's author, R. H. Markham, the Yugoslav diplomat criticized the University publication. He termed it "superficial," and charged that it was "so full of hate."

"As minister of information during the early years of the war," said Kasanovic, "I came in frequent contact with Markham. He had different opinions then."

In an interview enroute to Chapel Hill, Kasanovic criticized the U.S. Department of State for refusing visas to newspapermen desirous of visiting Yugoslavia. "We welcome them," he said, "but your government will not let them come."

Referring to his recent invitation to six prominent Americans to tour his nation, the Yugoslav diplomat said he "was forced to give the plan up," when five of the six declined to accept.

There Was No 'Sucking in'

There are ambiguities in Kerr Scott's statement in which he charged that the Good Health plan's major motive was to establish a medical school in Chapel Hill and that "all the rest of us were sucked in to serve this end." The commissioner of agriculture tagged the Good Health program as a propaganda machine, stated that the advocated medical college here in Chapel Hill was only a measure to "keep up with the Joneses."

The announcement by Scott was of such a nature that it amazed H. C. Cranford, Executive Director of the Good Health Program, since Scott had previously endorsed the Good Health plan. But Dr. I. G. Greer, president of the association, seems to adequately disprove Scott's claims. A short section of his statement is reprinted below:

"Dr. John A. Ferrell, executive secretary of the N. C. Medical Care Commission, has already spoken for the commission, pointing out the building of the medical school is but one feature of the magnificent Good Health program. The bulk of both State and Federal funds appropriated for the program will be used not for the medical school, but for financing the construction of new general hospitals and the expansion of such existing facilities throughout the State. As Dr. Ferrell suggested, I think Mr. Scott should familiarize himself with what is being done with these funds.

"As for the location of the medical school, I would like to emphasize that the Good Health Association has never advocated that it be put in Chapel Hill, or anywhere else. The location was left up to the Medical Care Commission, which relied on the judgment of State, national, and international hospital experts."

We think that Dr. Greer's explanation along with the assurance of a host of other important medical authorities in the state is enough to negate Kerr's claims.

However, until the medical school is established on campus there will be many accusations of this nature. We must remember that at least ten powerful factions tried to bring the medical center to their community. The strongest group at this time is the Moses H. Cone Memorial hospital group in Greensboro that wants to combine the two programs into one mammoth hospital and medical school.

More People-- More Fraternities

The enrollment here at the University has increased from a pre-war maximum of 4,100 to a figure now exceeding 7,000 students. Although enrollment has almost doubled, there are actually fewer social fraternities on the campus now than there were in pre-war times. Thus many of the 25 fraternities here have larger active rosters than ever before in their history. In the spring quarter, six of the 25 had over 100 members and many more approached that figure. In big sprawling fraternities, such as these, there is little chance for the genuine fraternity spirit and real cooperation which they should have. The only relief for this situation is for the larger chapters to take in fewer men, but this would necessitate the dropping of many boys who wish to join a fraternity.

One solution of this problem was voiced by Dean F. H. Weaver, who expressed the opinion that this campus could support more fraternities now than ever before. Dean Weaver said that already two chapters, dormant during the war, have been reactivated here at the university. He said that other national Greek societies had inquired about the possibility of opening a chapter here.

The Faculty Committee on Fraternities, of which Dean Weaver is a member, has voted to consider incoming chapters according to: (1) their national reputation; (2) their financial status; (3) the number and academic status of their prospective members; (4) the assurance of financial aid from their national headquarters; and (5) the prospects of obtaining a house and plans for financing the house.

The Faculty Committee went on record as favoring the revival of old chapters before considering the establishment of new fraternities and that it would be desirable for a number of these old chapters to reactivate as soon as possible.

Although the fraternity question has many aspects, we think that a definite problem exists. The administration and the students should combine their efforts to bring in new fraternities to relieve the tension of the ever-increasing enrollment.—C.S.

If It's Up to Dr. Frank...

Dr. Frank Graham—as two presidents have discovered—is a handy man to have around.

Not only is Dr. Frank an excellent University administrator but he is a man who knows the world and what goes on in it. Both President Roosevelt and now Mr. Truman have discovered that Dr. Frank has a lot of interesting ideas on how to fix what's wrong with the world.

Tomorrow the gentle, white-haired educator will be on his way to what may be one of his most important jobs of fixing. He'll diagnose—with two foreign diplomats—what ails the Dutch and the Indonesians. It won's be an easy job but, as we said, it is an important one.

Since it is as a representative of the United States as a part of the United Nations that Frank Graham goes to the Pacific, much rests on what he can accomplish. Just what can the United Nations do toward settling political disputes? Can nations bring peace by working together?

If a good job by Dr. Frank means satisfactory answers to these questions, then we're laying our money on peace in our time—and his.—R.S.

Why 'Ike' Stays Mum and Modest

Robert S. Allen paid Durham a visit Thursday in commemoration of National Newspaper Week, and like the typical newspaperman, he too predicted that General "Ike" Eisenhower will be a candidate for president come the next election. Reporters and columnists have learned from the trial and error method that when a man persistently avoids talking on a certain subject he must either know nothing whatsoever about the topic or have a fear of talking about things that would make a beautiful by-line front-pager. On the Eisenhower case the newsmen figure him out for the latter.

Lyle C. Wilson, manager for the United Press, stated that it would be bad for Eisenhower to express his aspirations for the presidency while he is still in uniform. It would, and here's why. There's a type of professional jealousy among soldiers, and they like to think of each other only as leaders in a military sense. It is hard for them to picture Eisenhower in the White House, and they are not going to do so until they are forced to. We do not believe that they will be forced into hearing a statement from Ike on his aspirations until he is in civilian clothes, and apart from the men of his profession.

We Wait

We're Smart Guys

By Russell G. Baldwin

There are a lot of people at Chaple Hill and all over the United States who are alarmingly unconcerned by the terrible imminence of another world war. If another war comes, and unless present trends are altered, it is inevitable, one of the chief contributing factors will be the apathy which now pervades America. It is not enough to applaud our leaders when they set up a United Nations organization and sit back to watch it work. The UN will not succeed through popular approval; it will succeed only through popular support.

The atomic bomb is not a toy. Biological warfare is not a harmless nightmare. Yet we Americans make little effort or pretense at doing something about them. We wait for somebody else to do something. The important part of that statement is "We wait." We wait and do nothing and when destruction comes we will blame those "others" for not doing something. Just give an excuse. As long as we can blame somebody else we'll take hell and high water with little complaining and go right on hypocritically thinking we're smart guys.

Did you ever wonder why it is that the atomic scientists are more concerned than anybody else about the atomic bomb and the necessity for world government? It's simple. The atomic scienists know a few vital facts that the average American either refuses to believe or to conerned about. Take a look at this statement by the Emergency Committee of Atomic Scientists, which is headed by Professor Albert Einstein and Dr. Harold Urey:

These few facts are accepted by all atomic scientists:

1. Atomic bombs can now be made cheaply and in large number. They will become more destructive.

2. There is no military defense against atomic bombs, and none is to be expected.

3. Other nations can rediscover our secret processes by themselves.

4. Preparedness against atomic war is futile and, if attempted, will ruin the structure of our social order.

5. If war breaks out, atomic bombs will be used, and they will surely destroy our civilization.

6. There is no solution to this problem except international control of atomic energy and, ultimately, the elimination of war.

I wish you'd reread number 6 and think it over. "There is no solution . . . except international control . . . " The language is plain and there is no dodging it. A question which might legitimately come to your mind is, "How are we going to secure international control?" and the answer to that question is just as plain and irrefutable. There can be only one answer—world government. No matter what differences exist between nations of the world they are less important than the problem of survival and must be considered so.

But what about the UN? "You shall know them by their works." Look at the record. The UN can boast no major accomplishment when those so-called major accomplishments are considered alongside the accomplishments of the League of Nations and the actual problems which face the world today. At best it is too weak to be an effective means of guaranteeing world peace. If we really mean it when we say we want peace, we will hold out for a world government with adequate power to deal with international problems and we will settle for nothing less.

Dogs Know All About Fashion

There is a collie that you see on Franklin Street every now and then. She has the "new look." This collie has a long brown covering for her body. This cover is somewhat dirty hair which extends we would judge just about half an inch below this dog's knees. If you figure the ratio, you will find that that corresponds to about two inches below the knee for human ladies who sometimes are about five feet four inches tall. All of which proves that Christian Dior, a rather peculiar Parisian coutourier, did not originate the "new look." A collie here in Chapel Hill did it.

But that is of little import. From Seattle to Salisbury and from La Jolla to Lexington the"new look" has caused comment. Mill girls have let out their gingham and carhops have sewed together their slacks legs. Rich dames have purchased garments with hems that look like slips with one strap broken. Some like slips with two staps broken.

We can no longer ignore this important subject—the "new look." It is economic and sexual upheavels the world over. It is, we repeat, causing upheavels the world over.

Even in the Carolina mag office. Of all places. And of all people, who upheaved the most? Jud Kinberg. Kinberg made some comment about how women had to have better looking legs to wear the long skirts. It may be true but I can't see how it applies to that long haired collie.

So if you can't understand how it applies to this story, don't feel bad because we're both confused about application and it doesn't.

The point is this: there were two young men who had something to say about long skirts. Now these young men are surely as intrepid as even were Frank Buck or Clyde Beatty. Because when young men try to tell young women what they should do, it is like trying to chuck a tiger under the chin. These young men met in Gerrard Hall yesterday afternoon with others who didn't like the length of things. We don't know what happened exactly. However, since there has been no wild outcry, no blood running in the gutters, no arrival of the state police we can safely say that the coeds didn't march on the place in a body and massacre all those so bumptious as to suggest that somebody might be able to tell a woman something.

AVC Says Cut Beef And Eat Less Pie

Chat Paterson, national chairman of the American Veterans Committee (AVC), today pledged full support of the World Warr II Veterans organization to the drive to eliminate food waste and to the Presidential food saving committee under the chairmanship of Charles Luckman.

Paterson said that AVC chapters were being called on to take the lead in setting up community food saving drives to reinforce the national effort.

"The community food saving drives will be devoted to the elimination of food wastage by commercial establishments and housewives and will urge less consumption of important grain-using luxury products such as pastries and alcoholic beverages," Paterson said.

"A nation-wide reduction in cake and pastry consumption will have an immediate appreciable effect upon the consumption of grains and sugar—two precious food commodities," Paterson pointed out.

"Reduced usage of alcoholic beverages would not be so immediately felt at the distiller level but the possible savings of grains used for this luxury item are extremely large," he added.

"America cannot afford a Marie Antoinette attitude about starving people in other portions of the world," Paterson said. "We cannot escape making our share of effort and sacrifices. Hungry people are suckers for totalitarianism. If we would see democracy thrive we must exert control and common sense," Paterson asserted.

Carolina Carousel

Greet the Team Back

By R. Foo Giduz

Myrt and the cheerleaders didn't quite make it down to Texas, as was presumptously reported here earlier. . . . But they held a dang peppy pep rally Thursday evening. — Really a fine sendoff for the team.

Hence: Why not greet them back the same way tomorrow, win or lose???—Never will forget the rousing roaring midnight welcomes a thousand-odd spirited students gave the fighting Tar Heel footballers some five years ago when they returned from a 54-0 shellacking at the hands of the Tulane Green Wave in New Orleans. . . . It was a mighty cold night in October, and the bus was over an hour late. But when the team finally arrived, the crowd held a hefty cheer for each member as he got off the bus, and carried all of them back to the dormitories on their shoulders.—Fellas, that was really the Carolina spirit like we've never seen it before; and the team and Coach Ray Wolf really appreciated it.

Well, this weekend we're in pretty much the same position (in some ways). . . . Spirit is at its peak. The Tar Heels are Sugar Bowl - bound again. They're playing one of the most crucial games in the nation today, and no doubt the toughest tilt on their slate.

Haven't heard of anyone who was planning to drive down to Austin, and only a dozen or so who planned to fly.—So if the Tar Heels are lacking in grandstand support this afternoon, let's turn out tomorrow afternoon when they get back on the special busses from Raleigh-Durham airport, and prove to 'em all that Tar Heel spirit is better than ever.—WIN OR LOSE!!!—How 'bout it Myrt and you other cheerleaders????

And while old Carousel is on THE topic of the season, a special request to the powers-that-be: How's about starting up the popular gridiron post-mortem movies again???—Student body couldn't get down to Longhorn land to see the ball game, but we oughta at least be able to see the movies, wot???

Kind Words and Crosswords

Dear Editor:

It is encouraging to read in the Tar Heel such an editorial as LAWS — AND WAYS AROUND THEM. When social questions are reaching high tide even in the face of backwash from those who wish to confuse basic issues, it becomes increasingly important that new trends be kept in the public eye. As the race question takes on significance with regard to the principle of basic human rights, there will be less and less meaning in the arguments from economic and emotional of those whose motivation arises dents to the Medical school is Carolina to admit Negro stuprejudices.

Let us hope that the time for not far off. The business of race-separation in education grows constantly more expensive; whereas a co-education of races would serve to solve problems of social differentiation by the simple function of races' working together, as well as to lower expenditures necessary for separate schools, and, in general, to face the issue pragmatically and consistently in the light of traditional American Democracy.

Congratulations to the Tar Heel editorialists who help us keep our fingers on the pulse of the times and our eyes on significant potentialities.

Sincerely,
Bill McGirt
306 McCauley St.

(Editor's Note: Our editorial did not advocate co-education of races, it merely said, "It will be interesting to see if North Carolina . . . . admits Negro students or resorts to building a separate institution.")

Dear Sir:

In view of the fact that so far this quarter no one seems to have been sufficiently moved by any matter of great importance to write a letter to the editor, I may as well start the ball rolling.

It has come to my attention that a most sad situation exists. The crossword puzzle appearing in The Daily Tar Heel and the crossword puzzle appearing in The Charlotte News of the same date are one and the same. This, I feel, works an undue hardship on the crossword puzzle addicts attending this institution who like to read both of these fine papers. Unquestionably, something should be done about it.

It is up to you as editor to find a speedy remedy for this deplorable situation. I am depending on you in this matter.

Yours facetiously,
Hunter Henry

—They've got a pretty new yellow sign up over the GM office door now, which reads as follows: "Information." Since the sign is over the door, the staff wishes to have the dope on everything possible on the campus since "Information" can refer to just about anything. So all recognized campus organizations are requested to submit any pertinent facts on their group to the student union office immediately so that the staff will really have something to back up that sign.

The Sporting Picture

By Billy Carmichael

On Ronman's Beach

The question of the return of boxing to the intercollegiate program at Carolina has reared its battered head again, and this time there seems to be a movement for some forceful action to bring the sport back to the campus.

From what one can read in this newspaper several of the more powerful campus organizations have thrown their respective shoulders to the well-known wheel in an effort to force the issue with the Athletic council which is omnipotent in the question. The easily-aroused Student Legislature passed a resolution Thursday night to renew pugilistic activities on a competitive basis, with the more-conservative Monogram club preceding with similar action.

Looking at the whole question from a neutral corner, it is easily possible to discover both sides of the question. The Athletic council, which abolished or perhaps better said, suspended the sport last spring, is a group not noted for any hasty actions. It usually deliberates for an especially long time to render decisions that will best suit Carolina athletes and the Carolina way of doing things. There have been many versions of what reasons were given for the abolition of boxing, some of which are true and some of which are not. Among those that are valid can be found in the following:

(1) That University doctors have advised the athletic officials of the school that they consider boxing as a sport in which students attending the University are exposed to the possibility of serious injury because of the nature of the competition. No precautions be made to protect fighters from head and eye injuries, even with the use of head gears.

(2) It has become practically impossible for the University to arrange a schedule for the team with the schools that the college competes against in other sports. Along this line, it may be pointed out that at the present time, a University boxing team would have to go at least 200 hundred miles to find an opponent.

(3) The University does not feel that boxing is a college-type sport. This is not a slur at the character of any of the ones who have or might possibly box for Carolina since the University does not in any way offer financial aid to its fighters. It is, though, a protection for the name of the school and the welfare of our students who will have to compete against schools that openly recruit anyone for their boxing teams.

(4) The final point and possibly the most obvious, is the lack of interest shown in boxing during the past year. This does not mean that college officials are dissatisfied with the showing in the won and lost column of last year's team, for Carolina has never had a name for quitting anytime it did not have a winning squad. It is true, though, that numerous members of last year's squad quit or left the team after the start of the season for reasons other than academic deficiencies and health conditions. There was a certain amount of friction about the team—matters that were never discussed because such things are family affairs and should be settled by the heads of the family. The turnover on last year's team was astounding and it used to be a standing joke to go to the matches just to see who had been found to fight the heavyweight or other dubious spots: The truth of what went on is somewhat confused and much too loud and not for these ears.

From the Other Corner

Looking at the boxers' side of the question where the view is rather dark at this point, you are confronted with a different line of thought. The gentlemen of the ring, and we emphasize the word—gentlemen—contend that boxing, whose records rightly show some of Carolina's greatest sons and athletic achievements alike, can not be condemned for one "bad year" on the campus. Other sports have witnessed similar slumps at the school, but through the interest of followers the respective sport was returned to its active place in the athletic curriculum. The injury question the boxers pooh pooh by comparing their injury record with that of a sport such as football. They do have their argument.

The whole question of renewal will probably come up before the Council when it meets next Tuesday night. Carolina collegiate boxing is at present floored for what may be the count, but its real followers and patrons are hanging on in the true sense of the sport and will continue to make a fight of it as long as possible. 'Tis not time to throw in the towel.

Bevens Pitches One-Hitter But Yanks Lose, 3-2, To Bums

Lavagetto Delivers Game-Winning Hit; Series Is Now Tied

Brooklyn, N. Y., Oct. 3—Cookie Lavagetto was the toast of Brooklyn tonight, for it was his booming pinch-hit double down the rightfield foul line this afternoon that chased pinch runners Al Gionfriddo and Eddie Miksis across the plate with two tallies that gave the Dodgers a 3-2 victory over the New York Yankees to even the World Series at two games each.

Floyd Bevens had set a Series record by pitching eight and two-third innings of no-hit ball before Lavagetto's payoff blow. He had marred this performance by issuing ten bases on balls. These ten walks also set another Series' record.

Hugh Casey, Brooklyn's pot-bellied fireman, perhaps deserves as much credit for the Dodger victory as Lavagetto, for he replaced Hank Behrman in the ninth with the bases loaded and one out and forced the ever-dangerous Tommy Henrich to tap his first pitch to him and start a pitcher to catcher to first twin killing. For this neat bit of relief chucking, Casey was credited with his second World Series victory in as many days.

When Catcher Bruce Edwards opened the ninth for the Bums by flying out to Lindell in deep leftfield, it looked as though Bevans was well on his way to a no-hit triumph. However, the big Yank hurler lost his control when Carl Furillo, the next batter, stepped into the box. Bevans walked him on four straight pitches, and Gionfriddo came in to run for Furillo. After three pitches Gionfriddo stole second, beating Yogi Berra's throw.

Lavagetto Delivers

The Yankee rooters breathed a sigh of relief though when Johnny Jorgenson popped out to first for the second out. Pete Reiser came in to bat for Casey, and was issued an intentional pass. Miksis was inserted to run for Reiaser. Manager Burt Shotton then sent in Lavagetto to bat for Eddie Stanky. The rest is Series history.

Harry Taylor opened on the mound for Brooklyn but was chased in the first frame by Stirnweiss' single, Henreich's single, Reese's boot of a double play throw from Jackie Robinson on Berra's grounder and his pass to Joe DiMaggio which forced in Stirnweiss. Hal Gregg came in to pitch for the Dodgers at this point and retired the Yanks without any trouble.

The Yankees increased their lead to 2-0 in the fourth by pushing across a single tally at Gregg's expense. Burly Bill Johnson blasted a tremendous triple off the centerfield wall for a triple and scored when Lindell followed with a double off the right field screen. However, Gregg settled down afrer these two blasts to stop the Yanks.

Brooklyn pushed across a single marker in the last half of the fifth without a hit on walks to Jorgenson and Gregg, Stanky's perfect sacrifice bunt, and Reese's grounder to Rizzuto on which Jorgenson scored and Gregg was caught trying to go to third.

Masterminds of Day

Two of the nation's top grid coaches will match wits this afternoon in Austin when Coach Carl Snavely (left) sends his Carolina Tar Heels against the Texas Longhorns, coached by Blair Cherry (right). Snavely's teams operate from the single-wing formation, while Cherry's eleven will use the T-formation.

Jayvee Squad Stages Scrimmage at Fetzer

Coach Crowell Little's football jayvees ended their first full week of practice yesterday with a heavy scrimmage at Fetzer Field which served as a dress rehearsal for the opening game with the South Carolina Jayvees next Friday.

Two touchdowns were scored in the intra-squad game, the first coming when Gus Purcell, speedy tailback, tossed a 25-yard pass to Sam Macauly, swimming star doubling as football end, who gathered it in and galloped 20 yards to paydirt. The second touchdown was registered when Jim Melvin, shifty tailback from Rocky Mount, broke into the clear and raced 55 yards for a touchdown.

Bob Koontz, Gus Purcell, and "Stumpy" Parker showed up well in the backfield while Rywak, Holdash, Hendricks, and Weems sparked the line play.

Many of Coach Little's veteran footballers were out of the game with injuries. Jack Brazington, halfback; Joe Kosinski, tackle; and Kenan Rand, end, were all on the sidelines.

In Coach Little's opinion, the workout went as well as could be expected, but he said that the pass defense was a little shaky and many of the players were as yet too unfamiliar with the plays.

Here Is Rest of Yarn On Invasion of Texas

more formidable list of talent to back up Layne's offensive efforts. Among these are backs quarterbacks Paul Campbell, and Bobby Coy Lee; halfbacks Byron Gillory, Ralph Ellsworth, Frank Guess, and Jim Canady; and fullback Ray Jones. All are fast runners, with Texas being rated as one of the speediest teams in the country.

The lines appear about evenly matched, with the Texas forward wall holding a slight weight advantage. The Longhorn linemen average 206 pounds per man to 198 for Carolina.

Records of the two teams indicate that today's battle may develop into a great passing duel. Layn has earned the reputation of being one of the nation's top passers, and Pupa and Justice are quite adept at throwing the ball around. Both teams have done considerable work in the aerial department in their workouts this week.

The game will mark Carolina's first invasion into the Southwest, although it will not be the first time a Tar Heel team has played a foe from that loop. Texas Christian University met Carolina in Chapel Hill in 1941, with the Tar Heels winning, 21-14. That game turned out to be quite a passing duel also, with aerials producing two scores in the second half to throw a scare into the Carolinians. Coach Snavely is expecting a similar passing attack from Texas today.

The game will provide an interesting meeting of two of the masters of the T-formation and the single-wing style of offense. Snavely is one of the country's leading proponants of the single-wing, while Cherry follows the T, which has gained widespread popularity in recent years. The result of the game should throw some light on which of the formations is the most effective.

The Tar Heels arrived in Austin early yesterday afternoon on their chartered airplane. Snavely sent his squad through a light workout to wind up the pre-game practices for the North Carolina boys. A squad of 38 made the trip.

Duke Battles Vols As Big Four Opens Full Day of Action

All teams in the Big Four will see action today as the grid season goes into its second week of major action. North Carolina is the biggest traveller in the group, going to Austin, Texas, to meet the Texas Longhorns.

Duke University, a 7-0 victor over N. C. State last week, also will leave the domain of the old North State for a clash with the Tennessee Volunteers in Knoxville. Duke is a slight underdog in the contest, although Tennessee was humiliated by Georgia Tech last week, 27-0, in Atlanta. But the experts figure that the Vols will be just a little tougher on their home grounds.

Wallace Wade's Duke club also will be at another disadvantage in that about a half dozen of the Blue Devil standouts are on the injured list. Among the convalescents are tailback George Clark, end Ed Austin, fullback Ben Williams, tackle Al DeRogatis, and backs Rollo Hodges and Howard Hartley.

Duke Goes By Air

The Blue Devils embarked for Knoxville yesterday by air, following the mode of travel by which Carolina will go to Texas.

Down in Charlotte tonight, Beattie Feathers' State Wolfpack will be favored to take its first win of the young season when the Raleigh boys meet Davidson. Feathers has been drilling his charges on offense all week in an attempt to put more scoring punch in the State attack. The return of tailback Charlie Richkus to action has strengthened the team, and much-publicized John Huzvar also is beginning to round into expected form—all of which means that the Wolfpack may be ready to roll after being shut out by Duke.

Dance Committee Subsidiary Ready To Serve Campus

The Dance organization committee, a subsidiary of the University Dance Committee, is now open on the second floor of Graham Memorial to serve all campus groups, Wayne K. Brenengen, chairman of the committ- announced yesterday.

"By collecting and having on hand all available information about band booking dates and costs, we can save student groups thousands of dollars on their social functions," Brenengen explained.

The committee will also furnish, at no charge to the groups contacting it, all its information on getting University sanction for a dance, buildings and available decorations, chaperones, concessions and invitations.

Brenengen's committee is composed of the president of the German club, the exchequer of the Grail, and a faculty member, Dean E. L. Mackie.

Union Will Sponsor Round, Square Dance Tonight in Y Court

Taking over the Y court this evening, Graham Memorial will sponsor an informal square dance from 8:30 through midnight, announced student union recreational director Nancy Tucker. Though recorded music will be furnished for tonight's affair, it is planned to round up local string bands for future square dances which will be held at regular intervals.

Round dance numbers will be interspersed during the evening, and dance leaders will be P. A. Lee, Betty Dosson, and Taylor Dodson.

The Carolina-Texas football game will be aired in the main lounge of Graham Memorial and also in the Rendezvous on the ground floor of the student union, at 3:15 this afternoon. It will also be aired at the University Veterans association club house.

To be featured in the Rendezvous, Graham Memorial's campus night club, this evening, will be Scotty Gardner and his well-known campus orchestra. The Rendezvous will be open from 3 o'clock this afternoon, and Gardner's band will play from 10 until midnight.

Among new Rendezvous features is the large fireplace at the south end of the room, surrounded by comfortable lounges, where marshmallows may be toasted. The refreshment bar is open from 6 o'clock in the evening through midnight, featuring Rendezvous specialties in sandwiches, priced from five to 30 cents, and pastries, soft drinks, and ice cream.

"We hope the students will make the Rendezvous their meeting place, to relax after a strenuous day, for refreshments and good company," commented Don English, Rendezvous director. "Later, if the students request it, we will open early in the afternoon."

lished on a firm international foundation, and with it the goodwill which prosperity brings."

Must Be Slow

Progress in the UN is bound to be slow, Sir John said, "but is it not better that we all advance along the same road, however slowly, provided that the road is straight and that we keep our destination before our eyes?"

Referring to the veto, Sir John said "it is not beyond the powers of men of good will and of the peace-loving nations to preserve the essential value of the veto without allowing its obvious drawbacks to vitiate this value. But, the veto apart, the UN is a free and equal assembly of sovereign states."

He emphasized that all the member nations must "sacrifice pride and prejudice. We must contribute to the common cause not only goods and services which can be measured in terms of work and money but our ideas, our hopes, our mental effort, and our political courage."

He said the greater emergency confronting the world as a whole is the choice of "poverty and hostility across the barricades of national boundaries or peace and prosperity."

Lincoln Kan, University senior and Army veteran and state director of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations, presided over tonight's session which marked the close of the three-day conference.

The British Minister and the Yugoslav Ambassador were honor guests at a banquet at the Carolina Inn preceding the speaking program.

Ambassador Kosanovic, in his address, said "I am the representative of a country which very often gets into the newspaper headlines and is often attacked and misrepresented."

Attacking the United States policy in Greece, Kosanovic stated that "unscrupulous elements in Greece exploit for their own endscovering their misdeeds with the authority of the United States—the deterioration of relations between the Soviet Union and the United States.

"If the people of Yugoslavia, after defeating fascism, had allowed the king to return it would have been as though George Washington, after the victory of the American Revolution, had again offered the crown to King George III and his Lords. Had that happened, he would not have been George Washington and the United States of America would not have developed into the great nation it is."

ORDERS FOR RINGS

The official ring committee of the University of North Carolina is now ready to receive orders for class rings. The committee is sponsored by the Order of the Grail, the members of which entertain bids from different companies to decide on quality and prices each year. Ring committee chairman Johnny Clampitt, Room 302 Aycock, will be in charge of taking all orders.

Yack Board Appoints 12 Section Editors To Aid in Publishing 500-Page Yearbook

The appointment of twelve section editors to assist them in the enormous job of preparing and issuing Carolina's 500-page Yackety-Yack was announced yesterday by board of editors, Gene Johnstone, Ruth Evans, and Harold Bursley. Under the overall supervision of the board, these students will handle the large volume of detail work in their particular sections.

The newly appointed section editors for the divisions devoted to the four classes are Gene Blake for the seniors, Jean Stantanburg, juniors, Margaret Gaston, sophomores, and Keat Coward, freshmen. Morty Schaap and Bob Goldwater, Daily Tar Heel sports staffers have been named co-editors of the sports section.

Barbara Stockton, coed lawyer, will head the professional schools section, Harriet Sipple, the section on general campus organizations, and Maebelle Emmans, the honoraries.

Editor for the sorority division will be Caddy Holt, and her colleagues for the fraternities will be Ed Pate and Bob Cash.

Johnstone also revealed that Les Bodden will supervise the photography and that Nell Evans will head the clerical staff. Co-ordinators for all sections are Bill Duncan and Spike Norwood.

Expressing confidence in the enthusiasm and potential ability of these new Yack workers, board member Evans stated that the opening and Beauty section editorships will be filled from among their number or by some other member of the staff whose early work merits the position.

The new editors will meet with Bursley at 10:00 this morning, and will assume their positions immediately. Other staff members who will assist the section editors in their department are the following: senior class, Danny McLean, Joyce Jones, Elaine Patton, Sadie Pearson, and Tookie Hodgson; junior class, Helen Phillips, Elinor Waltz, and Bill Brown; sophomore class, A. W. James, Charles Gibson, and Bert Kaplan; freshman class, Hamp Davis, Charles Pratt, and Alice Sharp; opening section, Mary F. Watson, Lindsey Tate, Gene Montgomery, and Simon Jacobson; professional, Molly Blackburn, Rachel Taylor, and Dover Ward; sports, Jack Girard and George Gizzard; organizations, Emily Ogburn, Myra Welsh, Anne Wells, Eldene Grogan, John Sevier, and John Stump; dance and beauty, Lil Hotard, Ida Constable, and Martha Ransford; fraternities, Dover Moore; sororities, Pat Lane and Kitty Miller; honoraries, Jess Caster, J. B. O'Neal, and Van McClellan; art, Tom Wharton, C. T. Bryant, Bob Enslenn, Luey H. Baxter, and Bill Harrison; photography, Wilson Yarborough and Bruce Harrison; and clerical, Eloise Jacobie, Myra Carter, and Barbara Dalton.

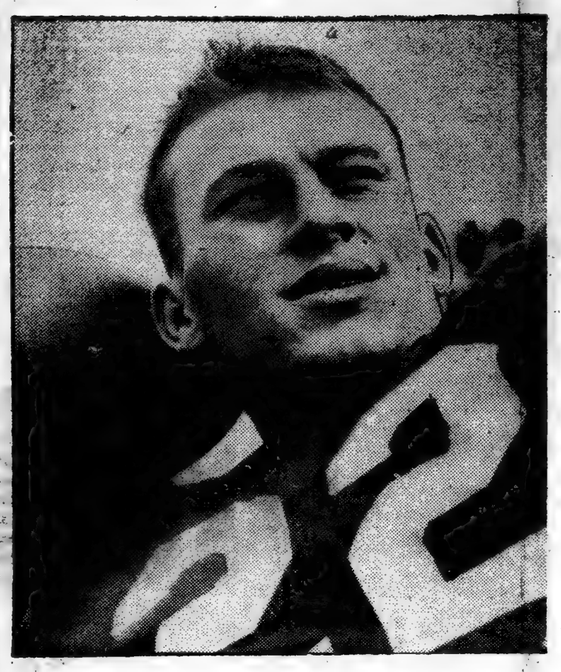
Layne-Led Longhorns Stun Tar Heels With Smashing 34-0 Victory

Veteran Cast Given 'Saint Joan' Roles

By Mark Sumner

A veteran cast is scheduled to handle roles in George Bernard Shaw's great modern classic, "Saint Joan," first major production of the Carolina Playmakers thirtieth season, according to an announcement by Director Hans Rothe last night, although seven new students will make their first appearances with the Playmakers.

The leading role of "Joan" will be portrayed by Eleanor Ringer of Asheville who appeared with the Playmakers during last season in "Hear the Hammers Ringing," 'State of the Union," and "Innocence." Frederick Johnson of Chico, Calif., who recently returned from acting in "The Lost Colony," and who appeared last season in "Hear the Hammers Ringing" and "Macbeth," will play the part of "Robert de Baudricourt.'



Strong Role

The strong role of "Dunois,' the French general, will be acted by Porter Van Zandt from Rochester, N. Y., recently with "The Lost Colony," who appeared last year in the Playmaker productions of "Drama at Inish," "Hear the Hammers Ringing," and "Macbeth." William Ayres of Roanoke, Va., holder of the Kay Kyser scholarship n idramatic art, is to play the "Archbishop of Rheims."

James Geiger of Miami, well-remembered actor from last season's major and minor productions, will play the "Inquisitor," and Robert Armstrong of Bessener, Alabama, remembered for his worn in "Hear the Hammers Ringing" and "Macbeth," will be seen as "Peter Couchon."

The sensitive role of the "Dauphin" will be handled by Frann Groseclose of Atlanta, Ga., who appeared last spring in "Innocence," and Winfred Logan of Akron, Ohio, featured player in "Hear the Hammers Ringing" and "Macbeth," will portray the political minded "Earl of Warwick." A. W. "Buddy" Westover, III, of Merchantsville, N. J., who appeared this summer in "The Late Christopher Bean" and "Outward Bound," will act "Chaplain de Stogumber."

Nat White of Birmingham, Alabama, heads the list of new students to appear in "Saint Joan." Other new faces include Clyde Thomas of Rock Hill, S. C., David Samples of Joliet, Ill., Robert Barr of Kansas City, Mo., Ed Duke, Bill Andrews of Greensboro, and Henry Hagan of Bonlee.

Texas Speed Spells Doom For Carolina

By Bob Goldwater

Austin, Texas, Oct. 4—Texas University's speedy Longhorns administered a sound drubbing to a highly-regarded North Carolina team, 34-0, here this afternoon before 46,000 fans who turned out to witness the intersectional clash.

Most observers had rated the two clubs as about even in pregame prognostications, and the ease with which Coach Blair Cherry's Texans marched to victory came as a great surprise to the big crowd, which sweltered under temperatures approaching the 90-degree mark.

Texas simply had too much speed for the Tar Heels, and Bobby Layne's passing arm turned out to be even better than expected. The Longhorn ground game was also potent, with Fullback Tom Landry, shifted from quarterback recently, ripping through the Carolina forwards for consistent gains.

Carolina moved when it got the ball, but those times were few, as the Longhorn squad held possession for most of the time. For example, in the third quarter Carolina had the ball only for nine downs while Texas ran 24 plays from scrimmage. The totals showed that Texas had the ball in its possession on 75 downs to 53 for the Tar Heels.

The loss was the first of the season for Coach Carl Snavely's Carolinians, while Texas now has a record of three straight wins, all by comfortable margins.

Carolina won the toss and elected to receive the opening kickoff. Jim Camp received the boot and returned to the 17, but the Texas defense held, forcing Charlie Justice to kick to the Texas 40-yard line. From that point the Longhorns galloped to their first score. Two line plays failed to gain any appreciable yardage for Texas, but on third down Landry bulled his way to the Carolina 44 for a first down.

Landry got to the 37 on another line buck, but a lateral play was broken up by Len Szafaryn for a seven-yard loss. The brilliant Layne then uncorked his first aerial of the afternoon, a long toss which landed in the arms of Byron Gillory on the 5, from whence the little Texan scampered over for the first score. Frank Guess added the extra point to provide Texas with a 7-0 margin after 5:30 in the first quarter.

There was no further scoring in the initial quarter, although the Tar Heels had one drive to fizzle on the Texas 20 when a fourth-down pass fell incomplete.

A fumble by Walt Pupa on the Carolina 22 early in the second quarter paved the way for the second score. On Texas' first

Dr. Guy Johnson To Give Address At Baptist Forum

The First Baptist Supper Forum of the quarter, this evening at 6 o'clock, will feature Dr. Guy Johnson as speaker. Dr. Johnson has returned to the Sociology department after two years' leave to direct the Southern Regional council. The supper itself will cost forty cents and the program will include a 15-minute devotional period under the direction of Miss Gertrude Osborne, devotional vice-president of the group. The speaker will be introduced by Don Broad, social action committee chairman, who will preside.

The Baptist Student Union gets its full program under way tomorrow with a schedule of activities beginning at 9:15. At that time a special pre-Sunday school breakfast will be served to those students who have found it inconvenient to compete for breakfast in the crowded restaurants and cafeterias on Sunday morning. At 9:45, the Sunday school will hold its opening exercises, after which the students will adjourn to classes especially designed to meet the needs of the Carolina student. The church worship service at 11:00 will include special observance of World Communion Sunday.

Beginning Monday, the Baptist Student Union plans to conduct a mid-day watch service to be held at Gerard Hall at 1:05 each afternoon. These services will be conducted by various

Randy Brooks and Orchestra Tentatively Scheduled To Feature Fall German Dances

By Laurence Fox

Randy Brooks and his orchestra and vocalist Marion Hutton are tentatively scheduled to feature the Fall Germans which will be held October 31 and November 1, the weekend of the Carolina-Tennessee game.

Negotiations have not yet been completed with the Ailsbrook-Humphry Agency of Richmond, but confirmation is expected by tonight or tomorrow.

The gala week end which has been a tradition here since before the first World War will consist of dances in Woollen gymn Friday and Saturday evenings and a concert Friday afternoon. These events will be sandwiched around the crucial Tennessee football game. The Saturday dance, to which the entire Tarheel football squad will be invited, is expected to be transformed into a victory hop commemorating the defeat of the Volunteers.

There will be no public sale of tickets to the series of musical events but tickets turned back by any of the thirteen member fraternities will be made available to the student body.

Each fraternity member will be assessed approximately five dollars to help defray the proposed $5,000 budget and he will then be entitled to his tickets. Tickets sold to the general public will also retail at five dollars.

The German club has experienced a great deal of difficulty in securing a name band for the first of their three big week ends this year. Vaughan Monroe, Benny Goodman, and Jimmy Dorsey were all approached, but previous commitments made it impossible for them to appear. Arrangements with Louis Armstrong for both his band and the all-star jazz aggregation with which he is now playing reached the same stage as have the negotiations with Randy Brooks. However, the German club was informed at the last minute that Armstrong's band would be unable to get to Chapel Hill from Chicago for the engagement.

Both dances will be strictly formal and the Friday and Saturday night attractions will last from 9-1 and 8-12, respectively.

"We are looking forward to a successful weekend," said Bob Ettenger, president of the German club, "and we hope to have final confirmation from Richmond on Randy Brooks and Marion Hutton by Monday morning."

The other officers of the German club are Bill Tate, vice-president; Jesse Jernigan, treasurer; and Frank Frazer, secretary.

Interfrat Council To Meet Tomorrow

The Interfraternity Council will hold its first meeting of the Fall quarter tomorrow night at 7:15 in the Grail room of Graham Memorial, President Leon Todd announced today. The purpose of the meeting is to discuss plans for the forthcoming rush-week and coed visiting agreements. All members are urged to be present.

President Todd requests that all Freshmen and new students who are interested in joining one of the Fraternities drop by the Y as soon as possible and sign one of the cards provided by the various groups.

CPU Will Meet Tonight in GM

The Carolina Political Union will hold its first regular meeting of the year tonight at 8 o'clock in the Grail room at Graham Memorial. The round-table discussion will concern itself with the answer of the sixteen European nations to the Marshall plan. Bill Patterson will introduce the topic, after which the floor will be thrown open for discussion to all at the meeting.

Visitors are cordially encouraged to come and to participate in the discussion. There are still a number of vacancies in the Union and all those interested are urged to apply for membership.

Library Exhibit Will Honor Cervantes, Famous Spanish Author of 'Don Quixote'

By Sally Woodhull

Featured exhibit to be shown for the first time this week in the lobby of the library will be a display honoring the famous Spanish writer, Cervantes, in commemoration of the 400th anniversary of his birth.

Although the exact date of his birth is not known, Miguel de Cervantes Saavedra was baptized on October 9, 1547, in Alcala de Henares, Spain. Author of "Don Quixote," which has been called the world's most popular novel, Cervantes once prophesied, jokingly, that the book would sell 30 million copies. At present that figure has almost been reached, while a book such as "Gone with the Wind" has sold only about three and a half million copies.

Rare Editions

Included in the exhibit will be rare editions of "Don Quixote" in both Spanish and translated versions. The novel has been translated into more languages than any other book published except the Bible. In another case will be shown editions of Cervantes' other works, among them his long short stories, "Novelas Ejemplares." Still another case will be devoted to biographies of the 16th century novelist and to criticisms of his writings, while the fourth case will be filled with pictures, including one by the French artist Daumier.

Mrs. N. B. Adams of the Extension division of the library has prepared the exhibit, using, as in all displays, materials from the library's own collections. She has been assisted by Prof. Stirling A. Stoudemire of the Spanish department, who contributed several rare editions of his own. Mr. Roberto Baessa of the Spanish department contributed a hand carved, native mahogany statue of Don Quixote which he purchased while in Guatemala during the summer.

Designed primarily to show the tremendous influence which Cervantes has had on world literature, the exhibit will replace the one on the Raleigh Story, which has been up since the opening of this term. The display on the History of Bookbinding, also up since the opening of school, will remain for several weeks.

GM Set To Be Host To Jazz Musicians On Next Wednesday

Graham Memorial plays host to local jazz musicians next Wednesday afternoon, in continuation of its stepped-up music program. Two hours of unrehearsed music is to begin at 4 o'clock.

Musicians and jazz enthusiasts alike are invited, and those musicians desiring to participate are requested to bring their instruments, with the exception of the ones mentioned below. Interest has been shown recently to such an extent, in a program of this nature, that G.M. Director Bill Shuford has set aside Graham Memorial Rendezvous for these weekly sessions.

Musical director Phil Couch has tentatively laid plans to have a moderator, whose job it will be to keep the program moving. He will also be responsible for obtaining a drummer and a bass fidler. This is necessary, it was explained, because of the need for only one of each of these instruments, and would prevent any situation such as two sets of drums etc. This week's moderator will be Jack Burney, senior from Charlotte.

Rypins Will Address Religious Study Group

Rabbi F. Rypins of the Temple Emanuel congregation in Greensboro will speak at 7 o'clock tomorrow evening on the second floor of the YMCA building.

Under the sponsorship of a YWCA religious study group, he will speak on "The Background of the Hebrew Religion and Some of Its Present Day Implications." A question period will follow.

The meeting is open to all interested persons.

Welcome Back Rally Set This Afternoon

A special welcoming back rally for the Tar Heel football team has been set for this afternoon at 5:45 at Woollen gymnasium, announced Myrt Sherard, head cheerleader. The team will arrive by special busses from the Raleigh-Durham airport, after a six-hour flight from Austin, which they left this morning.

Head cheerleader Sherard issued a call last night for the entire student body to be present, stating, "Let's have the greatest pep rally in history this afternoon and show the team we're right behind them all the way.

"This is the best time in the world to prove the fighting Carolina spirit is greater, better, and louder than ever. We know it. Let's prove it to the team."

"Let's carry every one of them off of the busses and give them a roaring cheer and great start for the rest of the season."

Dr. Graham Assumes UN Position At Informal Ceremony; Leaves Today

By Bill Sexton

Dr. Frank Graham assumed office as U. S. representative to the United Nations Indonesian commission yesterday afternoon in a private ceremony in his South Building office, and leaves today for Washington for conferences with the U. S. State department on his latest government assignment.

J. A. Warren, University treasurer, administered the oath of office and presided over completion of President Graham's credentials. The ceremony, originally scheduled for Thursday morning, had been postponed because of late arrival of Dr. Graham's credentials from the White House and a series of conferences in Greensboro and Raleigh on interim administration of the University.

During President Graham's expected absence of two months from the campus, a consolidated administrative council will conduct the affairs of the University, President Graham announced yesterday. Members of the council include Controller W. D. Carmichael, Jr., and the chancellors of the three units of the institution.

Henry P. Brandis, law professor named by Secretary of State Marshall to be special assistant to Dr. Graham, will accompany the president to Washington today.

Protem Yack Editors Deny They Said Veterans Started School in Late 20's

By John Stump

Yackety-Yack board of editors deny that they accuse any veterans students of having started their college careers back in the late '20's. "Although some of us will never see 25 again," says board member Gene Johnstone, "I do not believe that even the youngest freshman can maintain that our college careers go back that far."

Nevertheless the editors are looking for several old copies of the Yack to fill out their files. Missing copies include the issues for 1923, '25, '26, '28, and '29. But the board members attitude in the matter is not just that of antique collecters either.

The editors of these old copies often provide their present-day successors with valuable tips on the make-up and organization of the big, colorful annual. Copies of those issues now on file in the Yack office are frequently consulted for the tried solution to one of the many problems which arise in the course of a working day.

According to board member Harold Bursley, these "back Yacks" provide a record of the background and development of what we call the Carolina tradition. Bursley maintains that possession of these records enables the Yack staff to provide the students with a picture of "how the university has progressed over the years as seen through the Yack."

The copies of the early 1900s are also among the missing. Despite all the debunking, traditions are great things. So if grandmother has saved her copy, how about stealing it from her and sending it along?

Welcome The Team!

It's just times like these when the Carolina Spirit can really prove itself.

The Tar Heels took a helluva licking yesterday in Austin.—Their worst defeat in several years. There's nothing to cheer for about the Texas game.

That's past; long past as far as we're concerned. But there are still eight games left on the schedule, and one of the ruggedest, fightingest Tar Heel grid clubs in history, to play them. That means plenty.

But a team isn't all that wins ball games. It takes the whole student body of 7528 Carolina students, backing up the team to the limit to win ball games. We all—every one of us—owe a lot to those fighting Tar Heels.

So let's EVERYONE of us be at Woollen gym to greet the team back this afternoon. Prove to 'em our 156-year-old Carolina spirit is at its best when the going is toughest. Let's haul those Tar Heels off the busses and give them the greatest welcome home they've ever had.

As President Frank Graham said after the Sugar Bowl loss last year, "Here's to the Tar Heels; glorious in victory, gallant in defeat.—They never stopped fighting."

Treasurer To Speak At Di-Phi Banquet

Charles M. Johnson, state treasurer, will be principal speaker at the Di-Phi banquet to be held at the Carolina Inn 6:30 Tuesday evening. The banquet will adjourn at 8:30 to the Phi hall, fourth floor New East, where newly elected officers of the Philanthropic society will be inaugurated.

Also on the program is the initiation of new members into the society. New initiates are: Robert Coulter, W. R. Erwin, Philip Morris, James Stallings, and James Patton.

The meeting will be concluded with a short talk by Mr. Johnson on the history and work of the Phi. All students are invited to attend the ceremonies.

A Graham Memorial of the Past

Graham Memorial means much more to us than the average student at the University. And we do not make this statement just because the building happens to be the home of this publication. First impressions have a tendency to dominate the human mind. Our first impression of the Graham Memorial student union was such that we have never forgotten. It was during the years preceding the war when the campus centered around Graham Memorial. It had the atmosphere that was conducive to bull-sessions in the main lounge. It had the inviting air that blended in with the formal discussions that groups held in its inner sanctums. It was a place where a fellow could take his date and spend an enjoyable evening. It had informality and continual activity.

During the war years, it fell in popularity. Perhaps it was the fault of the directors. Maybe the students were too busy under their academic load, and the effects of the V-12 and other military programs on campus were detrimental to a good Student Union that would be used by all.

But fortunately, after several dormant years, Graham Memorial is again budding. We believe that the factor that has been most predominant in the rejuvenated Student Union is Bill Shuford, director—a director who was on the campus in the pre-war days and remembers what the Student Union building meant to the campus and its potentialities.

And Bill Shuford is developing Graham Memorial's potentialities to the fullest. This column has already expounded on the Interest Indicator Cards that Shuford added to the files to be used by campus organizations that sought the aid of new students interested in various student activities. He has installed a mimeograph machine to facilitate campus organizations in disseminating material on the campus. This use of the mimeograph machine is available to any organization or individual student for a small fee to cover the cost of operation.

The Student Union building was the headquarters of counselors and new students during orientation week and it continues to be headquarters for many of them still. A tribute in itself to the indefat gable efforts of Bill Shuford.

Four Freedoms and Yugoslavia

Yugoslavian Ambassador Sava N. Kasanovic mounted the platform of Hill hall Friday night under auspices of the CCUN and delivered what he termed an undiplomatic talk for a diplomat. In the usual pattern of a forum of this kind the floor was open for questions following his speech. It was evident that Ambassadar Kasanovic had not achieved his purpose—that of convincing the audience that Yugoslavia was virtuous and filled with the four freedoms. In his heavy foreign accent, Cheshire-cat grin, and moppy red-greyish hair, he lauded his country for their freedom of religion and the others. He stated that Yugoslavia had a freedom of the press, anyone could write what he wished. Then he added quickly. "But he is responsible for what he says." This drew a big laugh from the audience. And Dr. C. B. Robson, head of the Political Science department who requested that Kasanovic elaborate on his statement on the freedoms, had found his answer.

There was one freedom that the Ambassador did not try to convince the audience to believe. The freedom that gives a reporter the right to move freely about Yugoslavia and observe for himself these freedoms.

In Friday afternoon's paper (we arbitrarily picked Friday's paper because it was the day of his speech) is an article by a United Press correspondent, Edgar Clark, stating the difficulties of getting around in the Yugoslav-occupied "free State of Trieste."

According to Clark, the reporters were armed with what they believed was the proper credentials to move freely around in the territory, but no they were ordered to stop, told the various passes in their possession were worthless and escorted back to the border. If the Yugoslavian government is so filled with the virtues of the four freedoms, then reporters should be allowed to see them for themselves and corroborate the claims of the Ambassador.

Sometimes 'Our Bob' Makes Sense

As much as we hate to admit it, "Our Bob" Reynolds, who some years ago was a senator from this state, sometimes makes sense to our way of thinking.

"We've got no business expecting another war," he said in Raleigh earlier this week, and that, to us, seems one of the brightest things the Washington and Asheville lawyer has ever said.

The reason we don't like to agree with "Our Bob" is because he was an isolationist during the past war and everybody, including Walter Winchell, knows that isolationists were supposed to be rats, cowards and, furthermore, unpatriotic slackers.

Maybe then, but not now. NOT the way we look at it anyway. We believe that the veteran stand on politics is overwhelmingly isolationist now—whether they like the word or not. The fact remains that only the captains-turned-sodajerks want to go to war again.

"Our Bob" knows about that. The Raleigh News and Observer reports that the 63-year-old Reynolds is thinking about a political comeback. If the vet sentiment remains unchanged for three more years, it might be a successful comeback.

Just in case, here's a Reynolds syllabus (cribbed from his latest words in the N&O):

The United States is becoming Americanized (apparently Reynoldsese for isolationist).

We have no reason to fear war with Russia; the masses of that country would not allow the communists to start one.

Don't send any money to Italy because the Italian farmers, "millions" of them, are out on strike.

There is more from Reynolds on aliens (he doesn't like 'em) and about preparations for war (we're making 'em) but those remarks we've listed above will give you a pretty good slant on "Our Bob."—R.S.

A New York judge, sp king his mind to a prisoner at the bar, called im "a holdup man, a gunman, a thief, an associate of every big-shot gangster that operates in the Nation, a leader of a ring smuggling dope from Mexico and a gambler"—in other words, everything except a politician.

A soldier is supposed to be able to endure any kind of punishment. This is the thought, undoubtedly, that sustains Gen. Marshall as he submits to all the honorary degrees showered upon him.

Blasts Markham's Book

Kosanovic Visits Press

By Bill Sexton

Sava Kosanovic, the smiling Yugoslav diplomat who arrived in North Carolina with a criticism of the University Press on his lips, continued his campaign against "Tito's Imperial Communism" at an informal visit to the offices of the University Press yesterday morning.

Kosanovic's direct, bluntly-voiced address Friday evening may have been the most significant speech heard during CCUN's United Nations Week. But his visit to the UNC press, unique probably in the experience of any American publishing house, was in this writer's opinion by far the most significant happening of the three-day conference.

Under the Yugoslav ambassador's arm when he stepped off his plane at Raleigh-Durham air port Friday was a copy of R. H. Markham's controversial book, published this fall at Chapel Hill. It was a well-thumbed volume, and Kosanovic's denunciation of it has proven far more direct and blunt than his none-too-gently-worded blasts at U. S policy in Greece and his sharp defense of the veto.

Kosanovic, ranking representative abroad of a European power ever growing in importance, was received at the University Press by Mrs. Alice Paine, chief of the editorial department. As throughout his visit at Chapel Hill he was the smiling diplomat, but he lost no time in criticizing Markham.

"It is unfortunate," Kosanovic told Mrs. Paine, "that a man recognized as an authority in the U. S. should write about a subject on which he is definitely not an authority."

Kosanovic declared that Markham had not been on Yugoslav soil since 1936, comparing his knowledge of Yugoslavia's new government to that of "an exiled White Russian writing on the present-day Soviet." Since Markham's last visit to Kosanovic's nation, he said, Yugoslavia had undergone a revolution, occupation by Germany, and a new government.

Mrs. Paine, who carried diplomacy somewhat further than the ambassador, agreed that Markham was "an emotional writer." She listened patiently as Kosanovic censured Markham for what he called unfair generalizations which the ambassador quoted as "time and again" beginning with "I may not be sure, but I think . . ."

"Superficial," said Kosanovic; "superficial, distorted, contradictory."

And the ambassador's gentle wrath was directed toward the press itself. "The pattern of thinking used by this Markham," Kosanovic charged, "is somewhat in contrast with the liberal, logical pattern of thought for which Chapel Hill has become famous throughout the world."

Mottsman Lashes Tomeh Talk

(Editor's note: The following article by Dick Mottsman of 39 Old West was intended as a contribution to our public forum, "Write Away" but since it is a trifle longer than the usual letter we are printing it in the form of a column.)

May I be given space to violently disagree with George Tomeh, Syrian Charge d'Affaires in Washington, who Thursday night gave his Chapel Hill audience a glowing account of the war record of the Arabs during both World Wars.

Arab spokesmen have apparently come to believe that the true facts of Arab pro-Nazi activity have been forgotten. Mr. Tomeh's statement that the Arab nations contributed to Allied victories is an amazing perversion of history.

Here are some pertinent facts concerning several Arab delegates at Lake Success:

1) Fadhil al Jamali, delegate from Iraq: Lavishly entertained on numerous occasions by Nazis. As member of Iraq's Ministry of Education, he worked on behalf of Germans and against British.

2) Raif el Khouri, U.N. delegate from Lebanon: Aided and sympathized with pro-Axis uprising in Iraq.

3) Farid Aein Ed Din, delegate from Syria: Worked on behalf of Iraqi rebels (1941) at a time when Axis victory seemed certain.

4) Haj Amin el Husseini, ex-Grand Mufti of Jerusalem: Spent the war in Germany, engaging in propaganda, espionage, and was one step ahead of the Nazis in the murder of 5,000,000 Jews. According to Drew Pearson in the publication of State Department document (not denied by State Department), Husseini has well-coached all the Arab delegates at Lake Success. The Mufti's nephew is one of the delegation leaders.

In the first World War, the Arabs of Palestine did not help to liberate the country. They fought with the Turks against the British or deserted in large numbers to become prisoners of war, fed and sheltered by the British Army.

During the second World War, the British strained to keep the Arabs neutral. Glubb Pasha, commander of the Transjordan Arab Legion writes, discussing the Iraq revolt of 1941:

"During the six weeks before the fall of Baghdad, every Arab was convinced that we (the British) were done for. Every Arab force previously organized by us mutinied and refused to fight for us, or faded away in desertions."

During the war the head of the Palestine Arab Higher committee was broadcasting Nazi propaganda from Berlin and congratulating Hitler on his African victories over the Allies.

Evidence presented here has been taken from documentary reports presented to the U.N.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Mr. Truman and the Presidents

Washington.—When film actor Edward Arnold was in Washington recently, he called at the White House with Carter Barron of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to present President Truman with a leather-bound album of American Presidents' portraits.

Thumbing through the 32 portraits, Truman kept his guests entertained with biographical comments about his predecessors.

"This particular likeness of Tyler," he said of the 10th President, Virginia's John Tyler, "is reputed to be the greatest work of art of all the Presidential portraits. You know, I haven't told this to many people, but I am supposed to be distantly related to the old fellow on my mother's side."

Truman's eyes gleamed when he came to the portrait of Andrew Jackson.

"There was a man for you!" he exclaimed. "A real fighter for the rights of the people. He also know how to take care of himself. He didn't need a bodyguard. When he was once attacked by a would-be assassin with a knife as he left the Treasury Department, Jackson took the knife away from the man and was about to give him a good going-over with his fists when he was pulled off."

Arnold, now doing a series of radio sketches of our Presidents for the American Broadcasting Company, finally commented:

"My goodness, Mr. President, maybe we should get the ABC research staff down here to confer with you before proceeding with my program."

It isn't being advertised but top Zionist leaders have found General Marshall cold and noncommittal toward the United Nations settlement of Palestine. Apparently the Arabs made headway when Marshall entertained them at his secret dinner at Fort Totten, New York. . . . Marshall took the white-robed camel-drivers out to his old military post in order to avoid the newspapers. . . . The U.S. Army is preparing a super-super secret military mission to Arabia. The troops are elaborately screened, all men must be highly trained specialists, sworn to great secrecy, must take training in secret codes, reconnaissance and demolition work. During the war there were fewer complaints about caste-system abuses in the Marine Corps than in any other branch of our fighting forces—with the possible exception of the infantry's paratroopers.

Now that we are back on the peacetime "brass" standard, however, the Marine Corps seems to have deserted its famed standard for democratic treatment of enlisted men. One sore spot is the Naval Gun Factory in Washington, where Col. Harold E. Rosecrans, Commander of the Marine Barracks, has been working some of his enlisted personnel from 8 A.M. until 10 P.M.

These long hours (they don't pay for overtime in the armed services) started when Rosecrans was instructed by the Marine Inspector General's Office to install a new accounting system at the gun factory. Rosecrans wasn't told to expedite the job to the extent of working Marines 14 hours a day, six days a week, but that is what he's doing.

When Tom Dewey visited Cheyenne, Wyoming, the GOP Liquor Control Committee put the bee on the whiskey distillers for the first time in history to furnish free liquor for the Dewey reception. Bull-headed Congressman Harold Knutson of Minnesota finally persuaded his Ways and Means Committee to vote $25,000 to pay the expenses of a Wall Street-dominated committee of tax advisers. But when the Wall Streeters submitted their tax recommendations, Knutson refused to let other members of the committee see the results. Consider the Sport Boxing

Fellow Students:

Boxing has been dropped from the winter schedule of sport activities. You probably didn't know about this until now. This is one example to show that the Athletic department does not consider it important enough to mention this fact, but if any other sport had been dropped, especially, football or basketball, everyone in school would have known about it. Boxing is supposed to have been a major sport in the University, but it has only received minor consideration.

I was told that boxing was dropped by the Athletic Council because of lack of interest, too many nose injuries, and the large number of undesirable characters that have boxed for the University of North Carolina. These reasons were given to me by a member of the Athletic Council and I feel that the latter reasoning is an insult to all former and present members of the University's boxing team.

As for lack of interest, football would have little more interest if it received as little consideration and publicity as boxing has received. Last year at the Sugar Bowl contest the Syracuse boxers told me that they had 75 men out for the boxing team. I understand they give out scholarships and have training table for the men. Could this be where the lack of interest lies?

As for nose injuries or any other kind of injuries, I don't believe that boxing in college even on a percentage basis, is anywhere close to football in that category. How many boxers in college do you know that have received permanent injuries or have become punchy due to boxing with ten ounce gloves?

Boxing had a poor season last year, a number of men dropped from the squad and a number of boys were put in the ring with no experience or training. Get the reasons for these conditions and you will have your answer to why boxing has failed in the University. The Athletic Council has taken the easy-way out instead of investigating this matter. Maybe it is because the Athletic Department doesn't want boxing here and have seized an opportune time to drop the sport.

Sincerely yours,
Dick Young

Rogers, Fitch, Clements Shine In Losing Cause

The Sporting Picture

By Billy Carmichael

The Thundering Herd

There was no joy in Chapel Hill or Brooklyn last night as the once mighty Tar Heels of North Carolina and the Dodgers of Brooklyn failed to produce their famous last minute rallies and went down to defeat, the former to a thundering herd of Texas Longhorns and the latter to the New York Yankees. In fact, the Tar Heels failed to produce much of anything, and it is doubted that even Cookie Lavagetto could have done the locals much good. It just wasn't the Tar Heels' day.

There are no excuses or alibis to be offered. Figuring a touchdown each off for the weather, the officiating, the injuries, and the trip down, the Texans would have still won by seven points, which is a sign of the licking the Tar Heels underwent.

No matter how hot it might have been, there was nothing in the sky that shone as brightly as Texan Bobby Layne who did everything with a football yesterday that it is humanly possible for one radio announcer to describe, and a little more to boot. Speed and conditioning were two things the lads of Coach Carl Snavely were unable to match.

To those to remain at home there was nothing to do, but to take it standing up or sitting down, as you may have preferred. Large tears in each eye were the order of the day for all coeds and weaker male students, and for the rest there was but one way out.

Let us not be hasty in chastising our team. They were the best we had to send and there is no doubt they did the best they could under the existing conditions. Carolina teams have won more glorious victories than Texas did yesterday, and suffered greater defeats too. As a gridiron power the Tar Heels are still to be heard from, barring anything Jack Horner or anyone else may say.

A Devastating Silence

The little village of Chapel Hill was shrouded in almost a devastating silence last night. Its residents wandered aimlessly about the streets with looks varying all the way from bewilderment through confusion to resentment. It was a hard blow to absorb, but for the most part they took it in the true spirit with eyes turned to the eight big games that still remain on the schedule.

On paper the Tar Heels look a little better than they do on the scoreboard. They completed two more passes than the Torrid Texans did, and out punted their rivals also, possibly because they had more necessity to. The locals also gained more yards on penalties than the Longhorns did, showing the officials did everything in their legal power to get the Tar Heels back into the ball game. The Tar Heels just weren't for the getting.

The Texas lads were not long putting the Carolina boys behind the 8-ball. They scored their initial touchdown before the average listener had had time to let his radio warm up, and gave the Tar Heel fans the gloomy personality from the start. But at that point, hopes were still high, and even after the Texans had added another tally, most of the Carolina rooters were convinced the Longhorns were laboring under the effects of extreme luckiness. The third enemy touchdown caused corners of a few more mouths to fall, but still, the Tar Heels had a reputation of being slow starters and probably didn't want to disappoint the Texas fans by failing to live up to their advance notices.

Near the end of the first half, Carolina stock took its first raise as the Tar Heels rammed deep into Texas territory as Art Weiner made a knocked-out catch of a Justice forward pass and ironically got knocked out in the process. This effort incurred four yards short of the goal line and a sudden shortage of time balked the Tar Heel effort to break into the scoring column.

The Sighs of Texas

Fifteen minutes later all local listeners returned to their positions at their radios and sat down to hear the rejuvenated Tar Heels catch fire and trample the Longhorns. But though the trailers put on somewhat of a drive, it did not score and thusly, the Tar Heel position on the all important scoreboard was not improved. The longhorns though, it seems, were of a different school, and having gotten the scoring habit, fell addicted to it to the tune of tallying twice more in the allotted thirty minutes. That they didn't do more damage can be attributed to a goal line stand by the Snavelymen that warmed a few scattered Tar Heel hearts.

The Tar Heels showed a lot of offensive power to lose as badly as they did. They could march from thirty to thirty with the greatest of ease, but lacked the old socko to put the ball across those all-important double striped lines. At several points in the game they suffered from the inability to get their hands on the ball with the Texas crew showing as much willingness to give it up as the Russians might their veto power.

In summing up the events of the day, one fact stands above all the rest—our Tar Heels were beaten, and beaten badly, and the main cause of the defeat can probably be traced to the fact that they faced a superior team. Possibly, another day, it might have been a different story, but yesterday there was no doubt who was the better team. Yet, the season is young and so are we, and football games will continue to be won, lost and tied for years to come.

Today, in the late afternoon, the Tar Heels will come home, with their heads on the chests and the feeling they have let us down. It is up to the students of the University to prove that they are wrong.

Yet, 'twas a smart man that made the remark, "sure as death and Texas." From the Tar Heel point of view, they were quite a combination.

play after the fumble, Co-Captain Ray Jones threw the first pass of his career, and that too went for a touchdown. Towering Ralph Blount was the recipient of the toss. Guess' successful conversion made the score read 14-0 for Texas.

An exchange of punts midway in the second frame was the starting point of the Longhorns' final tally of the first half. The drive started on the Tar Heel 46, with a 24 yard run by Landry and a 13-yard jaunt by Gillory eating up the major portion of the distance.

Landry scored the touchdown on a short buck, with Guess missing the extra point on this occasion.

With only a few minutes remaining in the half, Carolina made its greatest scoring bid. Starting on the NC 38, Pupa tossed to Art Weiner on the Texas 33 for a first down. Justice got to the 31 on a run, and another Pupa to Weiner toss was ruled complete on interference, giving the Chapel Hill boys a first down on the 26. Justice then passed to Weiner, who made a great catch on the 3-yard line just as the half ended. Weiner was knocked out on the play.

As the second half opened, Texas drove all the way from its 2 to the Tar Heel 1, only to have a brilliant goal line stand make the march fruitless. The men from the plains had a first down on the Carolina 3 but three running plays by Landry and one by Layne failed to dent the Tar Heel forward wall. Joe Romano and Bobby Weant were the standouts in the defense. There was no score in the third quarter, although both Texas and Carolina had drives. Jack Fitch and Hosea Rodgers sparked the Carolina surge which carried from the Carolina 31 to the Texas 16, where a pass interception nipped the threat.

The final quarter saw Texas turn the game into a real rout. A short line plunge by Randall Clay accounted for a score early in the period, and Guess was true with the extra point. The second string Texas backfield was also able to score against the tiring Tar Heels in the closing minutes, with Clay again going over from close range.

BYRON GILLORY, speedy University of Texas halfback who scored the Longhorns' first touchdown yesterday. He also pulled down Jack Fitch from behind after the Tar Heel back had returned a kickoff 61 yards.

Tar Heels Find That Texas Is A Rough 'Layne' of Roses

By Bob Goldwater

Memorial Stadium, Austin, Tex., Oct. 4.—Close to 95,000 eyes of Texas are gazing in astonishment on 38 young men from North Carolina at this moment, 20 minutes before the kickoff as the Tar Heels limber up in T shirts in place of shoulder pads and jerseys.

The reason for Coach Carl Snavely's strategy becomes very obvious when one leaves the cooling shadows of the press box. An extremely hot sun has made the Tar Heels very uncomfortable and the Longhorns, accustomed to the weather, will undoubtedly make things even hotter for the Carolinians in the next two hours.

Actually, the 90-plus temperature has been the only unwelcome feature thus far during the visit to Austin. The team has fine accommodations in the Stephen F. Austin hotel, right in the center of the Lone Star capital city. The hotel lobby was overrun all morning with scores of well-wishers, including Carolina students who made the long journey, Carolina alumni from all over the Old North State and many more alumni from dowa Texas way.

The sports writers in this area have been very kind to the Tar Heels and the papers have been full of pictures, statistics, and other information on the Carolina team.

Carolina sports publicity chief, Jake Wade, with whom this reporter flew down, kept all the Texas newspapers right up to date with the facts and figures on the Tar Heel eleven and the newspapers have reciprocated with much favorable publicity.

Speaking of our personal trip down here, we traveled in some rather important company one day ahead of the team. With us on board the three air liners that brought us to this state where everything grows big were, in addition to Wade, Coach Bob Fetzer and O. K. Cornwell, of the Carolina Athletic department; Dick Herbert, sports editor of the Raleigh News and Observer; and Ray Reeve, who will broadcast the game back to Carolina.

Before the team's arrival, we spent most of our time looking around the Texas athletic facilities guided by Bill Sansing, the Longhorn's counterpart to Jake Wade. Their gym, like the rest of the athletic setup, takes after the whole state—big and spacious. And Memorial stadium is no exception.

The Tar Heels returned to the field from their dressing room several minutes ago and this time they're dressed according to Hoyle—blue jerseys with big white numbers.

One such number—22—is especially of interest to the Longhorn rooters, who are anxious to compare its holder, Choo Choo Charlie Justice, with their own number 22, blond Bobby Layne.

Shea, DiMaggio, Yankees' Standouts In 2-1 Series Victory Over Dodgers

Brooklyn, N. Y.—(UP)—Chubby hurler Frank Shea delivered in the clutch this afternoon for the New York Yankees by holding the rebounding Brooklyn Dodgers to four scattered hits while his mates were putting together five hits and eleven bases on balls for a 2-1 victory.

Sheat wasn't helped any, either, by the failure of the Yank "sluggers", as in Friday's contest, to hit with men on base. Today it was a terrific homer into the upper left field stands by Joe DiMaggio, who failed to hit three other times with men on base, that gave the Yankee rookie mound ace his winning margin.

Surprise Dodger starting pitcher Rex Barney, who apparently was out to break the base-on-balls record set yesterday by New Yorker Bill Bevens, and his three relievers held the New Yorkers to only five hits but three of them went for extra bases.

Barney lasted four and two-thirds innings before being relieved by southpaw Joe Hatten. Young Rex displayed a blazing fast ball and a jug-handle curve during his outing out he was unable to get the ball over the plate and walked nine men and gave up both New York runs before he was lifted.

Although getting men on base in each of the first three innings, it was not until the fourth that the Yankees were able to score and it was chunker Shea's single into left on which catcher Aaron Robinson scored from second that did it. Robinson had been walked by Barney, had moved to second when Phil Rizzuto strolled, and then scored on Shea's bingle.

Shea teed off on one of Fireman Hugh Casey slants in the eighth inning when he blasted a double off the left field wall. He moved to third on a passed ball by Dodger receiver Bruce Edwards but was stranded when Stirnweiss was fanned by Casey for the final out.

DiMaggio's blast, coming in the fifth frame and called the hardest hit ball of the series by observers, gave the "Connecticut Yankee" a 2-0 margin.

The Dodgers came right back in their half of the next inning, however, to push over a single tally when the rapidly tiring Shea walked pinch-swinger Al Gionfriddo, shortstop Pee Wee Reese, and let Jackie Robinson bang a single off his glove that scored Gionfriddo and sent Reese to third. However, he settled down after this and forced Walker to foul out to third baseman Bill Johnson and got Hermanski on a long fly to DiMaggio in center.

The Dodgers threatened weakly in the last of the ninth when Bruce Edwards lined a single to left for his first hit of the game. Vic Lombardi went in to run for him and was sacrificed to second by Furillo's perfect sacrifice bunt. However, Jergenson flied out to Henrich in deep right and Shea ended a brilliant performance on the mound by fanning pinch hitter Cookie Lavagetto for the final out.

New York manager Bucky Harris announced in the dressing rooms that burly Allie Reynolds, victor over the Bums in the second game, would open on the hill tomorrow in Yankee Stadium where the sixth and, if necessary, seventh games will be played.

Sports Classes Set For Veteran Wives

Physical education classes for wives of veterans will begin Monday evening at 8 o'clock in the Woman's Gym, Mrs. Ruth Fink, director of woman's, announced yesterday.

Fundamentals of modern dance and swimming will be offered. A swimming privilege card from the infirmary will be necessary for membership in the swimming class. Classes will be held every Monday evening from 8 until 9 o'clock.

TENNIS PRACTICE

Although Coach John Kenfield of the Carolina raquet weilders is not yet in town his squad has started workouts on the courts.

Such men as Vic Seixas, Clark Taylor and Ray Morris, of last year's squad are already pounding the little white agate daily. Practice is under the direction of Jack Kenfield, one of last year's lettermen and son of the Tar Heel mentor.

Indian Expert Will Lecture

Presante Chandra Mebalanobis, the Indian representative on the United Nations Statistical commission, honorary secretary of the Indian Statistical Institute and head of the physics department of Presidency college, Calcutta, is to give a series of lectures at the University this coming week, it was announced today by Dr. Harold Hotelling, head of the University's department of mathematical statistics.

Professor Mabalanobis will give one nontechnical address of interest to the general public. This will be on "Some Indian Problems from the Statistician's Viewpoint," including his statistical deductions regarding unrecorded caste mixing, scheduled for Tuesday night, October 15, at 7:30 in Phillips Hall under the auspices of the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society.

He will give technical lectures at 4 o'clock on the afternoons of October 13, 15, 16, 17. His subjects include "The Design of Sample Surveys," "Agricultural Surveys," "Socio-Economic Surveys," and "A Problem in Multivariste Analysis."

Two other distinguished statisticians, Prof. R. A. Fisher of Cambridge University, and Frank Yates, Professor Fisher's successor as chief statistician at the Rothamated Agricultural Experimental Station, who will speak in Raleigh soon, will also visit Chapel Hill.

Maurice G. Kendall, statistician to the Chamber of Shipping of the United Kingdom, honorary secretary of the Royal Statistical Society, and Fellow of the Institute of Mathematical Statistics, also gave a series of lectures recently at the University.

Fall Term Witnesses Number of Changes in University Faculty To Keep Pace with Record 7,528 Enrollment this Quarter

The opening of the fall term of the University witnesses quite a number of changes in the faculty.

The record enrollment of 7,528 students has necessitated some additions to the teaching staff, and there have been a number of promotions, resignations, retirements, and leaves.

Trustees Approve

The changes became effective this week when recommendations by President Frank P. Graham and Chancellor Robert B. House were approved by the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees.

Dr. James B. Bullitt, who came to the University in 1913, and served for many years as head of the Department of Pathology, is retiring from both administrative and teaching duties, but will continue to have an office and laboratory in the Medical school building where he will do some research and writing. He reached the retirement age a year ago, but had continued on active duty at the suggestion of the University administration and trustees.

Dr. Robert E. Coker, a University graduate of 1896, who became a member of the faculty in 1922, and who had been head of the Department of Zoology for 12 years and for several years Chairman of the Division of Natural Sciences, has retired as head of the Zoology department but will continue teaching. He was also recently named head of the new Institute for Fisheries Research and Development.

New Appointments

New appointments include Dr. Clement S. Logsdon, formerly Michigan State University and lately of the Department of Commerce, as professor in the School of Commerce, B.S. degree, George Washington, and M.A. and Ph.D., Ohio State.

Dr. James W. members, says Vivian Parks, BSU president.

Baptist student activities are directed by Rev. J. C. Herrin, student chaplain of the Baptist Church, with the help of the elected council of the BSU. Extensive plans for this year's work were made at a five-day retreat held at Holden's Beach, off the North Carolina coast, just before the beginning of this quarter. Results of a supper held September 21 and a reception held last Sunday indicate that there will be a greater student participation in the affairs of the Baptist Church and the BSU at Carolina than ever before. With 2000 Baptist students on campus, the organization is looking forward to a great year of increased opportunities.

Marine Corps Reserve Seeking Enlistments

Anyone desiring to enlist or re-enlist in the Marine Corps Reserve can do so by contacting Lt. Morris N. Jenkins in the Brockwell building, across the street from the Carolina theater, any afternoon or evening.

"Old Marine Corps servicemen should bring their discharge papers," said Lt. Jenkins in explaining the procedure. "All enlistment details can be handled here, and no trip to a distant Marine base is necessary."

Five Sororities Extend Bids To 117 Coeds

By Charlie Gibson

Climaxing eight days of rushing, 117 coeds accepted bids to the five University sororities at 8 p.m. yesterday. After final parties Saturday, each of these women students signed a card yesterday morning to signify her first preference, picked up her bid if passed upon, and spent a memorable evening in the sorority house of her choice—"memorable," considering noisy backgrounds to a reporter's phone calls as evidence.

Margaret Jean Taylor, president of the Pan-Hellenic Council, expressed satisfaction with the entire week's procedure, adding, though, that any coeds who have not yet done so should pay a dollar rushing fee to their housemother as soon as possible.

The five sororities and their number of pledges are: Delta Delta Delta, 31; Pi Beta Phi, 25; Chi Omega, 24; Alpha Delta Pi, 19; and Alpha Gamma Delta, 18.

Those women students extended pledges are as follows, alphabetically:

AutomobileOwners Must Register Cars At Weaver's Office

Dean Weaver stated yesterday that all car owners who have not registered for identification plates may do so at his office in 206 South Building from 9 to 1 and from 2 to 5 any day.

Although no definite date for distribution is known, the identification plates, which were to have been here by October 1, will be distributed as soon as possible after their arrival.

It is requested that the cars be registered as quickly as possible to conform with the safety council order requiring the placing of identification plates on all cars not having Chapel Hill tags.

SP to Plan Election, Campaign at Meet

Facing a special election October 14, the Student Party will meet this afternoon at 3 o'clock in Roland Parker lounges 1 and 2, Chairman Charles Long announced yesterday.

Back From Heat of Texas

Real Carolina Spirit Shown As Students Greet Tar Heels

By Chuck Hauser

Real Carolina spirit was displayed Sunday night when almost 2,000 students turned out to greet the down-hearted Tar Heels as they returned from their Texas defeat.

Not only were 2,000 students waiting to cheer their return at Woollen gymnasium, but a sizable crowd was even at the Raleigh-Durham airport when the big Capital airlines DC-6 taxied in at 6:35.

As the team, many wearing ten-gallon hats brought back from Austin, stepped out of the plane, someone called out, "C'mon you Tar Heels!" over the hub-bub of the group.

Mad Scene

Meanwhile, a mad scene was being enacted in front of Woollen gym. Traffic was almost at a standstill, slowly threading its way through the packed throng that swallowed up the automobiles.

As the band played "There'll be a Carolina Victory," and the crowd breathlessly awaited the first glimpse of the bus roaring up the hill from Raleigh, compliments were heard everywhere for Head Cheerleader Myrt Sherard who had worked since the night before to stage the rally the way it should be done.

Snavely Speaks

After the team had unloaded and the bus had swayed out of sight, Coach Carl Snavely was urged to say something to the crowd. Standing on the running-board of the DeSoto suburban in which he was riding, Snavely both prefaced and closed his remarks with, "This is just what the team needed. . . . Let me thank you for them."

Explaining the handicaps the team had been working under at Austin, the Gray Fox explained, "When we got off the plane at Austin, almost every man aboard was sick. Then the terrific heat hit us. When the game was over, hardly any of the men could walk off the field. In fact, some of them could hardly walk off after playing for three minutes."

CampusPartyPlans Meet in GM Today

The Campus party will meet at 4 o'clock today in the Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial to discuss plans for the forthcoming election of Yack editor and organizational plans for the coming year.

There are two party vacancies to be filled at this meeting also. The vacancies created by the resignation of Charlie Britt and the party publicity director are to be filled.

All party members and any students interested in student government activities are invited to attend.

G.M. CONCERT PROGRAM

Students and faculty are welcome to attend the recorded concerts of dinner music held from 6:30-7:30 each weekday evening in the main lounge of Graham Memorial. Tonight's program will include the following works: Gershwin, The Man I Love; Grieg, Peer Gynt Suite; Bach, Fugue in G Minor; Kern, Showboat (scenario for orchestra); Selections from Gilbert and Sullivan; Rodgers, Carousel Waltz, You'll Never Walk Alone; Gershwin, Oh Lady Be Good.

Sullivan's 80 Per Cent Wins Grid Contest

In a wild scramble of 1250 entries, Dan Sullivan came out on top of last week's football contest with an .800 average. Campus prognosticators' averages tumbled as the majority of students missed nearly half of their predicrions, and all save 81 entrants predicted the Tar Heels would win the UNC-Texas contest.

Sullivan, only entrant to predict the Rice-Southern California tie, predicted the UNC score to be 21-14 in favor of Texas. Though missing only four guesses, the same as Sullivan, David Cameron, of 201 Stacy, was declared runner-up, through having missed the Carolina score by a wider margin.

Contest blanks for this week are printed on the sports page of today's Daily Tar Heel. Fifteen hundred additional mimeographed blanks were placed on the YMCA and Graham Memorial office desks this morning.

Contest officials emphasized that the spaces beside each predicted winner must be completely blacked in, or else the entry will be disqualified. All entries must be placed in the ballot box in the main hall of Graham Memorial by this Saturday noon, October 11.

Missing only five games were F. K. Manning, Merwin Van Hecke, and Sam Ray. Last week's winner, Al Barth slumped to a .600 average, though he came comparitively close on the Tar Heel's score prediction, with a guess of 32-28, in favor of Texas. No contestant guessed the score correctly.

Indonesian Group Plans First Meet TomorrowMorning

The Indonesia Good Offices committee of the United Nations will hold its first meeting tomorrow morning in the office of U. N. Secretary-General Trygvie Lie at Lake Success.

Dr. Frank Graham, president of the University on leave as United States representative to the committee, completes his work at the State department in Washington today, and will travel this evening to U. N. headquarters at Lake Success.

The former Prime Minister of Belgium, Paul van Zeeland, will be present for the official opening of the three-man committee's operations. The third member, Justice Richard C. Kirby of Australia, has not left Canberra yet and will be represented by Dr. Herbert Evatt, Australian foreign minister.

The Security council is scheduled to act today on a demand by Russia that the council order troops of both the Netherlands and the Indonesian Republic to withdraw to positions held October 20, the date Indonesian hostilities began.

Monogram Club Plans Dance in Gym Saturday Night

The Monogram club will sponsor a dance this Saturday night from 9 till 12 o'clock in Woollen gymnasium, honoring the Wake Forest and Carolina football squads. Everyone is invited to pay tribute to these two teams and to dance to the music of Jimmy Marshall and his Carolinians, prominent campus orchestra.

Admission for couples and stags will be a dollar, half the proceeds going to the inter-

Movies of the North Carolina-Texas football game will be shown Thursday night at 7:30 in Memorial hall under the sponsorship of the Monogram club.

One of the football coaches will narrate the film. This is to be the first of a weekly series of films to be shown by the lettermen's organization.

dormitory project for a recreation shack and the remainder to be donated to the University club to finance larger pep rallies for future games at home and out of town.

Tickets will be put on sale Thursday and may be bought from any Monogram club member in the "Y" court, at Lenoir hall, or at the door Saturday night.

This is only one of the many functions the lettermen are scheduling this year for student benefit. The monogrammen were active earlier in freshmen orientation and play a sizable part in seating as well as entertaining the crowds at Kenan stadium this season. Under Monogram auspices during the next few weeks movies of the Tar Heel games will also be presented with commentary by some member of the coaching staff here.

Lyn Szafaryn is president of the monogram clan while "Mike" is acting as dance chairman Saturday night.

MAG ASKS DELIVERY BIDS

Bids for the delivery service of the Carolina Magazine will be accepted today and tomorrow. For further information come to the office, second floor, Graham Memorial.

OLD MAG ISSUES WANTED

Back issues of the Carolina Magazines are needed. Students are asked to bring copies dating back as far as January 1947 to the office.

Stray Greeks Meet Tonight To Form Club

To meet what he termed "the need for an organization on the Carolina campus for fraternity men from other colleges whose fraternities are not represented here," Robert K. Bain, a graduate student here, announced today a meeting of all such students to be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in Roland Parker Lounge No. 2 of Graham Memorial.

The movement has the backing of Leon Todd, president of the Interfraternity Council, who declared that the established fraternities on campus would welcome such an organization and would cooperate with it in any way possible.

Bain said that such an organization could provide for the social activities of its members and give its support to other campus activities, both fraternal and nonfraternal.

The initial meeting will be devoted to a thorough discussion of the feasibility and prospects of such a plan, and to the selection of at least temporary officers or committees to continue the project. Bain mentioned that he had initiated the plan solely because "nobody else has seemed to have started anything like it" and that he hoped to see its leadership fall into the hands of someone who has "both more time and ability than I."

Group Schedules Meet GM Tonight

The local chapter of Students for Democratic Action will hold its first meeting of the quarter at 7:30 tonight in the Grail room of Graham Memorial.

Bud Dutton, president of the chapter, announced Saturday that Clarence Heer, faculty authority and former chairman of the local OPA board, will speak to the gathering, and programs to alleviate the present price crisis will be discussed.

Prospective members and all interested persons are invited to attend the session.

McPhail To Retire From All Baseball

New York, Oct. 6—(UP)—Larry McPhail, the pepper pot president of the new World Champions, the New York Yankees, quit his post here today a few seconds following the dramatic finish of the 1947 World Series.

McPhail made the announcement in the Yankee clubhouse during the ninth inning when he told reporters, "Boys, if we win this one I'm quitting."

Whatever the reason, Larry says he's out of baseball. The Yankee players, jubilant over their 11th World's Championship, were stunned when the news got out. Even the wild excitement of the Yankee dressing room was tame after that announcement for a man who had made many valuable contributions to the game was calling it quits.

McPhail says his fracas with Commissioner Chandler had nothing to do with his decision but that he was just getting out.

CARTERET COUNTY CLUB

All students from Carteret county are urged to attend a meeting of the Carteret County club on Wednesday, October 8 at 7 o'clock in the Grail room of Graham Memorial. Election of officers will be held and plans discussed for sponsoring Carteret county space in the Yackety Yack.

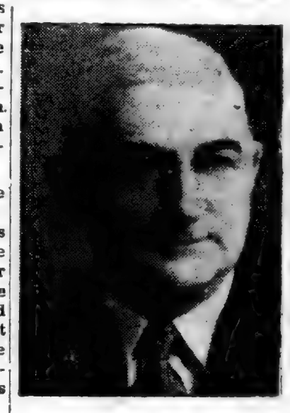
YACK EDITORS MEETING

There will be a meeting of all Yackety Yack section editors in the Yack offices, second floor of Graham Memorial, tonight at 7:30.

Candidate in 1948 Gubernatorial Race Also Will Deliver Address at Banquet

Charles M. Johnson, State treasurer and prominent candidate in the 1948 gubernatorial race, will be the principal speaker at the inauguration of the new Philanthropic assembly officers tonight at 8:30 in the historic Phi hall, fourth floor New East.

The inaugural ceremonies will follow the traditional Di-Phi banquet to be held in the Carolina Inn at 6:30 p.m. The banquet will be attended by members of the two societies and their guests. Johnson will also be the featured speaker at the banquet.



With his appointment as director of local government on March 4, 1931, Johnson began his long career in State government.

On November 17, 1932, he was appointed treasurer by Governor Gardner, a post he has continued to occupy during the past 15 years. Shortly after Johnson became treasurer, the General Assembly met and passed an act providing that the State treasurer should be the director of local government. Since that time he has held both positions.

One Duty

One of his principal duties as co-holder of both offices was to refinance many of the counties, cities, and towns that were in default on their obligations. Evidence of the fine record made by Johnson while holding these positions is shown by the fact that none of these local governments is now in default.

The inaugural ceremonies which were a major part of the Phi's activities before the war will be reinstated tonight. In addition to the swearing in of the new officers, four new members will be initiated into the Assembly. They are William Robert Coulter, Winfred R. Erwin, Morgan Philip Morris, and James G. Stallings. Following the initiation, Johnson will make his address.

CHARLES M. JOHNSON

The public is invited to attend these ceremonies.

FRESHMAN FRAT

Phi Eta Sigma, freshman honorary scholastic fraternity, will hold its initial meeting of the year Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Grail room of Graham Memorial. All members are urged to attend since there is important business to be handled at this time.

Dr. Frank Graham, H.W. Odum Invited To Help in Inauguration of Fisk Head

Dr. Frank Graham has been requested to be one of fifteen principal speakers during the inauguration services to be held at Fisk university, Nashville, Tenn., November 6, 7, and 8 at which time Dr. C. S. Johnson will be installed as the sixth president of that institution.

Among the speakers will be such prominent people as Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt and J. M. Broughton, former governor of North Carolina.

Mr. Broughton will lead a discussion on "The Recent Economic Changes in the South" and will be assisted by H. W. Odum, Professor of Sociology here.

Dr. Johnson was director of the Social Science Institute and the program of social research at Fisk from 1928 until his recent appointment as president. He is to succeed Dr. Thomas E. Jones, who is now president of Earlham College, Richmond, Indiana.

South Building officials have stated that Dr. Graham will be unable to attend the inauguration because of his recent appointment to a Security Council investigating committee. At this date no one has been selected to replace him.

Historical Society To Meet at Davidson

The fall meeting of the Historical Society of North Carolina will be held at Davidson college Saturday, October 25, it was announced by Dr. Cecil Johnson of the University History department, secretary-treasurer, following a decision by the Council of the Society.

The committee in charge of local arrangements is composed of Dean C. K. Brown and Profs. Frontis Johnston and W. P. Cumming, all of Davidson college.

Features of the program will be the election of officers, committee reports, and an address by Dr. Archibald Henderson of the University, retiring president.

Wife of Veteran Victim of Attack In Victory Village

Chapel Hill police reported at 11 o'clock last night bloodhounds had lost the trail of an unidentified assailant who attempted to rape a student's wife near Victory Village early yesterday evening.

The pretty young mother of two children, whose name was withheld, told officers she fought off an unidentified assailant with a pair of scissors last night at 7:45 in the back yard of her Victory Village home.

At the time of the attack, the woman was behind her house in the village cutting leaves for a floral decoration for her home, when her attacker, whom she could not identify in the darkness, grabbed her and allegedly dragged her a few yards off into the woods.

The young wife said she thought she had succeeded in stabbing the man with her scissors after he had torn her dress, causing the several scratches which Dr. Ed Hedgepeth, University health service head said were not serious.

Chapel Hill officers, sheriff's deputies, and armed students pursued the assailant's trail nearly a mile, but the dogs lost the scent in the basement of a home 500 yards down Pittsboro road after a circular chase through woods and country lanes.

Plane Collision Kills One on N.C.-Va. Border

Norfolk, Va. Oct. 6—(UP)—Two carrier fighter planes collided near the North Carolina-Virginia border today and one naval aviator was killed. The other pilot parachuted to safety when the two planes collided 20 miles north of Edenton, North Carolina. The name of the dead pilot has not been released. The other—Ensign W. C. Forehand of Norfolk—parachuted down without being hurt.

Hack the Sound of Tar Heel Voices Implies DTH Reporter As Cold Students Give Campus Prevailing Note of Sniffles

By Bill Sexton

The prevailing note on campus today may be the sniffle, but it will be next month—thanks to another shortage—before influenza vaccine can be administered by the University Health service.

Dr. Ed Hedgpeth, Infirmary head, said yesterday that vaccine for approximately 6,000 students was on order and expected sometime in November. As fast as it can be obtained, he added, more will be secured to inoculate the balance of the University community.

"It's just another shortage," said Hedgpeth, "or we'd have had the inoculations in process now."

As for the current epidemic of coughs and sniffles, said Hedgpeth, "that's to be expected this time of the year. Speaking in terms of percentages, it's really not any more or less than usual."

Hedgpeth listed two reasons for the prevalence of bad colds: crowding together of people from all over the U.S., and the abrupt change in temperature last week.

But Dr. W. G. Morgan added another cause: the unseasonable clothing many of students have been wearing. "I saw dozens of sudents out in the rain last week without has or overshoes," said Morgan, "and T-shirts are hardly appropriate for the cool nights lately."

Morgan offered two methods of relieving colds. "Come to the Infirmary for treatment at the first sign of a sniffle," was his first suggestion. "And follow the sort of advice your mothers used to give about cool weather."

Heating in dormitories and classrooms is, with two exceptions, in normal winter operating condition, Supervisor of Operations J. S. Bennett reported yesterday. We're at work now adjusting the steam system in Everett and should have it working very soon. And there's good news for students with classes in the temporary buildings now unheated."

Bennett said some of the frame structures would have heating by the first of next week, with installation of facilities due to be completed in the rest by the end of next week.

If radiators in individual rooms need adjustment or repair, the job will receive top priority from the building department. "If you have trouble," Bennett advised, "call 5151 and we'll be on the job."

Gnawing Stomachs Must Be Appeased

The stomach is a vital organ, and the vital organ for promoting world peace lies in our ability to stop the gnawing hunger in the stomachs of the people of Europe. As was stressed by President Truman, Clinton Anderson, George Marshall, and Charles Luckman in a radio broadcast Sunday night, to a hungry people nothing matters, but food—food that will give them new hope for a free world.

The three-fold program established by the Citizens Food committee, headed by Charles Luckman who is president of the Lever Brothers company and one of the 10 outstanding young businessmen of the nation, must prove successful. It calls upon the resourcefulness of the whole nation—its farmers, manufacturers, citizens and even the livestock of the nation. The farmer must conserve his grain and feed supply so that we can send all that is possible to the multitude of starving peoples. The manufacturers of alcoholic beverages have agreed to use 50 per cent less grain. Next week they will be called upon to comply with a 60-day plant shutdown. The brewers must cut down their output, and usage of grains.

But we, as students and consumers of foods that are needed by the starving, have been asked, along with the rest of the population of the nation, to "tighten our belts" and abstain from eating meats on Tuesday and eggs and poultry on Thursday. It will take the efforts of the nation as a whole to provide for the hungry.

We must help in this food crisis. We can give a vital contribution to the peace of the world.

We have a bumper crop of grains. We could very well use all of this in our own country, but there is an urgent need for it elsewhere. Western Europe has met with crop failure and disasters that have produced a gnawing in its stomachs—a gnawing that we can appease.

'Courthouse' on Trial

As was expected by most army veterans and those familiar with army public relations policy, John C. H. Lee, ill-famed general of various European operations, was white-washed of the charges published against him by Scripps-Howard columnist Robert C. Ruark. Ruark probably knew when he made his sensational expose of the conditions in Courthouse's Italian kingdom, that the army would follow a set policy of investigation and silence, then as quietly as possible, announce that Lee was innocent.

Those who waited for Lee's men to bring gas to the front in 1944 and those who did without cigarettes while Lee's men operated a vast black-market unheard of in all other theaters of war, knew that he would come out, as usual, almost Scott-free.

The army, of necessity, has to avoid unfavorable publicity as much as possible and correspondents on duty in Europe seriously work to help out in its public relations work by sending reams of useless copy into this country, yet, when these correspondents do uncover an incident that needs to be exposed, the PRO's—following the orders of high brass—are forced to strike back at the press by issuing name-calling denials.

The Lee case brings to mind the slapping incident of General Patton's fiery career. All the top brass lost no time in condemning him for an action that was doubtlessly repeated by numerous officers and enlisted men suffering from continual high tension and strain. Patton was practically ruined in the eyes of the public for striking one soldier, yet Lee remains among the blessed in spite of such scandals as the Litchfield Prison camp in England—under his command, the $50,000 cigarette ring that stole entire cars of cigarettes—also under his command, and lately, his royal living conditions and the sad, and entirely probable state of his EM.

He is finally out of the army—but it took a long, long time. He has announced that his time will be devoted to working for his church. There are those of us who are of the opinion that "Old Courthouse" will have to do one heckuva lot of work in the church before Saint Peter will look on him with favor.

We Can See the Struggle

"Salute to the United Nations Week" has at least served one worthwhile purpose which is worthy of many thanks to the sponsors of the event, Lincoln Kan and the CCUN. It has adequately acquainted us with the problems that confront the members of the United Nations delegates.

It is quite unlikely that there is a single person who heard the series of addresses by foreign diplomats and endorses all of the ideas incorporated in their talks. But if no other accomplishment was achieved, we can sympathize with the United Nations delegates and the tremendous task before them—that of producing a structure for world peace for a group of nations with conflicting ideologies. Our papers daily carry reports of the difficulties of wading through procedures, formulating plans, and the impossibilities of passing legislation that must muster enough support to be incorporated in the laws for a world peace.

We Americans are all Missourians in that we must be shown. And the talks by the diplomatic figureheads who appeared on campus last week help us to realize what the UN is bucking.

It is no simple matter to convince busy diplomatic figures to come down to Chapel Hill and speak to a group of students. Lincoln Kan and the CCUN performed a remarkable feat in getting the speakers here. Their efforts were not rewarded with tremendous student turnouts each night, but those who attended and heard the addresses were compensated.

"Bright Young Man" Says

Russia Will Be Careful

By Bill Sexton

A healthy optimism toward the future of United Nations and sound reasons for it are a favorite topic of conversation with Joseph W. Scott, one of the "bright young men" adopted by the State department after the war.

Scott was in Chapel Hill Thursday to introduce President Frank Graham to the latter's problems as U. S. representative to the U. N. Indonesia Good Offices committee. It's not official, but the two men took an immediate liking to each other, and Scott will probably go to Indonesia as a personal advisor to Dr. Graham.

Scott believes U.N. has done its job, and well, during the two years of its existence. And he is sure that Russia, at least for the near future, will entertain no ideas of pulling out.

"People forget that U.N. is just getting started, says Scott; "consider the problems it's faced, consider the time it takes for any major project to get started."

Scott, assigned by the State department to Indonesian affairs when strife broke out on the island July 20, lists two concrete evidences of the respect the world's top two powers have accorded the United Nations:

"There's the Marshall plan's basic setup, which many criticize as 'circumventing U.N.' Actually, for the first time in America's history, Congress has surrendered a veto power over one of it's acts to an outside body."

Scott explains how, at Sen. Vandenberg's suggestion, the U.N. Security council was given right to veto the European aid plan if the council found any reason to do so. "That's practically revolutionary," he says.

"And there's the now-forgotten Iran case, where Russia had quartered troops in Azerbaijan," Scott continues. "The General assembly asked Russia to abide by its treaty settlement and move out of Iran."

Russia had to save face, explains Scott, so she delayed a while. But, as U.N. had ordered, Soviet troops did move out of Azerbaijan, and quiet has returned to the Iranian province.

As for Russia's staying with U.N. even when she and her satellites seem quite without sympathy, Scott is confident.

"The Security council is a goldfish bowl," says Scott, "where Russia can see what the world thinks about her actions. Obviously she wants to do nothing that will line the world up against her in arms. In the Security council Russia can find out what other nations are thinking, and what they are willing to do about Russia's actions."

And, says Scott, Russia does care about public opinion outside the Iron Curtain. Since all that goes on in the Security Council is scrupulously public, Russia will be careful not to go too far, at least until she is ready to take on the world singlehandedly.

And, the "bright young man" concludes, "Russia won't be ready to do that for quite a while—if ever."

Carolina Carousel

A-Plus Carolina Spirit

By R. Foo Giduz

Well, old Carousel really feels good today. . . . After that great rousing show of A-plus Carolina spirit in welcoming the team back Sunday evening, we've decided to hold on to our New Orleans train reservations for New Year's day.

Sure, the team took a beating Saturday . . . the worst in years. But that's four days ago; long past now. And with eight games yet t ogo we're still putting our money on the best Tar Heel gridders in history.—We didn't feel so hot at about 5:30 Saturday afternoon either. And that was a pretty beat-up and unhappy crew of ball players and coaches we saw getting off the plane at Raleigh-Durham airport Sunday evening. But when we got to Woollen gym, some 10 minutes ahead of the team bus and found 1800-odd roaring rooters awaiting the return of the Snavelymen, things took a quick change.

—There wasn't any talk about the drubbing of the past game. . . . More of a look to the rest of the season, and a parting hue and cry of the perennial "Beat Dook!" That, gentlemen, is the Carolina spirit we've been watching for all season.

—Seen a lot of pre-Dook pep rallies; seen the team and students at their best and their worst. But we've never seen such contagious and spontaneous enthusiasm—nor any sports sight so heartening—as the tribute the Carolina students paid to the team Sunday evening. On their return from a 34-0 shellacking at the hands of Texas. . . . Thanks, fellas! And as Coach Snavely said, "This is just what the team needed."

Spirit's the greatest stuff in the world all right. But here's plea from Carrousel to keep it in the pep rallies and stadiums. Last year, for the first time in decades there was no evidence of any pre-game vandalism between Carolina and our neighbors n iMethodist Flats near Durham. Credit for this is due as much to the Daily Tar Heel's and student government's constant pleas and warnings, as much as to the good sportsmanship of the student body.—And this year the anti-vandalism campaign is twice as important, what with N. C. State back on our schedule.

Campus Forum

How can CCUN best contribute to the campus? is today's question of this column which will appear every Tuesday and Friday in the DTH. The following answers were received:

CCUN can best contribute to the campus . . . by keeping the campus well informed on the activities of the United Nations through the medium of the DTH.

Gilbert H. Burnett

. . . by remaining a non-political non-partisan and non-profit service organization, and by providing the channels for more effective presentation of the UN for any organization interested in international relations and world peace.

Lincoln Kan

. . . by acquainting the campus with the activities and functions of the UN through all possible means.

William P. Kamp, Jr.

. . . by staying within its avowed capacity as a service organization to help student organizations in acquiring speakers through its function as a clearing house.

Kenneth Cruse

The question for Friday is: Should boxing be re-instituted as a sport at Carolina? Students are requested to reposit their answers in the box which has been put up in the main hall of Graham Memorial for this purpose. Deadline is set for Wednesday, 6 p.m.

CLUB TO MEET

The Henderson club will meet Tuesday night at 7 o'clock in the Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial. All members are urged to come and bring their dues.

Tain't Necessarily So, but . . .

We Are Unprepared

By BILL BUCHAN— — BF —

If a bomb—atom, that is—was dropped on Washington during the net session of Congress, who would take over and run the government?

If a bomb, in an instance like Pearl Harbor, puts America on the defensive side of a totally unexpected war, who is going to know how to guide the people in evacuation and in mobilization to combat the aggressor?

Since the end of World War II, the United States has steadily declined in the precaution of maintaining defenses against possible aggression. Our Army, scattered over the world in a thin occupation force, is a slim memory of the armed force that gave us victory in 1945. We do not need another army or navy as large as the one we had then, but we do need one that can assure us of adequate protection. We need one that will be so large and dangerous that no nation would seriously consider attacking us.

As far as we know, we are the only possessors of the atom bomb. The market is wide open, however, and every government that has the money and manpower is going hell-bent-for-election to produce one. From experience we know that at the very minimum, they will need at least four years to produce one as we did. If they find a simpler way to make one, though, other than the method our scientists used, no one can safely say when another such bomb will be ready for use.

President Truman's Advisory commission on Universal Military Training made a thorough study of the military strength of this country and wrote a long report on its findings. Their report, which would obviously be unpopular with certain "isolationists", calls for quick and decisive action by this country.

In part, it reads: "The United States, shunning aggression, stands as the prime target for the aggressor of the future. Experience in two world wars has made it presently evident to all that the United States must be defeated—and defeated first—if the aggression is to succeed.

"The peace-loving nation has no choice except to prepare for every type of attack that might be launched against it and from any possible source. If it leaves any avenue unguarded, it must expect an alert and skillful aggressor to take advantage of that blind spot in its defenses. The omission could prove fatal. . . ."

The report also lists six programs that are necessary for the security of the country. They include: 1) Universal training, 2) A strong healthy educated population, 3) Co-ordinated government intelligence services, 4) Extensive, constant scientific research and development. 5) Regular armed forces, consisting of a striking Air Force and the combined Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine fighting organization, under one command.

Robert Patterson, former Secretary of War and certainly a man who should know what he's talking about, reviews our defense situation in an article for the current issue of Cosmopolitan. In the conclusion, Mr. Patterson refers to his final press conference as War Secretary. "There," he said, "I was asked to name the greatest hurdle we had had to overcome in order to win World War II. That was an easy one. I said the biggest hurdle had been getting the American people out of a business-as-usual attitude. It is just as important that we overcome a business-as-usual defense attitude in postwar 1947 as it was during World War II. If we don't World War III lies dead ahead."

Bigwigs—Eisenhower, Forrestal, Patterson, Senator Ball and dozens of others have warned and are warning—of our desperate lack of preparation. They and others issue the same warnings in 1940-41, but America didn't listen. Is the repetition of history inevitable?

Are we going to be caught sleeping again, exactly as we were at Pearl Harbor? From present signs, it certainly looks that way.—But then, geologists say that at the present rate of erosion, the world will wash away . . . in forty million years.

Tradition In Whose Heritage?

Dear Editor:

Yugoslavian Ambassador Kosanovic's recent cagey statement of reprimand to our University Press for publishing a book which was unfriendly to Yugoslavia was quited in Sunday's Tar Heel as, "The pattern of thinking used by this Markham is somewhat in contrast with the liberal, logical pattern of thought for which Chapel Hill has become famous throughout the world."

Here is another of the regularly recurring examples of how Carolina's vaunted liberalism is used as a tool with which to pry at our plain average American character.

It's time we stopped allowing a tiny group of self-interested, self-appointed so-called progressives kid us about some vague state of being unusual to which we must pay homage as to a debunked family tradition. One of the tricks of any "ism" is to propagandize the people into thinking that there are traditions in their heritage which aren't what people thought they were, but which, to be true Slobovians, must be lived up to now that they've been enlightened about what they're supposed to be.

We of the University community are average cross-section Americans. We want to see America continue on a sound footing even if it means not dealing a namby-pamby self-effacing liberalism to projects which undermine our kind of living. Our past hasn't been marked by the liberal's kind of democracy when dealing with those who interfered with us. Let us admit it. But let us admit that it has built us a good stout nation.

The next time some promoter tells us we should support his cause or at least leave him alone because Chapel Hill is his version of liberal, tell him to go to Hades.

ISOLATIONISM?

Some of us are wondering who's "we" in the Sunday DTH's editorial on "Our Bob" Reynolds. We had hopes that the quotes around "Our Bob" were meant to convey sarcasm, but as we read on, it became evident that Sain was serious. The "brilliancy" of Reynold's remarks in general, and the one about our having no need to fear war in particular, struck us as being far from brilliant.

The veterans, Sain says, are overwhelmingly isolationist! Why then was every veteran with whom I talked disgusted with the editorial, with the term isolationist, and with what it stands for? Isolationism, first cousin of nationalism, is the philosophy calculated to do less for world peace co-operation than any other I can think of.

Though most of those to whom I talked were neither captains, nor sodajerks, they feel that war with Russia is a possibility, even a probability. As for not wanting to go to war again, it isn't a question of wanting or not wanting at all; rather it is a question of what is or is not necessary. The feeling that war may become necessary has become more and more prevalent among my veteran friends during the past year of consistent Russian obstinacy at the U.N. Many would be shocked if they knew how many who feel that war is inevitable have expressed the opinion that we should fight now, rather than wait until the Russians have A-bombs etc., in sufficient quantities to devestate us in a matter of months or weeks. Now we have millions of trained and experienced fighting men: if war proves inevitable, I for one would rather have the experienced men take other, than have the bright-eyed high school generation maimed a few years hence.

This feeling of wanting to fight now has become a dangerous undercurrent in our thinking; but it does exist strongly in this still belligerent minded country. (Not the administration or our diplomats particularly, but in the masses; the people who are America; who go to the movies and stomp and cheer when "Bull" Halsey says, "It's none of their damned business where the fiver goes . . . . or who applaud and comment favorably on the remarks of the "war monger" speeches in this past weekend's newsreels shown in conjunction with Vishinsky's speech). And because the feeling does exist, it should be faced squarely and openly, rather than having it whispered about in strict and ineffectual confidence.

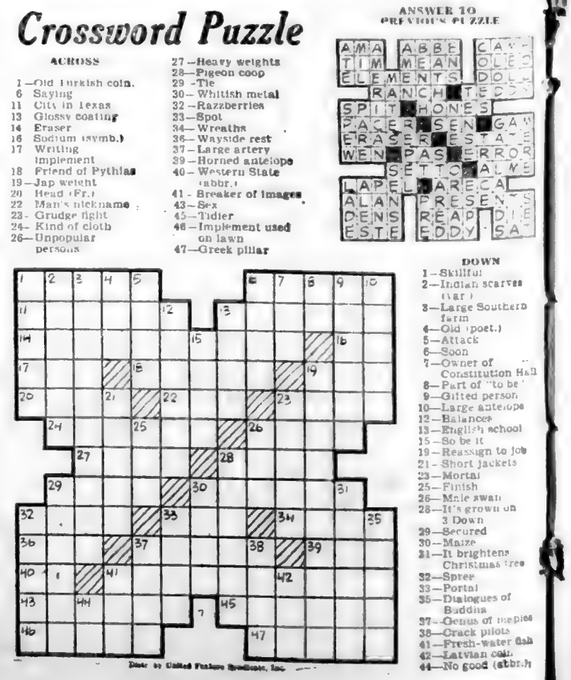
(My vet friends must all be yaller-bellied cowards not to want to go off and lay a good one on Russia. The figure war isn't inevitable til it happens and it won't happen unless people talk themselves into it. Don't like Reynolds; Halsey, either. Now where did I put my dress blues?)



Glee Clubs to Rehearse For Next Convocation

All old and new members of the Men's and Women's glee clubs are requested to be at important rehearsals this week for performance at the convocation on Friday.

The schedule is as follows for both men and women: Tuesday—Hill Hall, Wednesday—Kenan Stadium, Thursday—Hill Hall.

Women who have been unable to try out due to Rush Week may do so after rehearsal today.

Bobbing In Sports

—with—

Bob Goldwater

WHAT HAPPENED out there in Texas? Are the Longhorns really 34 points better than the Tar Heels? These two questions were thrown at me all day yesterday and were answered with ready-made responses thought up in advance on the return flight from the Lone Star state. And these answers are:

1. We were beaten by a better team.

2. No, and the Texas rooters are the first to admit it. The Longhorns are good but neither they nor any other team in the nation are that much better than Carolina under normal conditions.

THE FIRST answer needs no further explanation other than to point out the obvious—that Texas left no doubt as to its being the better team on this particular Saturday. Everything the Longhorns did clicked just right and the Steers stamped themselves as one of the top elevens in the country.

As for the second answer, it was very evident to all who witnessed the game that conditions were far from normal. It's hard for anyone who wasn't there to realize just how great a broiling 95-degree sun can affect a football team that is used to a mercury reading of 60 degrees. The Tar Heels simply could not stand the heat and showed it. It's that simple.

Many Texas fans came up to me after the game—it was easy to spot the blue and white pin—and apologized for the weather. They all apparently realized that the Tar Heels have a much better team than was shown on Saturday. Anyway, Carolina will get another crack at the Longhorns at this time next year.

ONE OF THE brightest spots during the long afternoon Saturday was a quick dash down to a box seat on the 45-yard line where we chatted briefly with one of the most promising gridders ever to attend Carolina. We refer, of course, to Doc Blanchard here on a weekend pass from his air base at Randolph field. Army's former All-American, sitting with teammate Arnold Tucker and Tucker's wife, was especially interested in how his old buddy, Jack Fitch, with whom he held a brief reunion yesterday, was faring. "Give my regards to everyone back in Chapel Hill," he concluded.

Fitch, incidentally, gave quite a reasonable facsimile of a typical Blanchard run in the third quarter when he took a Texas kickoff near his own goal line and drove right up the middle of the field before being hauled down on the Longhorn 39-yard stripe.

AMONG THE hardest workers of all those who made the trip—possibly the hardest all season long, in fact—were the team's three student managers, George Hogan, Don Dempsey, and Tom Lindley. The trio worked late Thursday night packing the gear and repeated the not-too-easy procedure again Saturday after the game, with the reverse process thrown in on Friday. As one of them expressed it, "This is sure a tough way to get a visit to Texas."

TIDBITS FROM TEXAS: Jim Nicholson, former varsity netter for Coach John Kenfield and now attending Baylor university, came by the press box to say hello. . . . The Longhorns even used a state congressman to aid their attack. Peppy Blount, who tallied the Steers' second TD on a sensational diving catch, is at present a member of the top legislative body in the state and still finds time to attend school and play football.

ACCORDING TO the calendar, today is Tuesday which makes this correction time for last week's grid prognostications. And for the second straight week, Morty Schaap led the parade with 12 correct out of 20. Jake Wade and Bill Lamkin had 11 right, yours truly had 10, and Billy Carmichael brought up the rear with eight. Tie games counted as losses and two of them didn't help the averages.

This week's finish is the same order for the two-week totals. Out of 40 games called, Schaap leads with 26, Wade and Lamkin are deadlocked for second with 24, this corner sports a none-too-flashy 22, and Carmichael follows with 21.

Yankees Defeat Dodgers, 5-2, To Capture World Series

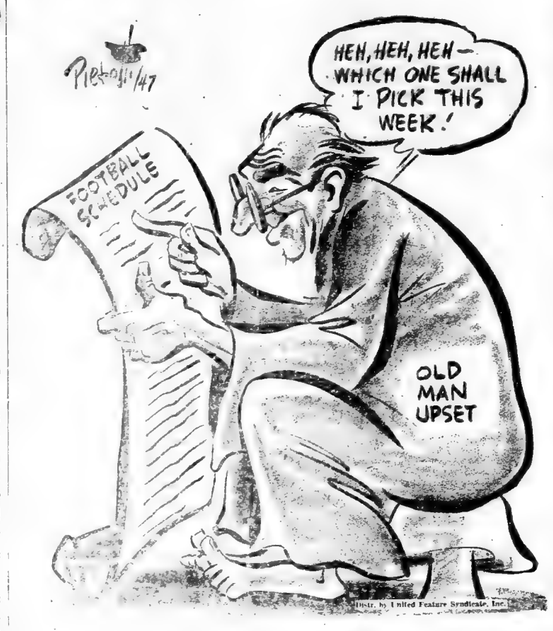
Joe Page Registers Win in Relief Role

New York, Oct. 6—(UP)—Bucky Harris piloted his fighting New York Yankees to their 11th world championship this afternoon as the Yanks, paced by southpaw Joe Page's one-hit relief job for five innings, finally overcame Brooklyn's never-say-die Dodgers in the seventh game of the 1947 World Series, 5-2.

Coming from behind to win like the true champions that they now are, the Yankees subdued Burt Shotton's scrappy charges, but only after the Bums had twice come from behind to tie up the series.

Early in the game the Dodgers looked like they intended to be the 1947 world champs for in the second inning they climbed all over New York's surprise starting hurler, Frank Shea, and his successor, Floyd Bevens, for four hits and two runs to give them a 2-0 lead.

The Brooklynites opened the second frame most inauspiciously when Dixie Walker fouled out to first. However, the next batter, picketman Gene Hermanski, smashed a triple into the right field corner and then scored when catcher Bruce Edwards singled into left field. Carl Furillo then advanced Edwards to second with a short one-baser into center and that was all for starter Shea. Big Bill "one-hitter" Bevens took the mound for the Yanks at this point and was greeted by a blast off the bat of Johnny Jorgenson, which bounced into the right field stands for a ground rule double and scored Edwards. Furillo moved to third on the hit.



Bevens settled down after this and got the next two Dodgers as Jorgenson was caught at the plate on Hal Gregg's grounder to Rizzuto and Stanky popped up to Rizzuto.

The Yanks came right back in their half of the second and racked up a marker on passes by Gregg to McQuinn and Aaron Robinson and a run-scoring single into left field by Rizzuto.

The New Yorkers added two more runs in the fourth to chase Gregg and take a 3-2 lead. Bill Johnson strolled, moved to second on Phil Rizzuto's second single of the game, and then pinch hitter Bobby Brown doubled into left field for his third pinch-hit of the series to score Johnson and send Rizzuto to third base.

That was all for Gregg as Hank Behrman took over on the hill for the Bums. Behrman

Mural Managers Hold Final Meeting Tonight

Continuing plans for the fall intramural program, Director Walter Rabb announced a meeting of all newly elected Intramural managers to be held tonight at 7:30 in room 304, Woollen gym. This meeting, a very important one according to Coach Rabb, will cover plans for the fall tag football schedule.

Climaxing a series of meetings for tag football officials, a practice session was held yesterday to put into practice what had previously been discussed. Officials were put on the field and were given first hand experience in situations that could arise in a regular intramural contest.

In the tennis department of the intramural program, several matches were played off yesterday afternoon on the clay courts. Complete results of the contest will be announced in the Daily Tar Heel at a later date. Matches scheduled for this afternoon are printed below.

Mural Schedule

Modern Dance Group Holds Meeting Today

The Modern Dance club, sponsored by the Women's Athletic association, will hold its first meeting of the year this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Women's gym, it was announced yesterday.

Tickets for Florida Tilt Sold This Week

Students and faculty members who wish to purchase tickets for the Carolina-Florida game have only one more week in which to do so, according to Vernon Crook of the athletic department.

Tar Heels Start Long Road Back; Begin Workouts For Wake Forest

Carolina's football team got started on the long trail back to national heights yesterday afternoon as Coach Carl Snavely put his charges through their first workout in preparation for next Saturday's game with Wake Forest.

With Texas now but a memory, the local lads turned all eyes to the eight big games that remain on the schedule, with current emphasis placed on drills for Coach Peahead Walker's Demon Deacons.

The Tar Heels returned from southward in pretty good physical condition considering the beating they took from the broiling Texas sun during the course of the ball game. Only Dan Steigman, stocky center, remains on the injury list with last week's casualties, Al Bernot and Joe Wright, getting back into the swing of things.

Most of the afternoon was spent ironing out the offensive errors of last Saturday, with timing on running plays getting a little needed polish. On the defensive side, protection against passing, which will probably be Wake Forest's leading offensive forte, got some serious attention.

Romano to Tackle

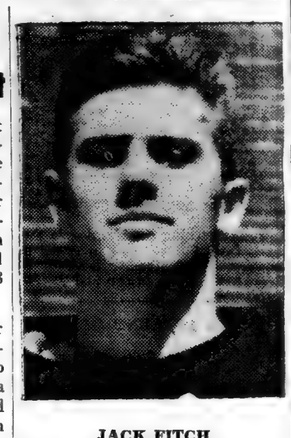
Coach Snavely finally made a change yesterday that he had been toying around with for a week or two; he moved big Joe Romano to a tackle position. Romano looked good in his new berth and may see considerable action in Saturday's outing.

Speaking of changes, there may be some made in Carolina's starting line-up before game time this week. Exactly what these may be are not definite as yet, but some of the Tar Heels reserves showed sparks of brilliance in the losing cause at Austin, and may move up to the first string.

Cage Drills Begin As 75 Boys Report

Although football interest still reigns at the head of campus sports activities, there were at least 75 freshmen and transfer students who turned their attentions to basketball yesterday at Woollen gym, as Coach Tom Scott issued his first call for candidates for the 1947-48 cage team.

These opening sessions are for new students at Carolina exclusively, with the boys who participated on the Carolina teams last season not scheduled to report until two weeks from yesterday.



In the first workout Coach Scott started on a series of basketball tests that he will give the candidates, and these tests will be continued throughout the week. At the end on these sessions, Coach Scott will divide the group of boys into various teams, and scrimmages will be held the following week, starting on Monday.

First Cut

The first cut in the squad will not be made until the end of two weeks of work. Scott hopes that by then he will have a line on the best material for his team, in addition to getting the boys into better physical condition.

Plans for the coming season call for a varsity, jayvee team, and a freshman outfit. The freshmen team probably will not be organized until later in the season. Jim Hamilton, who performed for the White Phantoms at forward last season, will coach the jayvee club. No coach has been chosen for the freshmen.

Practices will be held each afternoon, starting at 4 o'clock.

Harriers Look Good In Time Trial Test

Three veterans from last year's undefeated cross country squad led the way in the first time trial of the season Saturday morning.

Jimmy Miller, Jack Milne and Sam Magill finished together in fine time over the four-mile course. Coach Dale Ranson had excused some of the top-flight men but was very well pleased with the performance of two freshmen, Dick Carr and John Hooper. These lads stayed in the race all the way and finished in fine shape.

John Bristow, Bill Patterson, Jim Hunt, Mark Burnham and Halstead Holden were others that showed promise in the first drill.

The team is trying to round into form for the first meet with the Engineers from Georgia Tech on October 18 at Chapel Hill.

Carolina Booters Prep for Loyola

"The Carolina soccer team is in better shape now than last year's squad was at any time during the season," Coach Marvin Allen declared at practice yesterday afternoon.

The booters were going through scrimmage sessions and also working out the complicated plays of the game. The squad is beginning to round into shape for the opening contest with Loyola of Baltimore on October 17.

CRIL to Hold First Meeting Of Year Today

An opening meeting of the Council for Religion in Life will be held at 4 o'clock this afternoon in Gerard hall with all members expected to attend, Russell G. Baldwin, CRIL chairman, announced yesterday.

Important items on the agenda will include the election of officers and discussion of the program for the coming year. Any member who cannot attend should send a substitute representative with a written voting proxy, said Baldwin.

All campus organization heads who have not yet appointed a CRIL representative are reminded that CRIL is composed of delegates from all campus organizations. In case this notice does not allow sufficient time for appointing a representative, stated Baldwin, the organization head should attend this meeting personally.

Sound and Fury Sets Preliminary Tryouts For Musical Comedy

Sound and Fury will hold its first meeting of the fall quarter tonight at 7:30 in Memorial hall. All old and new members, as well as new applicants, are requested to be there, as preliminary tryouts for the fall musical comedy will be held after the meeting.

Additional tryouts will be held Wednesday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock and Wednesday night from 7:30 to 9 o'clock.

The musical, to be produced in November, will be the first "plot" comedy since before the war. Songs and dances will blend in with the action, which takes place during the "Roaring Twenties."

There are a great many non-singing roles, and the great variety of parts offers opportunities for all types of acting.

Application for technical work will also be filled out tonight, as work on the sets and costumes will begin immediately.

made an auspicious debut by walking Stirnweiss on four straight pitches and then allowing Tommy Henrich to single into right field to score Rizzuto, but Hank finally ended the frame by forcing Berra to ground to Jackie Robinson who tossed to Behrman at first for the third out.

In the last of the sixth, Rizzuto's bunt-single, his theft of second, and Stirnweiss' free ticket brought in southpaw Joe Hatten to relieve Behrman for the Dodgers. Hatten got Tommy Henrich on a disputed third called strike, but pinch-swinger Al Clark dropped a single into center field to score Rizzuto and move Stirnweiss to second. Rex Barney replaced Hatten at this point and ended the inning by getting DiMaggio on a fly to center.

Billy Johnson's triple to deep left and Robinson's fly to Miksis were good for the last Yankee tally which came in the seventh at the expense of Brooklyn's Hugh Casey.

Storm Tides and Winds Lash Jacksonville Area

Jacksonville, Oct. 6—(UP)—Heavy tides and winds of gale force are lashing the beaches near Jacksonville, Florida, tonight as the third tropical storm in nine days rips into the city.

A radio appeal has been broadcast for all able-bodied citizens in Neptune and Atlantic beaches to help fight the turbulent waters which threaten to flood the business streets and wash away beach homes.

Winds up to 50 miles an hour have been reported and some 200 men have been sent from the naval air station in Jacksonville to fight the storm.

In the city of Jacksonville, about three inches of rain has fallen during the past 24 hours to add to the threat of floods.

Gubernatorial Candidate Sees $80 Million Post-War Income For State

Dr. Archibald Henderson To Speak At Di Senate Ceremonies

Charlie Long Will Also Talk To 153-Year-Old Organization

By Merrily Brooks

Dr. Archibald Henderson, head of the University mathematics department, will be the main speaker at Dialectic Senate inaugural ceremonies this evening at 8:30 on the third floor of New West. His subject will be the Di's role in University life.

Dr. Henderson, who has been a member of the faculty for fifty years is well known as a lecturer and author. He is the official biographer of George Bernard Shaw and was a fellow student with Einstein on the study of relativity at the University of Berlin.

Charlie Long, president of the Senate, which is 153 years old, will make a short address on the necessity of a student being able to express his thoughts clearly and precisely, and will preside over the entire meeting.

The officers of the Di Senate will be inaugurated and all new members will be sworn in. The meeting will be open to every one and especially to those men receiving invitations.

Following the meeting there will be an informal reception in the main lounge of Graham Memorial.

Palestine Issue Highlights First I.R.C. Discussion

At the weekly meeting of the International Relations club Monday, a discussion of the Palestine problem was presented the club as their first formal program of the year.

The discussion was carried on informally. All sides of the issue were thoroughly analyzed by the 25 members present. Main points discussed were the status of the Arab and the partition plan now before the United Nations.

Plans are being carried out by John Bristow, program chairman of IRC to bring several top-notch speakers and authorities on international affairs to Chapel Hill to present talks not only to the IRC but to the student body and other interested persons as well.

The program for the year will present speakers who have had experience either on congressional investigating committees in Europe and Asia or have held some other post with the State department.

Next week the program will be built around the subject of "The New Communist International" and its effect upon the operation of the Marshall plan.

Bill Patterson, recently elected president of IRC for the year, will preside and deliver the main talk of the evening.

The IRC meets every Monday at 7:30 in the Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial.

December Use of Voting Machines Planned; Yack Editor Candidates Must Meet Tonight

Plans for use of automatic voting machines to facilitate balloting in the December elections were announced yesterday by Elections board chairman Al Winn.

The board has met with a representative of the Jamestown Voting Machine Co. and obtained a tentative commitment for free use of the automatic devices, costing the student body only a shipping charge of approximately $30 per machine.

Winn said each machine would accommodate approximately 500 voters per day, speeding not only the process of balloting but automatically tabulating returns. Their use, Winn declared, depends on further word from the Jamestown company and approval by the student legislature.

Meanwhile, Winn announced final plans for the special Yack editorship election scheduled for October 14.

Candidates for the post vacated by Editor-elect Bill Moffitt will meet tonight in room 211 at 7:30. And names of candidates must be filed with the board chairman at 8 Steele before midnight tomorrow.

Under standing election laws polling will be conducted at five places next Tuesday from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m.

A new system for checking in voters at the polls is included in plans, though conventional ballots will be used, Winn announced. A date stamped will be used to mark students' ID cards, eliminating the timely process of recording names and addresses by hand.

Sound and Fury To Hold Musical Try-Outs Today

Sound and Fury will hold tryouts for its fall musical from 3 to 5 and from 7:30 to 9 o'clock at Memorial hall today.

Pete Strader has announced that there are straight speaking parts available in the new, two-act musical comedy for applicants not talented in singing or dancing. The setting will be the Roaring Twenties, and anyone capable of portraying stage and screen personalities of that era will have an opportunity to exhibit his talents.

Those persons having seen the "Blip" skit and other Strader-Gammage brainchildren will realize that there will be good parts available to those who merit them in this new creation by that writing team.

It is not necessary to be a present member of the group to try for a part in the coming work. All interested theatrical aspirants will be welcome to this opportunity to break into the stage life of the campus.

Di, Phi Hear Johnson Talk On Treasury

By Bill Sexton

North Carolina's state revenue per year should "level off" at 75 to 80 million dollars during the coming years, Charles M. Johnson, state treasurer and candidate for governor, predicted last night.

Speaking at the annual Di-Phi banquet in the Carolina Inn, Johnson declared that "the state's revenue will never go back to what it was in 1941, an unusually prosperous year."

Explains Finances

In an address dedicated to explaining fiscal policy of the state government, which as treasurer he has directed for 15 years, Johnson developed four main points:

(1) The purpose of the building fund established by the 1947 General Assembly.

(2) Significance of the post-war reserve fund, also a creation of the recent legislature.

(3) The present state of taxes in North Carolina.

(4) The necessity of industrial development to maintenance of the state government's basic operations.

To Modernize Buildings

The $50 million fund earmarked by the assembly for new construction at state institutions, said Johnson, "is designed to bring North Carolina up to date after practically ten years of no building at all by the state."

"The fund will be spent just as fast as it can," he said, "though the actual program will be spread over several years."

As for the $30 million post-war reserve fund, "it really isn't a postwar reserve fund at all," the state treasurer declared. He explained that the sum was set aside as insurance against pay cuts for state employees if and when revenue drops.

To Offset Pay Cuts

"The state's employees—government workers and teachers as well—were two years late getting their increases," he said; "this fund is to guarantee these increases for a period of two years after state income drops."

Discussing present-day sources of revenue, Johnson told the Di-Phi banquet that "we are now levying all we possibly can." He explained how already state income and franchise taxes are higher than those of other southern states, though practically offset by the lack of a state levy on local property.

Need More Money

And, said Johnson, despite current peak revenues and the income in sight during the near future, "we've got to have more money for our institutions and schools."

As the only solution to continued development of state operations, Johnson suggested intensive industrialization. "We've got to have more workers bringing more money to the state, so we can collect more taxes," he declared.

North Carolina needs assistance from the national government for its educational program, Johnson said, though he added that "personally I am opposed to federal aid."

Tom Eller Will Request Safer Victory Village

Installation of more adequate street lighting and increased police protection for Victory Village will be urged by Student Body President Tom Eller as a result of the attack Monday evening on a student's wife, it was learned yesterday.

Eller, who announced he would confer with the University administration as soon as possible, described the incident as "a tragic thing to have happen in our University community."

"It emphasizes the immediate need for better lighting and protection for the veterans' community," Eller declared.

Lauds Neighbors

The president of the student body lauded the absence of any "hasty mob action" by neighbors. "The fact that such action was held in distaste by those directly concerned with the case is of extreme credit to students, for such ill-timed behavior is equally tragic."

Meanwhile, investigation of the case by Chapel Hill police continues, though last night Chief of Police W. T. Sloan reported "no new developments."

Sloan said he was aware of rumors that Victory Village residents had "a vague idea" of the identity of the assailent, who, it was reported, is a white resident of the general vicinity.

"But," said the police head, "No one has brought such information to us."

Condition "Good"

Dr. Ed Hedgepeth, University health service chief, at the same time announced the condition of the young mother of two children as "improved and good." He said scratches suffered at the time of the attempted assault were not serious.

It was reported in South building that an informal meeting of University officials yesterday morning had decided the case was "closed." This was interpreted as indicating there would be no investigation by the administration.

Thomas Requests Plan of Action For Red Threat

Washington, Oct. 7—(UP)—Chairman J. Parnell Thomas of the House Un-American Activities committee requested today that the national legislatures of all western countries meet to form a plan of action against what he calls the "threat of world Communism."

Thomas says that Moscow's revival of the New Communist Internationale has convinced him that it is time to take action against the threat of Communism. He warns that the Communist movement must, as he put it, be recognized for what it is, a "foreign-directed . . . organization with the single object of revolutionary subversion."

The New Jersey Republican says that the New Communist Internationale should remind freedom-loving people everywhere that the Communists aim to destroy democracy.

Thomas' anti-Communist appeal coincided with the announcement that there will be some more house-cleaning at home. The announcement was made by the State department, which said that its formal security code calls for the immediate firing of any so-called "questionable" employee or officer, whether Communist or Fascist.

Latest Rushing Regulations Are Issued At First Interfraternity Council Meeting

No fraternity bids are to be delivered before 6 o'clock next Wednesday evening nor are any to be delivered after the following Friday at 5 o'clock.

This rule governing rush bids were passed unanimously by the 39 members present at the first meeting of the Interfraternity Council which was held Monday at 7:15 in the Grail room of Graham Memorial.

It was also decided at the meeting that a list must be prepared by each fraternity giving names and addresses to all new men, transfers or veterans that were sent bids from that fraternity. These lists must be turned in to the Council on or before Friday, October 17 at 5 o'clock. Each fraternity will be responsible for the distribution of their bids either by mail or personal delivery.

The group decided that bids will be sent out on a form card to be furnished by the council. Only essential information will be included on the card and a condensed list of rushing rules will be printed on the back.

Representatives of the various fraternities were reminded at the meeting that they must post a bond of $50 before they will be allowed to begin rushing procedures. Also, each pledge must pay a $1 pledge fee to the Dean of Men before he is allowed to join any fraternity.

A committee was appointed by Leon Todd, president of the council, to decide how formal invitations will be distributed to new men following rush period. The committee consists of Ted Young and Roger Cooley, and is to be headed by Meigs Goldman.

The executive committee announced that a meeting of all new students will be held sometime before rush week in order that rules of rushing and aspects of fraternity life may be explained.

Formal rushing begins on October 19. Students are requested to watch the Daily Tar Heel for announcements concerning rules and rushing schedules.

In the meantime, rushing rules state that new men may visit fraternity houses upon invitation but may not engage in conversation with the members in connection with fraternities nor may any fraternity entertain the visitors with refreshments or any formal entertainment.

WINSTON-SALEM CLUB

The Winston-Salem Carolina club which numbered 275 strong last year will hold its initial meeting of the quarter tonight at 7 o'clock in Gerrard hall. At that time important business will be discussed concerning the annual Christmas dance to be staged again in the Twin City this year under Carolina club auspices. New officers will also be elected.

Any student from Winston-Salem who is enrolled in the University is automatically a member of the club and is invited to be present this evening.

GM Jazz Session Is Set for Today

Something new in campus music styles will be offered this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Rendezvous of Graham Memorial, when the local jazz musicians assemble for a two hour unrehearsed jam session. All professional and amateur student musicians who can come and bring their own instruments, are especially urged to attend, in order to make the venture a real success. The public is invited.

Jack Burney, moderator for this afternoon program, says that he hopes sufficient interest will be shown in the program to justify weekly sessions.

Council Selects New Vote System For Next Election

Dormitory officer elections will be held under a new system of selection this year, the Interdormitory council announced yesterday.

Ballot boxes will be placed in the dormitories on specified days for 12-hour periods, and residents can write in their individual choices for president, secretary, and treasurer. Anyone with a plurality for any office will hold the post for the coming year.

Council members expressed the hope that by this method, instead of having the usual mass dormitory election meeting, officers more representative of a majority can be chosen, and the evil of interested minorities pushing through candidates in a mass meeting can be eliminated.

Boxes will be placed in the lower quadrangle October 15; in the upper quad October 16; in Steele, Old East, Old West, BVP, and Whitehead October 20. The election will be conducted under the honor system, and all voters must sign the election announcement to be posted in the respective dormitories signifying that they understand these conditions.

Wood New Leader Of Student Party

Bill Wood, junior from Burlington, was elected chairman of the Student party yesterday, replacing Charles O. Long.

Meeting to complete its campaign for Yack candidate Arthur T. Melton, the SP accepted Long's resignation and elected by acclamation Wood, who had served as party chairman last spring.

American Legion Post Changes Meeting Date

The Chapel Hill post of the American Legion decided at the meeting last Friday night to meet the first Thursday in the month from now on.

In order to foster good relations between students and townspeople, the legion hopes that many students will join and participate in discussions and social gatherings while here on campus.

Yack Board of Editors Announce Changes In Yearbook Picture-Taking Procedure

In a renewed effort to shorten lines as much as possible, the Yackety-Yack board of editors—Gene Johnstone, Harold Bursley, and Ruth Evans announced yesterday two major changes in picture taking procedures here. The quick-blowing fuse system which plagued all concerned last week had been changed and pictures will be taken in the evening throughout this week.

Board member Evans also urged all those whose pictures have already been taken to come to the Yack offices and fill out their class cards. "No picture which is not accompanied by the information on these class cards can appear in the Yack," she said.

The cards will contain the student's name, fraternity affiliation, honorary membership, activities on campus, and local address. The information is absolutely necessary to the Yack staff, and the board emphasized that no picture will go into the book without it.

These class cards will be found on the table immediately outside the Yack office on the second floor of Graham Memorial, and any assistance necessary to filling them out will be provided by the Yack staff.

No one whose picture was taken prior to yesterday morning has filled one out. The late arrival of the cards was given as the reason for the failure of the photographers to provide them when the pictures were taken.

Somewhat red-faced over the failure of the lines to move faster last week, the editors of the Yack went into conference over the week-end with Chidnoff of New York to find the reason for the slowdown, and the improved fuse system is the result of that conference. "To date this week not a single fuse has blown," commented Bursley in announcing this change.

With the principal cause of last week's congestion removed, the board's announcement of arrangements for night pictures was expected to result in even less delay. To take these photographs, both of the photographers will extend their working day to be on duty from 7:30 to 10 o'clock each night beginning this evening. Fraternities especially are asked to take advantage of this new arrangement and come in the evening of their assigned day.

The three editors issued a joint statement hoping that these changes will eliminate all waiting for individual photographs.

Business manager Dick Gordon of the Yackety-Yack asked yesterday that all campus organizations which have not received a letter from him get in touch with the Yack office immediately, if they wish space in the annual.

Noting that several new groups have been formed this year, he explained that for space in the Yack to be assigned them, arrangements must be made by the end of next week.

He expressed pleasure in the response of those groups which have already contracted for the space which they are to occupy, but reminded all organizations which were notified but have not as yet sent contracts to the Yack office to do so in the near future. "The deadline for these groups is October 9," he said.

'Oversize Closet' in Graham Memorial Is Point of Origin For Almost All Pictures Appearing in Campus Publications

By John Stump

There is a little room with no sign on its door which stands directly opposite to the Yackety-Yack offices, on the other side of Graham Memorial. It is not vacant, nor is it a storeroom.

This little oversize closet is the "point of origin" of almost all the pictures which appear in your campus publications.

Here, in a space about the size of an apartment bedroom, a boy named Les Bodden and a half dozen assistants will develop several thousand pictures during the course of the school year.

Some of them will be photographs of prominent campus and outside personalities, some will be elaborate full color scenes, and others will be split-second action shots caught at tense moments of basketball games. Most of them will be pictures of the university and its men and women; some few will be commercial projects. But all will represent considerable working and waiting by a camera-carrying student who often as not is rewarded with nothing more tangible than a credit line in fine print.

These boys are staff members of the various publications and normally work under assignments given them by the publication editors.

Les himself is chief photographer for the Yack. Sometime next week, he and the other two Yack photographers, Wilson Yarborough and Bruce Harrison, will be assigned to cover the fraternity rush parties. Then, they will go from one party to another taking pictures of typical scenes, and, when they have several, they will return and develop them.

After they have been finished, they will be given to Yack board of editors—Gene Johnstone, Harold Bursley, and Ruth Evans— who will accept some and reject others on the basis of their effectiveness in catching the spirit of the functions.

For use on this and other assignments, the Publications board and the photographers themselves have equipment for night photography, color pictures, and high speed action shots. Expenses for this equipment and its operation are paid by a full scale allocation from the overall publications budget.

However, at their own expense, Boddin and his staff are at present renovating the darkroom and installing new plumbing and equipment.

Strangely enough, all of this activity comes under the heading of a "hobby" for most of the staff. Boddin himself is a language major who became an amateur 'camera hound' while in the AAF. His father sent him some photographic apparatus with which he took aerial photographs during lulls in combat activities; and he has been at it ever since.

His staff and those of the DTH and the magazines use the darkroom almost continually. Especially at this time of the year, they often spend most of the day and some of the night there. What with classes and other demands on their time, Bodden feels that he speaks for the entire staff when he comes out for 28 hours in the day.

"Sleep", sighed the harassed "amatuer" as we rose to go, "is a wonderful thing."

Detroit, Oct. 7—(UP)—California isn't going to like this one.

Seaman Aaron Gatewood, AWOL from a California base since June, was arrested by F.B.I. agents in Detroit today. They asked him why he overstayed a 30-day leave granted him.

"I liked Michigan's climate better than California's," he told amazed federal agents.

Song of the Orientals

The Russians have tried another tactic in their fight to put the clinchers on the Marshall Plan and the Truman Doctrine—two American policies that conflict strikingly with the ideals of Communism. They have, in effect, declared diplomatic war on the United States, and there will be everything except the actual fighting. It is a war among two countries and their ideologies. Russia readily admitted this, when she called the seven countries in around her skirts.

Some type of maneuver such as the latest one should have been expected from the Russians for it is in keeping with her behavior at the United Nations General Assembly.

The conduct of the Russian peoples was described in John Fischer's "Why They Behave Like Russians," and it fits precisely into this pattern. Fischer states that the Russians are orientals. They, therefore, are comparable to the Armenian rug dealers, who are famous for their trading methods. They establish their initial price for their merchandise at a price several times what they are willing to accept. In their marketing places there is much haggling over the price of the goods. Often the potential purchaser walks out of the shop, in pretended disgust, but always one or the other makes a concession that will make the would-be buyer stay and haggle again—until both the purchaser and the merchant are quite proud of his achievement.

The Russians have already walked out of the market place of world peace—the United Nations General Assembly on several occasions when the concessions did not satisfy them. Now they have come back with the complete family—their seven offsprings.

Russia now expects us to come down on our price because she has more vocal cords than we to chart her claims and slanders. From now on the choicest bits of these claims will come from the central office in Belgrade and they will be upheld and repeated in every country with which Russia has the slightest connection.

We offer no counter-attack to stop the new combined forces. But perhaps with all of the kids, Russia will be so busy looking after them that she will be willing to make concessions in order to get them back home.

Radio Department Adds to University

The University of North Carolina takes one more step in upholding its reputation as one of the foremost universities of the South. This year marks the addition of a department of radio which will work in conjunction with the new Communication Center.

Although the school is now on a trial basis in that it was established for only a two-year period, given it an opportunity to prove its merits, there is every indication that it will be a permanent part of the university. Since it is the only department of radio in any university in the South, its fame has already reached outside the boundaries of the State and inquiries are received daily concerning the curriculum and the facilities of the department.

A degree in radio is offered by the department. Members of the faculty are taking every precaution to keep out students whose only wish is to major in radio because they have heard through the grapevine that it is a "crip" department. There are several entrance examinations in the form of appitude tests that a student is required to take. These tests determine his abilities and interest in the field of radio. The department has departmental divisions and offers courses in announcing, and script writing as well as the technical phases of radio.

Students and faculty members will perform an integral function in the staging and broadcasting of several series of broadcasts that will originate from the studios of the Communication Center in Swain hall.

The department of radio has already added, and will continue to add, a great amount of prestige to the University through its training of students and its scheduled radio programs that will be of local and State significance.

Crime, Cheese-cake, Blessed-Events

Though most DTH writers will rise to protest, it has long been recognized that one picture is worth a thousand words. The Chinese said so many years ago and since the old quote is still alive it is probably true.

We have been convinced.

Henceforth you shall see less good gray Tar Heel front pages and more front sheets a la the good old New York News. We have subscribed to a King Features picture service which is excitingly designated "Cleveland News Mats."

Each day the DTH will receive seven or eight news pictures with matted captions (the words that go under the pictures). In addition we are to receive each week a special illustrated feature story of news interest, the King Features people tell us.

We are sure you will be interested. These little gems are culled from a sample sheet from the service: (1) A flat-faced lady wearing rather large glasses and a print dress, above whom there is the caption: "Her Body Found." Underneath there is information concerning the conditions under which it was found. (2) A shrunken gentleman in a beat-up felt hat. He has a face like a rodent. There is a frightened look in her round little eyes and his mouth is curled into a careful smile. Above the picture, these words: "His Wife Slain." (3) A happier scene—a large picture of a buxom brunette lady holding in her arms what appears to be a newly-arrived set of twins, while another set, about three years old, gambols about her knees.

Then too, we shall have some cheesecake. Watch for it.—R.S.

Discussing antiques—in languages most husbands wish they could use—Arthur Marx insists it's no wonder the Red Coats nearly beat us. "It took the Minutemen hours to get their socks out of the top drawer of those highboys," he explains.

One of our Cosmo editors with a swell sense of humor wonders in the sub-title; "Did our colonial forefathers really revolt because of King George's taxes? Or were their tempers worn down by the kind of furniture they had around the house?"

Sleeping Beauty Still Unrescued

DREW PEARSON ON The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Washington.—Newspaper headlines made it appear that reducing the grain used by distillers was easy. But in the backstage bargaining, some of the big whiskey boys didn't yield easily. Here is what happened in the secret meeting of the president's food committee:

The distillers were first asked if they would discontinue the use of grain for two months. They were reminded that they had huge reserve stocks already on hand, estimated at from 468,000,000 to 525,000,000 gallons, and that counting whiskey, brandy, rum, gin and neutral spirits, reserves have increased about 100,000,000 gallons over last year.

Distillery spokesmen, however, led by Joseph A. Engelhard, President of Glenmore Distilleries; R. E. Joyce, vice president of National Distilleries; Fred Lind of Seagrams, Robert Carr of Hiram Walker, and others, argued that a two-month stop-order on the use of all grains for spirits would work too great a hardship on their industry.

Engelhard and his colleagues pointed out that many distilling plants would be forced to close down entirely during the moratorium, with employees thrown out of jobs, and the risk of having key employees find permanent jobs elsewhere.

Secretary of Agriculture Anderson and Charles Luckman, head of the Citizens Food Committee, countered that the distillers did not need to close if they used potatoes and other grain-substitutes for alcohol.

"You gentlemen should curtail production in your own interests, aside from any conservation needs," Anderson warned the whiskey men. "With the big reserves you have on hand, you are heading for a certain price war within the industry if you maintain your current rate of production. So you ought to clamp down for your own good."

Distillery spokesmen agreed that this was true, but doggedly held out against a complete moratorium.

Potatoes are not a good substitute, Engelhard and his colleagues argued, because they are 90 per cent water. Hence the industry can get only one gallon of alcohol out of five bushels of potatoes, whereas one bushel of grain gives five gallons of alcohol.

The distillery leaders insisted that they wanted to do everything possible to help the president's food-conservation program. But when it came to the real pinch—cutting out the use of grain—they balked.

So finally, after a day-long session, the best Luckman could squeeze out of the distillers was a compromise, whereby they banned all wheat in the manufacture of liquor and cut corn and other grains 50 per cent.

Note—Actually, corn and other grains are going to be needed almost as much as wheat, because of the shortage of cattle feed. U. S. dairy farmers, faced with the zooming cost of feed, will soon require another increase in the price of milk.

One Republican barb that always riles the Democrats is the charge that President Truman is a "prisoner of the left wing and the PAC."

Asked to comment on this charge the other day, former California Attorney General Bob Kenny, who heads the anti-Truman "Wallace for President" movement, said:

"It may be so, but from the looks of things, Truman's certainly been out on parole the last two years."

Secret Argentine-Russian Deal

Here's the inside story of the USA-USSR voting deadlock at the United Nations last week over seats on the all-important Security Council.

Real fact was that Russia's Vishinsky made a secret deal with Dr. Jose Arce, the Argentine delegate, whereby Argentina agreed to throw 12 Latin-American votes behind the Ukrainian Republic. In return, Russia supported Argentina's membership.

Secretary Marshall and the British delegation threw their support behind India. Result was a nine-ballot deadlock during which the Russian group got 33 votes to 24 votes for the Anglo-American group.

In the middle of the deadlock, the Arab delegation offered Vishinsky their 8 votes if Vishinsky agreed to vote with the Arabs on Palestine. For some mysterious reason, Vishinsky turned down the deal—though it would have meant certain election of the Ukraine to the Security Council.

Assistant Secretary of State Jack Peurifoy, who was refused a visa to visit Russia, now tells friends he's thinking of writing a book called "The Failure of My Mission to Moscow." . . . President Truman is considering the following as successors to Assistant Secretary of State William Benton: Wall Street Banker Frank Altschul, brother-in-law of Herbert Lehman; and Tom Finletter, head of the Air Policy Committee, an A-1 man. . . . British Intelligence reports still indicate that Russia's foreign minister Molotov will stage a dramatic appearance at the United Nations later this month, making a surprise demand for immediate world disarmament.

Actions and Reactions

Second Look Into Campus Life

Joe Allan and Lee Knowles

This college year, if college years still began in the fall, has opened with a tremendous impact upon students and faculty alike. The inevitably long lines waiting for registration, books, supplies and housing have been seen, sighed over, and finally conquered in an orderly, good-humored fashion and we are settling down to college life once again with all the timely energy of fall and youth. We need both.

Now is is time to take a second look into some of the pertinent facets of life which confront us daily here on the campus.

Probably the one single fact that most of us are conscious of is that our football team started us off by settling and ole score with a fine Georgia team, and then went on to create a sincere enthusiasm for next year's clash with Texas by rendezvous with a hot Texas team under a hot Texas sun.

This interest in our team is here to stay. Accompanying it are other concerns which affect us all every day. Some five hundred men are still quartered in the quonset huts, many of whom are veterans who think that they should have been allocated the rooms that freshmen just out of high school have been given in the dormitories. Whatever the value of the various shades of opinion upon this matter the University has seen fit to proceed as they have and leave no practical recourse to these veterans. Furthermore men living in the dormitories are subject to all the added noise, congestion, and inconvenience naturally present when three and four men live in rooms intended for two. This overflow in the dormitories of course carries over into the classes making individual instruction, formerly considered one of the requisites of college training, absolutely out of the question. Besides overcrowded classes, those who have classes in the recently-constructed temporary buildings must sit in unheated rooms, often too cold for normal comfort and concentration. Those who eat at Lenoir hall must wait out long, slow moving lines at almost every weekday meal. Many complaints have been made about the quality of the food served in the dining hall and about the high prices. Surely those lines are destined to lengthen come the winter quarter when the new dormitories are opened and a thousand new students are admitted.

Some of the departments in the University have had to pare down expenditures and operate upon budgets which are totally inadequate to enable them to present the best teaching methods and materials to these extra-heavy classes. Our teachers have had an increase in salary which is still not comparable to the income of teachers in many of the wealthier colleges in the country. Because of this income differential we have from time to time lost some excellant teachers and brilliant thinkers. . . . and this steady loss will be likely to continue until the incomes of our regular faculty members are adjusted to a more practical and persuasive level.

In the light of these above mentioned trends in Carolina affairs we appear to face a variety of troubles which will demand the combined efforts of the State General Assembly, the administration, the faculty, and the student body all working together in a spirit of good will and whole hearted cooperation.

While we are focusing our attention upon these pressing matters at home it is well to realize that colleges all over the country are trying to cope with the same and worse problems. Crowded conditions and high living costs have been less ably handled elsewhere on campuses throughout the nation.

If we widen our focused view we can see the image of Europe today, where starvation is imminent for hundreds of thousands this coming winter unless immediate food relief is administered by us. Fuel supplies are too low to afford adequate warmth for the majority of peoples of Western Europe for the entire winter. Housing problems have arisen which make ourse here in the United States seem simple by comparison. These factors have seriously shaped European morale to the point where it needs immediate encouragement from the U. S. to bolster and foster the continuance of democratic governments and civil liberties. In view of these basic human needs in Europe there is every suggestion that our sometimes seemingly complex and uncomfortable life here at Carolina is relatively luxurious and almost Utopian While these terrible conditions exist abroad they do not serve to eliminate or alleviate our campus problems. However, they do serve to put our difficulties in a different light. Tar Heels with this cosmopolitan point of view will more happily and successfully approach and handle their present difficulties.

Dear Editor:

I was happy to see that in Sunday's Daily Tar Heel you gave Dick Mottsman an opportunity that was denied to him at one of the recent CCUN forums.

I refer to both the moderator's and the Syrian Charge d'Affaire's refusal to allow Mottsman to speak. He happened to disagree with Mr. Tomeh and desired to cite evidence to prove his point, attempting to show by documented reports that rather than having a pro-Allied war record, the Arabs were definitely pro-Axis.

I believe Mr. Mottsman's conduct at the forum was such that he was not out of orcer.

Your action in printing his letter shows that despite this minor blot on our record, there is still a medium for free expression at Carolina.

JAMES S. CONNELL

Big Saving

Dear Mr. Mills:

Much has appeared in the editorial columns of the Tar Heel about the short distance the dollar of the student travels in these days of high prices. The Tar Heel has an opportunity to stretch that dollar by printing a list of the opposing players with position and number for the Chapel Hill games. The Tar Heel ran a list of the Carolina squad before the Georgia game. Prices of programs have risen a cool 200 per cent since last year. Here is an opportunity to save numbers of students two dollars, four games yet to be played here. The Tar Heel could, I'm sure, get the roster of the opposing team from the newspapers published at the other universities as the Tar Heel carries an exchange service.

ROBERT NEILL

P.S. Is there any way by which the outfit which runs the public address system at Kenan can give the scores of other games played throughout the country? Only a few are given now and sports followers have a strong interest in games played anywhere.

Concerning College Students

Football, Necking and Flasks

By Tookie Hodgson

Let us consider college students. We shall start off right by saying that the student body of a college consists of both men and women. This is a very happy arrangement.

The male college student will take a walk through the aboretum, the female (or coed) will dawdle off in the same direction in order to pick wild flowers. (1) Let me add here, that college students are viviparous (2).

The female college student wears a sweater and a skirt; the male wears a sweater, a pair of trousers and for a while, a fraternity pin. Both wear shoes.

The male college student likes football games, necking, and carries a flask. The coed is about the same. (3)

All college students have a major and a minor. This is as far as it goes. School is unpopular among college students. They prefer to play bridge, shoot pool, and "go out" for things. Some write stories, some speak in public, some run for campus offices. (4) I know a male student who drives around all day in a Cadillac trying to pick up girls. He doesn't have to try very hard either. (5)

College coeds love to chase rich boys. Similarly, college boys love to chase rich girls. Those in the middle love to chase each other on general principles. (6)

Nobody has ever really decided about college students.

Footnotes:

1) When in season, of course.
2) Look in Webster's under the V's.
3) Except for the flask. Coeds carry "cocoa mugs" instead.
4) What the others do is none of your darn business.
5) This is because he has personality.
6) If you don't know why at your age, then ask your mother.

The Rise, Fall, and Rise of Tar Heel Football Emsire

n Austin, Texas, last week, Coach Carl Snavely and his assistants have rallied together the shambles of a 34-0 defeat and seem well on their way to building them back to what the advance press notices say they ought to be.

That changes are being made to remedy the lackings of the past weekend can be initially seen in the movement of Joe Romano, the fellow who turned to football when vodvil folded, from end to tackle. Romano, who is at home anywhere inside the stadium, should fine the tackles a little bigger than the ends he was been facing, but this doesn't bother Joe who figures they all put on their pants the same he does, that being one leg at a time.

That other changes will be in order looks probable from the showing some of the Tar Heel lesser lights made in the Austin atrocity. J. Fitch and H. Rodgers began to show some of their old form and new faces cropped up all over the field.

And that the Tar Heels are yet to be heard from is a needless statement. There is too much power down there to have more than one bad afternoon in a season. One can look for the silver lining from here on out.

Wake Forest, the Tar Heels' Saturday opponent, is no powerhouse among men, but on the other hand, can not be tossed with ease like an ice cream Sundae. The Tar Heels are sure to have their hands filled, but after two weeks of defensive darkness, they should begin to see the light. Whethr or not the Carolina team intends to return to winning graces is a fact that will be expounded in Kenan Statium sometime next Saturday afternoon.

Texas Torment

The Tar Heels' introduction to air travel proved to be a flyer in the wrong direction last week with the locals not being long to feel the effects of a rough air ride to Texas, a state that is fast becoming known for its holocausts. Charlie Justice was one of those most effected, easily explainable by the Choo Choo one's slight perference to trains over planes. It is still true, though, that the Tar Heels probably received more discomfort from the Texan airLaynes rather than the national ones. The air age is yet to prove itself to the Carolina football squad.

Speaking of Texas, it can be noticed that the Tar Heels provided the Longhorns with a step stone to the top of the national football pile. And considering the possibly scoring effect the weather had on the Tar Heels, it can be ascertained that there is no real disgrace in being beaten by the nation's leading gridiron aggregation. How they stand the weather is hard to say, unless possibly the Longhorns trained in an Austin Turkish bath.

Paddling Along

A little publicized, but much played sport on the Carolina campus is a nerve-racking concoction called ping-pong. Each day hundreds of fine, upstanding students push the small, white ball back and forth across a table of about 40 square feet of playing area. Needless to say, the game is fast gaining popularity, with Graham Memorial starting the first of its fall tournament series and the Intramural department planning another campuswide tournament later in the quarter.

All indications point to a large season having all the makings of "big time" ping pong. Like radio and coeds, the game looks here to stay.

Pitiful Prognostication

The age-old science of prognostication has received a serious straining this season with every football team in the nation going all out to make the poor fellows who are forced by occupation to predict, look strikingly bad.

Worse looking of the sporting crew is a young fellow who weekly picks for the Daily Tar Heel. During the last week, which was a bad one all the way around, he recorded the amazing percentage of eight wins out of twenty, a record a man who had never seen a football game could easily better. This unlucky fellow missed picking the score of the North Carolina-Texas game by the slim margin of 48 points which shows how wrong a man can be. So, into the trash basket goes a brand new crystal ball, a battered astrology chart, and an ouija board that has been handed down in the family for generations; and in the classified section goes an ad: Wanted: One great big hole to crawl in.

Big Leaguers Play Sunday In Bull City

Baseball fans of the Piedmont section of North Carolina will get their first chance this year to see some high calibre major league baseball on Sunday afternoon, October 12, in the Durham Athletic Park, when Buddy Lewis will lead a squad of almost 15 players from both major leagues and the American Association against a team of minor leaguers from the tobacco city.

Lewis, of the Washington Senators and Gastonia, N. C., will head the barnstorming troupe composed almost entirely of men hailing from the two Carolinas.

Teaming with Lewis will be a contingent from the Chicago White Sox headed by outfielder Taft Wright, runner-up for this season's American League batting title from Lumberton, N. C., Ralph Hodgin, hard hitting picketman hailing from Greensboro, slugger Rudy York, the Chisox' leading home run producer, and pitcher Bob Gillespie of Winston Salem.

Catcher Al Evans, of Kenly, and Ray Scarborough of Mt. Olive are other Senators who will appear Sunday along with the New York Giants' Mickey Livington, who will be stationed at the hot corner. Dick Culler, shortstop of the Boston Braves, will open at short. Culler's officiating of Southern Conference games has made him a familiar figure in state collegiate circles.

Jimmy Brown, of Jamesville, N. C., former St. Louis Cardinal and Pittsburgh Pirate second baseman, will play the keystone sack for the All-Stars. Kirby Higbe, colorful and loud-mouthed hurler for the Pirates, and Tommy Byrne, former Wake Forest and New York Yankee southpaw, now of the Kansas City Blues, will also be available for mound duty.

Opposing the big leaguers will be a team composed of outstanding Class C, D, and semi-pro players who reside in and around Durham during the off season.

Heading their attack will be Willie Duke, 1947 Carolina League batting champ and manager of the Durham Bulls, speedy Freddie Pacitto, who hit .377 for the Bulls this season, catcher Charlie Ferrell who also performed for Durham this year, Johnny Clayton and Claude Swigget, who cavorted in the Burlington Bees' infield this summer, Dennis Saunders, voted by sports writers the best second baseman in the Appalachian League, Charles McNay and Dallas Branch, former professional baseball players, and hurlers Buck Weaver and Chuck Hastedt of the Bulls and Eddie Haswell of the Burlington Bees. The minor leaguers will be managed by Jack Coombs, present Duke baseball coach and former Philadelphia Athletics' pitcher.

CHESS CLUB

The first meeting of the Graham Memorial chess club will be held this evening, Oct. 8, at 7:30 in the Roland Parker lounge No. 1.

The purpose of this club will be to teach all those who are interested in learning the game, and to aid those who want to improve their playing. "In the course of the year we hope to have chess experts, including state champions, come here to give demonstrations."

Jayvees Finish Heavy Workouts In Preparation for Gamecocks

Carolina's Jayvees will go through their last heavy practice of the week this afternoon before the Tar Baby coaches begin tapering off work for the game with the South Carolina Jayvees in Columbia on Friday.

An afternoon of rough work was the order of the day, during the sessions yesterday, which were run off on a soggy turf. The squad was divided into two groups, under the tutelage of Chan Highsmith and Bill Crutchfield, and special emphasis was placed on improvement of timing and the team's punting game. There was also a general review of fundamentals at the first of the session, and some work was done in the passing department during the closing minutes of the practice.

The team has shown steady improvement recently, but many of the boys have not yet mastered all the assignments in the plays.

Among those who have shown up well in the sessions are Caudill and Purcell, in the punting department; Shields and Purcell, passers; Parker, who has performed well at fullback; and ends Washington, Weems, and Ray. The latter, a rangy pass snagger, is a newcomer to the squad but has shown considerable progress.

Prospects are for a fairly experienced first team, but the reserves for the most part will be newcomers to the Carolina squad.

The team will embark from Chapel Hill by bus on Friday morning for Columbia. Approximately 44 will make the trip.

Harrier Schedule Begins October 18 With Georgia Tech

By Morty Schaap

The Carolina cross country schedule for this season was announced last night by Coach Dale Ranson of the harrier team.

The opening meet with Georgia Tech on October 18 will be run here at Cheapel Hill over the four-mile conference course. Tech has a strong squad which is paced by Johnny Corriden, who took a second place in the indoor mile here last year.

Along with Corriden, the Engineers boast Red Smith, who was a scholastic distance star at Boys' High in Atlanta.

The squad's second meet is with the strong Volunteers of Tennessee, coached by Walter Mehle, former Wisconsin distance standout.

There are still three open dates on the agenda and the coaches are working hard to find opposition for the hill-and-dalers on those dates.

The team continues to work hard, and even though wet weather besieged them yesterday they took a five-mile workout.

Freshmen are still urgently needed to man a yearling squad that will have meets with several schools in the vicinity.

The schedule:

A conflicting date has been set for November 17 with the IC4A at New York and the Southern Conference at Raleigh It is expected that a jayvee squad will represent the Tar Heels in conference competition.

October 18—Georgia Tech—here
October 25—OPEN
October 29—Duke—here
November 1—Tennessee—here
November 8—N. C. State—here
November 14—OPEN
November 17—IC4A meet at New York City. Southern conference meet at Raleigh.
November 22—OPEN
November 29—Virginia—here

Women's Volleyball

Practice for the coed volleyball tournament began yesterday in the Women's gym and will continue through October 11. The gym will be available every afternoon from 4 until 6 o'clock and dorms and sororities should sign up at the gym for a practice hour.

The intramural volleyball tournament will begin Monday, October 13, and a game schedule will be published at the end of this week.

Williamson Ratings

The weekly football ratings, handed out by the Williamson System, placed the North Carolina Tar Heels as the 10th best team in the nation. The Tar Heels have a 93.4 percentage following the staggering defeat suffered at the hands of the Texas Longhorns last Saturday.

The Longhorns are rated as the top flight team in the nation, followed up by Notre Dame, Georgia Tech, Michigan U., Army, California, Penn, Virginia, S.M.U., and Carolina, respectively.

The only other North Carolina team to rank among the top twenty is the Duke Blue Devils, who hold a 16th place slot.

Football Tickets

The Carolina-Wake Forest football game here Saturday is expected to draw an attendance of more than 30,000, it was indicated yesterday by advance sales at the University ticket office in Woollen gymnasium.

The sales have been especially brisk since the first of the week, it was said.

Tar Heels Devote Most of Practice To Perfecting Airwave Maneuvers

BOB MITTEN, left, and JOHN TANDY, guard and end, respectively, on the Tar Heel football squad. These two lads are veteran performers and are being counted on heavily in the Wake Forest Game.

Wet grounds held the Carolina grid practice somewhat in check yesterday afternoon but the Tar Heels did manage to devote some time in perfecting their offensive maneuvers for the weekend invasion of the Demon Deacons from Wake Forest.

A major share of the two-hour session was spent in working on passing plays, since it appears that the local lads must take to the airwaves in view of the overshifted lines being used by the opposition to halt the ground attack. Running plays were kept to a minimum by the slippery going underfoot.

Coach Carl Snavely expects the Deacons to borrow from the Georgia and Texas defensive systems and throw much of the same against the Tar Heels this week, thus making the Blue and White gridders move through the air for their yardage. So far this year, the Tar Heels have gained 415 yards in the airlanes, having completed 10 in 20 attempts against Texas for 189 yards and 12 of 25 for 235 yards against Georgia.

The only catch so far in Carolina's throwing game has been too many intereceptions—three each by both opponents. Several of these, especially in the Texas tilt, nipped prospective drives.

The Wake Forest clash will be the Tar Heels' first tilt in defense of their Southern conference title. The Deacons opened their circuit slate last week with a 16-14 victory over Clemson.

Intramural Regulations Are Clarified At Meeting of Athletic Managers

Intramural managers of the Fraternity and Dormitory teams met last night in Woollen gym to discuss plans for the forthcoming tag football program which gets underway, Thursday.

Managers were informed that all entries for volleyball and table tennis were to be in the Intramural office not later than November 4. Play in these divisions starts November 6. Weighing in for the wrestling program will begin November 17 and will continue throughout the 19th. The actual schedule will commence the following day.

Managers were urged to have their teams on time for all contests. It was pointed out that one of the duties of the Intramural manager is to prepare complete team lists for all events, listing both first and last names so that the mural office records can be kept reasonably clear. Team managers were advised to check with the Intramural office frequently to keep track of latest developments. All representatives were urged to brief their teams on Carolina variety football rules to insure better play and to prevent misunderstandings.

Intramural tennis matches scheduled for yesterday were postponed because of wet grounds. Weather permitting, they will be played this afternoon at the announced times and places.

Bluege Vacates Manager's Post

Washington, Oct. 7.—(UP) The Washington Senators are in the market for a new manager tonight, since Ossie Bluege, who managed the Senators for the past five years, has been relieved of his job and named head of Washington's new farm system.

President Clark Griffith says he is dickering for a new manager for the Senators and will have an announcement in a couple of weeks. Second baseman Gerry Priddy and Catcher Rick Ferrell, both of the Senators, are being considered for the post.

Griffith says he tried to get Lou Boudreau, the Cleveland skipper, but owner Bill Veeck of the Indians wouldn't let Lou go unless a good shortstop was thrown into the deal. Griffith says, "That let us out."

A few weeks ago Bluege was the center of reports that his players were ready to revolt. That all was smoothed out when the Senators signed a petition saying there was nothing to the revolt stories and that they were getting along okay with him.

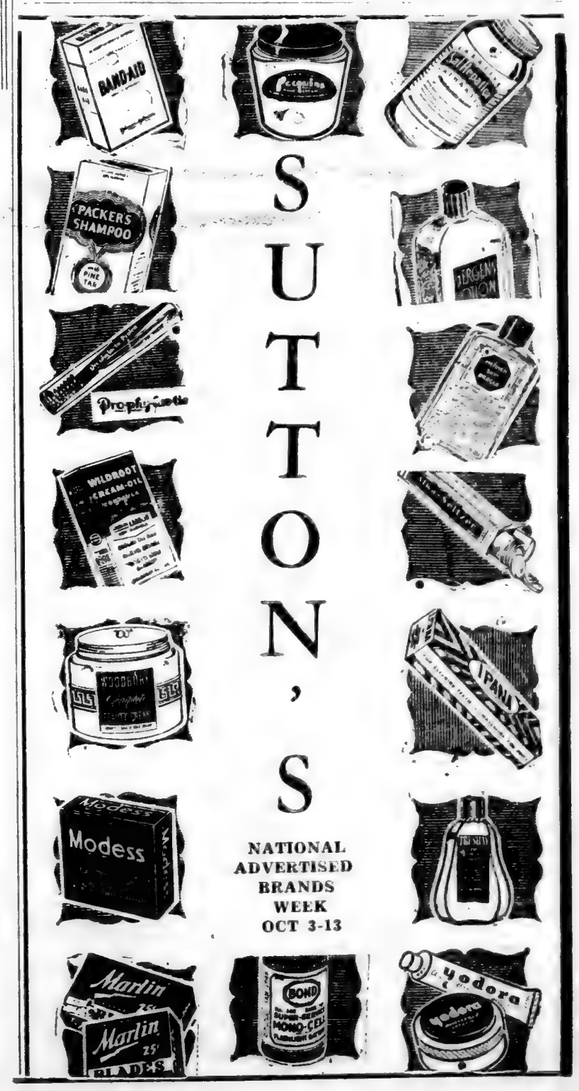
"They weep no more at PRINCETON"



Is Old Nassau making a gridiron comeback? If so, it's all due to Charlie Caldwell, the coach who engineered the most hair-raising form reversal of 1946. His 17-14 victory over Penn last fall restored the Tigers to respectability in Eastern football society. Known for trying the unorthodox, he has parlayed the power of prayer into the greatest revival of football enthusiasm ever seen at Princeton since the game was invented there in 1869. Don't miss the exciting article, "They Weep No More at Princeton," in this week's Post . . .

Art Professor Plans Lecture

Dr. Clemmens Sommer, art professor, will speak at 5 o'clock this afternoon in the small gallery of Person hall on Albracht Duerer, the most famous German painter of the Renaissance.

This talk will be in connection with Duerer's exhibitions now hanging in the gallery.

Dr. Sommer, a native German, took his Doctor's degree at the University of Freiburg. While in Freiburg he was director of the museum. Dr. Sommer lived in German until '37, when he left the country for Sweden. While in Sweden he lectured in Stokehomes until he departed for the United States.

When asked why he left Germany, Dr. Sommer said, "I couldn't stand the Nazi way of doing things. I had my choice of teaching what they told me, or not teaching at all."

Dr. Sommer has been affiliated with the art department for the past six years, serving as a visiting professor for one year, and thereafter as member of the permanent staff. Last week Dr. Sommer was promoted to a full professorship.

Study Almost Important as Eating At a University, Says Library Head

By Sally Woodhull

"Study in a university is almost as important as eating," said Head Librarian Charles E. Rush yesterday, commenting on the fact that the library feels the effects of the present overcrowded conditions before almost any other part of the University.

However, according to Mr. Rush, performance of students in the library is better now under more than doubled attendance than it was three or four years ago.

"Even during crowded hours," Mr. Rush stated, "decorum and observance of our very simple rules have prevailed and all students have been considerate of other readers and of the library's predicament."

Elaborate System

In order to increase the efficiency with which books may be lent, the circulation department, under the direction of its new head, Mr. George C. Bentley, has gone through all files, tracing lost books and evolving an elaborate system of checking on future loans.

There are, Mr. Bentley said, a great many books that cannot be accounted for, but he and his staff have attempted to cut down the red tape of the library system in an effort to live up to his motto: "The right book for the right student at the right time." The reputation of a library, Mr. Bentley said, rests on the efficiency of its circulation department.

So that students may have access to recently-published books in all fields, Mr. Bentley has reorganized the "recent books" section in the central lobby of the library. On these shelves are what he terms the "stacks in miniature." Books are displayed on these shelves, arranged by the Dewey Decimal system, for a period of one year after their publication date. After that time, they are removed to the regular stacks.

A list of all new acquisitions of the library, whether recently published books or classics just obtained, is published approximately every two weeks, and is available to students interested at the main circulation desk.

Classes Cancelled At 10, 11 Friday

For the University's annuual birthday convocation, Friday classes at 10 and 11 o'clock are to be cancelled, and not those at 11 and 12 as was erroneously announced earlier. All classes at 9 and 12 o'clock will meet as usual without cuts permitted.

The University Day convocation for this year is to be held in Kenan stadium, featuring an academic procession of the faculty, the University band, the combined men's and women's glee clubs 300 strong, and an address by Dr. Hardin Craig.

This program will offer a bigger and different convocational scheme in an attempt to bring students together in a show of University tradition equal to the spirit registered by football-weekend mobs.

Quonset Residents To Report To Kelly

Men living in the quonset huts at present who have not already reported to the hut area manager, J. B. Kelly, to sign a roster that he compiled should report to 207 South building immediately, the housing office announced today. Otherwise, since there is no record on their status, such men will have their $6 room deposits refunded and their names cancelled from the priority list waiting for dormitory space.

Approximately 75 students have been negligent about reporting to the quonset hut manager and have only a few more days to contact the housing office if they still hope for dormitory rooms.

Lectures Set By Dr. Nash

By Charlie Gibson

Dr. Arnold Nash, recently appointed head of the new department of religion founded by the University Board of Trustees, will resume a series of informal lectures and discussions on "The Christian Task in the University" beginning next Monday evening at 7 o'clock in Gerrard hall and continuing for seven consecutive weeks.

This is the series which the young-adult class of the Chapel Hill Methodist church started last spring. At that time more than 200 students and others listened to and then discussed candid presentations of the Christian faith by Frank Hanft, University law school professor.

Varied Careers

Dr. Nash comes to lead the series this year after a varied university career that began in England at the University of Liverpool. There he graduated in science and subsequently engaged in research work in physical chemistry. With interest moving into the historical and philosophical problems raised by the impact of science on the western world, he then studied theology at Oxford and sociology at the London School of Economics. Since that time his primary concern, both before and since he came to America in 1939, has been the meaning of Christianity for the liberal democratic university.

He set forth his conclusions in his "The University and the Modern World" published by Macmillan a few years ago. The book has proved so significant that it has been printed in England and is now being translated into German and Portuguese.

Amateur Radio Enthusiasts on Campus To Hold First Meeting in Swain Hall

All amateur radio enthusiasts on and off campus were asked to attend the first meeting Thursday evening of the new Chapel Hill Amateur Radio club at 8 o'clock in Swain hall.

"We already have an FCC license," stated Mr. Orison W. Hungerford, Communication Center technical director and organizer of the "hams."

"In two weeks," Hungerford added, "we will be ready for short-wave transmission."

Interested students, with or without amateur licenses, will elect club officers at Thursday night's meeting.

In addition to short-wave broadcasting and receiving, the radio amateurs will have technical discussions, classes in code and simple mathematics, and preparation for FCC licensing examinations.

Organizers of the club include Mr. Hungerford, Professor Stanley J. Johnson of the physics department and J. Gray McAllister, local business executive.

The club has received authorization for construction of a fifty foot aerial atop Swain hall and plans call for broadcasting on all amateur radio bands.

"We also hope to guide other 'ham' clubs throughout the state," Hungerford said. "Ultimately, an amateur education network may be set up in North Carolina."

Romance Languages Has Record Enrollment

The Romance Language department has a record enrollment of 2,500 students this quarter as compared with 2,100 last spring. One of the new temporary buildings, Caldwell X, in addition to Murphey has been allotted to take care of the large enrollment.

Also nine new instructors have been added to the staff making a total of 54, with the retirement of Mr. Walter Chreech.

Rendezvous Room Sponsors Contest

Cash prizes will be given for the best suggestions for improving "the Rendezvous," campus nightclub in Graham Memorial, Manager Don English announced today.

"We are using this means to stimulate the already growing campus interest in "the Rendezvous," English stated. Judges in the contest are Ruth Evans, Bill Shuford, and Don English. Awards include first prize, $10.00; second prize, $5.00; and third prize, $2.50.

Legislature To Consider Executive Appointment Confirmations

Eller Choices Are on Agenda Of Night Meet

By Chuck Hauser

Executive appointment confirmations loom as the most important and exciting items of business facing the Student Legislature when it convenes at 8:30 this evening in Gerrard hall.

Party lines are expected to tighten up to trip some of those persons whom Student Body President Tom Eller has appointed to positions in student government.

Eller has made the following choices, which must be approved by a majority vote of the Legislature:

Eller's Choices

As chairman of the Elections board: Al Winn; to the Student council: Al Lowenstein; to the Women's council: Margaret Cole; to the Student Legislature: Leon Meldin, Walt Arnold, Stan Cohen, Bill Wood, Thurman Williams.

Two bills will be introduced to the Legislature from the Finance committee, according to Bill Mackie, committee chairman.

One bill will call for the appropriation of $250 to aid the Collegiate Council of the United Nations in its work. The other asks $80 to provide a fund for expressing condolences to the families of deceased faculty and student body members.

Political bystanders believe that important legislation will be presented to the law-makers by Charlie Long, speaker pro tempore. When questioned, Long's only statement was, "No comment."

The Student Legislature will meet at 8:30 tonight instead of at 7:30 in order to avoid a conflict with the showing of pictures of the Carolina-Georgia football game.

WESTERN CAROLINA CLUB

The Western Carolina club will hold its first meeting of the year tonight in Horace Williams lounge at 7:30, Bud Reagan, temporary president announced yesterday.

Reagan said that it is important that all members be present, especially those new students interested in joining. The meeting will consist of election of officers, introduction of new members, and discussion of plans for the coming year, including the big "Sadie Hawkins Day" affair.

TWO HOUSES MAKE ONE

Evanston, Ill. (UP) — Mrs. Grace Merrick found a new solution for the housing problem. She wanted to build a home but could not get a city permit. She finally got a place to live by buying two old houses and having them put together.

CP Elects Two New Officers, Lays Plans for Yack Campaign

The Campus Party, meeting in Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial Tuesday afternoon, completed final organization and publicity plans in support of its candidates for Yackety-Yack editorship, a three member board composed of Ruth Evans, Harold Fursley, and Gene Johnston. At an earlier meeting held September 29 the party unanimously nominated the board for the editorial position.

The Party elected two new officers to fill existing vacancies, Don Hames of Cliffside as secretary and Ashley Branch of Winterville as Publicity Director.

Ralph Sherrill reported to the group on the malpractices existing in the quonset hut area. He advocated that a better organization of the residence area be achieved and that a roster be placed in each hut to aid visitors in locating students living there. It was also pointed out that one of the weak links in Student Government has been that of dormitory government. The party was urged to take an active, but informal, part in stimulatuing interest in dormitory affairs and in the election of qualified officers.

Campus Party president Jess Dedmon presided over the meeting.

SDA Plans Action Involving Issues Of Prices, Food

Students for Democratic Action at its first meeting of the year Tuesday night in Graham Memorial, planned six weeks of action on the price and foor situation, which is expected to become increasingly critical as aid to Europe is stepped up under the Marshall Plan.

Discussion was led by Dr. Clarence Heer of the university economics department, who expressed the opinion that voluntary control would be more effective than a return to ceiling prices and rationing.

Establishment of a Chapel Hill Consumer council made up of both campus and community leaders, will be the first step in the SDA program. The Council will secure local support for the President's food-saving program, exert consumer pressure against local prices which are out of line, and encourage local interest in national price and food policies.

A committee appointed to draw up for distribution to the student body a table of comparative food prices in local eating places. The group also voted to congratulate the Uni-

UNC Operations Supervisor, UVA Head Discuss Lighting in Victory Village

As a result of the recent attack on a student's wife in Victory Village, a conference was held yesterday between Hugh Wells, president of the University Veteran's Association, and J. S. Bennet, supervisor of operations for the University, to discuss street lighting problems in that area.

It was decided that the main problem was not one of insufficient lighting, as the University authorities feel that there are enough lights, but of replacement of burned out and damaged bulbs.

At present there is no arrangement for recording and maintaining inoperative lights. To remedy this situation, a board consisting of Wells, Bill Bragaw, president of the Village Council, and manager Burch of Victory Village, has been appointed to plan a maintenance system.

Another problem which has caused much comment in the village is the one of unlighted telephone booths in the area. University authorities have agreed to formulate a plan to change this also disagreeable situation.

Balkan Inspection Receives Approval By UN Committee

Lake Success, Oct. 8—(UP)—The U.N. Political committee voted today to establish a permanent international commission to patrol the Balkans.

Though the General assembly must now act on the American-sponsored proposal, today's vote in the Political committee is considered clear indication that the U. S. will easily muster the two-thirds majority for its plan in the assembly. Balloting was 34 to six, with nine members abstaining.

The committee approved two sections of the U.S. proposal, delaying action on a third which would fix on Yugoslavia, Albania, and Bulgaria the blame for aggression against Greece. Recommended were establishment of the "watchdog" commission, and a section empowering the commission to call at will special sessions of the General assembly.

During debate on the patrol proposal Soviet Vice-foreign minister Vishinsky accused the U.S. of "timidity" in offering its compromise solution for the Balkan issue. He described the compromise as an "ultimatum born of cowardice."

But American Delegate Herschel Johnson brushed off the critical tirade by remarking that he didn't understand the Soviet minister's "dialectics."

94-Cent Bank Haul Nets 15-Year Term

Charlotte, Oct. 8—(UP)—A 94-cent bank holdup netted 17-old Pete Belk of Monroe 15 years imprisonment today.

Belk told Judge E. Yates Webb in Charlotte Federal court today how he and Walter Hammonds, 16, took $13.94 from a bank at Peachland, N. C. September 26.

A frightened teller abruptly broke up the holdup by screaming. Attempting to silence her, young Belk tried to strike her head. In the process Hammonds was shot by his companion's gun, and Belk fled, leaving the wounded 16-year-old with the loot. All but 94 cents was recovered.

Coeds May Visit Fraternities Today, House Board Announces

The privilege of visiting in fraternity houses by coeds becomes effective at 11:30 this morning, Margaret Coles, chairman of the House Privileges board, announced last night.

A new visiting agreement was drawn up at an HPB meeting late yesterday, but the actual text of the regulations has not been completed. When completed, the visiting agreement will be posted in women's dorms and in the fraternity houses.

The new agreement is patterned after that of last year, the HPB head announced, but two major changes are included:

(1) Coeds will be permitted to enter the houses 30 minutes earlier in the morning, with opening shifted from noon to 11:30 o'clock.

(2) Coeds will be responsible for reporting only their part in any violations of the agreement. They will not be required to report the part of fraternity members or other visitors in violations.

Last year the agreement stated that coeds must report any and all violations of the regulations.

The board requested that coeds and fraternities observe last year's agreement plus the two changes until the final draft of the new regulations is published.

UNC Medical School Given Federal Grant

Washington, Oct. 8—(UP)—The U.S. Public Health service today announced a grant of $3,400 to the university medical school. The grant was one of twenty made to colleges and institutions in a $363,749 program of research against cancer.

The U.N.C. allotment was earmarked for visual education in teaching neoplasm pathology.

Members of Di Hear Address By Dr. Archibald Henderson

By Elaine Patton

Dr. Archibald Henderson—who has won almost as much campus renown for his gray suits, shirts and colors of contrasting colors, and his umbrella as national renown for his writings (including biography of George Bernard Shaw), lectures and studies of relativity—spoke before the Di Senate last night at 8:30.

Dr. Henderson discussed the topic "Oratory and Art of the Public," centering his observations about the Di and how the status of the Di may be improved. His discussion of oratory included examples of false and true oratory. This was followed by his discussion of art in which he referred to the portrait gallery as the "mirror of life," representing great people and their way of life.

The most impressive portrait of the Di is, perhaps, the one of James K. Polk who, Dr. Henderson pointed out, was a member of the Di Society and the only student from this university to become President of the United States. Other important portraits pointed out were the ones of William R. Davie, founder of the University, and of John Wine Mason.

Dr. Henderson, a native of Salisbury who came to the university in 1894, has been a loyal supporter of the Di ever since his arrival and expressed a desire to see it take better care of its art gallery, many of the portraits having been done by famous artists. He feels that the collection could be enlarged, the portraits carefully preserved and from time to time the pictures could be alternated in the Di hall.

A great deal of enthusiasm was displayed in the animated discussion which followed Dr. Henderson's lecture and in which all members and visitors of the Di participated.

William P. Kellam Accepts Position With UNC Library

William P. Kellam, formerly a member of the University library staff, has accepted appointment as assistant librarian to Charles E. Rush, director of libraries here.

A native of Greensboro, Mr. Kellam received his A.B. and M.A. degrees from Duke university and his A.B. in L.S. from Emory university. His experience includes two years at Duke, three years at the University here, five years as librarian of North Carolina State college, seven years as librarian of the University of West Virginia, and one year at South Carolina.

During this period he served for five years as chairman of the West Virginia Library commission and two years as president of the West Virginia Library association. In addition he has served on several committees of the American Library association, including the chairmanship of the agricultural libraries section. He is a Methodist and is interested in work with young people, especially Boy Scouts.

Mr. and Mrs. Kellam, the latter from Durham, have two children, a son who enrolled in the University this fall, and a daughter in high school.

STUDENT PARTY MEETS

In a final session before Tuesday's special election, the Student Party will assemble this afternoon in Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial at 3 o'clock.

Bill Wood, chairman-elect of the party, urged all SP members "to bring prospective voters who want to meet the SP candidate."

Numerous Students Have Not Claimed Laundry Refunds

Almost 1,500 University students who were in school during the summer terms have money waiting for them that they don't even know about—that's what University laundry office sources disclosed yesterday in announcing that they have on hand $1200 worth of unclaimed laundry refund checks ranging in value up to $8 each.

Summer school students who did not receive refunds may obtain their checks from Mrs. B. L. Smith in the laundry office, 132 E. Franklin street. All checks are void after Oct. 25, sixty days from date of issue.

Unclaimed refund checks from last spring quarter are now on file in South Building basement and may be called for at the cashier's office.

RADIO MEETING

The newly-formed Amateur Radio club has called a meeting for all students and faculty interested in short-wave broadcasting to be held this evening at 8 o'clock in Swain hall.

SOUND AND FURY

All members of the finale of the freshman night show of Sound and Fury must attend a special meeting with necessary costume on Monday night at 7 o'clock. Pictures will be taken at that time. Those needing makeup must arrive early.

THETA PSI EPSILON

Theta Psi Epsilon, chemistry sorority, will meet at 7 o'clock this evening in the Alpha Chi Sigma room in Venable hall.

Senate Discusses Drinking at Frats In Front of Coeds

The Coed Senate, assembling in Gerard hall Tuesday night for its first meeting of the fall term, discussed the problem of women confronted with drinking on fraternity premises. Speaker Barbara Cashion, presided.

It was recommended by the Senate that coeds who are confronted with this problem leave the fraternity or report themselves for staying. This recommendation was introduced to replace the present rule, which holds the coed responsible, not only for reporting her own conduct, but for reporting members of the fraternity whom she sees violating regulations as well.

It was announced that three senators are to be elected from the student body to fill present vacancies. A meeting is to be held for this purpose Monday at four o'clock in Gerard hall. All coeds are asked to attend.

UNC-Georgia Grid Show Tonight

The Monogram club will sponsor the showing of movies of the UNC-Georgia game tonight at 8 o'clock in Memorial hall, Len Szafaryn, president of the organization announced. All students are invited to attend the picture.

Tonight's showing is the first of a series planned by the Monogram club. The club intends to show films every Thursday night of the football game played the previous Saturday.

CLUB TO MEET

The Henry Wallace club will meet tonight at 7:30 in Roland Parker lounge No. 1. Included on the agenda will be election of officers and outlining of policy.

Kenan Stadium Will Be Scene Of Observance

By Charlie Gibson

The all-campus convocation in Kenan stadium at 10:15 tomorrow in observance of the 154th University Day will be the largest opening assembly in the University's history. Dr. Hardin Craig, English professor here and an internationally known authority on Shakespeare, will speak on "Crisis and Responsibility," his address being the feature of the two-hour program.

Customarily the affair is held in Memorial hall; but with 7,528 students, almost twice the enrollment in 1940, plus faculty members, administrative officials, and townspeople, Kenan stadium is the only place that will seat a convocation of the entire University family. Tomorrow's 10 and 11 o'clock classes will be cancelled to allow all students to attend the exercises, other classes meeting as usual. Chancellor Robert B. House announced that all University offices, the Book Exchange, and the library would be elected from 10 to 11 o'clock for the occasion.

Chancellor House will preside at the convocation, the program of which will consist of an academic procession; band music; special numbers by the glee club; a brief memorial to former students, faculty, and alumni who have died since last University Day; an announcement of new plaques to be placed in Memorial hall; and the main address by Dr. Hardin Craig.

Dr. Craig's convocation address, "A North Carolina Renaissance," delivered in April, 1946, received more attention and acclaim than any speech given here in years, according to University administrative officials. An anonymous benefactor requested that he be permitted to pay for printing and distributing the address since

German Club Signs Randy Brooks and His 'Golden Trumpet' To Play for Fall Dances During Tennessee Game Week End

The famous "Golden Trumpet" of Randy Brooks has been signed to provide music for the Fall Germans scheduled for the October 31-November 1 week end, announced Bob Ettenger, president of the German club, yesterday.

Brooks and his orchestra will come to Chapel Hill from an engagement in the Pennsylvania hotel's Cafe Rouge in New York, having recently finished engagements at the Roseland Ballroom, also in New York, and at Frank Dailey's Meadowbrook, well-known to many University students whose homes are in the North.

Brooks, a native of Sanford, Maine, made his professional debut in New York City in 1945.

Features of the band, according to Brooks' advance publicity, include his trumpet solo of Hora Staccato, apparently a favorite with the men with the horns these days; the "band-within-a-band," a combo formed from several of the orchestra members to present their version of a jam session; featured artists such as musical comedy star Gracie Barry and recording artist Phil Brito, in addition to the regular with the band, Harry Prime and Wayne "Buzz" Bridgeford.

The following members of the executive committee of the German club were selected to be in charge of arrangements for the weekend at a meeting of the board Tuesday night. Bob Ettenger, tickets; Judd Hawk, Decorations; Rosettes and figure, Frank Frazer, publicity, Bob Lee; piano accompaniment, Ken Merritt.

Things We Should Remember

Hardin Craig, the man who, at a University convocation two years ago thrilled thousands to such an extent that the Alumni association still receives requests for copies of his speech, has another inspiring address "in his system." It will be delivered Friday on a great occasion. We will be observing two important events simultaneously—fall convocation and University Day. But the crux of the situation is this. Can the entire student body be enticed, lured, or enthused enough to attend en masse? Members of the planning committee think so, and the occasion will be celebrated in Kenan stadium—the only structure that contains enough seats for the entire student body.

Mr. Marion "Spike" Saunders, of the Alumni office, was the first to express the need for the student body to meet together to keep intact the spirit of the campus and Chapel Hill. He pointed out that there is not an auditorium on campus that will accommodate the 7,500 students now enrolled, and that the football games are the only thing that students attend in toto. Football games are not to be called a meeting of the student body, since there are so many outsiders and visitors present.

Mr. Saunders and committee members have arranged a program in keeping with the importance of the occasion—the celebration of our 154th birthday. One hundred and fifty four years ago the fathers of this university laid the cornerstone of Old East.

In these days of year-round education, with the rush and hub-bub of trying to make up for lost time, and with our crowded conditions, we have placed little importance on our heritage and traditions—things that we should cherish. And as Dean Fred Weaver has put it: "in these days we tend to cherish our traditions, but never practice them." Friday will be our opportunity to practice our traditions. In order to make the occasion a success we must turn out en masse.

There will be the glee club of 200 voices, the band will be on to set the tempo, and with another address by Dr. Hardin Craig, all that is needed to make a perfect celebration of the birthday of the oldest state university in the nation will be your attendance.

More Workers at Higher Wages

State Treasurer Charles M. Johnson's prediction Tuesday evening that North Carolina's annual revenue would "never" go back to its pre-war level seems on the surface to be an optimistic forward look.

But Johnson, whose tenure as head of the state's fiscal activities began at the lowest depth of the great depression, as much as warned that his estimate was far from optimistic in significance.

"Money is cheap," said the gray-headed veteran of Raleigh politics; "and money is going to stay cheap." In other words, ours is an inflated economy, and the $80 million revenue Johnson predicted is not nearly comparable, by his own admission, to the $40 million revenue averaged in the days just before Pearl Harbor.

And that brings this editorial to its point—a warning and suggestion voiced by Johnson.

"We've got to have more workers bringing more money to the state," he said; "we've got to have more money for our institutions and schools."

As the only solution Johnson suggested intensive industrialization. Immunity from state taxation on local property, he said, should serve as a strong attraction to manufacturers seeking new plant locations.

But Johnson did not mention the need for a well-paid, skilled labor market. Well-paid workers are the greatest contributors to state revenue. And a pool of trained workers and technicians, attracted to North Carolina by promise of higher wages is more important in many industrialists' minds than slight differences in rates of taxation.

All of which may prove to be the answer to the urgent need of increased revenue Johnson anticipates.—Equalization of the difference between North Carolina's wage levels and those of the east.—W.S.

Stray Greeks to Organize

The post-war phenomena of the shifting of large numbers of transfer students to the campus from other colleges has resulted in a problem which to our knowledge has hardly been recognized, much less dealt with.

Among these transfer students are a number of members of national social fraternities which have no chapters here. They look with envy upon fraternity members on the campus who are able to enjoy the fraternal fellowship, the working together in social and fraternal activities, and the singing of fraternity and college songs.

The effort, reported previously in the DTH to bring together these "stray Greeks" into some form of informal association that may be able to carry on its own activities and to cooperate with the established fraternities on the campus is to be commended. There has been much valid criticism in recent years of many phases of fraternity life. But it is hoped that this incipient organization will share with established fraternities on campus the growing realization that a fraternity must contribute more to campus and national life than a certain per capita consumption of beer and a certain number of dances being planned. Therefore, to the extent that this new organization takes its part in the support of worthwhile campus activities as well as provide for the satisfaction of its own members. We wish it success.

The almost imperceptible descent that leads to drug addiction is graphically described in "Skid Row," first installment of a three-part nonfiction book condensation by an addict. This has been termed the most extraordinary true story published in years.

An understanding of why the book "Peace of Mind" has sold 450,000 copies in the United States and is now being translated into eight foreign languages may be gained from Robert van Gelder's interview with the author, Rabbi Joshua Loth Leibman.

This Changing World

Indonesia-- Future Vs Past

By Bill Robertson

were pleased to hear of the appointment of our president, Dr. Frank Graham, as a United States delegate on the United Nations Indonesian commission. Let us hope that the report made by this commission will lead to just and democratic actions on the part of the United Nations that will bring about the conclusion of hostilities.

In the meantime there are a few things that we already know about the situation in Indonesia. Basically, the present struggle of the Indonesian people is one for independence; political, social, and economic—of Dutch rule. It is a part of a larger struggle taking place throughout the colonial world. It is a struggle of the future against the past.

Concretely, the Indonesian Republic, a nation of 70,000,000 people, is resisting attempts being made by a Dutch force of approximately 100,000 trained men, using equipment purchased with the 1946 loans of the United States, to achieve the military conquest of this territory.

Important steps toward this goal have already been taken by Dutch military forces which are now in control of the principal port cities of the Republic. A highly effective blockade has been established which has led to the accumulation of huge stock-piles of sugar, rubber, rice, and quinine within the Republic, at a time when the world is literally starving for these commodities. (In this connection it is interesting to recall the seizure by the Dutch of an American ship in March of this year, the confiscation of its cargo, and the attempt to hold the master and crew for court-martial.)

Fortunately, the control of the major cities and seaports of Indonesia cannot starve the rice-producing people in the interior into submission, although many of them will suffer.

But this is what really annoys the Dutch: the Indonesian Republic has nationalized communications, transportation, and irrigation; it has encouraged the growth of co-operatives; it has broken up large European estates and divided them among the peasants. Only military conquest could alter this course of events. In addition to Dutch capital there are large American and British interests in Indonesia. Principal among these are (yes, you guessed it!) Standard Oil and Royal Dutch Shell (don't let the name fool you, it's British;) A loan of $300,000,000 was made by our government to the Netherlands and Netherlands East Indies, and not to the Indonesian Republic. There is, therefore, no question about which horse Wall street is backing.

These are a few of the facts about the situation. They are cold, and therefore fail to reflect properly the true greatness of a people's struggle for freedom and independence, a struggle not unlike that which led to the freedom and independence of our own nation some 170 years ago.

Concerning the Fund Drives

By R. Foo Giduz

School is a scant two weeks old now, but already the old "gimme guys" are laying plans. Maybe that's not a very nice way to talk about the hard-working sponsors of the numerous fund-seeking drives which scourge the campus yearly. But that is how the average student's feel toward the Red Cross, WSSE, polio, and other equally charitable and useful organizations after he's been pestered into contributing to each group every few weeks. Worthy as they are drives of this kind become a disgusting nuisance when piled on top of each other, and most drives fail to reach their goal.

The Student Legislature can remedy this situation through setting up a campus community chest, the only proven successful answer to this unnecessary constant panhandling. There's been talk about this in the Legislature for several years now. Two thoroughly ineffctive bills to regulate drives have been introduced in the past, and both were fortunately defeated. Most legislators seem to agree on the worthiness and practicability of a campus community chest, yet the idea has been hanging fire for over a year now.

Other community chests all over the nation are now in full swing, and the citizens of Chapel Hill are now considering setting up such an organization for the town here. There's still time to set it up this year. But not much. The Legislature shouly act on this immediately.

We think students in the University are generally of above average intelligence and most seem to have a greater social conscience than the majority of other people. So they're usually a fairly generous group. Nearly everyone will be happy to contribute to all of these worthy drives IF they are approached in the right manner, and not too often. But after being nagged and needled for weeks to kick in to every imaginable cause the average student becomes disgusted with and usually openly hostile to all drives.

The answer is simple: One co-ordinated money raising drive a year for all organizations—a campus community chest.

We'll Win War With Russia

Eureka, Kan. (UP)—Walter A. Bowers, president of Roger Babson's Utopia College here, has spread consternation among the local populace.

He has predicted an atomic Russo-American war by 1950. His future for the world thereafter looks rather rosy, however.

Bowers, 48, holding bachelor degrees in law and philosophy, was employed by banks and other firms. He worked with the War Department's budget bureau during the war before taking the helm of the new Kansas college.

The Utopia president says Russia inevitably will throw everything she has against the United States as soon as Stalin can get his hands on the atomic bomb.

Bowers has even mapped the four invasion routes the Russians will follow after they have bombarded this country. He says they will come through northern New Jersey, near Norfolk, Va., northern Florida and through Texas.

Before that, predicts the college head, they will have destroyed Washington, New York, Pittsburgh, Youngstown, Akron, Cleveland, Detroit and Chi-

But the United States will be allowed to win the Bowers Russo-American tussel, after reorganizing in what he calls "the magic-circle area of the west." Fifty million persons will die in the conflict, but "island defense tactics" will prove successful and the U. S. will counter-attack to victory.

Following that "last great slaughter of mankind," says Bowers, "the brotherhood of all men will become a reality." He says English will be the universal language, barriers of race, color, creed and class will disappear, tariff and immigration barriers will be forgotten, and minimum hours and minimum wage laws will be recognized throughout the world.

"Within these limitations," promises Bowers, "free markets," free competition, free enterprise and individual initiative will be recognized.

"International baseball teams will span the North Pole overnight to play in the various world capitals."

Book Review

Local Boy Makes Good

By Bob Sain

THE HUNTER'S HORN, By Peirson Ricks, Scribner's, 361 pages.

You open up this book and look at the first page where the writer is supposed to prove to you that his book is worth reading.

". . . he saw the blood-red disk sinking behind the distant pines . . ."

". . . the deep calf-like bellow of the horn . . ."

"It was pitch dark . . ."

". . . the family left Tanglewood that dismal winter of 1890."

All that is on the first page and a more uninviting block of cliches I have never run across. But Ricks' book is not that bad all the way through.

"The Hunter's Horn" concerns the North Carolina lowlands some 20 or 30 years after the Civil war and the book does succeed in telling much about what the south looked like and what it was thinking at the time. At least I think it tells that.

But there is more to the book. There is a love affair between young Conway Tally and Vonnie Hobson that is interesting. Conway is the scion of an old southern family and Vonnie is the daughter of a sharecropper. It is inevitable that they fall in love. They meet surreptitiously in the swamp and again and again "they were each one striving to become the other." Following these incidents he always felt like ". . . he had corrupted Vonnie. Her shame was on his head . . . The burden of his guilt lay on his conscience like a mountain of lead."

This high-flown nobility would be impressive if Ricks's love story had been important or even believeable. As it was, Vonnie was only a tramp and Conway was a 17-year-old experiencing sex for the first time. His mooning made the entire affair ridiculous. It seems to be nothing more than a very old, badly told light romance.

On occasion, however, the author manages to pull some meaning into his book.

He pits young Conway against a tyrannical, fanatically religious father. He brings Conway into contact with Major Farabee (probably the most stock of all this book's stock characters) Farabee tells the boy about right and wrong. It's the old Hemingway line: wrong is what you feel bad after, right is what you feel good after.

There are several well-drawn characters in the book—an old voodoo woman who has all the local Negroes frightened, Conway's grandfather who is much concerned about the quality of the family's blood. These characters are the tops of what Ricks has to offer.

His writing seems at times awkwardly slick. It reads like poetry constrained by Collier's rules. This, however, can be said for Ricks: he is trying to write well; he is concerned with quality in his writing but he seems afraid to release himself.

There is undoubtedly more to "The Hunter's Horn." Since Ricks is an old Carolina student, a resident of North Carolina, I shall assume that it is there and that I am too dense to find it.

Write Away

World War II Was Inevitable

Dear Sir:

The United States could NOT have prevented the last war. The forces which produced Hitler and a nation of people ready to follow his bidding were in operation even before the first World War. Had the policy of the US (after World War I) been internationalism, nationalism, totalitarism, isolationism, etc., World War II would still have happened. Hitler thrived on emotions. Facts and rational choices were not his forte. Had his chances of winning been only 1 in 1,000 he still would have led his country into war. It would have been impossible for an egotistical rabble-rouser in his position to have done otherwise.

No combination of letters which is supposed to symbolize America's attitude toward the rest of the world will be sufficient to prevent World War III. No actions by the US alone, be they "iron-fist" or "soft-soaping" policy will prevent a war. If Russia is determined to have a war, she will have one and there is nothing we can do about it.

We spend our time discussing abstract symbols like "Isolationism" when we should be building into the fibre of this country the qualities that will make it virile and able to stand despite whatever shocks or attacks may come.

Let us be concerned with such things as success of the Honor System at Carolina and wholehearted loyalty to the President's meat saving program—to choose a couple of examples at randoni. In the final analysis, it is in the every-day choices that the American people make between work and sacrifice on one hand and sloth and selfishness on the other, that will determine whether the United States or Russia will emerge as the stronger power from this idealogical (or physical) struggle in which we find ourselves.

Mudville Mutterings

Tired of Bare Floors?

By Don Sapp

There has been no new developments as yet on the attempted assault of a young village matron Monday night. The assailant has not been captured but it is hoped that he will be soon.

At the village council meeting Monday night Bill Bragaw, who has been chairman since the council was formed, resigned his position. Tom Crittenden was elected to fill the vacancy. Plans are being laid to reorganize the council which will include fewer members than have previously been elected.

The village council has earned a reputation for action during the past months. The village needed paved roads and got them, complaints were made of the lack of fire fighting equipment and each building now has several chemical fire extinguishers. Saftey signs and a deputy to enforce them have also been obtained. Without the hard work of the village council and its former chairman Bill Bragaw much of this improvement would not have been accomplished. The council has served a real function in the Village and under the new direction of Tom Crittenden it has an excellent chance of continuing its fine work.

A group of village wives will meet one night this week to discuss the possibilities of a baby sitter cooperative organization. The plan is for one mother to keep two children besides her own on certain afternoons and thereby free two other mothers for shopping or recreation.

Now, a word to the ladies, are you tired of looking at bare floors? Or more important do you feel the need of something to sweep dust under? Word has arrived that straw rugs are back on the market, the inexpensive kind. They come in neutral shades which can be painted any color you desire with flat wall paint.

Intramural Football Program Swings Into Action Today

Back Tracking In Sports

with

Morty Schaap

The old story that a football player has no time to devote to college life is one that is frequently told. Perhaps it is only an exception or two or three but here on the Carolina campus many members of the varsity find time for outside interests.

Jack Fitch, who cavorts as a tailback or wingback on the gridiron, manages to act as Delegata of the Order of the Grail. For those who do not know this organization, it is one of the busiest on the campus and the term delegata means "head-man." This group was formed to better relations between dormitory and fraternity men and initiates 13 men each year, and the Grail is one of the two most important honorary organizations on the campus. They sponsor dances and pass on all script dances to be run on the campus. They have a scholarship fund that helps many needy students finish their college careers.

Another gridiron stalwart who rates high on the list of extra curricular activities is Len Szafaryn. Szafaryn serves as President of the University Monogram club and is also a member of the Grail.

It has been through Szafaryn's efforts that the Monogram club has begun the long trail up hill to its rightful place among the honorary organizations on the campus. It was Len and Bill Pritchard, another footballer, who organized the freshmen orientation club night with the coaches being introduced to the yearlings and movies of the Sugar Bowl being shown. It is Szafaryn who is the man behind the showing of the weekly football movies in Memorial hall. Incidentally, it will be the Georgia game pictures this Thursday night as the Texas pictures are rather tangled up and will take some time to straighten out, but when they are ready the Monogram club will show them to the campus.

Szafaryn is now working very hard on the dance set for Woollen gym with both the Wake Forest and Carolina football teams as guests of honor Saturday night.

Big Len, besides being an all-Southern football player and president of the Monogram club, manages to do a good job on his studies in the Commerce department.

Walt Pupa, the driving fullback of Saturday afternoons, turns into an honor student during the week as his name appeared on all the honor lists during last year as did that of John Tandy, veteran end. Stan Marczyk, reserve tackle is another member of the footballers who rated honors in his class work.

Five members of the football squad double in acting in the off season and when Sound and Fury, the campus musical comedy organization, put on their revue last season, one of the best acts was furnished by Joe Romano, Art Weiner, Stan Marczyk, Bill Smith and Danny Logue. The first two mentioned are naturals on the stage and even on Saturdays we are told they keep the tension off the team with their vaudeville act.

Bill Flamish, reserve fullback, turned in the best times in intramural track meet in the 100 and 220-yard dashes. That same meet saw records fall in the shot put and discus with Dick MacDonald setting the marks.

Charlie "Choo-Choo" Justice, along with Jim Camp, Joe Wright and Max Spurlin, take to the hardwood floor at the end of the football campaign in the form of the Carolina Clowns. This team toured the state last year and ended up by winning the North Carolina AAU junior basketball championship.

Fitch, Romano and Weiner turn their talents to collegiate basketball at Carolina. Larry Klosterman, Ted Hazelwood, Jack Ross, and B. K. Grow spend their off seasons with the cinder squad. Sid Varney is a baseballer and Bob Cox is a member of the golf team.

So it seems that the charges made by certain individuals in the so-called purity circles that blast the southern school athletes as "football bums" are barking up the wrong tree when they look at the campus at Chapel Hill.

This correspondent, who acts as Secretary-Treasurer of the Monogram club can truthfully say that when work came up pertaining to making one of the club ventures a success he has never been turned down by any member of the football squad when a job came up. When tickets had to be sold last year for the Blue and White game it was the footballers themselves who came through in fine shape in canvassing the campus.

Four Regulars Form Nucleus for Soccer Outfit This Season

Carolina's 1947 soccer team will be built around four returning regulars from the 1946 squad, according to information released yesterday afternoon by Coach Marvin Allen.

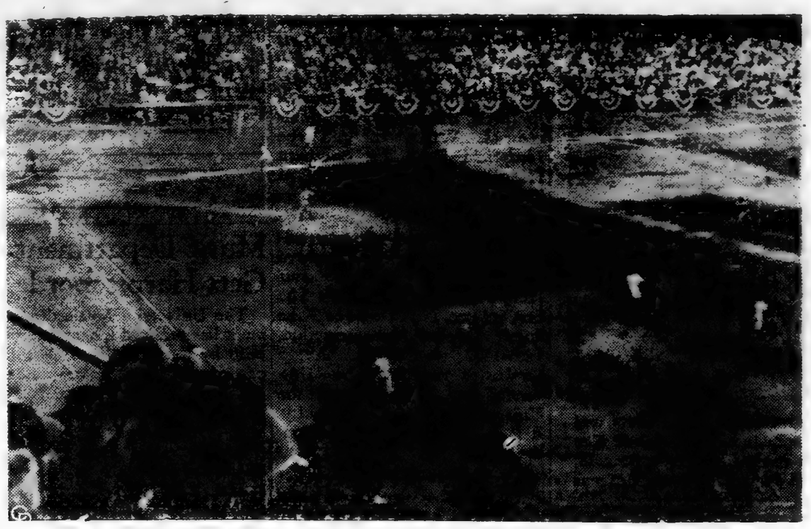
Basil Jackson, Charlie Johnston, and Hal Shaw, all hard charging forwards, and fullback Frank Nelson are being counted on by Coach Allen to form the experienced nucleus for this year's team.

Alain Singer, speedy forward and another regular last year, has been shifted to right half this week in a move designed to bolster the team's punch.

Dave Boak, shifty inside left, has been shining in workouts this week along with Joe Bach, inside right, and both may be in the starting lineup in the season's opener against Loyola on October 17.

Coach Allen also disclosed that a squad of approximately 20 men will make the two-game trip to Baltimore. The booters oppose Navy at Annapolis following the Loyola tussle.

Soccer has replaced boxing in the University's intercollegiate athletic program and minor letters will be awarded to all the team members who qualify.



Ping Pong Tourney EntersSecondRound

The first round of Graham Memorial's fall ping-pong tournament ended yesterday, as 88 entrants moved through the 11-round contest. Student union recreational director Nancy Tucker strongly urged all entries in the doubles contest to play off their initial games by tomorrow as less than a half-dozen of the thirty doubles combinations have played off their games.

Winner of the tournament, which ends on October 25, will be granted one "leg" towards a loving cup which will be awarded the final winner of the three tourneys to be held this quarter. In the event that no one person wins two out of the three contests, final playoff matches will be staged.

Pairings for the matches are posted on the board in the main hall of Graham Memorial adjacent to the office.

Snavely Holds Secret Grid Practice; Jayvees Work Out Under Lights

Fowle, Hayes Miss Contact Practice

Coach Carl Snavely closed the doors on wandering eyes yesterday afternoon, and ran his Tar Heel footballers through two lengthy hours of contact work against Wake Forest plays in preparation for the Deacon invasion this Saturday afternoon.

Two of the Carolina boys, Haywood Fowle and Billy Hayes, were in light togs due to injuries, but the rest of the Tar Heels banged and battered each other through the day in an effort to smooth off the rough offensive and defensive corners for the weekend encounter.

Exactly who will start for the locals against Coach Peahead Walker's boys is not known as yet, and from the looks of things there will probably be changes made right up until game time.

Big Clash

If last year's game is any indication of what to expect, this season's contest should be worth the price of admission. Last year the two schools put on one of the country's most stirring football shows, with Charlie Justice turning in one of his finest performances.

Since these two institutions began their football rivalry back in 1888, Carolina has won 31 games and Wake Forest nine, with one tie. For a long stretch in modern times, Carolina ruled supreme, but the Deacons have worked in some notable triumphs in recent years, winning in 1940, 1941, 1944, and 1945.

Between 30,000 and 40,000 are expected to be on hand for Saturday's hostilities. There has been a brisk sale of tickets this week, with the Wake Forest fans out to see their team win it's third of the year. The local athletic office announced yesterday that there are still plenty of ducats on sale and that tickets will be sold right up to game time.

Carolina in 19th Place In Weekly AP Ratings

Carolina's Tar Heels were ranked 19th among the nation's grid powers, according to the Associated Press football ratings this week.

Other North Carolina teams within hailing distance of the top ten were Duke, in 13th place, and N. C. State, which was 21st. Wake Forest was in a tie for 25th.

Notre Dame was first on the list, followed by Michigan, Texas, Georgia Tech, and Army. Georgia, beaten by Carolina this year, advanced to ninth place by virtue of its win over LSU.

Trackmen, Harriers To Run Time Trials

Time trials will be held for all varsity and freshmen members of the track and cross country squads, Friday afternoon at Fetzer field.

The coaching staff urges all men to come out and compete in their events. The cross country men will start their trials at 4 o'clock. Track and field event times will be in the Daily Tar Heel tomorrow.

Program Selling Cut

Only those 45 men already contacted by program directors Bob Paxton and Taylor Thorne will sell football programs for the Wake Forest game this weekend, it was announced yesterday.

Little Preps Team For Evening Clash

Coach Crowell Little sent his Carolina Jayvee gridders through their final session of rough work yesterday, with the latter part of the drills being run off under the lights in preparation for the team's contest with the South Carolina junior varsity on Friday.

Although the workout was one of the longest yet and was held on a rather steamy field, the boys displayed excellent spirit throughout the afternoon. The newcomers to the squad also seemed to be getting on to their blocking assignments better.

A final tuneup before the game is scheduled for the Tar Babies this afternoon. There will be no heavy work today.

Trip Plans

The Carolina squad is scheduled to leave for Columbia at 7:30 o'clock on Friday morning. The travelling party will number about 42, including coaches, managers, and trainers. Coach Little stated that he had hoped that a larger squad might make the trip, but no accommodations for the night in Columbia could be obtained.

Hockey, Volleyball On Slate for Coeds

Miss Frances Burns, adviser to the Women's Athletic Association, has announced that a meeting of the hockey club will be held at 4 o'clock this afternoon in the lecture room of the Women's gym. Interest, not skill, in the game is a membership requirement.

Dormitory and sorority representatives to the WAA council are asked to get up their volleyball teams and arrange for a practice period at the gym. The intramural volleyball tournament will begin next week, with all dormitories and sororities participating.

The schedule of the games will be published in the Daily Tar Heel at the end of this week, following its approval by the WAA council at a meeting tonight. Pi Beta Phi sorority won the volleyball title last year, defeating Kenan dormitory in the finals.

14 Tilts Scheduled In Fraternity Loop

By Taylor Vaden

The intramural tag football program gets underway this afternoon at 4 o'clock with 14 games in the fraternity division scheduled. Like last year, the round robin system will be used so that every team will get an equal chance to prove its merit.

A total of 58 teams have registered in the program, with 32 entered in the fraternity division and 26 in the dormitory group. The schedule is arranged so that each team in both divisions will play at least seven games. At the end of regular play the top team in each division will be matched in a championship playoff.

Trophies Awarded

Trophies will be awarded winners in both divisions. Last year, Lewis dormitory walked off with the University championship, defeating Delta Kappa Epsilon in the playoffs.

All teams entered in the contest will play an average of two games a week. Teams not schduled to play today will play Monday. All games will be played on the Intramural fields located to the east of Woollen gym.

Promptness Needed

It is important that teams be on time for scheduled games, the intramural office emphasized. Managers will be responsible for getting their teams to the playing field on time. Teams not appearing within ten minutes after the scheduled time will forfeit that game.

For answers to any questions regarding the intramural program, see or telephone Coach Rabb at the intramural office.

The Intramural tennis program will continue, uninterrupted by the football schedule.

Dr. Rupert Vance, UNC Sociologist, Author of Book

Dr. Rupert B. Vance, well-known University sociologist, is author of "The Present South, 1913-1946," one of an ambitious 10-volume work, "A History of the South," which is to be published, beginning next month, by the Louisiana State University press, directed by Dr. Marcus M. Wilkerson, and the Littlefield Fund for Southern History of the University of Texas.

Termed by historians as "the most significant work ever undertaken in the field of Southern history," the work will run more than a million words. The first volume, No. 8, will be "The South During Reconstruction, 1865-1877," by Dr. E. Merton Coulter, a graduate of the University and a member of the University of Georgia faculty. It is due to be released November 15.

Dr. Coulter and Dr. Wendell Holmes Stephenson of Tulane university are the two editors of the complete work.

Other authors, in addition to Dr. Vance, are Wesley Frank Craven, New York university, who wrote the volume on "The Southern Colonies in the 17th century, 1607-1689"; Philip Davidson, Vanderbilt university, "The Southern Colonies in the 18th Century, 1689-1763"; Philip M. Hamer, of the Records Control office, National Archives, "The Revolution in the South, 1763-1789"; Thomas P. Abernethy, University of Virginia, "The South in the New Nation, 1789-1819"; Charles S. Sydnor, Duke university, "The Development of Southern Sectionalism, 1819-1848"; Avery O. Craven, University of Chicago, "The Growth of Southern Nationalism, 1848-1861"; C. Vann Woodward, Johns Hopkins university, "Origins of the New South, 1877-1913."

Designer of the volumes, Robert Josephy, has chosen the Baskerville type for "A History of the South."

Editor Virginius Dabney of the Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch, writing editorially, praised the work highly. He said "these will be no dry-as-dust chronicles, neither will they be chauvinistic diatribes giving 'the Southern point of view,' to the exclusion of other points of view. We may expect the forthcoming series to be historically sound, balanced in viewpoint and well written."

Music Department Gets Harpischord

The University Music department has received a harpsichord, built by John Challis of Detroit, one of the foremost of present day harpsichord builders.

The harpsichord is a keyboard instrument in prevalent use during the sixteenth to eighteenth centuries. In shape it is similar to the piano, but differs from the piano chiefly in the manner in which the sound is made, the strings being plucked by a plectrum rather than struck by a hammer.

The acquisition of the instrument is an important addition to the instruments available to students of music. Almost all of the keyboard music written before the eighteenth century, and much of it up to the nineteenth century, was for the harpsichord, or similar instruments. With the new instrument available, this music can be performed as written.

INTER-DORM COUNCIL

There will be a meeting of the Inter-Dormitory council tonight in the Horace Williams Lounge at 7 o'clock at which it is imperative that every member of the Council be present.

Plans for reorganization and for future projects will be discussed along with other important business.

Federalists Elect Officers

The student chapter of the World Federalists held their first meeting in the Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial last Thursday afternoon, to elect new officers and make plans for the coming year.

Russell Baldwin, president during the summer, was re-elected. Other officers were Harold Bock, vice president; Joan Schlosburg, secretary; Ernest Boatman, treasurer; Jake Wicker and Buna Blue: assistant treasurers.

A motion was made and passed that the World Federalists divide into three functioning committees. The members of the speaking committee will speak at various organizations and high schools, and serve as narraters at World Federalist movies. The writers' committee will write radio scripts and articles for newspapers over the state. The Publicity committee will distribute articles and prepare posters.

World Federalists will meet every Thursday in the Grail room at five o'clock. All members and visitors are urged to attend.

there were so many demands for copies of it. Just this week a professor at Hamilton college, N. Y., asked for copies to circulate among all the fraternities on that campus. Here in the State, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company and the Wachovia Bank and Trust company asked for copies, the tobacco firm requesting 600 to pass among its employees.

A member of the English faculty here since 1942, Dr. Craig is a native of Kentucky and has done graduate work at Princeton, Chicago, Oxford, and European universities. Before coming here he taught at Princeton, the University of Minnesota, Iowa, and Stanford—all in all, two score years. He has recently returned from England where he was American guest representative at the second annual Shakespeare conference held at Stratford-on-Avon. He is author and editor of numerous books and articles on Renaissance literature.

University Day Tradition

University Day, which normally is celebrated on October 12, a Sunday this year, originated in 1793 when a distinguished company of North Carolinians gathered in Chapel Hill to witness the laying of the cornerstone of Old East building, first state university building in the United States. Although the labors which brought the University into actual operation as the oldest state university covered a period of some 20 years, University Day is now regarded as the University's birthday.

"In University Day exercises the faculty wear their colorful academic regalia, consisting of caps and gowns and the hoods which denote the field of their doctoral study and the institutions from which their degrees were awarded. This procession will form at 10:10 o'clock at the west gate of Kenan stadium, marching across the playing field under direction of Faculty Marshall J. C. Lyons to reserved seats "on the 50-yard line" in the north stands of Kenan stadium.

The 125-piece University band, in uniform, will play the processional music from its position just behind a small speaker's stand on the playing field.

Dr. Hardin Craig To Give Talk On 'Crisis and Responsibility'

The opening assembly of the academic year at 10:10 this morning in Kenan stadium will feature an address by Dr. Hardin Craig entitled "Crisis and Responsibility" as an incentive to the University on its 154th birthday.

Dr. Craig's appearance on the program comes in response to numerous requests, stated Chancellor Robert B. House, who arranged a Craig "replay" after the Shakespearean authority's convocation address last year. At that time his talk on the subject of "A North Carolina Renaissance" drew an audience that taxed Memorial hall's capacity and then evoked nation-wide praise. Appeals for copies of this former address are still coming from individuals, business concerns, and universities all over the country.

Other highlights of this year's University Day celebration will be an academic procession by the faculty with a special N.R.O.T.C. color guard; music by the 125-piece University band and the combined men's and women's glee clubs, 200 strong; a brief memorial to former students, faculty and alumni who have died since last University

Day; and the announcement of five new stone tablets to be mounted in Memorial hall.

Classes at 10 and 11 o'clock will be cancelled, but noon classes will be resumed as usual. The book exchange, the library, and all University offices will be closed for the occasion between 10 and 12 o'clock to permit the entire campus personnel's attendance. Students will have seats reserved for them on the west side of the stadium and can enter most conveniently from either gate no. 2 at the north center section or gate no. 3 nearest the Bell Tower.

Ushers

Ushers who will direct students, townspeople, and any other interested persons to the space held for them are all chairmen of important campus organizations. They are as follows: Bob Broughton from the Student Council; Donleen MacDonald and Bill Tate, Women's and Men's councils; Bootsie McWilliams and Bill Hight, interdormitory councils; Margaret Jean Taylor and Leon Ladd, Pan-Hellenic and Interfraternity councils; and Ruth Evans and Charles Foley, Y.W.C.A. and Y.M.C.A. These ushers should meet at the north gate at 9:45 for program distribution under the supervision of chief marshalls Barbara Cashion of the Coed Senate and Jack Folger, speaker of the Legislature.

Tom Eller, president of the student body, will be seated with Dr. Craig, other faculty members, and Chancellor Robert B. House, program presider. This group will occupy a small platform with loud speaker facilities located on the playing field.

By Bill Sexton

An investigation of the financial condition of campus publications was voted last night by the Student Legislature in its second fall session.

Proposed by Charlie Long, Student Party floor leader and speaker pro-tem, was a bill authorizing the Legislature's Finance committee to determine if the Publications board might exceed its budget allowance. The bill placed top priority on the probe, asking a report "as soon as possible."

Joyner Speaks

Ed Joyner, treasurer of the board, said that yesterday afternoon three of the four publications' allotments were completed, and that the board would have its final budget complete within a week. Joyner did not indicate whether the board expected to exceed its allotment in the student body budget bill passed last spring.

SP Victories

In a session punctuated by Student party victories, the Legislature considered four major items of controversy, finally approving three:

(1) Confirmation of executive appointments to fill vacancies in student office.

(2) An appropriation of $250 to the Carolina chapter of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations.

(3) The Publications investigation.

(4) Amendments to the Elections law, which were sent back to committee.

All but one of the six appointments by Student Body President Tom Eller were confirmed unanimously, and the sixth unexpectedly received only slight opposition.

Eller's appointments included Margaret Cole, to Women's council; Stan Cohen, Bill Wood, and Leon Melvin, to the Legislature; Al Winn, elections board chairman; and Al Lowenstein, to the Student council.

The appointment of Lowenstein, a member of the original committee which drafted the Constitution, was expected to meet stiff opposition. But a hurried conference between opposition leaders Tag Montague and Miles Smith resulted in a decision not to contest the SP nominee's confirmation.

The vote was 20 to 8.

A stiff debate which found the ranks of both the University Party and the Student Party split developed over the finance committee's favorable report on a bill giving $250 to the CCUN.

Ernest House, University Party legislator, and SP Leader Charlie Long sided together in support of the appropriation, while Joe Byrd, SP; Basil Sherrill, SP; and Tag Montague, UP, opposed.

Vote on the CCUN appropriation was 18-13.

Amendments to the Election laws included provisions shifting elections violations to the jurisdiction of the Student council, setting definite dates for inauguration of newly elected officials, and ordering special elections for publication editor vacancies within four weeks of the time the vacancies occur.

An appropriation of $75 for condolences to survivors of deceased students and faculty members was quickly passed.

Try-Out Response To Sound and Fury Impresses Leaders

According to Pete Strader and Ken Gammage, things seem to be looking up for the Sound and Fury productions. The recent response to the try-outs for the coming production, "Gin Lane," was enough to make the casting heads dizzy.

Because of the small number of students previously attending the University, the group has been composed, until recently, of the same people from production to production.

No matter how good actors are, an audience soon tires of seeing the same faces time and again. The need for new blood was evident—and fulfilled.

For the first time in its very recent history, the casting heads of Sound and Fury have had so many competent people applying for all of the major roles in the new musical comedy that they had a hard time choosing the ones most suited to the parts.

The hard work of picking from a large number of applicants did not make anyone sad, however; on the contrary, the spirits of all concerned were bouyed by the sight of so many wanting to join the production.

With the large number of new members in the group, Sound and Fury audiences can, and will, expect bigger and better performances.

Co-operative Store of Victory Village To Give Customers Patronage Dividend

By Ken Rothwell

Following an executive meeting held last week officials of the veterans co-operative grocery store at Victory Village announced that a five per cent patronage dividend would be paid all customers. A patronage dividend, they explained, is a cash rebate based on the total amount of groceries purchased by members.

According to chairman Tom McDade this dividend is the first to be paid the store's customers since the project was launched in June.

"Since the purpose in organizing the co-op was to aid faculty and student married veterans on campus in combating the high cost of living it is a real pleasure to distribute these checks as concrete evidence that we have at last partially fulfilled our mission," he said.

Organized by a group of veterans last year the co-operative grocery store functioned only as a buying club until June. At that time a building was obtained in the center of Victory Village for use as a store. Any married veteran is entitled to make purchases from the large stock of groceries and frozen foods upon subscribing to one share of stock at one dollar per share. Co-op officials point out that in addition to the patronage dividend the stock purchased by members also bears dividends. Sale of this stock is not restricted to veterans. Last year organizations like UVA, as well as individuals purchased it both as an investment and to help the co-op.

"We are very anxious that all new married veterans on campus, both student and faculty, who are interested in cutting down on living costs join with us," said McDade.

He also announced the election of two new members to the co-op board of trustees, Clay Cochran, a member of the University Economics department, and John Elmendorf, a graduate student from Lumberton.

Yack Lists Plan For UNC Students Of Law, Pharmacy

Special provisions have been made for photographing members of the Law and Pharmacy schools, according to an announcement made yesterday by Yackety-Yack board of editors, Gene Johnstone, Ruth Evans, and Harold Bursley.

Monday of next week has been set aside exclusively for pharmacy students, and only law students will be photographed on Wednesday and Thursday afternoons.

Special Arrangement

These special arrangements have been made, because of the heavy work loads and class schedules carried by those affected. "We are especially anxious," Board Member Evans declared, that all of the men and women in the above category take advantage of these arrangements so that this Yack will be representative of all the students."

Gene Blake, senior section editor of the Yackety-Yack, likewise indicated that complete representation will be one of the major goals of this year's annual. In a statement issued yesterday, he called on all seniors to stop by the Yack office and fill out their class cards.

"It is important in the interests of an accurate and complete picture of the people of this campus that all students, especially seniors have all of their activities listed in the Yack, and that will not be possible unless we have a class card from every student," he stated.

Explain Work

Editors Johnstone, Bursley, and Evans moved also to explain what is to be done with the proofs of individual pictures which are now being returned to the students. Where the proofs are accompanied by instructions, no explanation is necessary.

However, Chidnoff of New York failed to enclose instructions with all of the proofs sent. All students receiving sets of that kind are asked to select their best picture and bring or send it to the Yack office. The board of editors will then take care of having them finished.

Square Dance To Be Staged At Y Tonight

As a final prelude to the fast-approaching Sadie Hawkins day festivities, a mountain-style square dance will be staged in Y court from 7:45 till 10 o'clock this evening.

The Student party will sponsor the affair in honor of its candidate for editorship of the Yackety-Yack, Art Melton. With caller and orchestra recruited from the ranks of the Western North Carolina club, the dance is to follow immediately the Wake Forest pep rally, and will adjourn at 10 o'clock to the Rendezvous room for round dancing.

Arnold Wilson, caller last year at the WNC square dances, will lead festivities, and "the Little Brown Juggers," an ensemble of bona fide mountain musicians directed by Ed Norwood has been signed to play.

Refreshments for the dance will be handled by the staff of the Rendezvous room under direction of Manager Don English, SP headquarters announced last night.

Art Melton, honorary chairman of the Dance committee, admitted "vote-getting" was one of the purposes of the dance. But, added Melton, "we are inviting coeds to come as 'stags' so that the crowd can make new friends; and we've got the best in music!"

And Melton reminded that it would be one of the last social functions before male and female resume their traditional Sadie Hawkins day hostilities.

The dance has been timed so that the pep rally crowd can begin dancing immediately following the march through town. Immediately after the outdoor square dancing, Scott Gardner and his Rendezvous orchestra will take over for round dancing at Graham Memorial from 10 until one o'clock.

Arabs Reported Massing Army For Invasion

Beirut, Lebanon, Oct. 9—(UP)—Arab troops are reported to be massing along the borders of Palestine, ready for a possible invasion of the Holy Land. Abdul Pasha, Secretary General of the Arab League coununcuiul of the Arab League council, says that the Lebanese and Syrian governments have ordered units of their armies to assemble at the frontier, and that the first units have already started marching. Pasha says that the Egyptian government is also ordering strong contingents of its army to move up to Palestine's southern frontier.

Reports indicate that if an invasion starts, the Arab army would be composed of trained forces from Egypt, Iraq, Syria and Lebanon, and would fight hand-in-hand with the Arab underground army in Palestine.

The reported troop movements came after the Arab League officially recommended that the seven Arab states get ready for military action if the British withdraw from the Holy Land. A spokesman for the League says that this time the Arabs mean business, and that united Arab forces will fight any plan that does not establish Palestine as an independent Arab nation.

The Jewish Agency has called on hundreds of war veterans to form a Jewish army for what is called a "Life or death showdown" with the Arabs. Mrs. Goldie Meyerson, head of the Agency's Political department told veterans at Tel Aviv that salvation for Palestine rested in the Holy Land, not at Lake Success. Mrs. Meyerson said that the Jews are not looking for trouble, but are ready for it.

The report that Arab troops have been ordered to mass along the Palestine border has created a sensation at the United Nations. The Syrian delegate to the U.N., Faris El-Khoury, says that he has had no official confirmation of the report. He adds that he hopes it is not true. However, El-Khoury says that Arab troop movements would be the natural way for Arabs to show that their threats are not bluffs.

Torchlight Parade, New Song To Feature Pep Rally Tonight

By Chuck Hauser

A torchlight parade, a brand new fight song, and talks by Tar Heel co-captains Sparger and Wright and by a member of the coaching staff are the highlights of tonight's pep rally, announced Myrt Sherard, head cheerleader.

The pep rally will begin in Y court at 7:15 this evening, said Sherrard, and will procede as a torchlight parade over the usual circuit, ending up in Memorial hall, where a yet-unlowed by the team co-captains, named member of the coaching staff will address the rally, followed by the team co-captains, George Sparger and Joe Wright.

The new Carolina Fight song, which was first presented to the student body by the University band at the Carolina-Georgia game, will be featured in tonight's rally in preparation for the game tomorrow.

The song was written by John McManeus, a University alumnus and former president of the band here. Students are requested to bring the words of the song, printed below with them to the rally this evening.

Carolina Fight Song

Carolina, Carolina, fight for N.C.U.
All hail to colors white and blue,
Let's make a touchdown,
Carolina, fight!
We fight for Alma Mater,
Fight 'til the day is through.
We sing your praises, Carolina,
Fight, fight for N.C.U.!

Chaperones Must Be Approved For Coeds' Visiting

Coeds will only be allowed in fraternity houses this weekend if a chaperone approved by the Dean of Women is present, announced Charlie Blackburn, chairman of the House Privileges board, last night.

The chaperones will be necessary because, according to a general statement issued by the Board, "A complete visiting agreement has not been reached between all parties concerned."

OPIUM SEIZED

Vancouver, British Columbia, Oct. 9—(UP)—Royal Canadian Mounted police in Vancouver have confiscated more than 4,000,000 dollars worth of opium on a Dutch ship.

Russia Schedules Watchdog Boycott

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 9—(UP)—Russia disclosed today that she will boycott the "watchdog" commission which the United Nations plans to send to the Balkans.

Immediately after the Russian announcement, Yugoslavia and four other Soviet satellites said they also would ignore the commission. The Russian bloc's snub of the commission, which still has to be set up formally by a two-thirds vote of the General assembly, practically wrecks its chances of bringing any solution of the Balkan problem.

The commission has virtually no prospect of succeeding if Greece's northern neighbors refuse to cooperate and decline to let commission investigators enter their territory to obtain evidence.

Dance Scheduled By Monogram Club

The Monogram club is sponsoring an informal dance Saturday night after the UNC-Wake Forest football game. Jimmy Marshall and his orchestra will play for the dance which will be held in Woollen gymnasium from 8:30 until 12 p.m.

Tickets for the dance may be purchased at Lenoir dining hall, Woollen gymnasium, and the Y. The price is $1, stag or drag. Although the dance is informal, it has been requested that men wear coats and ties.

Part of the proceeds from the dance will go to the University club for sponsoring pep rallies and part to the building of the inter-dormitory shack.

Student Party Plans To Hold Meet Today

A campaign meeting of the Student Party will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon in Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial.

CICA Chooses Sadie Pearson New President

Sadie Pearson was elected president of the Carolina Independent Coed association in a special meeting called Wednesday night for the purpose of filling this and other vacancies.

Mary Ellen Reaves received the post of secretary, and Anne Scott Dellinger was voted into the position of social chairman. Two new members of the executive council (at-large) are Myrtle Westbrook and Elizabeth Thomas.

The positions of president and social chairman were open as a result of the resignations of Nina DeBerry and Margaret Goodman, respectively. Sadie Pearson vacated the secretarial post to take over the presidency.

Tentative plans for the year were discussed during the meeting, including a tea for all new independents on Sunday, October 26, and a dance during the latter part of the fall quarter.

The CICA has scheduled its annual membership drive to begin in the near future, and all coeds who are interested in joining the organization are urged to attend the next meeting.

JEWISH SERVICES

Jewish Services will be held this evening at 7:30 in the Roland Parker Lounge. Mr. Claude Shotts, executive director of the YMCS, will be the guest speaker of the evening. Mr. Shotts, who was in Europe as a member of the American Friends Service Committee, has recently assummed his duties at the Y.

Typhoon Strikes Iwo Jima Island

Guam, Oct. 9—(UP)—Guam radio reports say that a typhoon, with winds up to 140 miles per hour, has struck the tiny Pacific island of Iwo Jima. The reports add that the storm has virtually leveled American installations on the isle, and that no building has escaped damage. So far there has been no information on any casualties among the 300 American Army, Coast Guard and Air Force personnel stationed at Iwo Jima.

Postmaster Reveals That Undelivered Mail For Students Accumulating Fast

Undelivered mail for students who have not filed address changes is piling up steadily, Postmaster W. S. Hogan warned yesterday.

"Many students have failed to notify us when they move," Hogan declared; "and it's practically impossible for us to make delivery."

Another delivery problem is caused by quonset hut residents who have not notified Post Office authorities of their new box numbers. Mail cannot be delivered to individual huts, Hogan said, asking that residents of the quonset area notify both the post office and people writing them of their new box numbers.

Address changes should be filed at the General Delivery windows in the Chapel Hill Post Office.

Lecturer Hans Rothe, Director of 'Saint Joan', Has Had Many of His Works Performed in Europe

By Mark Sumner

Guest Lecturer Hans Rothe, who is directing the first play of the Carolina Playmakers thirtieth season, Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan," which will be presented here on October 29 through November 1, has had over 3,000 performances of his translations of Shakespeare staged in Europe, and he served as an assistant to the world famous German theater manager and producer, Max Reinhardt, from 1925, until 1930.

Rothe, who is a director and playwright as well as a translator was invited to Chapel Hill last spring as guest lecturer in the department of dramatic art and is continuing his lecture work this year. He is also engaged in translating American plays for use on the European stage for the Rockefeller foundation.

Last spring the Playmakers gave a special production of Rothe's play, "Innocence," which he directed, and nine of his plays have been translated into Spanish. While with the Leipzig theater, which he joined as a director in 1920, he directed productions of plays by such modern playwrights as Georg Kaiser and Ernst Toller, as well as Shakespeare and Goethe.

HANS ROTHE

"The Night Arrival," one of his earlier plays, was staged at the Globe theater in London during 1938, in Madrid during 1940, and in Stockholm during 1945. He later wrote it as novel, which was published in Spain.

His work with Reinhardt included directing the directors of Reinhardt's four theaters. Sometimes he made trips to London or Paris to select new plays to be done in Berlin.

Nazi pressure forced Rothe to leave Berlin and go to his winter home in Florence, Italy, in 1934. All of his plays, including his Shakespeare translations, were banned in Germany by 1936, and in 1939, he moved to Madrid, where he remained with his wife and small son until he came to Chapel Hill last March.

Traditions Grow Stagnant Even At UNC

The celebration of a combined University Day and Convocation will decide two important questions. Is the University, with its present enrollment of 7,500, too large to attempt assembling together at one time? And also, are our traditions which we have cherished in the past really worth anything to us?

The first of these questions has its problems. We do not have an auditorium that will accommodate the entire student body. The only alternative, therefore, is to hold events that are of interest to all students in Kenan Stadium. But then arises the problem of enticing the students to walk the short distance to the stadium. Today this has been solved by arranging a program that you will not want to miss. Dr. Hardin Craig, who received a tremendous ovation at a Convocation two years ago, will deliver the main address. The band and glee clubs will add color to the outdoor gathering.

The other question is one that involves something that we continually praise and yet very seldom do anything about—our traditions. And what is tradition? Upon asking this question we receive innumerable answers. The Old Well, "Uncle George"—Dean of the janitors, Davie Poplar, South building, all of these are traditions. They have been collecting since the Fathers of the University laid the cornerstone of Old East on October 12, one-hundred-and-fifty-four years ago. But our traditions are becoming stagnant. Unless we try to revive them, it is quite probable that they will die out entirely. It happened at the University of Virginia.

Dean of Students Fred Weaver cites their plight. While he was there on a visit several years ago he happened to notice in a catalogue that it was the birthday of the University of Virginia. He remarked of his discovery to several of the officials of the college and they were as surprised as he and only passed it off with a chuckle.

This could easily happen to our traditions. Chapel Hill and the University have the reputation of being proud of their heritage—the little things that make our campus unique. A turnout of the University en masse to celebrate our birthday is the only method to keep our tradition with us.

Smile, Buddy, Smile

"Where," asked the freshman, "is the famous Carolina spirit of friendliness that my father has been telling me about, lo these many years?"

The senior to whom he addressed his question, a veteran who began his Chapel Hill career in 1941, replied with a sad look of reminiscence on his face and began to relate the story of friendship and informality that once reigned here. He told the new studnet of the enthusiasm, friendliness and devotion that was the ruling factor in relations between Carolina students.

"Everyone greeted everyone else in those days," he continued, "and a smile was the order of the day that was exchanged between all who met on the campus, whether they knew each other or not."

That things are different now, the senior sadly admitted. He agreed that everyone seems preoccupied with some type of business and has no time to pass a simple greeting to the people they meet face-to-face on the campus walks.

The senior and the freshman decided that the situation could be easily remedied if all students will make a few pre-New Year resolutions. Such as this: When you pass a fellow on the campus, throw him a smile and speak—if it is nothing more than a "hi" or "hello." Smiling isn't going to hurt anyone and it can soon become an easy habit that can grow to produce fruitful results.

Carolina alumni brag, with rightful pride, that the University campus is the friendliest place in North Carolina. Perhaps it was and still is, but from present indications, some work needs to be done to revive it to the pre-war status.

The first requirement is friendship—so, smile, buddy, smile.—B.B.

They Are Citizens Now

Veterans probably form the largest group of individuals in the United States and it is expected that they should receive a certain amount of publicity—more so than other groups not as large. It seems, however, that some newspapers give the word almost too much play in their headlines and articles. One gets the impression that the first thing a city reporter asks when he goes on a story is whether or not the people involved are veterans. If they are, nine times out of ten, the word will be given a prominent place in the following headline and as is usually the case, another black mark will be placed against all veterans in general.

Typical headlines can be found in any city daily. Examples such as these: "Veteran Sentenced For Auto Thefts"; "Veteran Kidnaps Child"; and "Veterans Arrested For Disorderly Conduct."

America's veterans are probably joined together today in only one common goal—to forget that they are veterans. One of the more progressive vet organizations emphasizes the fact in its motto, "Citizens First, Veterans Second." Constant reminding from local presses does not help the situation.

Newspapers will be doing the GI's a big favor if they will find some other convenient word to substitute in place of the over-used "veteran." —B.B.

They Don't Understand Us

Youngest Conductor

Johnson Is Unusual Success

By Clarke Stallworth

On December 6th of last year a blond man stepped up on a podium in Chicago as guest conductor of the Cincinnatti Symphony Orchestra. Ten days and six concerts later, he signed a year's contract as regular conductor of the Cincinnatti Orchestra.

This young man was Thor Johnson, one-time Carolina student who at 33 is the youngest conductor of a major symphony orchestra in America and one of the three major conductors in the country who are native born. Johnson was born in Grand Rapids, Michigan, but has lived most of his life in Winston-Salem, where his father was a Moravian minister.

Johnson attended the University in 1933-34 and received his A. B. in music here. During his stay in Chapel Hill he organized and conducted a Little Symphony Orchestra, which was very successful in its appearances both on and off the campus. In 1933, during the summer months, he and four other members of his Little Symphony literally played their way across the Atlantic Ocean. The Carolina Ensemble, as they called themselves, played dinner music on the "Aquitania" and spent their free time sightseeing in France and England.

After graduating from Carolina, Johnson went to the University of Michigan, where he received his Master's Degree in music. At Ann Arbor he organized another Little Symphony and with it made successful tours of the midwestern and eastern states. When he left Michigan he was offered the post of conductor of the Michigan State Symphony. He took this job but later resigned to take the conductorship of the orchestra of the Julliard School of Music in New York city.

During the war Johnson served as bandmaster of the celebrated Army Band at Fort Monmouth, N. J., and entertained troops all over the country. Following his discharge from the Army, he made guest appearances conducting the New York Philharmonic, The Chicago Symphony, The Philadelphia Symphony, and the Boston "Pops" Orchestra.

It was in December of 1946 when Johnson got his big break. On the eve of a concert in Chicago, Eugene Goosens, conductor of the Cincinnatti Symphony, fell ill and the young conductor was called to Chicago to replace him. He arrived in Chicago barely 24 hours before the concert to find that practically no one in the orchestra had ever played under him before. He also found that he had never heard one of the selections to be played. Somehow he learned the selection, aquainted the orchestra with his directing style, and the concert went off as scheduled. Then, in 10 days, came six more concerts, the year's contract, and success.

Lashes Illegal Pass Books

Council Condemns 'Scalping'

As a result of repeated inquiries and the student body's apparent disapproval of existing practices, the Men's council takes this opportunity to publish its views on the following matters:

1. "Scalping"! The resale of tickets for the purpose of making a profit is a direct violation of Federal laws. When thousands of Carolina alumni and student's friends and families are denied the privilege of witnessing our football contests because of the greedy ambition of a few; when newspapers carry news items presenting the existing conditions here on our streets, bringing public disgrace to our campus; when students themselves try to "hold up" fellow students and alumni—the time for some positive action has come.

Editorials by our student body president have appeared before, urging that these practices by students cease, but they have evidently been disregarded. Feeling that these continued practices on the part of students create only ill will among ourselves and bring discredit to the University, the Men's council will continue to prosecute violators, even to the extent of suspension.

2. "Transfer of student pass books"! The use of a student passbook by a person other than the rightful owner is illegal. If you will read the front and inside cover you will find under what conditions these books are issued and the penalty for their fraudulent use. The purposes of having your name on the book—plus the practice of checking I. D. cards at the gate are evident—to prevent unlawful owners from enjoying student privileges, as well as to prevent the aforementioned "scalping."

Furthermore, such transfers sometimes leave the way wide open for persons outside the school to bring unfavorable attention by their roudy, ungentlemanly acts within the student section of the stadium. Since we are asked as members of the athletic association to abide by its rules (the books are tax exempt because we are members and the coupons are not transferrable), and to use the tickets ourselves. Also since allowing the use by others than ourselves is openly deceitful, students are reminded again that, as in the past, illegal use of pass books will subject both the owners and persons procurring them to trial under the Honor System, with revocation of the pass books and possible suspension the result.

3. Illegal use of dormitory rooms. It has come to the attention of the Administration that many boys are living in dormitory rooms under assumed names, the rooms having been procured formerly by other students who now live elsewhere and are allowing friends to have their dorm rooms in their name. You can easily see the lack of fair play and deceitfulness involved here.

No one will grant that it is right to use another's name, and when men high on the entrance priority list are turned down because others who might not even be in school now under the system have their rooms, a pretty sorry situation exists. We're all anxious to get an education, especially here at Carolina, but such practices are carrying things too far. Those who haven't already done so should clear up their status immediately. If any cases are brought to the Council's attention in the future, both violators will be subject to possible suspension.

In closing, the Council wishes to urge once again that all students with gripes or problems contact it immediately. If you feel there is an undesirable condition on our campus that merits attention, let your Council members know about it. Talk among yourselves isn't enough.

Students Favor Boxing

By Pete Gerns

This column will appear twice a week, on Tuesdays and Thursdays, to search out student opinion on pertinent questions. A ballot box has been placed near the main entrance of Graham Memorial for deposit of your answer.

Today's query: Should boxing be reinstated as a sport at Carolina? was answered very one-sidedly:

Mac Shaw wrote that he felt that boxing is a "well-known collegiate sport and that the South has always been known for its good teams," while C. B. Mendenhall is of the opinion that "the student body should support the sport better and show proportionate enthusiasm as is displayed for football."

T. L. Martin, who has been a student here for a long time and who has watched the teams for many years, feels that "boxing should be reinstated because it has always been a good, clean, competitive sport. Jim Blum, an amateur at pugilism himself, believes that "boxing is a good contact sport, breeds friendship and furthers competition."

We still have space for two more opinions. Elmer Modlin, Jr., says that to him "boxing stands out strong among all other sports because it shows more excitement and brings with it a greater thrill," while Sam Whitehall, another old-timer on the campus hopes that "this situation can be straightened out amicably." He hopes to see boxing back soon "because Carolina doesn't quit after a bad season."

The question for Tuesday is: "What should be done to further entertainment facilities for dormitory students?" Please deposit your answer by 6 p. m., Sunday.

GM GRIND

Enthusiasm was contagious at Wednesday's first informal jam session in the Rendezvous. Sixty-odd musicians got together for over two hours in one of the most interesting, successful, and tuneful programs of the year.

By the end of the program everyone was enjoying the program so much that moderator Jack Burney was pressed upon to extend next Wednesday's session for three hours (3-6 p. m.). And if the past program is any indication of the future, the Rendezvous will be packed next Wednesday afternoon.

It's one of the most novel ideas we've yet seen. The moderator picks our any combination of five or six musicians from those registered in the room. This group, without any previous rehearsal then puts on a short jam session of any pieces of their choosing.

Drop down next Wednesday, whether you can play or not.—Just as long as you're hep. It's really good.

BAND MEMBERS

All band members are requested to meet in Kenan stadium at 10 o'clock this morning in full uniform. There will also be a band drill with instruments at 4:30 this afternoon.

Write Away

Must Trailer Residents 'Sign Or Get Out'?

Dear Sir:

When I was in school here back in 1940 it was a custom for any one wanting to get something off his chest to write a letter to the editor. That is the reason for this letter.

I have just returned from a meeting of the residents of the University Trailer camp at which a newly drawn contract governing rules and obligations pertaining to both the University Housing Office and the camp residents was read. As far as I can determine this contract was drawn up by Mr. Wadsworth's Office in collaboration with Mr. Burch and others. The contract has been presented to the trailer camp residents with the stipulation —"sign or get out."

In the first place most camp residents question the need for a signed contract with the university. Most of us have never signed any contract and order has prevailed. We are wondering why dorm residents are not required to sign contracts, or what about the Victory Village residents?

The most objectionable part of this contract—the part that really grinds us—is the provision which states that the residents are "not to assign or transfer the privilege of using the assigned trailer space to any other person. . .except by written permission of the Housing Office." This in plain English means that those of us who have invested an average of $1600.00 in our trailers in order to provide our own living accommodations, will not be able to sell and guarantee the lot with the trailer. Obviously, no one is interested in buying a trailer with no lot to park in. Most of us have been forced into buying a trailer because the University finds it impossible to build enough housing accommodations for married students.

We did not buy with the intention of pulling the trailer to Florida. We can not afford to finish school, pull our trailer up to Franklin Street and put up a sign, "For Sale —you find a place to park it."

Frankly, the camp residents are pretty well burned up about events. We have an approximate investment of $150,000.00 in trailers. The University has invested (they say) $16,000.00. They ask us to pull our trailers off the lot and give them away. Oh well, say, I heard some one say that Harvard wasn't a bad school.

Turning A Crank

Dear Sir:

As Hodgson's article "Concerning College Students" seems obviously not humorous, one wonders whether it is his idea of a critical appraisal. Does turning a crank produce such dull, cynical drivel?

Perhaps one is supposed to show more reverence in their declining years for the past masters of humor.

The undersigned is not related to the editor.

FREDERICK MILLS

(Editor's Note: Mr Hodgson says, "I plaglarize only the better class of humorists. It would benefit Mr. Mills if he would plaglarize a better class of letter writers.)

Wrong Attitude

Open Letter To Two Coeds:

You walked out of my place yesterday because in accordance with the request of the President of the United States you were not served eggs.

I am sorry, VERY sorry, not because I lost a sale, but sorry for you and your attitude. You were born and raised in a country where for more than 150 years there has been no invasion, no bombing, no dictatorship, or any other kind of oppression. You are living in a country where everybody can eat a virtually unlimited amount of food of any kind.

You are living in a country whose policy has always been to help and feed poor and starving peoples throughout the world.

You are living in the good old U.S.A. You have never lived in a country where the amount of eggs per person is one each week; where milk is given only to babies and only a pint each week to them; where fresh fruits and vegetables have not been seen on the table for many years; where someone might knock on your door at 3:00 a.m. and take you away from your home to an unknown destination; where your churches were burned and your priests expelled from them.

To help the millions of starving Europeans, physically and spiritually, you are asked by our President to give up eggs once a week. Do you really think this sacrifice is not worth while?

Day of Renaissance

BESIDES THE good news that there are now 63 shopping days remaining until Christmas, we have been informed by our local ouija board that tomorrow will mark the day of renaissance for the 1947 Carolina grid powerhouse. For, according to the latest bulletin, Chief Engineer Carl Snavely has cranked up his highly-geared machine after last week's breakdown. Moreover, it is rumored that he has installed a new brand of "kickapoo" oil in the motor and is all set to speed off down Victory Highway on an eight-week tour.

This optimistic note should come as welcome news to the 7,000-plus students and assorted other Carolina rooters witnessing the 45th clash between the two teams on the morrow. It's always nice to watch your favorite gridiron power bounce back after an early-season setback and continue along its merry way with win after win. And that's exactly what Tar Heel fans are hoping for tomorrow. A good-sized score, in fact, might help sooth the wounds inflicted last week in the Battle of Austin.

Good Cheering Session

CERTAINLY THE local fanatics could do with four grid quarters of good cheer. Of the eight periods played this season, only the final stanza of the Georgia contest, plus the last minute in the third period of the same game, gave the Chapel Hill crowd much to be enthusiastic about. Those rooters—and there were lots of them—who listened to the (ugh) Texas tussle were forced to keep their joy throughout most of the 60 minutes of action. So if Carolina's potential power is going to show itself, this ought to be the week.

IF LAST year's performance against the same opponent is any standard, then this weekend bodes ill for the Deacons of Wake Forest. Exactly 47 weeks ago tomorrow, the Carolina Express, with Charlie Justice doing most of the driving, chugged its way past a stubborn Deacon eleven to register a classy 26-14 triumph.

Those who remember that particular struggle will recall that Justice turned in one of his top performances of 1946 that day, scoring two touchdowns and setting up a third with a 62-yard jaunt. Nobody around here, and least of all Charlie, will object to a repeat exhibition tomorrow.

Snavely's Dog

Some Carolina student might be able to dissolve one of Coach Snavely's many worries. The Tar Heel mentor's black, German shepherd dog has disappeared from his home and the Snavely household would appreciate any information as to the whereabouts of the pet. The dog weighs about 90 pounds, is coal-black except for a white question-mark shape on his chest, and answers to the name of Barnaby. Anyone seeing such a dog is asked to phone the coach's home-number 5361.

THE SECOND sport to see action during the fall quarter begins its activities tonight. Coach Crowell Little leads what looks like a strong junior varsity brigade to Columbia, S. C., for the Tar Babies' opener against the South Carolina jayvees. It will be an after-dark contest and Little has prepared his charges for the change from good old sunlight with scrimmages underneath the lights on Navy field.

Great Sports

SUNDAY'S ISSUE of the Daily Texan reached our desk yesterday and we were very interested in the Texas reaction to last week's game. In one of its stories, a locker room account of how the Longhorns felt about their victory, reporter Paul Tracy quotes Co-Captain Max Bumgardner as saying: "They (the Tar Heels) were the cleanest bunch I've ever played against, and great sports." And the rest of the host team agreed with him.

It's always nice for a visiting team to make a good impression with its sportsmanship and that's just what the Carolina lads did.

AS ANYONE can see below, today is Forecast day and there seems to be a difference of opinion in predicting the score of the local clash. Morty Schaap is the most optimistic, with a call of 35-7, while Jake Wade figures Carolina will ease through by only two touchdowns. The rest of us think three TD's would be more accurate in the margin of victory.

Tomorrow will tell!

Tar Heel Squad Physically Fit For Wake Clash

A full strength Carolina football team will take the field against the Demon Deacons of Wake Forest. All hands, with the exception of Billy Hayes, were pronounced fit for competition by trainer Chuck Quinlan yesterday.

Coach Carl Snavely sent his charges through a dummy drill to check both offensive and defensive blocking assignments.

The game with the Deacons will be the Carolina contribution to the N.C.A.A. Olympic fund. Twenty-five cents from each paid admission will be forwarded to the committee to aid sending amateur athletes to the Olympic games at London next summer.

Each college has been asked to make a contribution from one of their home games to make the trip possible.

The game Saturday will mark the first time this season that a Tar Heel team has faced opposition in the form of a single-wing attack. The Deacons, coached by Peahead Walker, run from the same formation as the Carolina eleven.

Fine Passer

The Wake Forest team has Tom Fetzer at the lefthalf or tailback post and he is reputedly one of the finest passers in this section of the couuntry.

The Deacs also boast a starting line that averages over 213 pounds per man, from end to end. The play is led by guard Bob Leonetti, who gave Carolina a hard time in last year's game.

"The Babe" Suffers First Links Defeat

Fort Worth, Texas, Oct. 8—(UP)—Little Betty Mims White of Dallas handed Babe Didrickson Zaharias her first setback in 19 golf tournaments today in the quarterfinals of the Texas Women's open.

The five-foot two-inch Miss White turned in some precision putting on the 18th green to defeat the Babe one-up.

Columbia Is Scene Of Initial Contest

By Dick Jenrette

Carolina's Jayvees inaugurate their 1947 football season in Columbia, S. C., tonight by meeting the junior varsity of the University of South Carolina. Game time is 8:15.

A squad of 39 North Carolina gridders will board a bus in Chapel Hill this morning for the South Carolina capital. The team will leave at 7:30 and spend the night in Columbia, returning tomorrow in time for the game between the Carolina varsity and Wake Forest in Kenan Stadium.

Yesterday Coach Crowell Little sent his local Jayvees through a final tuneup before the game. There was no contact work. The squad seems to be in good physical condition, and the team spirit is excellent.

The probable starting lineup for the Tar Babies shows John Stoioff and Fred Bauer, ends; Tom Quinn and Roscoe Hansen, tackles; Dick Featheroff and R. J. Quigley, guards; Billy Baise, center; Dick Bunting, tailback; Merle Norcross, wingback; Bob Koontz, fullback; and Bob Reynolds or Joe Kosinski, blocking back.

Other boys who have been showing up well in the drills and doubtless will see much action are backs Gus Purcell, Marion Parker, and Caudill. Some of the top reserves in the line are Joe Neikirk, Jim Hayworth, Charles Shay, Bill Slate, Ed Bulpuch, Ed Washington, Sam McCauley, and Pete Rywak.

Coach Little stated that he had hoped to take a larger squad

Fourteen Grid Contests Mark First Day of Mural Program

By Kyle Cox

The intramural tag football program had its opening date yesterday afternoon with 14 teams swinging into action on the seven University playing fields.

Yesterday's contests of the round-robin affair were all in the fraternity division. Phi Delta Theta No 2 came through with the decisive victory of the day, a 51-6 trouncing of Chi Phi No. 2.

The big feature of the day came during the Kappa Sigma No. 1 vs Lambda Chi Alpha tilt when Walter Jones heaved four touchdown aerials and kicked three extra points to stage a one-man show in Kappa's 27-0 victory.

Wade Dunbar connected with a beautiful 40-yard pass to Roy McKnight to give Sigma Chi a 6-0 edge over Delta Sigma Pi and Claude Strickland scored a safety as SAE No. 2 took a close one from Kappa Sigma No. 2, 2-0. A defensive battle raged between Phi Delt No .1 and ATO with ATO getting the decision in an overtime period, 1-0.

The next set of games will be played on Monday when dorm teams enter play.

Blue Dolphins Begin Practice Next Weanesaay

Varsity swimming practice for Coach Dick Jamerson's Blue Dolphins is scheduled to begin with a meeting of all interested men on Wednesday afternoon of next week.

Indications point to a close battle for the conference swimming crown between State college and Carolina this season. Carolina fought off State last year to win the conference championship.

Although the official season does not start until January, several practice meets are being planned for next month to ready the Blue Dolphins for what should prove to be one of their toughest schedules since swimming was introduced as a varsity sport at Carolina.

Anticipating keen battles for team berths, several aspirants have already been working out at Bowman Grey pool for the past few weeks.

Announcement as to the time and place of the meeting on Wednesday will be made early next week.

AN EVERYDAY ART

FUNCTIONALLY SERVICEABLE, American clothes are a means of personal expression. In this country, the standards of style as well as utility are set by the needs and preferences of the public.

WOMEN'S CLOTHES IN AMERICA are an eloquent expression of true democracy; grace and beauty of apparel are accorded a circulation as broad as the nation, reaching into every community everywhere and available, not merely to the hundreds or the thousands, but to the millions.

THIS IS VITALLY IMPORTANT to the nation's morale, because clothes are one of the few mediums for relaxed self-fulfillment in a nation of rapidly-moving commercial competition.

T. Earl Heffner Hands in His Resignation As Managing Editor of The Daily Tar Heel

T. Earl Heffner, present managing editor of the Daily Tar Heel, announced yesterday that he would be compelled to resign his position this week, due to a heavy class schedule and unforseen difficulties in daily commuting from Durham, interfering with his editorial responsibilities.

"It's a great loss to lose Heffner, who is an experienced newspaperman," said DTH editor Barron Mills. "However we are quite fortunate in having on the staff a man who is able to carry on with similar efficiency. This is our present news editor, Ed Joyner, who has served during the summer as telegraph editor of the Wilson Daily Times, and has been a member of the campus staff for the past two years."

The resigning managing editor is in the college of arts and sciences and served on the staff of the Daily Tar Heel last year as a reporter and an associate editor under Editor William Woestendik. He is a native of Charlotte, where he has accumulated over two years experience on the Observer as a sports writer, assistant state news editor, and federal news reporter. He also has been a correspondent for the Charlotte News.

Heffner still is a special correspondent for The Observer, and is currently writing the "Carolina Parade" feature for the first issue of this year's Carolina Magazine.

"I hope to be able to assist, in whatever way I am able, in the paper publication," Heffner concluded.

C.C.U.N. Schedules Two Meets Today

Reorganization of CCUN and plans for the coming term will be the main objects of discussions at two meetings planned this afternoon.

Lincoln Kan announces a meeting of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations Executive committee at three o'clock in the CCUN office. The following members are to make an appearance: Barron Mills, Tom Eller, Bill Mackie, Bill Armstrong, Bill Shuford, Fred Bates, Harry Snowden, Art Melton, Charlie McRae, Randall McCleod, Bob McCune, Mickey McNutt, John Van Hecke, Chester Zumbrunnen, Benedicta Santos, and Martha Manning.

At five o'clock another meeting will be held in Roland Parker Lounge.

TO SHOW SLIDES

Dr. G. R. McCarthy of the Geology department will present a program of photographic slides and commentary, on the scenic beauty of the West and Canada, to the first meeting of the year tonight of Sigma Gamma Epsilon, the geology fraternity. This gathering is the first of a series of lectures by visiting authorities in the field, and all interested in geology are invited to attend the meeting, to be held in 401 New East at 8 o'clock.

MANGUM PICNIC

Mangum dorm residents will open their social season this afternoon with a picnic at the Mason farm. Pete Gerns is in charge of the affair which has been planned to give the new students a chance to get acquainted with the old. The outing will be highlighted by a coeducational football game, followed by a wiener and marshmellow roast.

along for the trip, but that it was impossible to obtain accommodations for the night for a bigger group. The Jayvee mentor added, "We haven't had time to give the boys a fair trial, and there will be a lot of deserving boys left behind. There are some who have shown possibilities but haven't had time to get on to the plays, so we will have to take our most seasoned men along."

Those making the trip are Rand, Stoioff, Weems, McCauley, Washington, Bulpuch, and Bauer, ends; Quinn, Ogden, McGirt, Porterfield, Hansen, Gurtis, and Rywak, tackles; Featheroff, Slate, Hayworth, Quigley, Allen, Shay, McLane, and Scott, guards; Baise, Neikirk, Holdash, and McDaniels, centers; Brazington, Purcell, Shields, Bunting, Koontz, Parker, Culbreth, Caudill, Hodge, Kosinski, Reynolds, Norcross, and Crawford, backs.

Accompanying the squad will be Coaches Little, Crutchfield, Highsmith, Webster, Watkins, and Keller.

Last year's Carolina Jayvee squad compiled a record of two wins, one loss, and two ties. There are a good many of the outstanding boys on that club back for the 1947 season.

The personnel of the squad will change throughout the year, with various boys in line for promotions to the varsity squad a reward for good work on the jayvee team.

Sound & Fury Play Casting Pleases Head

By Paul Rothman

Doug Gardner, president of Sound and Fury, announced yesterday that he is pleased with the casting of the coming attraction "Gin Lane," a musical comedy-melodrama of the "Roaring Twenties" that is complete with gangsters, flappers, and the usual follies girls.

The production, written by Pete Strader and Ken Gammage, will be highlighted by the original music of Frank Matthews.

Those members of the cast and technical crew that have been selected are Faith Adams, Norman Sper, Mac Shaw, Pat Ellis, Sam Greene, Earl Hall, Violet La Rue, Jane Hunter, Martin Carmichael, Art Engel, Dik Nunis, Alice Denham, Jerry Weiss, Jack Daniels, Tommy Thomas, George Upchurch, George Winslow, R. B. Hurley, Doris Weaver, Audrie Green, Dan Morgan, Charlie Joyner, I. K. Thompson, Harold Kastner, Mark Barker, Al Carpenter, John Griffin, Ann Humphrey, Barbara Bess, Dolly Colwell, Patsy McNutt, Mary Lou Williams, Joyce Heffner, James Caudill, Doug Gardner, Anise Daye, Jr., Coleen Smith, Camilla Jonas, Pat Winslow, Doris Weaver, Hubert Terry, Wilton Stewart, Dewey Wood, Colbert Leonard, Bill Corley, Ben Kistler, John McBride, Jim Byrd, Rufus Bynum, Warren Olsen, Ed Fleming, Nancy Tucker, Erwin Danziger, and Howard Meyers.

Other members of the cast, singing and dancing chorus, and technical crew will be announced at a later date.

Doug Gardner, who has hopes for even bigger productions in the future, also announced that pictures of the group will be taken for the Yackety-Yack at 7 o'clock Monday night. All members are requested to be present, dressed in tuxedoes and evening dresses.

It has been requested that all members of the cast and crew check the backstage bulletin board in Memorial hall.

Wildlife Pictures Will Be Shown Here

A series of color movies of American wildlife will be given here this fall and winter by six famous naturalists under the auspices of the Chapel Hill Bird Club and the National Audubon society.

The series will be opened November 7 by Bert Harwell, California wildlife photographer, who will reveal the wonders of America as recorded by the color camera.

The second film, to be given January 22 by Howard Cleaves, will show the nocturnal activities of animals and birds.

The rest of the series will be as follows: February 18, "Sounds of the Sageland," by Alice and Harold Allen, nationally known radio and screen artists; March 25, "South along the Suwannee," by Allan Cruickshank, ace photographer of the National Audubon Society; April 16, "Our Living Earth," by Alexander Sprunt, Jr., of Charleston, S. C., foremost authority on nature conservation.

All the movies will be given at 8 p.m. in the Pick theater. Season tickets are available at Ledbetter-Pickard's. The proceeds will be used to promote the conservation of natural resources.

Chapel Hill Is Complying With President's Request

By Raney Stanford

Meatless Tuesday and eggless and poultryless Thursday came into Chapel Hill last week to join beerless Sunday, leaving some confusion, but on the whole finding the University and village eating establishments rising to meet the government's request. Some said they had been caught by surprise by the President's speech, but would fall in line next week.

"We co-operated 100 per cent on both days last week," University dining hall officials said, "and we will continue to comply with any government request or regulation in the future."

With President

At a meeting in the office of the local Merchants association yesterday, commercial food dispensers of the community agreed that "restaurants and cafeterias in Chapel Hill are going along with the President's plan until further notice."

Most food handlers contacted yesterday, University and fraternity, said it was too early in the program to see any noticeable cuts in meat consumption, but many believed that much food could be saved in this fashion. One fraternity dining room manager commented that "A day without eggs around here means a lot in saving."

All the eating places agreed that even if savings were not considerable, the psychological factor in the program, calling attention to the need for conservation, meant a lot and should cut down on the daily waste of edibles.

Bread Plan

A student-proposed voluntary bread rationing program, not serving bread unless requested and then only one piece, brought favorable comment from a University cafeteria official:

"This should really be a constructive program, because the amount of bread that is wasted here is really great."

Dining hall heads said there were many and varied dishes could be served on Tuesdays and Thursdays to replace meat and eggs. Seafoods, stuffed peppers, vegetable and egg plant were all cited as examples.

For those who fail to see a bright side in any kind of rationing, some of the foodmen noted the financial savings brought on by buying less meat and poultry dishes. What with current food prices doing skyrocket acts, one cafeteria official said that "maybe meatless weeks would be a good idea."

Five Months Late, GM Handbook Rolls Off Presses Today

Though five months behind schedule due to printing and engraving difficulties, the first annual Graham Memorial handbook since pre-war days will roll off the presses of the Orange Printshop today. Edited by student union public relations director Roland Giduz, the book is an all-inclusive guide to the year-round activities of Graham Memorial.

"Though we regret extremely that much of the book is outdated now," said Giduz, "I believe that it will contain a great deal of pertinent information for the entire student body, old and new."

"Some sections are obsolete, of course, including the parts on the old Candlelight room, now the Rendezvous, and the Graham Memorial Dream Serenaders band, which is no longer existent. This is due to the fact that the guide was due to be distributed in June, before these functions were revised."

A 24-page booklet, five by seven inches in size, the guide contains specific information on the origin and theme of Graham Memorial, the functions of the various rooms in the building, a photographic resume of the year's activities, and a floor plan drawing of the four floor levels of the student union.

It is bound in a blue and white cover and dedicated to Martha Rice, student union director from 1945-47. On the back page is a "futurama" architects drawing of Graham Memorial.

Three thousand copies of the book have been printed and will be distributed to dormitory and fraternity rooms next week. Extra copies will be available after tomorrow in the YMCA and Graham Memorial offices.

Fifty Patrolmen Assigned for Game

Raleigh, Oct. 10—(UP)—State Highway commander H. J. Hatcher has assigned 50 highway patrolmen to handle the traffic at the North Carolina-Wake Forest football game this weekend, and has designated Raleigh police to direct traffic for the State-Clemson game.

"If the 40,000 fans at Chapel Hill and those at Raleigh," he said "are careful and follow instructions, the weekend can go by without serious accidents."

Weather Curtails Assembly

By Ed Joyner

Speaking to approximately 2,000 students and faculty members gathered in Memorial hall yesterday morning to commemorate the 154th anniversary of the founding of the University, Dr. Hardin Craig called upon North Carolina to lead the nation and the world back to an era of "sanity and safety" based upon Jeffersonian principles from what he termed this "age of crisis."

Although wet weather prevented holding of the convocation in Kenan stadium as originally planned, forced cancellation of the academic procession by the faculty and greatly reduced the number of students who had an opportunity to hear Dr. Craig, the rest of the program was carried out as scheduled.

National Anthem

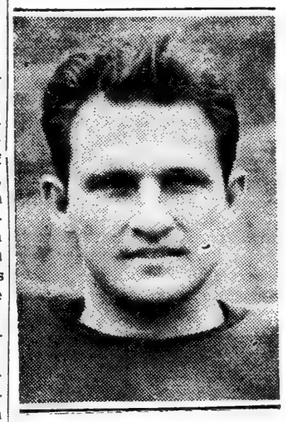
The exercises opened with singing of the national anthem, followed by the invocation given by YMCA secretary Claude C. Shott, and singing of the University hymn. In the absence of Dr. A. R. Newsome, Dr. Archibald Henderson announced the installation of six memorial tablets in Memorial hall. Chancellor Robert B. House led a responsive reading after which the Men's and Women's glee clubs sang two selections under the direction of Paul Young.

Chancellor House introduced the speaker.

"We are living in an age of crises," Dr. Craig said. "The modern mind is a crisis mind. Everything is completely right or wrong and there is no compromise." The remedy for this, known since the days of Aristotle, he said, is for life to be ruled by reason and not by passion.

Praises System

Praising the American system of human liberties and blasting the "crackpot Utopias" of other ideologies, Dr. Craig warned that the price of liberty is constant watchfulness and reformation of existing governmental institutions. "Although we may still be willing to die for our country, we are not willing to learn and think in its behalf," Dr. Craig charged in pointing out that most Americans are so ignorant of the country's institutions that they can not defend their chosen way of life against attacks made by conflicting ideologies.



Only by relearning the principles underlying the foundation of the republic and by intense respect for the law on the part of every American, Dr. Craig asserted, can America remain the stronghold of human liberty which it has become.

Huts Closed

All quonset huts will be locked by 2 o'clock this afternoon and will be unlocked immediately after the football game, announced Ray Jefferies, adviser of the quonset huts.

Jefferies explained that the huts are being locked as a precaution against the reoccurrence of happenings which took place during the Carolina-Georgia game two weeks ago when articles from several huts were reported as missing.

FACING A STRONG WAKE FOREST forward wall which has yielded an aggregate of 63 yards in two games so far this year, the Tar Heel forward wall today will endeavor to break its widely heralded backs into the open for the first time this year. Expected to play a major part in the running attack are Flankman Mike Rubish (right) and Tackle Len Szafaryn, one of the players mentioned so far as a potential All-American.

Corn Crop Estimate Boosted But Grain Still Is Critical

Washington, Oct. 10—(UP)—The nation's grain-conservation drive received a big boost this afternoon with the announcement by the Agriculture department that the critical corn crop would probably reach nearly 2 1-2 billion bushels, 54 million bushels more than predicted a month ago.

But at the same time, department experts forecast a decrease of about two billion bushels from previous estimates in the already record-breaking wheat crop to 1,407,000,000 bushels.

Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson, who announced complete support of the president's food-saving program, warned in an afternoon news conference that the lower estimated wheat production plus a rapid use of old corn supplies would largely offset the expected increase in the corn crop. He described the meatless Tuesdays and poultryless Thursdays as being of "vital importance" to European relief, and urged cooperation with the program developed by President Truman's Food Committee.

Additional support to the conservation program of Charles Luckman's committee was voiced today by a luncheon conference of Republican senators. Senators Brewster, Maine, and Aiken, Vermont, endorsed the drive and pledged additional Republican backing to the committee.

Aldermen Unanimously Approve Decision For Installing Parking Meters in Town

The town aldermen unanimously approved the installation of parking meters on Franklin street from the Presbyterian church to the elementary school and on Columbia street from the Town Hall to the Carolina Inn at their regular monthly meeting Wednesday evening.

The board expressed regret that the seriousness of the traffic congestion in Chapel Hill had forced the decision in favor of meters, but from a poll made by Alderman Obie Davis the public also indicated a desire to see the installation of meters. A meeting will be held at 8 o'clock Monday evening, October 20, for discussion of the subject by the public before the resolution is enacted into law.

The report submitted Wednesday was from a committee composed of Ed Lanier, P. L. Burch, and Obie Davis. Other recommendations of the committee were the installation of a stoplight at the post office corner; the prohibition of parking from 12 midnight to 6 a.m. in the meter zones; and the prohibition of overnight parking (9 p. m. to 6 a. m.) by moving vans, trailer trucks, and trailers on any street in Chapel Hill.

Annual Reveals That 11 Groups Miss Deadline

Eight fraternities and three sororities remained unheard from as the 'deadline' for submission of Yackety-Yack contracts for this year's book became history last night.

They were joined by numerous other organizations as over 20 per cent of all campus groups became among the missing when the final tally was made. However, they will receive another chance this next week as board of editors members, Gene Johnstone, Ruth Evans, and Harold Bursley attempt to get 100 per cent representation in this Yack.

Individuals who have not been photographed as yet will also get another opportunity according to an announcement made yesterday afternoon in which Johnstone designated Tuesday and Friday of next week as special days for the general student body.

Maddry, 71, Enters University, Enrolls In Course Taught by Former Classmate

Rev. Charles E. Maddry, retired Baptist minister and fellow student of Phillips Russell in the year 1900, has reentered the University at the age of 71. He is taking a course in creative writing under Russell who has no student in his class more eager and industrious.

Fifty years ago this fall Charles Maddry was a student at John W. Canada's school here in Chapel Hill, a rambling frame building where the Baptist church now stands. In that year of 1897, young Maddry was serving as school janitor to pay his tuition and walking three miles into town every morning from his farm to do the job, and three miles back again. An airplane was beyond his wildest dreams; since then he has flown thousands of miles around the world. He viewed the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor from a hotel window. He engaged in a real estate transaction in Rome with Benito Mussolini, and came out ahead in it.

After his retirement from the church a few years ago, he moved to Raleigh to live, unable to find a place to live in Chapel Hill. Now he and his wife are settled in the house recently vacated by Rev. Das Kelley Barnett.

Mr. Maddry is writing two books for which publication is already assured. One is the history of a hundred years of the Southern Baptist foreign missions board and the other is a composite of anecdotes. One of the chapters in this second book is called, "Outwitting the Sawdust Caesar," telling about his real estate deal with Mussolini.

Loop Tilt To Begin At 2:30

By Bob Goldwater

A Tar Heel team fighting to overcome the stigma of last week's crushing 34-0 setback takes to the Kenan turf this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock seeking to 'rebound into the victory column against the undefeated Deacons of Wake Forest.

The clash marks the Carolina gridders' first stand in defense of their hard-earned Southern conference crown. Currently sporting a 1-1 record for the campaign, the Blue and White lads will be up against a team that boasts of two straight triumphs, including a 16-14 conference decision over Clemson last Saturday.

Forty-fifth Clash

A crowd of between 30,000 and 40,000 will be on hand for the 45th renewal of hostilities between the two teams and another exciting contest to match last year's thriller is quite likely. Both teams have shown more potency in the airlanes than on the ground and the battle may be decided by which eleven sports the best air attack.

Despite their ability through the air—Carolina ranks fifth in the nation with 22 completions in 45 attempts for 415 yards—the Tar Heels will be trying to gobble up yardage by unleashing their potential power along the ground.

Heavy Line

Held in check by the strong forward walls of Georgia and Texas, the Carolina ground offensive will not find the going any easier today. For in the Deacons, the local gridders will be facing a heavy line that averages 218 pounds and ranks fifth in the nation in rushing defense.

Nevertheless, Coach Carl Snavely has primed his three chief running backs plus their

Graham Memorial Plans Open House During Week End

Rounding out the social program of the football and dance week end, Graham Memorial will hold forth with an informal open house from 8 o'clock through 1 this evening. While Scott Gardner's orchestra is playing in the Rendezvous on the ground floor, recorded popular music will be played, and refreshments served in the main lounge.

Immediately following this afternoon's football game, the latest football scores from all over the country, will be posted on the board in the main lounge of the student union, as received on Daily Tar Heel wire reports.

The Rendezvous will open at 6 o'clock, for dancing and refreshments until closing hours for coeds. Scott Gardner's seven-piece campus orchestra will play in the room from 8:30 through 12:30, it was announced by Rendezvous Manager Don English.

In the main lounge the lights will be turned down low, and punch and cookies served at the north end, during the evening's concert of soft recorded music.

Pep Rally Marchers Undaunted By Rain

Last night's soggy drizzle failed to snuff out the scheduled pep rally, and more than a thousand spirited fans turned out for a loud cheering session in Memorial hall and the following march through town.

Carolina's new Victory March was theme of the pep session, and most of Chapel Hill echoed with the stirring tune as the soggy marchers circled across town and campus. Head Cheerleader Myrt Sherard commandeered a parked semi-trailer as rostrum to lead as loud a cheer as the business district had heard in years, while patient city police held traffic for the parade.

U. S. Weather bureau reports indicated that spectators in Kenan Stadium this afternoon might as well resign themselves to similar soggy weather.

Craig on Weather, Football and Politics

Rain played havoc with the plan to hold the celebration of the 154th anniversary of the University of North Carolina in Kenan stadium—the only place large enough to accommodate the 7,500 members of the student body. But, nevertheless, it did not hinder Dr. Hardin Craig, member of the University English faculty, who still receives requests for hundreds of copies of his Convocation address of two years ago. Instead it merely afforded him an opportunity to crack a joke on the weatherman and a pun concerning the football field upon which he was originally scheduled to speak.

The only regretable situation caused by foul weather was the fact that only a comparatively small percentage of the student body was able to secure seats in Memorial hall to witness the occasion.

Craig's inspiring address drew several minutes of loud handclapping after it was completed, and he arose to his feet several times to bow in appreciation to the crowd. The keynote of his address stressed the importance for North Carolina and the University to take the lead in restoration, revision and defense of the American doctrine of government.

A statement that brought the loudest ovation was in reference to the American versus Socialistic Systems. Craig explained the Socialistic system would have a large government office in every block and every city in our land. He stated that much of the time the people would be occupied in filling out forms and standing in cues. Even then the people would not willingly comply with regulations and a police force of exceptional efficiency would have to be formed. Craig says he thinks this can be done. "But," he stressed, "Do we want it? Would you exchange the stupid people whom we ordinarily put into office for such totalitarians, however efficient?"

Craig's speech was a big success with the majority of listeners, who were not looking for hidden meanings, but to the anti-Craig element it will be a topic of conversation for weeks to come.

A Life Worth Living

Last Monday night Dr. James S. Shepard, founder and president of the North Carolina College in Durham, died of a cerebral hemorrhage in the office he had occupied for 37 years.

With his passing one of the nation's foremost Negro educators and statesmen is lost. He founded the North Carolina College in 1910 and for 50 years led an active and useful public life. He held degrees from five universities, was deputy collector of internal revenue of North Carolina for six years, held offices in numerous state fraternal orders, and was one of the directors of a Durham bank.

Dr. Shepard numbered among his personal friends, presidents, governors, and industrialists. Telegrams from Governor Thomas E. Dewey and the Roosevelt family were among the hundreds of messages received by his family on his death. Senator Clyde R. Hoey said of him, "He has rendered magnificent service to the people of North Carolina and especially to the people of his own race."

Shepard was great booster of his state and of his race. He spread good will and tolerance wherever he went. In 1944 and again in 1945, over a national hook-up, the whole nation heard him praise North Carolina's progress in race relations.

In founding the North Carolina College for Negroes, Dr. Shepard struck at the very core of the race problem of the South. This problem is illiteracy and when the Negro conquers this, he will have gone a long way toward solving the seemingly ever-present dilemma of race prejudice.

In its present day struggle to do the right thing about the Negro, the South needs more men like Dr. Shepard, who approached the race problem with a conciliatory, "conference-table" attitude. It can well be said that from November 3rd, 1875, until last Monday night, Dr. James S. Shepard led a life that was truly worth living.—C.S.

Order of the Day

There are some things that we would like to pass on about how to behave on a football Saturday. It is our not unpleasant duty to list them as follows:

(1) Brush your teeth upon arising; massage your gums.

(2) Since this is Saturday—take bath.

(3) Put ice-tea in thermos jug.

(4) Telephone date, express regrets, less expensive this way.

(5) Brush off raccoon coat.

(6) Put it on.

(7) Now your shoes.

(8) And overshoes.

(9) Go out on Franklin Street and make faces at the scalpers.

(10) Don's forget to lock your room door.

(11) Beat Wake Forest!

Immediately after each Missouri river flood comes the time when everybody forgets about the necessity for doing something to prevent another one.

Believe it or not, there are snakes in Ireland. Sixty-seven vipers recently were born in the Dublin Zoo, and a lost week end had nothing to do with the case.

A Capetown, South Africa, magistrate favors shooting drunken drivers. They already are at least half-shot.

If you want to have fun, just try shopping for slipcovers to fit your parlor furniture.

Tips, Hems, Seats

By R. Foo Giduz

Comes ball game day again and that swamps all other interests. . . . Our local Harry the Horse tipster informs that odds are going wild today, so what with things being such as they are we do not have any stake on today's grid grind. . . There's no bet to make on it. It's the surest and safest thing of the season. Just get down there and YELL!

And watch for half-time shennanigans from the recently-formed Knickerbocker club. . . Inside dope: All gals sporting "the new look" had better watch out.—Their club's slogan is, "Raise those hems, fems!". . . . Just in musing, we wonder how come the mile-long lines to get in football games this year. Student body's only slightly larger than last year, yet it took as long as an hour to get in the Georgia game . . . (Today's line is probably already forming!) Anyhow, if it is necessary, here's just one request: Give seats on a first come, first serve basis. The guys who waited in line from early morning before the Georgia game were rather disheartened to find themselves seated in the temporary bleachers around sections 14 and 15, when so many who came later got on the 40-yard line.—'Taint an unreasonable request, is it???

It's most heartening though, to see the Legislature got started on the road to a campus community chest Thursday evening . . . . Thanks due for the hard work of legislators Charlie Long and Bob Collins in starting the ball rolling . . . . But keep it rolling, gentlemen. This project will take a lot of work to organize, and it's none too early . . . . And on the community chest, here's a very polite "so sorry" to the little gal who misinterpreted our stand on the drive question, as chronicled here Thursday. (See "Write Away."). . . . Sez she agrees with us, but just didn't like our figurative tone of voice . . . . OK, so we were smiling when we said it!

The Student Legislature's Boy Scout good-turn-for-the-day Thursday evening, was their okaying the appointment of Al Lowenstein to the Student council . . . . Several times a close-loser candidate for the post, Al's been the victim of a number of unfortunate smears. He'll be an A-1 addition to that body . . . . And a parting note from the Nothing's-too-good-for-our-boys-department: Legislature also voted NOT to invite photogs from Life mag down for the Dook weekend. —Figured it would be unhealthy publicity. —Mebbe so, mebbe so.

Laundry Bother You?

Grin and Wear It

By Clarke Stallworth

Do you get discouraged when your mutilated laundry comes back to you? Does a shirt with an arm torn off get you down? If so, let's take a look around and see how our laundry gets that way.

As we look into the bustling, efficient atmosphere of the local laundering establishment, we see all the staff working furiously.

The man who runs the button-crushing machine, with the hole-making accessory on the side, is industriously plying his trade, being very careful not to neglect the oxford-cloth, button-down shirts.

The man dunking the shirts into the shrinking mixture seems to be happy as he pulls and tries them on his midget partner for size. If the shirts are too large for the midget, back they go into the vat.

Over in the corner the blind man is working hard, sorting socks.

In the Lost and Found department the man carefully puts away, in neat little packages, all paper clips and golf tees that he finds, and flips old dirty wallets and the like into the waste basket.

Then there's the front man, who rubs his hands together and smiles winningly as he promises to have your laundry back by Friday noon. At the dance that Friday night, your roommate's shirt is a little too small and you can't breathe, but your date probably has halitosis anyway, so you don't worry about it.

In all fairness, however, we are forced to admit that the laundry service in Chapel Hill is better than none at all. If you happen to get 12 different socks back instead of six pairs or some pants with a hole burned guess where, the only thing for you to do is to grin and wear it, brother, grin and wear it!

Alaskan Frontier, Says Patterson, Offers Good Deal

Washington—The American Veterans Committee (AVC) today hailed the new settlement rights for veterans in Alaska as "the opening of America's last geographical frontier."

Chat Paterson, AVC's national chairman, said that he expected increasing numbers of World War II veterans to establish homestead settlement claims on the 2,750,000 acres of unsurveyed public lands lying along both sides of the Alaska highway.

"We know from correspondence that thousands of veterans are just waiting to get a fair deal before going to Alaska," he said. "In the next five months, during which the exclusive settlement rights will be reserved for World War II veterans, there may be a major settlement of veterans in Alaska."

Paterson said that Alaska offers to veterans of today the same "opportunity to carve out their own future which tempted their forefathers in the development of our western states. Alaska offers free homesteads exempt from taxation, in addition to a wealth of opportunities in the development of its potentialities for fur farming, land farming, fishing, lumbering, and mining," he said.

The AVC chairman urged that Alaska be granted statehood in order to encourage its settlement. "I do not imagine that a veteran or any other citizen relishes the prospect of taxation without representation," he said.

Paterson declared that the government should encourage the development of the newly opened strip of public lands by assisting in the preparation of new areas for settlement.

Clinton Laboratory Program

Opportunities For N.C. Physicists

By Russell G. Baldwin

There have been numerous reports received recently that the University of North Carolina, along with 13 other Southern colleges and Universities, will soon have access to the Clinton Laboratories at Oak Ridge, Tennessee for carrying on atomic research. These reports are misleading and at the same time promising. They are misleading in that they give the impression that this program is a certain and eminent eventuality. Unfortunately that is not true. According to the best information I have been able to uncover, this program is still on the planning board and as yet has not received official government approval.

Let's explore some of the implications of the aforementioned reports. Can you imagine the University of North Carolina building a physics laboratory costing millions of dollars? (If you can yo're not a North Carolina taxpayer nor are you familiar with your State legislature's attitude on such matters.) Now stretch your imagination a bit further and try to imagine the University spending several million dollars each year for equipment for that imaginary laboratory. If your imagination has grasped the above suggestions, you have a pretty good idea of what the proposed establishment of the Clinton National Laboratory at Oak Ridge will mean to the University of North Carolina.

The Clinton National Laboratory is expected to function in the following way: It will conduct a graduate training program which will provide for basic atomic research and graduate education. It will provide advanced training at last year doctorate and post-doctorate levels. Another objective of the program is to obtain capable young scientists whose education was interrupted by the war. The University of Tennessee has agreed to conduct this graduate program as a branch of its graduate school. It will also conduct an isotope tracer technique school. The isotope tracor is one of the most important medical discoveries in recent years and this school will, of course, be conducted by medical personnel.

To get a better idea of what this is all about, let's see how it will probably work. A student at the University of North Carolina, or any of the other 13 schools included in the program, who is working for his doctor's degree will get his class work here at Chapel Hill. When he has completed the prescribed amount of class work, he will pack his bags and set out for Oak Ridge to do his laboratory work. That may sound like a lot of bother but actually it isn't. Firstly, the student will probably make only one trip to Oak Ridge during which all his lab work will be completed. Secondly, some of the most beautiful scenery in the world lies between Chapel Hill and Oak Ridge and the jaunt should prove a pleasurable one.

Another factor of considerable importance is the opportunity this program will afford to physics and chemistry instructors for carrying on atomic research. Each institution will provide an instructor in the Oak Ridge laboratory and, by alternating, a lot of physicists and chemists will have an opportunity to do extensive research with priceless equipment.

In an interview with Dr. Joseph W. Straley of the University Physics department I find that there is considerable enthuiasm for the program. "When you consider," said Dr. Straley, "that the equipment for carrying on such research is so expensive and that the Physics department has only a few thousand dollars each year to spend for new equipment, while institutions like the University of California and Ohio State have millions of dollars, it is easy to see why it can be so valuable to the participating schools."

However, I don't see any "long-hairs" jumping into the air with joy, nor were any of them making reservations on the next train to Oak Ridge. They seemed to feel that if the miracle (which scientists don't generally believe in) should happen it would come about slowly or at least after a discouraging period of waiting.

Write Away

Is This The Renaissance?

Sir:

May I, as a "foreign" student, and humbly, accord my surprise at one aspect of the celebration of University Day Memorial.

The purpose of the ceremony, as I understand it, was to celebrate the anniversary of the founding of the Old East Hall in a University, which, even in my own very distant country, enjoys a name as one of the leading liberal universities in the United States.

The opening of the ceremony moved me most deeply, and I found it very beautiful. Yet the culminating point of the celebration was a demagogic speech, praising the American race, its way of life and free enterprise, whilst dismissing in terms of the deepest contempt other races, nations and ways of thought.

Is this the "Renaissance" in America, and is this the movement, which the University of North Carolina is asked to lead?

Honor To Ashes?

Dear Editor:

This letter is intended as an answer to a statement by Raymond Mills in Thursday's DTH that World War II was inevitable. Mr. Mills also implied that World War III is inevitable. "No actions by the U.S. alone . . . will prevent a war," he said. Then he came forth with the cheering news that we might possibly emerge from World War III stronger than Russia.

Mr. Mills' letter is encouraging; not because his thinking is correct, but because he is thinking. If he is genuinely concerned about the idealogical war now being fought between the U. S. and Russia, I am sure that in a reasonable time he will discover a new hope, the one sure path to peace—world government.

There is one major fault in Mr. Mills' reasoning. He is justified in being pessimistic, in looking at the gloomy side; BUT, he is not justified in saying that "Isolationism" is an abstract symbol and that we should not concern ourselves with abstract symbols. He suggests that we place "such things as success of the Honor System at Carolina and wholehearted loyalty to the President's meat saving program" above such matters as international relations, the UN and world government. I detract nothing from the importance of the Honor System and the meat saving program when I say that they are matters of secondary importance. Unless we solve the problems of international relations—the problem of existence, unless we get a world government, the success or failure of the Honor System won't mean much to us. Honor means nothing to ashes. Remember that, for without the framework of world government in which peace can be secured your chances of becoming ashes are excellent—and imminent.

GM GRIND:

Success of the new Rendezvous thus far this fall is little short of phenomenal—if continued crowds are an indication of success. Dapper Don English, Rendezvous manager, reports that 300 couples drifted in and out of the student union night spot during the course of last Saturday evening. Figure it up. That's 600 people, or slightly over eight per cent of the student body, just in one evening.

If you haven't been down there yet, tonight's a good time to see for yourself why it's so popular. Drop down anytime before or after the Monogram club dance. Scott Gardner's orchestra will play in the Rendezvous all evening.

Thirsty ping pongsters, student government, and publications workers may note with relief that automatic coke machines will be placed in the student union early next week. One will be on the main floor, at the south end by the GM office, and the other, directly above this spot in the second floor hallway.

The Sporting Picture

By Billy Carmichael

Picturesque Peahead

The infamous, squat Peahead Walker will waddle into Kenan Stadium this afternoon, faithfully followed by 30 or 40 so-called Demon Deacons, who have been told by their dumpy leader that, barring an act of God, they will retread the already trampled Tar Heels during the course of the afternoon and gain a place for the little town of Wake Forest even on maps published outside the state of North Carolina.

Peahead, as he is affectionately called by his friends and enemies alike, is a cynical guy, who dreams of the day when he will be portrayed in a movie by Pat O'Brien perhaps to be entitled, "Walker of Wake." He has been accused from time to time of every malpractice known to modern football, but in the final analysis no one has been able to pin anything on him, except a diaper, which shows what crafty fellow he can be when he wants to.

He does hold the distinction, though, of having defeated the Tar Heels on the field of play at least three times in the past seven years, all of which were not too bountiful seasons for local entries. And he does bear watching by fans and officials alike, but mainly for his color contribution to the game. After all, it takes all kinds of people to make up a world.

Peahead, it can be told, is supported in the act by one Tom Fetzer, who does everything, according to the press notices, short of playing with the band. He can run, kick and pass, it says in the clippings, but how fast, far, or accurately, is yet to be ascertained. In the long run he probably will choose to go over the Tar Heels rather than around or through them, which means another afternoon of pass chasing for the local lads, who tend to specialize in this department.

Not that Fetzer will be alone in his efforts against the Tar Heels, for, according to latest reports, the Deacons intend to use the full limit of 11 players whether the rest do anything but just stand around as some players have a tendence to do. You must get a wonderful view of the game from down there.

Whether the Weather

Whether or not the weather, which has plagued the Tar Heels of late, especially in and against Torrid Texas, will bother the locals this weekend can not be safely stated. After what they have been through, they should get a break at last, with all efforts being made to keep Kenan at room temperature for today's clash.

Weather is a great equalizer among football teams. Not only heat, but rain and its first cousins, sleet and snow, have helped many teams overcome a superior outfit because of its adaptability to the existing conditions. An example of such was Duke's 7-0 win over then powerful Pitt, on a day when all the speedy Panthers needed were a dozen pairs of ice skates to completely rout the Blue Devils. Rain, too, allows a big slow team to close a speed gap, as line play reaches new heights in rain-soaked "here's mud in your eye" affairs. But such is one of the great elements of a great game, and a champion grid squad like the U. S. Post Office, is never stopped in its appointed task by rain nor sleet nor Texas heat, etc.

Getting back to this afternoon's taffy pull in Kenan, the Tar Heels, having tossed away their pre-season clippings, will probably get down to business this afternoon to prove to themselves, if to no one else, that they can play a winning type of big time football. The pressure of early season is off at last, and from here on out, they got everything to win and nothing, but eight ball games to lose. Then there are the skeptics who must be shut up, those who are down on the coach, down on the players, down on the managers, down on everyone including Morris, the water boy. These frustrated souls have already counted ten over the Tar Heels, and are moaning everything from "we're through, we're through" to that old familiar, "Didn't I tell you so?" There are just some of the children who haven't got the spirit.

For No Extra Charge

The extra added attraction at today's ball game will, of course, be the University Band. And it will be blaring out the new University fight song, which oddly enough, is entitled "Carolina Fight Song." It seems to be coming to the day when the University has more school songs than halfbacks, but they all tend to add to the general spirit of things which is all well and good.

The University band is known throughout the nation as one of the finest marching groups around, and has the somewhat singular distinction of having no non-playing members as some of the larger bands in these parts do. Tis a nice feeling to know that everyone out there is banging or blowing for all he is worth. Not to be over-looked in the rush, are the drum majorettes who tend to add all the touches of a three-ring circus to a Saturday afternoon.

Concluding, it looks to be a bright afternoon for the spectators if old man weather will come through, and clear away the cloudy skies that are now interjecting a note of gloom into the whole preceedings. Thus, if the sun comes out of hiding, along with the Tar Heel offense and Coach Snavely's missing canine, it will be a great day for the Tar Heels, and for those who follow them, too.

Ransonmen Hold Rugged Workout

Ignoring the rain and wet grounds the Tar Heel harriers went through a dress rehearsal four-mile run in preparation for next Saturday's meet with Georgia Tech.

Four veterans from last year's undefeated team led the way, finishing in a tie in 22:43. They were Jimmy Miller, Jack Milne, Sam Magill and Alvin Smith. John Bristow was behind these boys with Mark Burnham, Frank Hooper, and Chuck Herty all finishing under 25 minutes.

Also taking part in the event were Bill Crimmins, Walt Francis, Ken Wallenborn, Dan Martin, Jim Hunt, Bill Patterson, J. H. Hoots, John Brockman, Bill Linebach and Dick Carr.

This group included only five freshmen which is the minimum number that can run in a cross country event. The yearlings have their first meet on October 8 with State College and more freshmen are needed. The coaching staff is urging all men to come down and try their hand at the hill and dale sport.

Magill took the lead as the boys headed into the woods, but the rest were right on his heels. At the two mile mark the winners opened up the gap and came across the finish holding hands.

The tentative time for the meet with Georgia Tech is set for 11 o'clock next Saturday morning, and it is hoped that a big turnout will be on hand to see the Tar Heels perform.

Volleyball Schedule Is Released by WAA

The Women's Athletic Association Council drew up a schedule for the intramural volleyball tournament at a meeting in the Women's gym last night.

There will be three games each night during the tournament, the first being held from 7:15 until 7:40, the second from 7:50 until 8:15, and the third from 8:25 until 8:50.

The approved schedule is as follows: October 13—Tri Delt vs. Carr, Chi Omega vs. CICA, Town girls vs. Spencer; October 14—Phi vs. Archer, Alderman vs. McIver, Alpha Gam vs. Smith; October 21—Kenan vs. ADPi, Smith vs. Tri Delt and Alpha Gam vs. Chi Omega.

October 23—Kenan vs. CICA, Carr vs. McIver, and Archer vs. ADPi; October 27—Town Girls vs. Alderman, Spencer vs. Pi Phi, Smith vs. Chi Omega; October 30—Alderman vs. Kenan, Carr vs. CICA, Pi Phi vs. ADPi.

November 4 — Archer vs. Spencer, Town Girls vs. Alpha Gam, and McIver vs. Tri Delta.

All dormitory and sorority intramural managers are asked to see that the members of their teams have an "A" physical rating and that each girl brings her rating card to the gym.

Financial Facts Given About Series Earnings

Cincinnati, Oct. 10—(UP)—The office of baseball commissioner A. B. Chandler has released a string of figures tonight that ought to make interesting reading for the New York Yankees and Brooklyn Dodger players.

According to the commissioner, the World Series netted $1,781,000. That means that each member of the winning Yankee team voted a full share will draw about $5800 as a Series' bonus. Each Dodger voted a full share will get about $4,000.

JOVIAL JOE ROMANO, an outstanding defensive end, will make his first local appearance of the season this afternoon in Kenan Stadium against the Deacons of Wake Forest. Romano also may see action at tackle.

Football Highlights. . .

Duke Opposes Navy in Baltimore Today In One of Nation's Top Grid Contests

Duke university's surprising Blue Devils will be seeking their third straight success in as many games when they travel to Baltimore for a scrap with Navy's Middies this afternoon.

The men of Coach Wallace Wade were given little attention by the pre-season sports prognosticators, but victories over N. C. State and Tennessee have moved Duke up to the 13th position in national football ratings. The Blue Devils have been installed as the favorites, although most observers predict a low scoring contest.

The main factor in the Duke victories thus far has been a rugged forward wall. The Devils have capitalized on the breaks when they got them, and in general have been playing the type of ball that one generally associates with a Wade-coached team.

Upset Possible

Navy is capable of pulling an upset. The Middies of Coach Tom Hamilton have not won a game since the opening tilt of the 1946 season, and obviously they cannot keep losing forever.

In Raleigh tonight, the State Wolfpack will be presented with an excellent opportunity to move up in the Southern Conference standings when Clemson's Tigers journey to the North Carolina capital city. State romped to a 14-0 win over Davidson last week while Clemson was losing to Wake Forest, 16-14. State is a slight favorite, with the fact that the game is to be played in Raleigh being one of the main reasons that Beattie Feathers' boys rate this edge.

Other Loop Tilts

Other Southern conference games this weekend pit William & Mary against Virginia Tech, Washington & Lee against George Washington, and Furman against South Carolina. Maryland met Richmond last night.

Among the neighboring teams beside Duke who will invade other conferences are VMI, which meets Georgia Tech in Atlanta, Davidson against little Wofford, and Virginia, which goes against Harvard in an important tilt in the Old Dominion state.

Other top games in the South show Georgia's rejuvenated Bulldogs at Kentucky, Duquesne at Alabama, Florida at Auburn, Texas Aggies at Louisiana State, and Mississippi at Vanderbilt, another outfit whose good record thus far has been surprising.

Action in East

Highlighting action in the East will be Illinois at Army, Pennsylvania at Dartmouth; Villanova at Holy Cross, Yale at Columbia, and Cornell at Colgate.

In the broad plains of the West, Texas will seek to continue its great play when it meets Oklahoma. Oklahoma A & M will play host to Southern Methodist, Rice entertains Tulane, Notre Dame plays Purdue, Ohio State meets Southern California, Northwestern battles Minnesota, Michigan opposes Pittsburgh, and Wisconsin plays host to California.

In the Far West, Stanford meets Santa Clara, Oregon clashes with UCLA, Missouri plays at Colorado, and Washington takes on St. Mary's.

Badminton Meets Changed to Monday

The badminton club, sponsored by the intramural department, has changed its meeting night to Monday between 7 and 9 o'clock, assistant mural director P. A. Lee announced yesterday.

The switch from Wednesday was made so that the day would not conflict with fraternity and sorority meetings.

Lee also stated that a team representing the University would enter a badminton league along with clubs from Duke Durham, Raleigh, and Burlington.

Fans Hopeful Justice and Pupa Can Duplicate Last Year's Play

many substitutes, in secret drills this past week and local rooters are hoping that the Tar Heels finally break loose on the ground. Leading the prospective offensive will be Charlie Justice and his flashy broken-field running, Walt Pupa with his driving line bucks, and Jim Camp and his deceptive reverses. Fourth starter in the backfield will be Co-Captain Joe Wright, back in action after missing the Texas trip.

If Justice and Pupa repeat last year's performances against Wake Forest, the Tar Heels might run up a good-sized score. The Carolina Choo-Choo tallied two of his team's four touchdowns, averaged 49 yards on his punts, and gained 140 yards in 12 ground attempts. Sharing offensive honors with him in the 26-14 victory was line-buster Pupa, who blossomed forth as a passer of note. Big Walt tossed three aerials that day and all were completed for touchdowns.

Also certain to see a lot of action in the Carolina backfield is the second-string unit of Jack Fitch, Hosea Rodgers, Johnny Clements, and Don Hartig. All four were among the brightest stars in last week's losting cause.

Same Starters

In front of the ball-carrying brigade will be the same starting array as in the previous two struggles, providing Carolina receives the kickoff. If such be the case, Art Weiner and Bob Cox will open at the flanks, Haywood Fowle, fully recovered from a bruised ankle, and Len Szafaryn will fill the tackle berths, Bob Mitten and Sid Varney will handle the guard assignments, and Co-Captain George Sparger will be at the pivot post.

Defensive changes in the starting lineup will have Joe Romano and Mike Rubish replacing Weiner and Cox at the ends.

The Deacons will be missing their most potent weapon of 1946, the strong right arm of their All-Southern halfback Nick Sacrinty. But in its place will be the powerful wing of Tom Fetzer, Sacrinty's understudy last year.

Others in Wake Forest's initial backfield are fullback George Pryor, wingback Harry Dowda, and blocking back Nick Ognovich. Ognovich, one of the South's top blockers, has won the Jacobs Blocking trophy the past two years.

The big Deacon line will have Jim Duncan and John O'Quinn at ends, Sid Martin and Bob Hanula at the tackles, Bob Leonetti and Ed Royston at the guards, and Harry Clark at center. Leonetti and Royston are among the top guard combinations in the country.

Present edge in the series between the Tar Heels and Deacons is in favor of Carolina by a 32-11 count. One game ended in a tie. . .The teams first met in 1888 in the first intercollegiate game ever played in North Carolina. . . . Both teams have players by the name of Jim Camp, the Deac's Jim being a guard.

Scott Begins Scrimmages for Cage Newcomers

There were approximately 125 freshmen and transfer students working out for Carolina's basketball team yesterday in Woollen gymnasium.

Coach Tom Scott divided the squad into various teams, and short scrimmages were held throughout the afternoon as the Carolina coaches attempted to get a line on the material available for the team.

Scott stated that his plans for next week call for scrimmages on each afternoon. After Tuesday's workout he will make the first cut in the squad.

Earlier in the week the boys went through a series of tests to determine their basketball ability, and Scott began the scrimmages on Thursday afternoon after the completion of the tests.

Dr. Howard Odum Author of New Volume Just Published by New York Company

Dr. Howard W. Odum, Kenan professor of sociology in the University and one of the country's outstanding authorities and writers in this field, is author of a new book, "Understanding Society," which has just been published by Macmillan Company of New York.

Described by the publishers as offering a modern approach to the study of society, the book applies "sound social theory to the basic structure of American society and society in general.

Written as a text for introductory courses in sociology, "Understanding Society" is designed to meet the needs of both the general student and the student planning to specialize in the field.

"It is distinguished by its modern viewpoint, and the inclusion of up-to-date material, by its careful treatment of the concepts of regionalism and technic-ways, by its emphasis on modern American society in a framework of sound social theory, and by its practical teachings techniques," the publishers say.

"Based on the author's own extensive experience in the field, the book also includes the accepted elements and principles of sociology as taught by American sociologists, and represents a careful selection from an extraordinary range and amount of research."

A wide variety of illustrations are used, including more than 200 maps, charts and photographs.

Dr. Odum is head of the department of sociology and was founder and former director of the University's Institute for Research in Social Science. He was visiting professor at Yale in 1946-47, was Walker-Ames visiting professor in the University of Washington in 1942, and has also taught at Columbia University, University of Illinois, University of Southern California, and University of Utah.

Salt and pepper shakers which, according to The American Magazine, are said to be so clog-proof that the actually pour under water, have been manufactured.

John Cosgrove To Give Talk At Meet Here

One of the nationally known business consultants and writers in the field of insurance and accounting to address the eighth annual Symposium on Accounting Taxation at the University of North Carolina and Duke university, October 23-25, will be John N. Cosgrove, public relations director of the American Insurance group of Newark, N. J.

Mr. Cosgrove, a native of Savannah, Ga., is author of several books on insurance and fire prevention and is a contribtor to a number of national and trade publications, according to L. B. Rogerson of Chapel Hill, secretary of the North Carolina Association of Certified Public Accountants, sponsoring organization.

Subject of his address will be "Protecting A Business by Insurance." He was a reporter and editorial writer for the New York Journal of Commerce before accepting his present position.

Among a number of other well known speakers appearing on the program are Maurice E. Peloubet, treasurer of the American Institute of Accountants and director of the National Association of Cost Accountants; John L. Carey, secretary of the American Institute of Accountants, Henry T. Chamberlain, chairman of the accounting department of Loyola University.

Cooperating with the State CPA's in arranging the Symposium is the University Extension division, in charge of local arrangements.

Members of the committee in charge, in addition to Secretary Rogerson, are Fred G. Eichhorn, Greensboro, chairman; A. T. Allen and John F. Prescott, Raleigh; H. R. Borthwick, D. E. Gatewood, and L. B. Maddison, all of Winston- Salem; M. L. Black, G. C. Henricksen, Louis deR. MacMillan, and John H. Shields, all of Duke University; Frank E. Butler, Rocky Mount; T. H. Evans, John L. Gouger and Erle E. Peacock, all of the University of North Carolina; Leslie A. Heath, Charlotte; Philip W. Hutchings, Arthur W. Knight, and Norwood A. Thomas, all of Durham; George E. Officers Elected By Gastonia Club

The Gastonia-Carolina club elected officers Tuesday night in their initial meeting of the year.

Officers are: Jimmy Rankin, president; Gus Cain, vice-president; Simmie Adams, secretary; Jimmy Houser, treasurer; Ben Brockman and Hut Craig, social chairman; and Margaret Gaston, publicity chairman.

Last year's officers, along with the newly elected ones, will form an advisory committee to handle plans for the club. Tentative plans for future social functions on campus and for the Christmas dance were made.

Chancellor House Will Give Address At Baptist Forum

Chancellor Robert B. House will address the Baptist supper forum to be held Sunday, October 12, at 6 o'clock. He will be the second speaker of the quarter to address the group and will take as his subject, "Religion and Education."

The Baptist Student union, sponsor of the supper forum, inaugurates its social program for the year with a wiener roast to be held this evening after the game. Those attending will assemble at the church at 5:30 and will proceed to the site of the event from there in a body.

A mid-day devotional meeting led by various students under the direction of Joe Giles has been held each day this week at 1 o'clock in Gerrard Hall. Attendance indicates that there is a definite interest in services of this type on the part of Carolina students.

Y MEETING CHANGE

The meeting of the entire membership of the YMCA, erroneously announced for next Monday, will be held on October 20 instead, campus Y head Charles Foley said yesterday.

SQUARE DANCE TONIGHT

The Presbyterian church will hold a square dance tonight at 8:30 at the church. All students are invited. Hibbard Thatcher will call the figures and refreshments will be served.

News Editor Ed Joyner to Succeed Heffner As Managing Editor of The Daily Tar Heel

Ed Joyner, 23-year-old junior who is now serving in the capacity of news editor, will be the next managing editor of the Daily Tar Heel on the resignation of present Managing Editor T. Earl Heffner next week.

Joyner, a member of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity, graduated from the Charles L. Coon high school in Wilson where he was editor of the school newspaper and also of the Cocoon, high school annual.

He entered the University in 1942 and in February, 1943, he joined the Army Air Corps and served for 37 months, part of which time he was stationed in England as a radio operator on a B-17.

In March, 1946, he reentered the University and is now majoring in journalism. He is a member of the publications board. This past summer he worked as Associated Press editor for the Wilson Daily Times.

Joyner has been a member of the Daily Tar Heel staff the entire time he has been at the University. Last year he was associated with the Orange print shop where he learned the printing trade from the ground up.

Chosen by Editor Barron Mills, Joyner was approved at a session of the Publications board.

More Students Eligible For Dormitory Rooms

The following men students have become eligible for dormitory rooms and must contact the housing office, 207 South Building. Unless the student reports for his room by Monday, Oct. 13, the student will be taken off the priority files, and his place given to the next student on the list.

National Limelight Fades For Tar Heels As Deacons Win, 19-7

Week Old Corpse Found Near Pines By Football Fan

By Bill Sexton

Discovery yesterday of a partially decomposed body near the Pines, restaurant two miles east of Chapel Hill, was believed by police to have solved the case of an attempt to enter the home of B. F. Davenport, Pines owner, on October 3.

A spectator enroute to the Carolina-Wake Forest game reported to Chapel Hill police finding a body tentatively identified as Walter Edwards, Chatham country Negro, shortly after one o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The body was located in a wooded area approximately 150 feet from a trailer camp occupied by the families of 16 Carolina students.

A funeral home attendant said last night he believed two gunshot wounds were cause of death, and estimated that a week had elapsed since the victim died. Edwards, reported missing October 4, had last been seen at a tavern near the Pines. Earlier Davenport, proprietor of the Pines, had reported an attempt to break into the house occupied by him and his wife, his five-year-old child, and a brother at about 1 a.m. October 3. He said the noise of breaking a screen and forcing a window awakened his brother, J. C. Davenport. The two men pursued the attempted burglar, firing nine shots into the darkness.

An immediate search by Chapel Hill police, Orange county sheriff's officers, and bloodhounds had failed to reveal any trace of the intruder, and officers a week later reported no headway on the case until the body was found yesterday afternoon.

Coroner H. J. Walker had not determined yesterday evening whether an inquest would be held, but police officers indicated they believed finding of the body cleared up the attempted break-in.

Fraternity Men Organize Group Of Stray Greeks

An addition to campus fraternity life was created last Thursday night when a group of fraternity men transferring here from other colleges and whose fraternities are not represented here met in Graham Memorial to organize a "Stray Greek" organization.

Ten men, representing ten different fraternities from Chicago to Georgia, formed the nucleus of the yet nameless organization. Two temporary officers were chosen, Bob Bain as president and Larry Widman as secretary-treasurer.

Plans for further organization and social activities will be discussed when the group meets Wednesday evening at 7:30 in Graham Memorial.

CABINET MEETING

There will be a meeting of Y cabinet members tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock in the Y building. Charles Foley, president of the organization, said that members will discuss means of implementing the program action taken by the cabinet at its last meeting.

New Communist International Indicates Accuracy of Book

Formation of a new Communist International with headquarters in the Yugoslav capital is "another indication of the accuracy" of controversial "Tito's Imperial Communism," C. B. Robson, chairman of the University Press's manuscript committee, asserted yesterday.

Answering the charges of "inaccuracy and prejudice" voiced last week by Yugoslav Ambassador Sava Kasanovic, Robson defended R. H. Markham's book as a "well-considered 'work by an absolute' authority on the Balkans."

During an informal visit to the office of the University press one week ago, Kasanovic described Markham as "a man recognized as an authority who is definitely not an authority," and charged that the Christian Science Monitor correspondent had not been on Yugoslav territory since 1936.

An Answer

In answer Robson, who is chairman of the UNC political science department as well as a member of the press board of governors, declared that Markham was one few Balkan newsmen who actually spoke the slavic languages and had lived in the region many years.

"During the war," said Robson, "Markham served the U. S. as an intelligence agent in the Balkans. After the war he returned as a correspondent, omitting Yugoslavia on his travels only because he was refused admission by the Tito regime."

He told how Markham had submitted the manuscript in the middle of 1945, but that publication was delayed at the author's request until he could make a return visit to the Balkan region for further study.

Careful Study

"We published this work because after careful study and some revision which we suggested we found it not only an accurate analysis of the Tito government but also a book filling a conspicuous gap in information available in the U. S." Robson said.

Earlier yesterday Miss Porter Cole, acting director of the University press, declared that the press had not hesitated before to publish "controversial" works when the works merited publication.

"We consider Markham one of our own authors," said Miss Cole. "We published his 'Wave of the Past,' an answer to Anne Morrow Lindberg's 'Wave of the Future,' in 1941. It sold well over 100,000 copies, the largest sale of any of our publications before or since."

Allows Readers' Conclusions

Miss Cole pointed out how Markham as an author sees "only right or wrong, nothing halfway," but that the cited fact and allowed readers to "draw their own conclusions."

She added that the Yugoslav ambassador had failed in his criticism of the publication to "refute any specific information contained in the book."

"The outlook for sales of this publication," the acting director reported, "is quite optimistic," despite the unfavorable reaction from behind the Iron Curtain.

MASON HEAD TO SPEAK

Luther T. Hartsell, Jr., of Concord, Grand Master of Masons in North Carolina, will visit University Lodge tomorrow evening at 8:00 o'clock.

Hartsell, a graduate of the University, is a distinguished attorney and an able speaker on Masonic subjects. All Master Masons in the vicinity are urged to attend. Refreshments will be served.

Arabs Move Troops To Palestine Line

Lake Success, Oct. 11—(UP)—Reported Arab troop movements on Palestine borders and a message of agreement from the Jewish Agency are the contrasting reactions to the American announcement today that the U.S. would support the United Nations plan for partition of the Holy Land.

A dispatch from Beirut tonight indicated that Syrian army units estimated to total 6,000 soldiers are maneuvering on the Syrian-Transjordan border some 50 miles from the Palestine frontier. Other reports predicted that Iraq will send at least 10,000 troops through Syria to Palestine during the coming week.

The Syrian delegate to the United Nations, one of the founders of the powerful Arab league, warned at Lake Success that the U.S. announcement is "a challenge to the Arabs."

Twenty British constables were assigned this morning to guard the American consulate in Jerusalem, and diplomatic personnel there have been issued guns as a precautionary measure. But there has been no report of violence within the borders of little Palestine.

University to Go On Air on Sunday With Radio Show

The University takes to the airwaves next Sunday when the first radio program from the newly-constructed Swain hall studios is broadcast to people all over North Carolina.

Featuring campus music and comedy, "The University Hour," Sunday's premier production, will beam thirty minutes of variety entertainment at 1:30 to 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Station WPTF in Raleigh and a hookup of other key stations with blanket state coverage will carry the program.

Set Debut

"Next week will also see the debut of four other separate series of weekly shows," stated Earl Wynn, Director of the University's Communication Center. The staff of the Center will write, produce and broadcast all programs with the assistance of talented students and faculty.

Leaping into the radio spotlight on "The University Hour" will be the 300-voice combined men's and women's glee clubs, a popular collegiate orchestra, campus news tid-bits, the State College band and a comedy playlet.

The program will originate from all three campuses of the Consolidated University at State college in Raleigh, Women's college in Greensboro and the University in Chapel Hill.

Variety Show

Miss Jane Grills, radio program director of the Communication Center, will produce the variety show with the aid of Associate Producers Mr. Milton R. Gibson and Mrs. Bess N. Rosa at the other two colleges.

The radio shows will emanate from three modern studios in Swain Hall.

The main studio, constructed with polycylindrical wall surfaces, is large enough for audience participation shows, concert orchestras and other complex productions.

"Educational institutions should keep up with the times," explained Earl Wynn. "Radio belongs to the twentieth century. We at Carolina intend to use it, and use it effectively, to extend the University to all the people in the state."

In conjunction with the Center's broadcasting work, staff members teach courses in the Department of Radio. At the present time, courses include an introductory survey, beginning and advanced radio writing, program planning, microphone technique and others.

ONE OF THE chief reasons that the Demon Deacons of Wake Forest came away with a victory yesterday was because they were able to stop the deceptive reverses of shifty Jim Camp, above. The Tar Heel wingback is in his fourth year with the Tar Heels.

Laboratory Theater Announces Decision To Stage Four Full-Length Productions

By Mark Sumner

The Laboratory theater of the Carolina Playmakers will stage four full-length productions during the coming season, it was announced last night by A. E. "Buddy" Westover, III, of Merchantsville, N. J., chairman of the steering committee. The performances, as last year, will be staged in Graham Memorial's main lounge.

The first play of the new season will be "The Importance of Being Earnest" by Oscar Wilde directed by Mr. Westover. It will be staged on November 23 and 24. The second production will be Anna Cora Mowatt's "Fashion," directed by W. P. Covington, III, of Winston-Salem, and slated for February 7 and 8. James Byrd of Charlotte, will direct "Squaring the Circle," a modern Russion comedy by Valentine Kaytayev, to be presented on April 10 and 11, and the final play will be an original full length by a student author. It will be directed by Eleanor Ringer of Asheville, and presented on May 15 and 16.

Tryouts for the first play will be held in the Playmaker theater on October 22, at 4:00 P. M., and an open meeting of the organization will be held in the Playmaker theater for all who are interested in working with the laboratory group in any field of interest on October 19, at 8:00 p.m.

The Laboratory theater is a student managed organization sponsored jointly by the Carolina Playmakers on the technical side and Graham Memorial on the business side. Due to the sponsorship by Graham Memorial, no charges are made for admissions.

Last year the group presented a highly successful program including: "Pierre Pathelin," "Aria de Cappo," "The Imaginary Invalid," and "The Rivals."

The steering committee for the 1947-48 season includes Mr. Westover, Mrs. Susanne M. Davis of Chapel Hill, Eleanor Ringer, James Byrd, and James Riley of West Palm Beach, Fla. The faculty adviser for the Laboratory theater is Foster Fitz-Simons of the Playmaker staff, and Graham Memorial's William Shuford is business adviser.

Student Directory Seeks Name Check

All students with last names beginning with A through H are asked by Peggy Jurgensen, secretary of the Y, to check their names and addresses on the galley proofs of the 1947-48 student directory, tomorrow or Tuesday.

These proofs will be located in the main office of Graham Memorial, the Information desk on the first floor of South building, and at the Information desk in the Y. Mrs. Jurgensen especially urged those students who have changed their residences since the start of the quarter to check these proofs.

Fetzer's Aerials Spark Wake Forest In Triumph

By Bob Goldwater

All ideas that North Carolina would rebound from last week's crushing setback to bowl over its remaining opponents and regain its place in the national grid spotlight were sadly shattered in Kenan stadium yesterday before 35,000 witnesses when a keyed-up Wake Forest eleven completely outclassed the Tar Heels to register a 19-7 triumph.

Although the Deacons had much the better of the argument in all statistics departments, it was the sensational passing of tailback Tom Fetzer that provided the main difference between the two teams. The 20-year-old successor to Nick Sacrinty dominated the show by completing 12 passes in 16 attempts for a yardage total of 198.

Nevertheless, he wasn't the only Deacon star. His understudy, Jim Lail, only completed one aerial but it went for a touchdown, Wake Forest's first. Fullback George Pryor led the attack along the ground with powerful line smashes. And the entire Deacon forward wall—from end to end—came in for its share of glory by checking the Carolina ground offensive for the third successive week—this time to a net of 31 yards.

Actually, the Deacons never gave Carolina a chance to get into the ball game. They maintained control of the pigskin throughout most of the 60 minutes of action and that's usually a good indication of which team emerges the victor. It was this time, anyway.

Booming Punts

Lone bright spot for Carolina in an otherwise drab afternoon was the booming punting of Charlie Justice, who averaged 51.5 yards on nine kicks. The Tar Heel offensive, both through the air and on the ground, was stifled by the hard-charging Deacons, and Carolina had possession of the ball in enemy territory only twice during the contest.

It took Wake Forest exactly seven and one-half minutes after Walt Pupa's kickoff to cross the goal line for the first of its three touchdowns. And the Tar Heels had the ball for only two downs during the interval, one of these being a quick-kick by Justice that travelled 58 yards.

The Deacons wasted no time in getting back those 58 yards and more in addition. Fetzer picked up 21 around left end and Pryor bucked for two, then took a Fetzer pass for four more. The Wake tailback advanced another four yards on a fake punt for a first down on the Carolina 48, then retired for a spell in favor of Lail.

Dowda Scores

Pryor took up where Fetzer left off and pitched a long aerial to end John O'Quinn, who was downed on the Tar Heel 24. After a four-yard buck by the big fullback, Lail faded back and uncorked a long pass into the end zone that Harry Dowda gathered in with a beautiful catch. Nich Ognovich's conversion attempt was wide but the Deacons had taken a 6-0 lead from which the locals never recovered.

Sixteen minutes later, a Deacon was again crossing the goal line and the Tar Heels were still attempting to take the ball across the midfield stripe. Wake Forest threatened shortly after the second quarter got under way but Carolina secondary stopped the Deacon aerial show

Director of New Department of Religion To Open Series of Talks Tomorrow Night

Dr. Arnold Nash, who has just come to the University from the McCormick Theological seminary in Chicago to head the new Department of Religion, will begin a series of seven weekly informal lectures in Gerrard Hall here tomorrow night at 7 o'clock, it was announced by Chancellor R. B. House.

Dr. Nash, who will in addition to heading the department serve as professor of religious history, will speak on "The Christian Task in the University." His lecture will be followed by a discussion period, and all students, faculty members and townspeople are invited to attend.

Last spring Prof. Frank Hanft of the University Law School inaugurated the weekly talks on religious subjects, and it was partly because of the interest shown in the series that the University trustees founded the new Department of Religion.

Dr. Nash, whose field is the history and philosophy of religion, is a native of England. He received his B.S. and several graduate degrees from the University of Liverpool and the University of London and was awarded an honorary Doctor of Divinity degree by Coe College last year.

He came to the United States in 1939 to teach at the Berkeley Divinity school, New Haven, Conn., and subsequently lectured at Yale Divinity school, the Pacific School of Religion, the Church Divinity school of the Pacific, Berkeley, California; Union Theological Seminary, New York, and the University of Toronto.

DR. ARNOLD NASH

Dr. Nash is author of the widely discussed book, "The University and the Modern World," published in 1943 and now being translated into German and Portuguese.

College Dean, English Instructor Turned Mystery Writer, Hugh Holman, To Be Bull's Head Guest Speaker on Wednesday

By Donald MacDonald

A college dean who has turned mystery writer is the record of Hugh Holman, local author and instructor in English, who will be guest speaker at a Bull's Head tea on Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Subject of the informal talk will be "Myths About the Detective Story," Mrs. N. B. Adams, hostess at the teas, announced today. The speaker will be introduced by Mrs. Charles Valentine, Jr., manager of the bookshop.

Before his writing career began Holman served as instructor in radio at Presbyterian college, Clinton, S. C. He is the author of over 200 historical plays for radio and has done graduate work at New York university. Some of his adaptations have been aired by the Columbia Broadcasting system in its "Columbia Workshop" series. During the war he became a physics instructor with the Army Air forces, remaining afterwards at his Alma Mater to accept the position as academic dean.

In 1946 Holman left Presbyterian and came to the University to begin graduate work in English. Last year he served as instructor in freshman English, and during the summer session he became an assistant professor teaching creative writing.

The young author's first novel, "Death Like Thunder," was published by the M. S. Mill company of New York in 1942. He has since written four others in the field of detective fiction. In each of these he has created "Sheriff Macready," a Southern county sheriff who is equally at home with a book of Chaucer or the insides of a .25 automatic.

Such a description could as well fit the versatile Author Holman, one person who has proved that crime does pay. The titles for his books have come from Chaucer, Thoreau and the Bible; his characters sometimes solve crimes by relating them to logical standards first used in "Principia Mathematica"; and his personal library at his home in Victory Village contains almost every first-rate detective story ever written.

DEAN HUGH HOLMAN

All of Holman's books have been dedicated to "V. V.," his attractive wife, Verna. Recently he has sold reprinting rights to Grosset and Dunlap of New York and to Penguin books. He has also sold French rights to his works which causes him to wonder just how his southern slang will appear in French.

Author Holman is the first of Chapel Hill's colony of writers who will be invited to speak at the Bull's Head teas during this term. Others expected to speak at later dates include Playwright Paul Green, Novelists Betty Smith, Daphne Athas, Josephine Niggli, Noel Houston and James Street.

"Because the seating capacity of our staff room is very limited," explains Mrs. Adams, "we have in times past had to turn people away. Yet we emphasize that the teas are informal gatherings. Were we to hold the teas in a larger auditorium, we feel that we would lose the informal character of the meetings. Townspeople, and especially all students, are invited to attend."

Remodeling Our Outmoded War Machine

During the war years students were denied an important privilege: Active participation in the policy-setting of the Student Welfare Board. The faculty members of the group consists of the academic deans, the chairman of housing, the director of student records, and the University physician. In former years there were also 10 student members on the Board to suggest changes in policy and to pass judgment on the plans for the future.

Within the next few weeks student leaders will again become a component of the Board. These 10 members will consist of the chairmen of the Honor council, Men's council, Women's council, the president and vice-president of the student body, the Interdormitory council presidents, the editor of the Daily Tar Heel and others.

The student and faculty members of the group will meet at least once each month to discuss pertinent questions that may arise from time to time. Dean of Students Fred Weaver will serve as chairman in accordance with the previous custom. A revamping of the Student Welfare board was contemplated last spring to the extent that the time of the first meeting was scheduled for 8 o'clock one morning, the only time that was convenient for all members to attend, but it was decided that it was too near the end of the term for the group to accomplish anything.

Student representation on the Welfare board will alleviate much of the friction that has existed between South building and the student body in the past. Such vital problems on policy as registration will be discussed by the group. If the board had contained student membership last year it is quite plausible that the ineffective registration system employed last year could have been avoided. Perhaps the misunderstanding concerning the football seating arrangement would not have occurred. Questions such as these will be discussed thoroughly and analized by the Board. Student opinion will be expressed before policies coagulate.

The Christian Task

At the request of a group of students, a series of lectures on religion was inaugurated last spring by Dr. Frank Hanft of the University School of Law. They were a big success. Not a success if we use the attendance of the entire student body as a criteria, but they each drew a crowd of over two hundred students—students who were not affiliated with other religious groups on campus such as the Baptist Student Union or the Wesley Foundation, but students who were interested in an informal presentation of the Christian faith.

Monday night the series will continue under the leadership of Dr. Arnold Nash, who recently became the first dean of the Department of Religion. Dr. Nash spoke to the Phi assembly last Wednesday night. Although he received only a 10 minute notice to organize his thoughts, he delivered what was described by members of the audience as "one of the best addresses ever delivered at the University."

Dr. Nash is an Englishman, graduated from the University of Liverpool with a degree in science. Later he studied theology at Oxford, and since that time he has made an extensive study into the meaning of Christianity for the liberal democratic university. His lecture and discussion series is modeled along these lines and will be entitled "The Christian Task in the University."

There is much for the student to gain by attending this series of lectures both from Dr. Nash's lectures and the informal discussions that usually follow.

Food Directly from the People

The University dining halls together with the Chapel Hill restaurants are trying to comply with the president's request by abstaining from serving meat on Tuesday and eggs and poultry on Thursdays, but if the letter published from Danzigers in this publication Friday is a typical example they are having their difficulties. There are a few students among us who are so "small" as to make a scene when they cannot have their eggs for breakfast every single morning.

The President has not asked us to diminish our rations to the absolute minimum requirements of the human body. If he had, it would be quite different, but he has asked us only to abstain from eating meat and eggs only one day each a week. This will not work a hardship on any of us.

In his column last week Drew Pearson suggested the advantages of forming a "Friendship Train" to collect food directly from the individuals and families who have conserved food for the desperate peoples of abroad. He suggests that the train begin on the West coast, travel eastward, and stop at every town along the way. Individual citizens would be given the privilege of loading aboard the food that they had conserved—a slab of bacon or sack of flour. This would promote a closer friendship between the U.S. and the hungry peoples of the world. At the same time it would prove to the peoples who receive the food that it was not just a governmenal gesture to solicit their approval of our diplomatic policies.

If the "Friendship Train" stops here at Chapel Hill will we have food that we have conserved to place aboard?

If the price of meat goes any higher, a lot of folks are going to become vegetarians whether they like it or not.

The war already has been over long enough so that quite a number of veterans have gotten over the habit of saying "Sir."

Science is wonderful all right, but it hasn't solved the problem of keeping Susie's hair in curl when the weather is damp.

Which Skirts Reign Supreme?

By Yo-Yo Dickinson

"A skirt for every lady's hips, a skirt for everybody's quips," might well be the theme if Mother Goose could add her bit to the coast-to-coast wrangle over long skirts.

Yessir, it's the skirt age. Conventional topics like weather and atoms have been ousted and now rate as back-seaters to the oft mentioned curve-revealers. Everybody talks about 'em, women and girls, men and boys, even pawn-brokers. Even a brave minister looked a churchful of blushing feminine faces in the eye and denounced long skirts as sinful and immoral.

For practical purposes we'll exclude the latter descriptives and substitute a democratic term, say "debateable." Briefly, some like 'em long and some like 'em short, just like cigarettes. Since only opinions are involved, no one is wrong, everybody's right, so why the fight?

Let's just throw our prospective solution into the hat along with the other thousand or two. Why not vote it out? We'll beseech Congress to declare "that on a certain forth-coming date the skirt-minded citizens of all states shall observe National Skirt Day." What a spectacle of fireworks will be derived from a setting like this!

Pre-election campaigns will find the "Just Below Knee" group applying pressure with vote-fetching slogans like "If a leg's worth growing, it's worth showing" or "Ample coverage with unlimited vision." The Long Skirters will retaliate with "Extended length solicits imagination" or "Since we're in style, it's really worthwhile." Currently thriving thread makers will tear their hair while sweating out the finals.

Election day will be an unforgetable. Millions, mostly female, will throng the voting arenas. A few men will show, some with guns at their backs, some wearing wedding bands, others at the end of a leash, but they'll be there.

What skirt will reign supreme—how long will be the seam? We fortunate neutrals will witness the most fiendish and festive battle since Bull Run before that answer reaches print. When it's all over we'll say, "What's in a skirt, anyway?" Only a woman.

U.S.-Soviet Clash

Fifty-Year-Old Forecast

New York (UP)—If anyone had predicted some 50 years ago that the United States would supplant Great Britain as the dominant world power, he wouldn't have been listened to. If he also said the United States would attain economic world supremacy and engage in a life and death struggle with Russia to decide the future of humanity, people would have dismissed such a prediction as fantastic.

Such a prediction, nevertheless, was made back in 1900 by Brooks Adams, grandson of John Quincy Adams, sixth President of the United States, in his book, "America's Economic Supremacy." Only because he was the grandson of the president did the critics call him a "fairyland philosopher" instead of challenging his sanity.

Today, 47 years later, Harper & Brothers are republishing the book. Part of Adams' phophecies have come true. Others are still in the offing.

The basic idea of Adams was that the centers of civilization and economy that have been moving slowly through the centuries from the Near East to Constantinople, Venice, Amsterdam, Paris and London are now tending to separate, "the one drawing toward the confines of Russia, the other gravitating toward America."

America, on one hand, would become within one or two generations the center of the Western civilization based on individualism. Russia would be the focal point of the Eastern civilization (comprising Germany), tending toward collective systems. England is decaying, Adams predicted, but its existence will remain essential to the U. S. A.

He went on to say: "Great Britain may . . . be not inaptly described as a fortified outspot to the Anglo-Saxon race. . ." An Anglo-Saxon coalition would alter profoundly the equilibruim of the world. It will be able to attain many common ends. But it is bound, ultimately, to clash with Russia. The clash will occur in China. Because Russia—probably together with Germany—will attempt to dominate northern China to the exclusion of the United States.

This would make it impossible for us to get rid of our surplus in the Eastern markets. We would then run into a grave crisis and be faced with having "to reduce our scale of life to the German or perhaps the Russian standard, to accept the collective methods of administration with all that they imply" or "we must be prepared to fight our adversary and we must arm in earnest."

Fall German Tickets Now Being Printed

Tickets for the Fall Germans scheduled for the end of this month are now being printed, announced Bob Ettenger, president of the German club. They will be given to the fraternity delegates to the executive committee at the club meeting Tuesday night who in turn will distribute them to the individual members of the fraternities.

Each fraternity member whose organization belongs to the club is required to purchase one of the 1300 tickets. However, if he cannot use his ticket, a member of the student body will be able to buy it from the fraternity delegate at the standard price of five dollars a set.

Reid Lauds CCUN Arrangements

Dear Mr. Kan:

I would like through you to thank the members of the Collegiate Council for the excellent arrangements that were made for the visit of Mrs. Reid and myself to your conference last week. We greatly appreciated the opportunity of sharing the college life for a few days and discussing with the students and faculty the vital questions that your Council is concerned with. Quite apart from this official aspect of our visit both Mrs. Reid and I thoroughly enjoyed the break from Washington and the refreshment of the atmosphere at Chapel Hill. We hope that the conference has proved a complete success and that it will enable you to make substantial progress.

I was somewhat distressed to find at the desk on our departure that our hotel bill had been paid. You will appreciate that this visit was just as valuable to me and to my country as it could be to the Council and we were very glad to make this contribution. I know that you regarded us as your guests and hospitality was most generous in every way, but I would be grateful if you would accept the enclosed check as a contribution towards the funds of the Council and as an earnest of our interest in your work.

Please convey my sincerest regards to your student colleagues and members of the faculty who contributed to making our visit so enjoyable.

Better To Give

Dear Editor:

In answer to Roland Giduz's column on Thursday, I would like to say if he finds it troublesome to be approached for benefits he should try the job of approaching—then he could really appreciate it the other way around.

Everyone always seems to have plenty of change for beers, cokes and beers—but of course beers are a necessity while crutches for cripples aren't. I was truly shocked at one time when collecting for a polio drive—everyone was utterly indifferent. Of course no one had any money. However, there was one girl I will always remember. Her father's income tax is definitely in a higher bracket than mine. When I confronted her she explained that she couldn't donate a dime just then. She had just received some money from home, she explained, and wanted to go up town and spend it. However, if, when she returned she had any money left over she would contribute a dime. You don't realize how "small" you seem when you are anti-aid until you view it from the observer's angle and just see people's reaction. It is really unbelievable—almost inhuman. The most amusing part being that student's who have the most money to squander are the ones who have least for a worthy cause.

It is true, as Mr. Giduz indicated, that a lot of the money is never accounted for. It diminishes as it goes through channels. However, I feel sure if you stop to really investigate you will find that the ultimate good certainly outweighs the small losses—all you have to do is visit a few of the polio hospitals—acquaint yourself with some of the patients and see them a year later—the cure for one child is worth the effort and many more than one are cured.

In conclusion, I would like to say I think Mr. Giduz's idea about a community chest an excellent one as it would really help the drives—what I object to is his attitude expressed in the opening paragraph of his column.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

Washington. — When blunt-talking Herbert Evatt, Foreign Minister of Australia, arrived in Japan, en route to the U.S.A., he carried the Australian's natural skepticism regarding General MacArthur. Australian newspapers have been featuring headlines that MacArthur was too soft on the Japs, was building up a new Japanese war potential.

Leaving Japan, however, the brusk Dr. Evatt was positively beaming. He and MacArthur had become great friends. In New York, the Australian has continued to be one of "Doug's" best boosters. MacArthur, according to Evatt, is systematically destroying Japan's war potential. Even if the United States should evacuate Japan now, it would take 10 years for what remains of the Jap warlords to rebuild their munitions plants.

MacArthur has also done an A-1 job in sowing the seeds of Japanese democracy, according to Evatt. While he has no illusions that democracy can be established overnight, MacArthur is certain the job is at least under way. He has also encouraged Japanese labor unions, with 5,000,000 Japs now unionized.

MacArthur's chief tangles have been with the intemperate Russians. However, the best tribute to the American General is that, though the Russians dislike him, they also respect him.

Chief Australian gripe against MacArthur was the presence of Jap whaling vessels in Australian waters. MacArthur had okayed Jap whaling on the ground that the Japanese people needed whale oil to keep up their diet. However, when Evatt pointed out that Japanese whale oil actually had been going to Germany, MacArthur reconsidered his previous order.

Note—MacArthur has confided to friends that he has no political ambitions. He doesn't like Tom Dewey, however, and would probably lend himself to a stop-Dewey campaign, even on behalf of Eisenhower or Stassen.

President Truman always enjoys getting away from the stately white mansion which he jokingly calls his "prison" and dropping in on some function unannounced. And though it didn't get in the papers, he was a casual guest at a recent dinner given by Secretary of Commerce Averell Harriman's Business Advisory Council.

Some of the top food and business leaders of the country were at the meeting, including Charles P. McCormick of Baltimore, the tea tycoon; Harry W. Zinsmaster, Duluth, Minn., baking mogul; and Chester Davis, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, former head of the AAA. Judging by the questions he asked, Truman came to the meeting more to obtain knowledge than to give it.

"Isn't it a fact," Truman asked at one point, "that we waste almost enough food to meet Europe's needs?"

Most of the business chiefs nodded.

"It's really a shame the amount of bread that is wasted in this country," spoke up baker Zinsmaster. "That alone would be almost enough to feed Europe."

"Well, if we can get the country to save food, we will take that much pressure off demand, which, in turn, means lower prices, and we will have enough food left over to feed Europe," said the President.

One thing is certain, he added—we cannot expect to maintain the high standards of living to which Americans are accustomed if Europe collapses for want of our aid. There were no dissents from the business chiefs on this score.

It's no secret that Secretary of National Defense Forrestal hurried his ceremony of taking the oath as combined head of the Army and Navy at the special instruction of President Truman. But it still is a secret as to why Forrestal had delayed taking the oath in the first place.

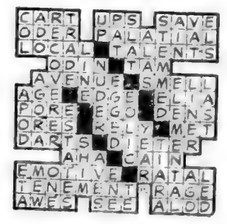
The reason was: Mrs. Forrestal, plus the fact that she was painting his ornate new office a beautiful Mediterranean blue.

Forrestal has the reputation of being the only Secretary of the Navy since Josephus Daniels tough enough to handle the admirals. It's another matter, however, with Mrs. Forrestal.

Attractive Jo Forrestal, who used to work on Vanity Fair, has been remodeling the quarter-mile suite which Jim took over in the giant Pentagon Building. In one office she didn't like the wall, so she ordered it torn down and moved over a few feet.

Jim's inner sanctum, she painted blue, and the outer office she painted a pale green, with the special new dining-room canary yellow.

There was one room, however, she did not tamper with. Her husband's private kitchen—he calls it his "galley"—is fitted in shipboard style with galley stove, deep freeze, and nautical accessories. His personal suite also includes bathroom, a quiet lounge in which to nap, and a pantry with a cook and handyman on full duty.



Irreverent Army brass, unused to having the Navy rubbing shoulders with them in the Pentagon Building, have dubbed the new offices "The Cabin."

WIVES INVITED

All student wives are invited to the organizational meeting of the Carolina Dames club Tuesday night at 8 o'clock in the Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial. Chancellor R. B. House will welcome the group, and a social hour will follow.

The Sporting Picture

Defeat

Herein begins our tale of woe:

There occurred in Kenan stadium a catastrophe of a somewhat major nature as the fast-falling Tar Heels of the University of North Carolina dropped an almost uncontested 19-7 decision to a team composed of eager young gentlemen from neighboring Wake Forest College. It wasn't a pretty sight.

The defeat, for the record, is the Tar Heels' second in a like number of weeks which all goes to show what bad habits a group of fellows can get into. Not only was the whole affair hard on the players and coaches, but also on those in the stands, who screamed their heads off the entire afternoon, but got little return on their efforts. The Tar Heel rooters took their loss as well as could be expected, as did their team, perhaps because they were forced to the realization of defeat early in the afternoon, or perhaps because of callousness left from last week's orgy. For all who had the best interests of Carolina at heart, it was a five-fold defeat, emotionally, physically, spiritually, mentally, and financially.

The whole thing started out badly with Wake Forest marching up the field the first time they had the ball. The Tar Heels stifled this movement, but got into their first hole of the day a few minutes later when Fetzer, who was to be heard from all afternoon, booted a quick kick that turned out to be a bigger surprise than Texas.

The Tar Heels immediately kicked out from where the shadows of the goal posts would have been, had the sun been shining, but the Deacons drove back, gaining heavily on the exchange, and scoring midway in the first quarter when Dowda made a nose-skinning catch of Lail's end-zone pass that was the greatest thing since Gionfrida sent the World Series into seven games.

Most of the Tar Heel rooters thought the home boys would begin to roll at this point especially when Justice showed moments of past brilliance on a punt return and a subsequent run on a fake pass play. About this time, though Fetzer roared back into the air again, throwing the ball with an accuracy that would have driven a carnival concession owner out of business. Twice the Deacons winged deep into Tar Heel territory, but each time the officials made up for the lackings of the Tar Heel defensive and saved a score, temporarily at least. But in the true spirit, the Baptist boys were not to be denied, and scored again shortly later, when Fetzer passed into the end zone, almost into the waiting hands of Justice, until at the last moment a stranger by the name of Duncan, pilfered the ball from the Asheville flyer and ran the Deacon tally to 12, while the Wake Forest fans were doing everything short of tearing the concrete out of the stadium.

Again the Tar Heels failed to retaliate, but the Deacons had other ideas and drove back to their now familiar stamping grounds down near the Carolina goal line. This time they ran the ball across, to prove their versatility if nothing else, and the overcast got to look that much darker, at least from the Tar Heel side of the field. A few minutes later, before the Wake boys had had another chance to do anything drastic, the first act of one of the world's greatest tragedies came to an end.

Act Two

At the start of the second half, the Tar Heels showed some rejuvenation, at least defensively, and put a stop to any more of the Deacons' big scoring ideas. But the Carolina offense could not match this change, and though Jack Fitch turned in several fine short runs, no score resulted—a touchdown being what the Tar Heels needed most at this point in the contest. The Carolinians have developed a bad habit of late of getting three touchdowns behind in the first half and having to operate at a deficit for the remainder of the game.

In this manner, the third quarter passed eventfully except that there was no scoring, and the Tar Heels were confronted with only fifteen more minutes to do anything about the existing conditions. Finally the Tar Heels did get themselves a touchdown, though, set up on a Pupa-to-Justice pass which had failed only the play before, and which all goes to prove what you can do with a little practice. The play took the ball to the Wake ten where several scrimmages later, Justice passed to Logue, who had the ball obligingly tipped into his hands by a kindly Deacon halfback, momentarily juggled the ball, but then remembering the score, gathered the pigskin in for six points. As a mere formality, Cox

Several minutes later, the Tar Heels got another scoring opportunity, when a Deacon runner fumbled deep in his own territory with the loose ball ending up under a white shirt warrior. But the Tar Heels didn't feel like scoring at the moment and finally ended up back on the Wake 40 where the Deacons took over. That was the ball game as far as the Carolina entry was concerned, past even the stages of a Frank Merrill recovery.

Rehash

There are those who would like to know exactly what is wrong with this year's edition of the Tar Heels and that group includes the majority of students, players, coaches, and followers of the team. Carolina during the course of the afternoon had the ball just long enough to know that there were seams on it, mainly because the Deacons were able to hang on to the thing once they got it. Offensively, Carolina showed little or nothing, with a similar result being obtained passing. About the only consolation of the afternoon, was Justice's beautiful punting, which proved that those on the field can kick just as well as some students and alumni seem to be doing.

The logical conclusion is that the Tar Heels were beaten and soundly, but the world has yet to stop spinning and will undoubtedly not do so before the first of the year. Being a diehard, this writer will stick it out for the remaining seven games, at least for curiosity's sake. As for the game, our excuse is like our ball team—we didn't have a good one yesterday. And the Deacons did.

UNC Dressing Room Is Scene of Remorse

By Bill Kellam

Gloom and disgust filled the Tar Heel dressing room yesterday afternoon as a group of subdued young men silently showered, dressed, and trudged out of the Kenan field house.

Coach Carl Snavely morosely leaned against the dressing room door as the players silently filed out and offered no excuses and little comment on the outcome of the game.

"Our pass defense ruined us," King Carl finally muttered when queried by this writer and he also sarcastically added, "It seemed the lower the men were on the squad, the better they played."

Something Missing

Another writer asked Snavely what had happened to the team and he replied, "There's something missing that they had last year and I don't know what it is."

Charlie Justice, whose tremendous punts helped to hold down the score, at first refused to comment on the game but then suddenly said with a wry smile, "We've got nothing left now but our press clippings."

Wingback Jim Camp was struck by inspiration as he passed out the door and shouted, "We got nothing hurt but our feelings." He had also remarked to a teammate shortly before as he stood at a mirror carefully arranging his receding hair line, "Let's got to Raleigh tonight and see a good game."

Several other players either refused to say anything at all or anything printable.

Even the wives of the players took the defeat pretty hard for several sniffing "better halves" were standing around the field house entrance waiting for their spouses to emerge.

Deacons Celebrate

The other half of the field house was in an uproar as the hefty Deacons celebrated their unexpected victory.

Helmets, muddy shoes, shoulder pads, damp sweat shirts, shouts of joy, and even coke bottles were flying through the steamy air of the Wake Forest dressing rooms when this writer cautiously opened the door and entered the quarters of the wildly celebrating Deacs.

In the midst of all this bedlam, rotund Peahead Walker, Wake Forest's beloved and cagey head coach, rather unconvincingly assumed an air of calmness and serenity.

Speedy Peahead

Peahead, known in Durham police circles as the football coaches' Barney Oldfield, had been the object immediately after the game of an unsuccessful attempt by his charges to hoist his bulk upon their brawny shoulders but even they weren't equal to their task.

However, in the dressing room, the players presented Peahead with the game football and a picture of him and of as many of the Wake Forest players who were able to squeeze into it was taken.

Then Peahead, frequently mopping his brow, surrendered himself into the hands of the assembled sports' writers and submitted to their excited questions.

"Our passing was great, and Tom Fetzer (whose passes either set up or accounted for all the Deacon scores) and all our freshmen played a great game," Walker said.

Mighty Happy

Youthful and good looking Fetzer was, "Mighty happy. We were laying for Carolina and we're mighty glad to win this one."

Big Harry Dowda, who tallied the Deacs' first touchdown, was also reticent, but did add, "We were up for today's game and it feels mighty good to win it." Burly Ed Royston, a standout at guard in the Deacon forward wall, "We're happy to win a great victory from a great team. It makes me feel good especially because it's the first time in my three years on the team that we've beaten Carolina." Coach Walker's excellent scouting also helped for we knew what to expect all the time.

Many of the Wake Forest players were also filling the air with cries of, "On to the Sugar Bowl." Thus, today's victory for the Deacons may have opened the way for an invitation to the New Orleans classic.

Tar Babies Win Opener by 13-0

North Carolina's Jayvees successfully opened their grid schedule by posting a well-earned 13-0 victory over the South Carolina Jayvees in Columbia Friday night.

The game was hard-fought all the way, with both clubs displaying good defensive measures. The Tar Babies held their opponents to a total of only two first downs, and both of those came on passes late in the game.

Tailback Dick Bunting set up the first Carolina score by returning a punt 45 yards to the South Carolina 4-yard line. Bob Koontz carried the ball over in two plays, and Bill Slate added the extra point from placement.

North Carolina's final tally came in the fourth quarter, with Marion Parker climaxing a lengthy drive by plunging over from short range. The running of Gus Purcell, Bunting, Parker, and Koontz featured the march. Slate's conversion attempt was blocked.

Leaders in the great line play of the North Carolinians were center Huck Holdash, guards Dick Featheroff and Jim Quigley, and tackle Roscoe Hansen. Others who came in for a share of the coaches' praise were Ed Bilpuch, Merle Norcross, Kenan Rand, Jim Hayworth, Burnie Shields, and Jim Caudill.

The Tar Babies had a total of 12 first downs and was in command of the situation throughout the game.

Duke and Navy Battle to Draw

Baltimore, Oct. 11—(UP)—Navy and Duke, traditional football rivals, battled to a 14-14, tie this afternoon. The tie snapped a 10-game losing streak for the Middies.

The final quarter of the game was a real thriller. Duke failed to capitalize on two excellent scoring opportunities before breaking through for a score on a long pass from Fred Folger to Ew Austin. The successful extra point conversion by Paul Stephanz gave Duke a 14-7 margin with only a few minutes remaining in the game.

Some clever passing by Bob Horne and hard running by Bill Hawkins enabled the Middies to tie the score in the closing seconds. Hawkins was the boy that went over on a short buck through a tiring Duke line.

Scoreless First Half

The first half was scoreless, but Duke broke the ice with a 73-yard march in the third stanza to take a 7-0 lead. Folger's passing and Mulligan's receiving featured the atttack.

Coach Tom Hamilton's Navy Crew came right back, counting with a 74-yard scoring march of their own. Once more it was the passing of Horne that featured the drive. Hawkins accounted for the touchdown with a short smash to make the score 7-7.

Both teams started the game with a bang. Navy swept 63 yards to the Duke 7 in four plays but was stopped short of the goal. Wallace Wade's Dukesters came back with a drive to the Navy 7-yard line before the first half gun stopped play.

short of the goal line and the Tar Heels took over on their own five.

Deacons March

Justice immediately punted out and the Deacons were on the march! On third down, Fetzer completed a pass to Jim Duncan, in the clear on the 12-yard line, and the Wake left end stepped the remaining distance to paydirt. A clipping penalty nullified the score, however, and instead of a touchdown, the Deacs had a first down on the Carolina 23.

They made another first down

Five plays later found Wake Forest tallying its third and final touchdown. A Pupa aerial on third down strayed into the hands of Deacon center Boyd Allen, who ambled from the Carolina 45 all the way to the 19. Fetzer immediately let loose with another of his spirals and Duncan outjumped two Tar Heel defenders in the end zone to end the Wake scoring for the afternoon.

But that didn't start the Tar Heel offensive. Most of the third stanza was spent in a punting duel between Justice and Fetzer and neither team came close to a score. But with the start of the fourth period, Carolina finally began to click for its lone threat of the day.

Starting on their own 45, the Tar Heels made their way to the Deacon 10 when Pupa pitched 35 yards to Justice, who caught the ball on the 20 and reached the 10 before Duncan brought him to earth. Two

The intramural open house to be staged tomorrow and every Monday night thereafter from 7 to 9 o'clock will feature play in five different sports, according to Mural Director Walter Rabb.

Activities listed on the program are table tennis, badminton, handball, volleyball, and tumbling. Instructors will be present to give pointers on rules and the finer skills of the game to any persons requesting them in any field.

"The open house program gives an excellent opportunity for all individuals and organizations to practice, learn, and play a variety of games," Coach Rabb declared while pointing out the many advantages of attending the programs. Everyone on the campus is invited to participate and there is only one restriction — all participants must wear gym shoes.

Later on in the year, tournaments in table tennis and badminton will be conducted. If enough people show interest in the tumbling program, a tumbling club will be organized.

The basket rooms will be open each Monday night during the open house hours and all equipment will be furnished by the gym. Eight badminton courts will be available, as well as several table tennis, handball, and volleyball courts.

Coach Rabb reminded all members of intramural tag football teams to review the football rules so as not to cause any unnecessary conflicts. All rules will be found in the Athletic department handbook presented to students during registration.

The mural novice doubles matches scheduled for last Tuesday will be played off tomorrow, weather permitting.

Monogram Meeting

The Monogram club will hold a meeting tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock in 304 Woollen.

President Len Szafaryn urges all members to attend.

Essay Anthology Said to Include Lasley Address

An address delivered by Dr. John W. Lasley, Jr., mathematician and head of the Division of Natural Sciences in the University, is to be included in an anthology volume of essays on the nature and cultural value of mathematics to be printed by Harper and Brothers soon, it was announced here today by Dr. Archibald Henderson, head of the mathematics department.

The address is entitled "Mathematics and The Sciences." It appeared originally in the Journal of the Elisha Mitchel Scientific society and was reprinted in the 1941 Report of the Smithsonian Institute.

Intended primarily for the interested layman, the volume of anthology to be brought out by Harper's will include essays from the pen of such distinguished scholars as George Sarton, G. H. Hardy, E. T. Bell,

DR. JOHN W. LASLEY, JR.

J. B. Shaw, T. Dantzig, J. W. N. Sullivan, and others.

Dr. Lasley has been a member of the University faculty 37 years. He took his A.B. and M.A. degrees here and did graduate work at Johns Hopkins and at Chicago where he took his doctorate and was a fellow in the mathematics department. After that he came to Chapel Hill to teach.

Three years ago he served as chairman of the Southeastern Mathematics association. He also served at one time as president of the Elisha Mitchell Scientific society and as chairman of comprehensive examinations at the University.

He is author of three mathematics textbooks and has contributed articles to a number of scientific journals.

Dr. Lasley is a native of Burlington and was once a part time editor of the Burlington Times-News.

Charles Stevens Keeps Alive Carolina Musical Traditions

By Donald MacDonald

Each evening at 7 o'clock Charles E. Stevens, who holds the ambitious title of "master ringer," keeps alive a Carolina musical tradition. At the same time the 21-year-old music student enjoys an audience that few concert artists, barring the radio medium, could ever hope to attain in one evening's performance.

You see, the master ringer is responsible for the traditional ringing of the chimes in 172 1-2-foot Morehead-Patterson bell tower.

"There is no set time for each evening's performance," Stevens explains, "but I usually begin at dusk, around 7 o'clock and play for a quarter of an hour."

The chimes are heard all over Chapel Hill and in the surrounding rural localities.

Learned Technique

When Stevens, a native of Mt. Gilead, first came to Carolina in 1943, he learned the intricate lever technique—so necessary to master the odd "keyboard" of wooden arms—from Zan Harper, of New Bern, then the master ringer. During that year Rufus Norris, of Mooresville, succeeded to the head post. Stevens worked then as an assistant, playing the chimes five times each month for the remainder of that year.

In the fall of 1944 Stevens became master ringer for two years. He did not attend the University the following year; but Monte Howell, Jr., of Chapel Hill, and Kenneth Ross, senior from Greensboro, filled the vacated position.

Returned

This year Stevens returned to the keyboard with Ross, a prelaw student, acting as his assistant. There are also three faculty ringers: Dr. Urban T. Holmes, Dr. Glen Haydon, and Dr. R. H. Wettach.

The tower, formally presented to the University in 1931 as a $100,000 gift of Alumni John Motley Morehead, III, and the late Rufus L. Patterson, II, is visible for several miles outside Chapel Hill. The smallest of its 12 bells is 21 inches high, has a 24 1-2-inch diameter, and weighs 300 pounds. Dimensions of the largest bell are 45 inches in heighth, 56 inches in diameter, and 3,500 pounds in weight. Scale range of the bells consists of "an octave and a third."

Automatically

Chimes sound automatically at each hour from 7 in the morning until 8 o'clock at night, at each quarter hour between 7 and 8 o'clock each morning, and between 4 and 6 o'clock each afternoon. The quarter hours are announced by three successive groups of four-chime melodies. Bell-man Stevens is quite happy that this feature of the tower is not dependent upon the master ringer.

The tower's self-regulated clock has four faces equipped with luminous dials, visible at night for long distances.

Stevens begins each concert with hymns or chorales. "Since the scale is not chromatic, having only two accidentals—F sharp and B flat," he explains, "the chimes' repertoire is very limited. The Largo theme from Dvorak's New World Symphony is my most-requested number, although I receive requests for a great many more secular pieces."

Songs Played

School songs, as often as possible, are played for the visiting team after each home football game. "It's a part of tradition to play 'Hark the Sound' at the end of each concert. And when Mr. Morehead visits the campus he usually requests me to play his mother's favorite hymn, 'How Tedious and Tasteless the Hours'."

Mrs. Rufus L. Patterson, II, widow of the late co-donor, lives in Chapel Hill and visits the tower frequently.

Tht master ringer does his own transposing of the tunes for the chimes. "In order to increase the bell library," he says, "if any student has a request he wishes played, please contact me at 13 Steele, either in person or by mail."

During each concert the five floors of the structure are opened to sightseers who want a bird's-eye view of Chapel Hill. Visitors are also welcomed to inspect the huge keyboard, located on the second floor, and to make their requests at that time.

Stray Greek Coeds Meet Tomorrow

An important meeting for all old members of the Women's Stray Greek organization will be held Monday night in the small parlor of Alderman Hall at 7:15 o'clock.

Nina Thomas, vice-president, of the group urges all those girls who were here last year to be present at this first meeting of the year.

The organization, comprised of all sorority girls whose chapter is not on campus, will function in cooperation with the Pan-hellenic Association and the Carolina Independent Coed Association.

New girls will be contacted by the group and notified about the next meeting.

SHORT SESSION

All members of the Men's Inter-dormitory Council are requested to attend a short business session on Monday night, at 7 p.m., in Roland Parker Lounge No. 1. On the agenda are the re-organization of the council and a report on the new dormitory elections ruling.

Randy Brooks' Band Is Rated Near the Top

By Lawrence Fox

Although Randy Brooks, who is scheduled to play for the Fall Germans this quarter, organized his band only two years ago, he was rated third among the nation's top bands in the latest poll sponsored by Down-Beat magazine, the Bible of the play-it-sweet boys. Only Stan Kenton and Duke Ellington finished ahead of him.

The career, which is still far from its peak even though Brooks has been recognized as one of the top in his profession, first started with the Salvation Army band in Sanford, Me., where Brooks and his father and mother, who were also show people, comprised the brass section. His parents encouraged his interest in the trumpet and after Brooks won a state-wide trumpet contest they hired the late Walter Smith as his tutor.

First Began

It was with Rudy Vallee's orchestra that Randy Brooks first broke into show business. He was 14 years old at the time, and at each show he would play a medley of classical selections.

It was Bunny Berigan who first made Brooks realize the potentialities of popular music. That realization started Brooks on the road to success. After playing with some local bands he joined Ruby Newman's organization. He played with Newman's group on a long tour which included a cruise to Rio de Janiero on the Normandie. He joined Claude Thornhill's new band after his return and while he was with the band, polls ranked him fourth among the country's trumpeters.

A stretch as musical director of Bob Allen's orchestra during which he succeeded in reviving the almost defunct organization preceded a job as lead trumpeter with Les Brown and his "Band of Reknown."

Gained Prestige

The prestige he gained while with Brown enabled him to start his own band. The break-in date for the new organization was at the Palomar in Norfolk, Va., but the band quickly moved on to the Roseland Ballroom in New York for what was expected to be a two week engagement. However, stayed on for nine months.

On the strength of this record-breaking showing Decca records signed him to a contract. This was especially noteworthy as his was the first new band to be signed by Decca since the end of the war.

Engagements in the Steel Pier in Atlantic City, the 400 Restaurant and the Appollo Theater, both in New York have highlighted a brilliant, but still rising career.

In spite of the small jazz combo featured on the band's program and the influence of the late Bunny Berigan, the organization still leans to the sweet, slow, dreamy, danceable type of playing.

Dramatic Group Plans to Conduct Conference Here

The 25th annual conference of the Carolina Dramatic association for teachers and directors of dramatic art in North Carolina will meet in Chapel Hill next Saturday, it was announced today by John W. Parker, executive secretary of the association.

C. R. Sumner of Asheville, president, will preside over the one-day conference which is to open with a breakfast and business session at the Carolina Inn.

During the business session plans will be discussed for the regional dramatic festivals and for the four-day State Festival to be held in Chapel Hill next spring. Hundreds of high school and college students will take part in the annual series of festivals.

The program for the conference will include talks by Paul Green, the playwright; Dr. Lucille H. Charles, director of dramatic arts at East Carolina Teachers College; and Harry Davis of Chapel Hill, staff member of the Carolina Playmakers. Clifton Britton of Goldsboro will lead a panel discussion.

The executive committee of the Association includes Mrs. Howard Mims of Greenville; Mrs. Naomi Cunningham, Gastonia; Miss Sarah Alexander, Goldsboro high school; Miss Catherine Hilderman, Meredith College, and C. M. Edson, Rocky Mount.

Discussion Planned At Supper Meeting

"What Are You Doing Here?" This question will be the topic for discussion in this evening's Student Supper program led by Rev. J. Robert Nelson at the Wesley Foundation at 5:45.

Mr. Nelson's sermon at the Methodist church this morning will be on the same question. The evening's program will give the students a rare chance to talk back to the preacher.

Wesley Foundation's financial canvass led by Jim Brockman will begin Oct. 26. Every Methodist student will be contacted and given an opportunity to make his pledge to the Wesley Foundation. The canvass' goal is $4,500.

Perpetual Pessimist of Quonset Huts Laments Lot of Tennis Court Tenants

By John Stump

"A man's home used to be his Castle," moaned Dick Dixon, self-styled BMOC, perpetual pessimist, and head mourner for the quonset hut peasants.

He was addressing J. B. Kelly, hut area manager, this reporter, and about 20 of the human flotsam which the university has assigned to the tenements on the tennis courts. His subject as usual was the oppression under which he and some 579 other seekers after truth suffer in their pursuit of knowledge.

"We are crammed 20 to the flat in an airless, cheerless, cement-floored half cylinder, but that is just where the trouble begins. They have to padlock the area on football game days to save our personal effects. But it isn't really necessary; we can only lose the contents of the two bureau drawers and 18 inches of hangar space assigned to us."

He continued at great length concerning the study space (20 desks to 200 men), the 'wash-up' facilities (a half mile walk to get your face shaved), the lack of electrical connections, and the one telephone line available.

He elaborated on the telephone facilities. "The last time that I got an ICC forty seven people commiserated with me before I hung up the phone."

"My mail was laid out on a desk in the study hut for a week before the mailman realized that two other guys and I had a 'Private' box for the purpose of keeping our mail to ourselves. As it is Bill Walker (assistant head mourner) carried one of my letters for five days before it occurred to him to give it to me."

By this time even the hard-hearted Kelly was reduced to tears. So we took "Hark The Sound" off the vic and played "Happy Days Are Here Again." Dixon and Walker had another beer.

Local Food Boards Asked By Luckman

Washington, Oct. 11—(UP)—Chairman Charles Luckman of President Truman's Citizens Food committee tonight asked more than 1,000 mayors on behalf of Mr. Truman to establish local food conservation committees immediately.

In making the appeal, Luckman emphasized what he called the "grave emergency" facing hungry Europe and "the responsibility on us as a free people."

Luckman sounded again the call for meatless Tuesdays and poultryless Thursdays, hastening a showdown with the restaurant industry, which has served notice that it does not feel that anything is saved through meatless and poultryless days.

Informed sources believe that the showdown may come Monday when Luckman meets then with restaurant industry representatives who have proposed a conservation program of their own.

In telegrams to mayors of all American cities of 10,000 population or more, Luckman tonight urged each to appoint local citizens food committees for the duration of the emergency.

The call for community cooperation comes in the face of reports that most of the nation is showing signs of indifference to the food-saving drive.

Committee of Y Will Hear Address By Father Murphy

Rev. Father F. J. Murphy, assistant pastor of the Roman Catholic church, will speak to the "You and Your Religion" committee of the YWCA Monday night at 7 o'clock in the YWCA library.

One of 14 services and discussion groups organized by the "Y", this committee is headed by Jeanne Basnight and Helen Compton. Discussions and talks by visiting clergymen are aimed at clarifying the basic beliefs of various religions.

Father Murphy came to Chapel Hill in August, having served in Waynesville, Asheville, and New Bern. He studied at Fordham University and St. John's seminary, and took graduate work at Catholic university. He was ordained in December, 1943.

Voters To Decide Yack Editorship In Special Election Today

Di To Reopen Fight For Appointment Of Publications Editors

Measure Seeks To Divorce Eds From Politics

A re-opening of last year's fight to have the constitution of the student body amended in regard to appointment and election of publications editors will be held tomorrow night at nine o'clock when the Dialectic senate meets to debate this important issue.

Seeking to remove the semi-political nature of appointment of editors, the bill to be debated will recommend that the duty of nominating them be removed from campus political parties and partisan groups, and be given to a committee or committees of persons who are best qualified to determine who may suitably hold the position and who best understand the management of publications.

John Zucker, speaker pro-tem for the Di, reported a three to two decision by the ways and means committee in favor of the amendment.

It is expected that if the bill is passed, it will probably be favorably received and passed by the Student Legislature.

Prominent in the fight last year for this legislation were Fred Flagler, Douglas Hunt, and Margaret House, chairman of the Publications board. At this time the bill was reported out by a seven to two vote and was approved after heavy debate by the legislature. Upon reconsideration, it was disapproved after a deadlock, with the tie being broken by the speaker.

Election to Be Held To Fill Coed Senate

At a meeting of the Coeds yesterday in Gerrard Hall, Katie Guion announced that an election is to be held to fill three vacancies in the Coed senate. The following nominations were made from the floor:

Barbara Ann Pope, June Gilbert, Weddy Thorpe, Marjorie Yokery, Lynn Blanchard, Ann Huske, Barbara Stockton, Katherine Royall, Scotty Dillinger, Ann Wells, Edith Knight, Chris White, Nelle Ring, Jo Butler, and Betty Vashaw.

From these nominations, two are to be elected from the dorms and one from the town students. Election date will be posted in the near future and all coeds are urged to vote.

Phi Will Discuss Cuts in Exports

The Phi assembly will hold its first discussion meeting of the term this evening at 7:30 p.m. in the Phi hall, fourth floor, New East. On the agenda is a resolution favoring drastic cuts in grain exports to Europe, to be introduced by the ways and means committee. Applicants for membership are required to take part in the debate, according to speaker John Giles.

Dr. Arnold Nash, new head of the Department of religion at the University, installed the newly-elected officers of the assembly at the last meeting with a candlelight ceremony.

HIGH POINT CLUB

All students from High Point are asked to attend a 3 o'clock meeting this afternoon in Roland Parker lounge 2 in Graham Memorial. This is to be the first meeting of the newly formed High Point club, and it is necessary that all interested students attend for the purpose of tabulating membership.

AVC to Hear Saunders On Housing Situation

By Ken Rothwell

Chapel Hill members of the American Veteran's committee will hear their secretary, Henry Saunders, present a full report on the housing situation here when the local chapter meets this evening at 7:30 in the Presbyterian church.

According to chairman Ben Rouzie this report is the result of alleged irregularities on the part of some Victory Village residents in sub-leasing their homes. At the last AVC meeting several members brought this situation to the attention of the chapter. He said that Saunder's report will include concrete recommendations for remedying whatever inequities may exist and that the chapter will either reject or approve the proposals at tonight's meeting.

"Since according to our constitution we must hold elections of chapter officers at this meeting it is especially important that everyone turn out," Rouzie added.

In addition to the election there will also be reports from the national policy committee on the Marshall plan and other important issues.

Rouzie stressed that all chapter meetings are open to the public and that non-members have as much right to participate in discussions as members.

Radio Show, 'Writers at Work', To Be Weekly UNC Presentation

Next Tuesday night's radio audience will hear Pulitzer prize-winning playwright Paul Green, novelists James Street, Noel Houston and Foster Fitz-Simons when "Writers At Work," a new half-hour weekly radio show, is presented at 10 o'clock over station WDNC by the University's Communication Center.

Each author will create extemporaneously his conception of a dramatic story-clue offered by Moderator Noel Houston at the start of the program. The plots will be drawn from great classics and contemporary literature.

Originating in the Swain hall radio studios of the University, "Writers At Work" will be beamed through the transmission facilities of commercial stations in many parts of the state.

James Street, whose short-stories appear in Cosmopolitan, Good Housekeeping and other national magazines, is the author of such best-sellers as "The Gauntlet," "Tap Roots," and "By Valour and Arms."

In addition to winning the Pulitzer prize for his Broadway play "In Abraham's Bosom," Paul Green is responsible for the annual North Carolina pageant, "The Lost Colony." This summer, Green presented a new play at Williamsburg, Virginia, "The Common Glory," hailed by critics as a masterpiece of historical drama.

The third member of Tuesday's radio panel of writers, Foster Fitz-Simons, will pop up in literary head-lines this winter after publication of this novel about Carolina tobacco kings, "Bright Leaf." The book has been purchased for motion picture production by Warner Brothers.

Houston, short-story writer and author of the novel, "The Great Promise," will moderate most of the series.

Featured in subsequent weeks will be such nationally-known Chapel Hill writers as Betty Smith, author of "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn," Josephina Niggli, Phillips Russell, Frances Gray Patton, Daphne Athas and James Childers.

"Writers At Work" is produced by Earl Wynn, director of the Communication center and Robert Schenkkan.

The University also will broadcast four other radio programs each week to people all over North Carolina.

Luckman to Halt Whiskey Making

Washington, Oct. 13—(UP)—Chairman Charles Luckman of the Citizens Food Committee announced tonight that a 60-day whiskey-making holiday will begin at midnight of October 25. Luckman said that an overwhelming majority of the nation's distillers have agreed to cooperate in the effort to save the much needed grain for Europe.

The action was taken despite renewed demands of the AF of L Distillers' union for a 10-day delay in setting the date for the shutdown—in order to permit a fuller study of the problem.

Luckman told newsmen tonight that all but three of 39 liquor makers, including all the largest producers, have agreed to the shutdown. The consenting distillers, he added, represent well over 90 per cent of the nation's whiskey-making capacity.

Editor Hopes For Big Year For Tarnation

The humor magazine for which the Student Legislature provided $4,400 last April 17 is moving steadily toward publication of its first issue, according to Matt "Tookie" Hodgson, its editor.

Brainchild

The new mag, recently dubbed "Tarnation," is Hodgson's brainchild. He worked continuously all through last year for its establishment, pushed it through the Legislature, and was then elected its editor in the general campus spring elections.

In new offices on the mezzanine floor of Graham Memorial the first big organizational meeting of the humor mag staff will be held at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, when Hodgson will make assignments and hand out work for the first issue, scheduled for publication about the middle of November.

Coeds Needed

Editor Hodgson has asked that all persons interested in working on the magazine to be present at tomorrow's meeting. He especially emphasized the need for coeds to work on the staff.

Aside from humor writers, the staff will need photographers, artists, straight writers, and typists and proof-readers for the office staff. The mag will publish all types of features, including entertainment, sports, and fashions.

"Because the magazine is brand new, there will be excellent opportunity for showing what you can do and for quick advancement for those who show promise of good work," Tookie said in a statement issued yesterday.

If anyone cannot be present at tomorrow's meeting, he said, they should contact the "Tarnation" office as soon as possible.

Wilmington Group Chooses Officers

At the first meeting of the newly formed Wilmington-Carolina club last Wednesday, the following officers were elected: Marion Woodbury, president; Fields "Doc" Clark, vice-president; and Eloise Jacobi, treasurer.

Forty members were present for the elections and the discussions which followed, among which were plans for a Christmas dance to be held in Wilmington during the holidays.

The next meeting is scheduled to be held in Roland Parker lounge on Wednesday afternoon, October 22nd at 3 o'clock.

Ruth Evans, Gene Johnstone, and Harold Bursley (left to right) are running for the Yack editorship as a board of editors, and are supported by both the University and Campus parties. They intend to put out a yearbook which "will be more representative of and more popular with the student body."

UVA to Hold Initial Meeting Of Term Tonight in Clubhouse

The University Veteran's Association will hold its first meeting of the quarter at their club tonight at 7:30, Hugh Wells announced today.

Present plans for the meeting include the appointing of several investigating committees to make further surveys of condition at the University and particularly of living conditions in the town of Chapel Hill.

Among the duties of these committees will be to find out if the already over-crowded eating facilities in the various restaurants and cafeterias will be over taxed by the enrollment of a student body larger than the present one. Another matter to be considered is the jeojardizing of vereran's education by overcrowding in the classrooms which naturally leads to poorer instruction. Problems and needs of Chapel Hill, and the latest developments in the Veteran's administration pertaining to students will be discussed.

Wells pointed out that attendance at the meeting will not be limited to members of the association, but that all veterans are invited as it is felt that these problems are of pertinent interest and importance to everyone, and that the floor will be open to anyone who has a matter they wish to be brought up.

Men Should Report To Housing Office

Unless the latest students eligible for dormitory rooms contact the housing office, 207 South building, by Wednesday, their names will be taken off the priority lists and their space given to the next students in the waiting files, according to J. E. Wadsworth, housing director.

The following men should report immediately to the housing office: Armstrong, Ivan B.; Arnold, Walter D.; Bach, Joseph W.; Dement, William T.; Edwards, Robert W.; Gaul, Rufus W.; Lindsey, Eugene A.; Rones, James M.; Settlemeyer, Arthur, Jr.; Watson, William J.; Whitehurst, Ralph A.; and Wooten, Cecil C.

Tuesday and Wednesday 7:30-9:30—Public Health
Wednesday and Thursday 2-5—Law school
Thursday 7:30-9:30 — Law school
Friday 2-5 and 7:30-9:30—Pharmacy School

Manning Restricted For Law Students, Says Dean Wettach

Because of the present large enrollment in the Law school, it has been announced by Dean Robert H. Wettach, that the use of Manning hall will be restricted to law students in the future.

In an agreement reached between Dean Wettach and the officers of the student body, it was concluded that undergraduates and non-law students are interfering with the full use of study space to which the law students have priorities.

Undergraduates who are now using Manning hall for studying purposes will have to make arrangements with other departments to open study classrooms. According to Dean Wettach, the circulation of all law texts to undergraduates will have to be discontinued. Use of the Law library by graduate students and other students engaged in legal research will have to be arranged with the law librarian.

MOZART OPERA

The second act of Mozart's opera Don Giovanni will be aired in the Tuesday evening concert from 8-9:30 tonight in the Horace Williams Lounge of Graham Memoiral.

Students Must Show ID Cards To Enter Polls

By Chuck Hauser

Campus politics shifts into high gear today as students head for the polls to cast their ballots for the editorship of the Yackety-Yack, University yearbook.

Four Names

There will be four names on the ballots, but only two choices for the voter, as three of the candidates are running as a board of editors. Art Melton is the Student party candidate, while Gene Johnstone, Ruth Evans, and Harold Bursley are backed by the University and Campus parties as an editorial board.

Polls will be open from 9 o'clock this morning until 6 o'clock this evening at Gerrard hall, Aycock dormitory, Lenoir hall, and Alderman dormitory.

Every voter must present his University identification card to be permitted to cast a ballot. The backs of these cards will be stamped as each person is handed a ballot at the polls.

Expense Accounts

All candidates and political parties must submit detailed campaign expense accounts along with samples of campaign publicity by 3 o'clock this afternoon to Al Winn or room 8, Steele dormitory.

SP candidate Art Melton released the following statement yesterday afternoon in regard to his stand on the Yack editorship:

Melton Statement

"I urge all students, graduate and undergraduate, to be democratic and vote in today's election because if elected I wish to be representative of the majority of the students.

"In addition to voting, I hope that the students will keep in mind the following three things when casting their ballot:

"(1) I stand for close auditing of the $45,000 being spent this year for a yearbook to prevent losses as heretofore have occurred.

"(2) I stand for complete and immediate distribution of the Yackety-Yack as there is not space available for storage of more than the approximately 1,500 1947 issues, 500 1946 editions, and 500 1944 and 1945 Yacks now on hand. This includes distribution of back Yacks.

"(3) I stand for efficient administration of and definite policies for the Yack with unbiased representation of all student activities."

Ruth Evans, Gene Johnstone, and Harold Bursley, UP and CP candidates for the Yack post as a board of editors, also had pre-election comment to make last night:

"The most important thing at this time," they said, "is to make sure every student gets to the polls and votes for the candidates that he thinks are most qualified for the job.

"We do believe, though, that through our combined experience and work, that we can put out a yearbook which will be more representative of and more popular with the student body.

"With Dick Gordon acting as our business manager, we stand for a sound financial basis for the Yack. All work is done with particular attention paid to conservation of funds.

"We plan to put out a bigger book and a more interesting book. Simplicity is the theme. There is still room on the staff for a large part of the student body to work to put out their yearbook."

TARNATION BUSINESS

The business staff of Tarnation will meet this afternoon at 3 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge 1 of Graham Memorial.

Art Melton, who is running for editor of the Yackety-Yack on the Student party ticket in today's election, has taken a stand on "efficient administration and definite policies" for the Yack.

Where to Vote

GERRARD HALL: Residents of Carr, Smith, coeds not in dorms, Steele, BVP, Old East, Old West, Nash, Miller, Whitehead, men in fraternity houses, men in town, Victory Village, Pittsboro trailer camp.

AYCOCK DORMITORY: Residents of Aycock, Graham, Stacy, Everett, Lewis, Quonset huts, Alexander.

LENOIR HALL: Residents of Mangum, Manley, Grimes, Ruffin, Emerson field house, Fetzer field house.

ALDERMAN DORMITORY: Residents of Alderman, McIver, Kenan, Spencer.

Organizational Pictures to Be Taken at Regular Meetings By Yack Photographer Les Bodden Against Oct. 31 Deadline

In continued adherence to the accelerated pace set by the Yackety-Yack, Yack picture coordinator Bill Duncan yesterday announced that organizational pictures will be taken until October 31st.

These group pictures will be taken on the regular meeting night and at the regular meeting place of the organization concerned. Formal dress will be at the option of the group, but it is expected that most of the pictures will be taken in informal clothing.

In conformance with this schedule, the first picture, that of the local coeds, will be taken tonight at 7:30. On Wednesday, according to present plans, the student council will come under the camera's scrutiny, followed on Thursday by the solons of the student legislature.

Responsibility for the pictures will fall almost wholly on the shoulders of Les Bodden and his staff. During this week, only one rig will be needed, but during the week of October 20th, heaviest on the present schedule, two or three separate sets of equipment will be used.

However, according to Duncan, the schedule is at present only tenative as its maintenance depends on the "continuance of present arrangements." "I do not bblieve that it will become necessary to rearrange the present schedule," he said in advising the groups involved of possible change, "but if a change is made, we will do everything possible to get all of the pictures in in time for their inclusion in the book."

The equipment now in use will permit the taking of groups up to fifty in number, but it is anticipated that equipment capable of handling groups of 125 persons will become available.

All organizations which have contracted with the Yack business office will, in the next two days, receive notification of the date for their picture. The 12 organizations which have not contracted are urged to do so immediately, so that they may be placed on the schedule.

DTH Awarded All-American Superior Rating For Outstanding Journalistic Excellence

For journalistic excellence during the period of January 1947 through June 1947, The Daily Tar Heel has been awarded an All-American—Superior rating by the Associated Collegiate Press with headquarters at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis.

In compiling its All-American score of 965 points, the newspaper fell only 100 points shy of having a perfect score for excellence in every field of journalism. The judgments of the association are the result of its regular critical service, the rating of which is subject to publication

Perfect scores were attained in the fields of news coverage, news vitality and treatment, news stories, features, headlines, typography, inside page make-up, printing, editorial columns, editorial features, editorial makeup, as well as sports writing, coverage and treatment, and sports displays.

In every field, The Daily Tar Heel was awarded either an "excellent" or "very good" rating.

The press service offered only six major criticisms. These consisted of too few news features and features, weakness of leads (first paragraphs) in some instances, lack of style consistency, lack of contrast headlines, and failure to use boxed stories to break up a page.

With the enlargement of the newspaper, the DTH has eliminated most of these enumerated short-comings.

While the vast majority of the newspapers analyzed for ratings were those of last year's staff under Editor Bill Woestendiek and Managing Editor Roland Giduz, a few papers issued under the present regime under Editor Barron Mills and retiring Managing Editor Earl Heffner were also included in the compilation.

Pepper in the Lion's Den

Senator Claude has blown the lid off the Pepper pot again. Since he broke his connections with Henry Wallace some time ago and retorted that he was not a supporter of Wallace for president, he has not figured in the limelight until this past Sunday, on which occasion he put forth a "bold and daring plan for peace" which proposed a total disarmament and a $50,000,000,000 contribution to finance a five year program of world reconstruction.

Pepper remarked that the first requirement of his "peace plan" called for a one-year moratorium within the United Nations on all "name-calling and all irreconcilable issues."

The senator is right. If this could possibly be done we would not need to keep intact our army and navy or incur the tremendous expense of keeping our armaments in good condition.

But evidently he overlooked the Communist International which has just been organized to dissiminate their false claims against the United States. They will use, as Vishinsky has, the UN as a sounding board to air their blasphemous tripe. They use these great examples of hogwash to pollute the columns of Pravda and other publications that will be forthcoming with the alliance of the six-country Communistic International.

The Kremlin is interested only in telling the people they control about the names their own representatives have called and the accusations their own spokesmen have smeared over the UN filibusters. Since they do not have space in their publications to print the retorts that we hand them in return or the answers out nations sound, the slander rings true in the Russian sphere.

But the Senator Pepper of Florida says that the first requirement for his "peace" plan is to cut out the name calling and friction in the UN. Everyone knows that this is the first thing that we must do to promote "peace." The Pepper statement would be even more startling if he proposed just how a "moratorium" could be enforced.

However, the senator is correct in calling his proposal a "bold and daring plan for peace." A man who is thrown into an arena to struggle bare-handed with a lion is also bold and daring.

Permanent Arrangement Needed

The provisions of the House Privileges Board are still not in actual practice, consequently the visiting arrangement between coeds and fraternities is in chaos. It is a long-drawn-out procedure to get the agreement into effect. The members of the HPB must compile a set of rules that will be satisfactory to the groups concerned—fraternities, coeds, the dean of women, the Interfraternity council, and the coed senate.

It is a difficult procedure, but through the years that agreements have been made with coeds, the members of the Board who compile the rules have learned within what boundaries they dare suggest the time which houses should be open and closed and the drinking in fraternity houses, etc.

They also know by precedence the procedure which must be carried out to the smallest detail before agreement will go into effect. Under the system which was in use last year there was no HPB—since the agreement concerned strictly the fraternities and the coeds the rules were set down by the Executive council of the Interfraternity council and received the sanction of the Dean of Women.

Already this year two new proposed agreements have been drawn up by the Board; but they have not been approved for one or two reasons: they stepped out of the bounds within which they knew they could tread, or they did not push the bill through the proper channels.

Meanwhile the present temporary visiting agreement is not serving as a legitimate substitute for a regular agreement. The provision that coeds may visit if and when fraternities have an authorized chaperone in the house makes for trouble. These chaperones usually do not know the rulings incorporated in previous contracts and therefore cannot be expected to adequately control activities in the houses and perform the same function as a written agreement.

It will be a long time before the opponents of the House Privileges board will get another chance to squelch it by a constitutional amendment. In the meantime, some permanent arrangement must be made for coed visiting.

Consider All Aspects Before You Vote

The editorship of the Yackety Yack is not just an insignificant position that carries with it a battered desk, a couple reams of copy paper, a typewriter with a ribbon that needs replacing. It demands virtually full-time devotion to the task of assembling the events of a college year and binding them in a true composite picture of the University of North Carolina for the members of the student body and its posterity. Unlike this college newspaper and the two campus magazines, your yearbook, after its novelty has worn off, will be carefully placed beside the family picture albums to be dragged out on rainy afternoons and times of reminiscencing. You will want a book that you are proud to display as well as one that recalls pleasant experiences.

Today you will be given an opportunity to select the editorship of the Yackety-Yack. It is not just an honorary position. There are thousands of minor details that must be attended to—a theme to recall the spirit of the campus, attractive layouts for the pages depicting student organizations, photography that adds action to the book, and ingenious ideas that will give this year's Yack uniqueness.

Consider all of these aspects before you go to the polls today and do not be influenced by handshaking and a smile before you receive your ballot. Analyze the duties of the editorship, the qualification of the candidates; consider the advantages of a board of editors and a single editor.

Keep all of these facts in your mind today when you go to mark your ballot, and vote for the editorship that you consider will do the best job, regardless of friendships or party affiliations.

Tain't Necessarily So, But. . . .

The Lady Stuck by UNC

By Bill Buchan

The lady and her husband came in the all-night coffee joint at a few minutes past two, Sunday morning. They were in search of black coffee-in large quanities-for, from all observations, they had spent the previous four or five hours celebrating—or in mourning.

Patrons—also soaking up coffee—soon learned that they were in mourning. The gentleman in question was a Carolina graduate of many years back. His comments on his Alma Mater and the Tar Heels were not complimentary. They were royally received, however, by the majority of the customers in the cafe, inasmuch as the city was Raleigh and several yellow and black buttons—labeled "Wake Forest" were predominantly displayed on many coats.

The character's wife was evidently ashamed of her husband and his remarks. (Or elese, she hadn't downed as many shots as he had.) Repeatedly, she attempted to quite him and in doing so, gave one of the nicest speaches on loyalty thas has ever been spoken in a coffee joint at two o'clock on a Sunday morning.

"Honey," she begged, "I don't mind your talking about the Tar Heels at home or among Carolina friends, but you just aren't doing the right thing when you let all these (her next few words are not repeatable) people hear you. Hell," she continued, they're from Wake Forest and some even go to Cow College."

Mr. Alumni reached into his coat pocket and pulled the cork from his flask. "Today that is an honor," he mumbled.

His wife didn't agree with him and continued in a voice, even louder than his, to in form all those listening—and everyone in the place was—that she was a Carolina supporter before the game and that she was still supporting them after the game. "When I get ready to analize their faults, I'll do it among other Carolina people." Then, she went on to tell her audience where they could go of they didn't want to go home.

When she was through, the lady pushed several strands of grey hair back on her head and turned to her husband. "Now (and these words can't be repeated here either) you shut up!"

The husband did.

The moral of all this is if that the lady was quite right, even if she probably didn't remember her speech the next afternoon. A great many people — students and all — wasted no time Saturday night and Sunday and Monday and probably today in public denouncing their fellow students for all to hear. 'Course it's swell to be able to praise our team and point out their good qualities, but if a fellow can't say anything good about them, he'll do his school a much greater deed by saying nothing at all.

Especially where Wake Forest and State and Dook men can hear it.

The Exigency of the Age

The Earth Is Unique

By Russell G. Baldwin

This is the first in a series of articles designed to show the need for the establishment of a federal world government with adequate powers to prevent war. It is also the intention of the writer to show to the best of his ability how the peoples of the world can achieve world government; what the individual can do, and in what way he can contribute most to the achievement of world government. It is the desire of the writer that this article and those which are to follow be judged by their accomplishment of these purposes.

In the universe as we know it today the earth is a relatively minor planet. It is small and yet it is unique in that it is the only planet known (by us) to be inhabited by living creatures. But the uniqueness of the planet, Earth, does not end there. Perhaps the most unique, the strange thing about the earth is that the creatures which inhabit it are constantly contradicting the laws of nature. It is not natural for men to fight and kill each other, nor is it reasonable. Think what would happen if the planets of the universe should refuse to stay in their proper orbits. The universe would soon be destroyed. This can be easily demonstrated by scientists, but, somehow, the politicians of our day fail to see that the earth, itself, is a miniature universe to which the same law applies.

As Lincoln so ably stated, "A house divided against itself cannot stand." In 1860, Lincoln uttered those immortal words with reference to the United States of America, but, were he living today, he would speak those same words with reference to the dis-United States of the World. Almost a century has passed and nothing has changed. No progress has been made, for progress is relative, and with every growth of good there has been a corresponding growth of evil. The situation today is no different than 1860; only the actors and the stage are new. Then it was 30 million people and the stage was America. Today it is 2 billion people and the stage is the world.

The world has just survived the greatest war in all history, but, in doing so, it has sustained permanent, almost fatal, injuries. Practically every industrialized nation in the world is on the verge of bankruptcy. With another war even those nations which today are solvent would topple beneath the weight of war, and, even if a nation should stand politically, it could not help but falter economically. It is such a pity that with human suffering and deprivation so widespread the world's resources cannot be used to alleviate suffering humanity.

Even though World War II cost the peoples of the world in human and natural resources a sum which surpasses the most fertile imagination, the world has again chosen war in preference to peace. World War III has begun. Make no mistake about that. It is vitally important that we realize that war has begun, for it is now in the first stage and that is the only stage in which it can be stopped. It is also vitally important for us to realize that the first stage of a war always ends with the beginning of the second stage—the blood-shedding stage—unless the people rise from their slumbering and change the course of events.

The situation today is extremely critical. It is no mere crisis; it is an exigency of the first order. At no time since the Great Flood has the world been in such hazardous straits where all mankind is in immediate danger of destruction. The atomic bomb and bacteriological warfare are names that create terror in the hearts of men, but their ability to produce terror is even greater than is generally recognized. The exigency is urgent and it requires immediate action.

Happy Birthday, Dr. Frank

By R. Foo Giduz

October 12 has always been a great day at the University. —That was last Friday, the 154th University day. They've been celebrating that around here for a long time now. But for the last 15-odd years there's been another pretty important day right around that same time which most Chapel Hillians and students probably fail to remember. —That's today, October 14, the sixty-first birthday of our beloved president, Dr. Frank Graham.

It's a nice sort of day to spend at home with your family. There's no other way Dr. Frank would rather spend his birthday. But it's a bit different this year. Dr. Frank leaves for Indonesia by plane from an unknown jumping-off spot early this morning. So instead of their spending a quiet day of celebration at home, Mrs. Graham has gone to see him off—on his birthday.

However he spends it, here's hearty wishes for a happy birthday, a speedy return, and a successful solution to the Indonesian problem to a great guy, Dr. Frank Graham.

Today's election for Yackety Yack editor might seem small, but the man elected will supervise a budget of more than $44,000. If you feel you don't know who to vote for, it's your DUTY to find out about the candidates and cast a ballot. Every one of you is paying over six dollars apiece for next year's Yackety Yack. —Want it to be a good yearbook??? —VOTE!

GM GRIND:

—Some really fine entertainment coming to the campus soon. G. M. plans to sponsor Arthur Lesser nationally famous pianist from the Cleveland Institute of Music, in a gratis concert sometime this quarter. . . . And Dr. Franz Polgar, the world famous hypnotist will probably appear under Graham Memorial or student entertainment auspices early next year. Polgar, who has appeared here twice in the last decade, has been called most phenomenal entertainer ever to perform on the Carolina campus.

Remember the jam sessions. . . . Tomorrow afternoon, 3-6, in the Rendezvous —Three hours of unrehearsed jive: it's really worth attending . . . And tonight's recorded dinner music concert, 6:30-7 in the main lounge, will include the fourth movement from Tschaikowsky's fourth symphony, and selections from Victor Herbert, played by Andre Kostelanetz.

Are You Entertained?

By Pete Gerns

There has been considerable reaction to the question asked in this column re dormitory entertainment facilities last Friday and we have attempted to select the six most representative answers for today's column.

Don English, who managed B-V-P last summer, has some very good ideas which no doubt could be adapted to present-day dormitory life. He tells us that he finds dorm rooms to be very plain, offering merely shelter without appreciable facilities Don holds forth that the psychological value of a nicely-furnished dorm room cannot be over-estimated and offers as suggestion that linoleum be laid in all rooms; that the University abandon its yellow scheme and paint wall in blue or pink (good for atmosphere). He also maintains that students will keep their rooms in better shape if they are furnished in good taste and would be able to invite their friends more frequently.

Remarks about facilities at the Quonset huts were sent in by James W. Curtis who points out that there are no table or chairs available for the huts proper. "We have one telephone to serve about 800 students a condition which surely can be rectified, says Jim; after all, a telephone is one of the necessary adjuncts to entertainment."

Two men from Stacy, Sid McAden and Charles Cowell Jr. hope that dormitories will have parties, both drag and stag, in the future, and envision the possibility of erecting a cooperative hut behind Stacy near the Monogram club. Jasper Hassell of Mangum believes that "the basis for the poor entertainment facilities that we have on this campus today can be found in the uncooperative attitude among dorm students, without whom any attempts at entertainment must fail." P. McNeer Dillon, a resident of Miller hall tells us that "a bunch of people who get together to sing just for the joy of singing can have a really fine time." Hop to it, McNeer.

The question for Friday's column is "Will Carolina beat William and Mary?". Please have your answers in the "Campus Forum" box in Graham Memorial by tomorrow evening.

Two Music Majors To Give Recitals

First in this year's series of weekly student recitals, to which the public is invited, will be presented tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock in Hill hall.

Raymond Askew, baritone, a voice student of Mr. Rufus Norris, will sing "The Slighted Swain," Anonymous, and "The Pretty Creature," by Stephen Storace. He will be accompanied by Richard Cox.

William Waters, a piano student of Miss Virginia Hare, and winner of last year's Kay Kyser scholarhsip, will perform Mendelssohn's "Variations Seriouses, Op. 54."

Following these performances, there will be a short discussion of courses required for a music major.

South Building Gets Compliment

Dear Sir:

When the person has a "gripe" he is usually quick to air his views. When all is going smoothly you seldom find that a person will bother to pay a compliment with the same vigor that was used in complaining. Perhaps this practice is unfair. Since I want to be fair, and since I recently did some complaining about some University Officials in a letter to the Tar Heel, I would like to pay a compliment to those officials.

My complaint was concerning an objectionable contract submitted to Trailer Park residents with an order to sign meeting where the contract was read, the residents elected a committee to represent them in negotiating with the University concerning the contract. This committee met with Messrs Williams, Bennett, Burch, and Wadsworth. From a personal viewpoint, I was impressed by the good will and mutual understanding which prevailed at the meeting on the part of both University Officials and the members of the committee. No punches were pulled, and all spoke frankly in an effort to arrive at a satisfactorily solution of a problem which has arisen through no fault of the University, but rather a result of lack of housing facilities with which most colleges are faced these days.

Some one must give in, and a little giving in was done by both parties concerned. That is settlement of difficulties in its finest form. It seems democratic to know that the door to South Building is always open.

Integrity Needed

Dear Editor:

This letter is intended as a consideration of Hale Chamberlain's statement in the Saturday DTH to the effect that the Honor System at Carolina is a matter of secondary importance when placed beside the solution of international relations. I am inclined to say exactly the reverse: that the Honor System at Carolina is a matter of primary importance when placed beside the solution of international relations.

It appears to me that the integrity of the individuals of any nation is indispensable to the success of its relations with any other nation, and also that the latter cannot exist without the former.

Music Criticisms

Editor:

May I suggest to the local "Bell-ringer" that he adjust the quarter-hour "Westminster" chimes. Since about the first of August the chimes have been one note out of step. This grates on my very sensitive nerves.

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

Bobbing In Sports

—with—

Bob Goldwater

A STREAK WAS broken last Saturday in Kenan stadium. Only one person in the crowd of 35,000 knew about it because it came to its untimely end not down on the field of battle but instead up in the press box.

At every one of the five home games in 1946 plus the first local affair this season, yours truly occupied seat 29 in the press coop and Carolina didn't lose a single game. And then came Saturday when, for some undetermined reason, the jinx didn't take effect.

WHICH BRINGS US around to the big question of the day: What happened to Carolina last week in particular and this season in general? Not being exactly sure ourselves, we dropped in yesterday to see the man who would know better than anyone else—this naturally being Coach Carl Snavely.

"I think the main reason for our below-par showing is due to a mental letdown," the Tar Heel mentor observed. "The boys were keyed and primed for the game with Georgia and suffered the letdown after that. It's very difficult to keep a team keyed up for every game."

"Then there's another reason that's very important," Snavely continued. "We have quite a few tough teams on our schedule and they all seem to be priming for Carolina. In fact, we're the only tough bunch that some of them have played so far—or play all year."

Asked if he thought that too much publicity had hurt the team, the Tar Heel coach responded that this had not been an important factor in the team's performance. "But," he emphasized, "we were greatly overrated in the pre-season predictions. We were being judged on our easier schedule in 1946, when Carolina football was at its peak. And from last year's outfit, we lost five boys we could sure use a lot—Strayhorn, Highsmith, Jarrell, Williamson, and Sutherland. Don't think they wouldn't have made a difference."

ALL OF WHICH leads to one evident conclusion, which was summed up pretty well in six words of the streamer on the front page of Sunday's Daily Tar Heel: "National Limelight Fades for Tar Heels." For although the loss to Texas was no great disgrace, even if the score was rather humiliating, to follow it with a defeat to Wake Forest completely erased Carolina from the national football spotlight this year. Maybe now the Tar Heels will settle down and begin to play the brand of ball of which they're capable.

Anyway, now we can all be home for New Year's!!

BEFORE THAT DAY of celebration rolls around—in the next seven weeks to be more exact—the Tar Heels have a rough row of games to plow through. The teams on their schedule that were supposed to be tough customers are—and the ones that were not supposed to be are also.

And one of these tough teams comes up on the grid card this coming weekend in the person of William and Mary. According to Coach Crowell Little, who scouted the Indians, the Tar Heels will have another difficult job on their hands. Only difference between this week and the ones just past is that Jack Cloud will be the main offensive threat in place of Tom Fetzer, Bobby Layne, and Johnny Rauch.

TALLY TIME is back again and the standings of the sports staff prediction board has been revised, although yours truly remained down in fourth place. Morty Schaap, leader for the past two weeks, turned up with a miserable score of eight correct out of 20 and slipped all the way to third place. His spot at the top of the pack was taken by Bill Lamkin, who registered the classy score of 14. Jake Wade and yours truly tied for second with 11 and Bill Carmichael was fourth with 10. "The Shadow" followed.

The two ties on the list failed to help the averages, which appear below for the full three weeks:

	G	R	W	Pct.
Bill Lamkin	60	38	22	.633
Jake Wade	60	35	25	.583
Morty Schaap	60	34	26	.567
Bob Goldwater	60	33	27	.550
Bill Carmichael	60	31	29	.517

Allen Chooses Soccer Outfit For First Tilt

Soccer coach Marvin Allen disclosed yesterday afternoon his probable traveling squad and starting lineup for Friday's season opener against Loyola University in Baltimore.

Seventeen or 18 men will make the two-day trip to the Chesapeake Bay area which will wind up on Saturday, when the Tar Heels meet Navy's hard-kicking eleven.

The rest of this week's practice sessions will be spent in polishing the locals' offense and defense with an emphasis on their kicking.

Forward Wall

Others who will probably see action during the Maryland sortie include forwards Hank Pfautz, Bob Pum, Dave Ferebee, and Bill Moore. Halfbacks Gommer Williams and Duncan McCalman, fullback Basis Wood and goalie Dave Sobel are also slated for duty next weekend.

Student Managers

Allen also disclosed that Walt DuPre and Jim Merrit have been named as the student managers for the team.

There was also despair in Carolina soccer circles this week, for on Saturday afternoon some destructive motorist maliciously reduced one of the booters' temporary wooden goals to matchwood and thus cut the number of crossfield practice courts to one.

Chi O Downs CICA In Coed Volleyball

The coed volleyball tournament got under way last night with Chi Omega coming through in fine fashion to cop a decision and two other teams winning by forfeit.

The Chi O triumph was registered over CICA to the tune of 15-10. Tri Delt gained its first victory with a forfeit win over Carr, and the Town girls defeated Spencer in the same manner.

The WAA has announced that teams wishing to practice for the tournament may do so any afternoon between 4 and 6 o'clock.

Today's schedule:

7:15—Pi Phi vs Archer; 7:50—Alderman vs McIver; 8:25—Alpha Gam vs Smith.

Swimming Meeting

There will be a meeting of all smimming team candidates tomorrow at 3:45 in room 304 Woollen, Coach Dick Jamerson announced yesterday.

All prospective swimmers are asked to attend.

Mural Open Tennis Play Starts This Afternoon

The second section of the intramural tennis program gets under way this afternoon at four o'clock with the start of play in singles division. Many hotly contested matches are scheduled to be run off on the clay courts today as men with tournament and varsity experience play the first round of the open singles. Top match of the day will see Charles Rice, varsity team member, pitted against Bob Luxemberg, a new man on the campus with the reputation of an excellent racquet wielder.

Several matches in the novice division will be played in addition to those scheduled in the open singles. These last novice matches will conclude the first round in that division.

Coach Raab asked that all players scheduled to play on the varsity courts see Coach Kenfield about obtaining the court. He also pointed out that any contestant who desires to play at a time other than the scheduled time should contact his opponent and the intramural office.

Several matches have been forfeited in the past week due to the fact that players did not know when their match was scheduled. Director Raab reminded all contestants that the complete schedules are printed in the Daily Tar Heel, and are posted in numerous places on the campus.

Ruffing, Lee Released By Chicago White Sox

Chicago, Oct. 13—(UP)—The Chicago White Sox today announced the release of Charlie Ruffing and Thornton Lee from their mound staff.

Both hurlers are old-timers among the American league pitchers. The 43-year-old Ruffing, who had his best years with the New York Yankees during the pennant-winning years of 1936-39, joined the White Sox last winter. Lee has been with the Chicago club since 1937.

Splash Club to Meet

The Splash club, the swimming club sponsored by the Women's Athletic association, will hold a meeting in the Woman's gym this afternoon at 4 o'clock, chairman Bill Henderson announced yesterday.

Requirements for membership in the club will be announced soon.

Snavely Gives Gridders Rest After Defeats

Carolina's twice-beaten Tar Heels took a day off yesterday afternoon, as Coach Carl Snavely decided his charges needed a little rest before starting preparations for Saturday's clash with William and Mary.

The Tar Heels came out of last weekend's encounter in fair physical condition, with the possible exception of Sid Varney, who has a bad arm injury which is not as serious as first expected. He may see service against the Indians.

This afternoon the Tar Heels will return to the practice fields to begin a new week's work. It will be the second straight week that the local lads have been trying to find the victory trail, and this week all hands have high spirits of returning the Carolina entry to its old form.

There will be much hard work this week on defense, especially pass defense. Texas and Wake Forest both had sensational passing teams and the Tar Heels could not break up their tosses. William and Mary, according to advance notices is not exactly inept in the airways, either, and the Indians are expected to go all out this week in that department.

As the situation now stands, there will be no definite changes in the Tar Heel lineup from the Deacon encounter. Whether any shake-ups will occur will not be ascertainable until much later in the week.

Scout Crowell Little has reported that the Indians have a powerful line, sparked by Guard Knox Ramsey, and a fine backfield, headed by Jack Cloud. The latter, All-Conference in 1946, is a much improved player, Little added with regret.

MARYLAND TICKETS ON SALE

The Athletic department has announced that it has 400 tickets to sell for the Carolina-Maryland game in Washington on November 15. The seats lie between the 35 and 45-yard lines.

Basketball Cut Set for Today

Coach Tom Scott will make the first cut in his large squad of newcomers who are trying out for the Carolina basketball team following today's workout in Woollen gymnasium. The list of those players who got past the first cut will be posted by Scott on Wednesday.

Drills at Woollen yesterday consisted of short scrimmages between various teams of boys out for the squad. This same plan of work will be followed tomorrow, after which Scott and his assistants will decide which of the candidates will continue to work out.

The practices will get into full swing next week, when all the holdovers from last year's varsity and junior varsity squads report. Prospects are fairly good, with a number of lettermen slated to report for action. Among these are Coy Carson, King Cole, John Dillon, Dick Hartley, Sandy Hoft, Norm Kohler, Bill Miller, Nemo Nearman, Dan Nyimicz, Bob Paxton, Rip Ryan, Roger Scholbe, Fred Swartzburg, Vic Seixas, Taylor Thorne, Ed Wagner, and Harvey Weinstein.

Paxton, a veteran of several great Carolina teams in recent years, will captain this year's quint.

Sigma Chi Elects Officers for Year

At their weekly meeting last Wednesday night Sigma Chi elected the following officers for the coming year:

Consul, Jack Thompson; Pro-Consul, Wayne Johnson; Annotator, Carroll Fisher; Queastor, Bud Johnson; Magister, Len Butts; Associate-Editor, Paul Finch; Tribune, Gus Johnstone; Historians, George Scholl and Buddy Lyons.

On Friday evening the fraternity presented an informal dance which was held in honor of the new officers. Entertainment was provided by the Sigma Chi sextette and Miss Lucille Arnette. Refreshments rounded out the evening's activities.

New Plan Proposed For Refugee Care

Washington, Oct. 13—(UP)—Three house members today proposed a new plan to admit refugees into various countries of the United Nations.

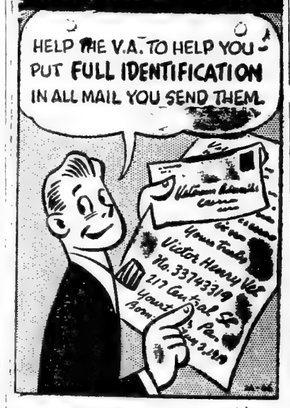
The members — Democratic Representative Frank Chelf of Kentucky, and two Republicans, James Fulton of Pennsylvania and Jacob Javits of New York —say they will urge that the UN consider their plan immediately.

Under their proposal, refugees will be admitted on a pro rata basis to countries willing to accept them.

Chelf predicted that the International Refugee organization will endorse the plan. He said he intends to try to arrange an immediate appointment with Secretary of State Marshall.

He claims that all present D-P bills before Congress have "the wrong approach to the problem."

GLEE CLUB PROSPECTS



All coeds interested in becoming members of the women's glee club are cordially invited to a coke party in Hill hall at 4:15 this afternoon.

Local Restaurants Ignore Meatless Day

By Earl Heffner

President Harry S. Truman, should he have visited Chapel Hill yesterday, would have been disheartened at the sight of half the municipality's restaurants and cafes serving meat on Tuesday, in direct violation of the Chief Executive's request for meatless Tuesdays.

During the noon hours yesterday, a Daily Tar Heel reporter made a personal survey of the menus of various town eating establishments.

Three Serve Meat

While no itemized listing was made of the meats offered on the menus, three of the six establishments open for business at that hour had customers who were partaking of meat courses.

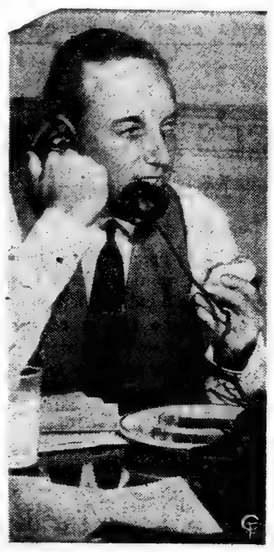
Two of the Franklin street food emporiums—the Carolina Coffee shop and the Marathon—were closed. But such is the Tuesday custom of the Marathon.

Complying with the President's wishes, judging by meals before customers, were the College Sandwich shop, Danziger's and Harry's. Each of these establishments were serving meat substitutes such as chicken or fish.

Joining these two in serving substitutes was the Carolina Inn.

Balance Score

But to balance the score in accordance with national opinion which is said to be split fifty-fifty as to whether the meatless Tuesday should be observed, were three establishments—the University, the Campus, and Gooch's.



Noted on the tables before some of its customers—for the most part consisting of University students—were such meats as hamburger, veal steak, and pork chops.

This was meatless Tuesday in Chapel Hill.

On campus, the story was similar with Lenoir dining hall serving meat substitutes while an uncounted and undetermined number of fraternities failed to join the ranks of the one-day-a-week vegetarians.

In short, the second meatless Tuesday in Chapel Hill was not similar to that of Charles Luckman, chairman of the President's Food Conservation committee, who on meatless days limits his lunch to a cheese sandwich and a glass of milk.

Meanwhile, reports indicate that over the nation, the drive to conserve food in order to aid Europe's starving millions is meeting strong opposition from selfish American pocketbooks and stomachs.

While many Chapel Hill establishments served meat yesterday in defiance of President Truman's request, Charles Luckman, chairman of the Chief Executive's Food Conservation committee, takes time off from work to eat his Tuesday lunch — a cheese sandwich and a glass of milk.

IFC Rules Committee Announces Meeting To Indoctrinate All Fraternity Rushees

Following a meeting of the Interfraternity council Rules committee, chairman Meigs Golden announced that an "orienration to rush week" meeting will be held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock in Hill hall.

This meeting, although not compulsory, is a "must" for all freshmen, transfers or other new students who are interested in joining some fraternity and have received at least one formal bid to visit a fraternity house during rush week, Golden said.

Begins at 3

Formal rushing is scheduled to begin at 3 o'clock, immediately following the meeting. Golden explained, "The main purpose is to instruct the men as to fraternity plans and procedures and emphasize certain restrictions accompanying rush week at Carolina."

Handbooks will be distributed by the IFC outlining rushing rules. Men will have explained to them in detail the rules which they must follow during the week and will be urged to acquaint themselves thoroughly with them so as to avoid violations.

The committee also announced the procedure IFC will use in issueing formal invitations to join. On Wednesday, October 29, all men who have been rushed formally and are interested in joining some fraternity must report to Memorial Hall between the hours of 3 and 6 o'clock in the afternoon to pick up their formal invitations to join.

It was emphasized by the group in this connection that because a man has been rushed by a fraternity informally since the beginning of school or formally during rush week it does not necessarily mean that the man will receive an invitation to join that fraternity.

Therefore, the rushee must report to Memorial Hall on October 29 to obtain his invitation. He must then go to Gerrard Hall and pay the IFC fee of one dollar which will then entitle him to go to the house of his choice. A table will be set up by the IFC for this purpose.

Failure of rushees to comply with any of these regulations will result in their being dealt with by the Interfraternity Council Court, Golden said.

Formal bid cards were issued by the IFC at their weekly meeting Monday night in Graham Memorial. A condensation of rushing rules have been printed on the back and carry such reminders to the men as, "Your failure to visit any fraternity from which you receive an invitation will render you ineligible to join or be pledged to any social fraternity at the University of North Carolina for the period of one year."

Freshmen are warned to refrain from giving too many dates in advance in order that they may make engagements with other fraternities.

Water Filter Plant To Be Constructed On Local 12 Acres

The constuction of a new water filter plant, with a capacity of three million gallons, for the University and the surrounding area was announced yesterday by Collier Cobb, Jr., chairman of the Trustees' Building committee.

Purchase of the 12-acre site, located beyond Carrboro on the road to University Lake, was completed Monday by the committee and A. D. Bond, the former owner of the property. Contracts for the construction should be let as soon as the State Advisory Budget commission has approved the designs, Cobb explained. The designing of the plant will be done by the William C. Olsen company of Raleigh.

Because of the critical shortage in drinking water suffered by the University community during recent months, Cobb said that "as soon as the plans are completed, the approval of the state commission should be forthcoming."

The new plant will be designed to serve 30,000 people, including Carrboro, the University student body, Chapel Hill, and surrounding localities. This is expected to solve the area's water problem for some years to come, as there will be room on the filter site for the expanding of facilities to supply 100,000 water users. The site was chosen with care by the committee from six other alternates, Cobb concluded, and is just a short distance away from University Lake, which is the source of the community's water supply. Pipes will be laid down the road from the lake to the new plant.

Frame Buildings To Get Heat Soon

"We should get heat into all the temporary classrooms within the next 10 days," J. S. Bennett, University building supervisor promised yesterday.

During the temporary respite afforded by the current mild weather, University building authorities have been busily engaged in searching for the needed pipe or a serviceable substitute. Bennett said they had managed to procure a quantity of footage of steel pipe from Army buildings at Camp Butner near Durham. If they can obtain outside pipe for the necessary insulation, the installations can be quickly made, Bennett explained. Pipes made of an asbestos and cement composition will be used if the University is unable to get any more steel.

"We have already got the heating operating in four or five of the structures," Bennett concluded.

Coast Guard Favor Ends as Boomerang

Rockaway Beach, New York, Oct. 14—(UP)—A Rockaway Beach gasoline station owner who thought he was doing the coast guard a favor got the scare of his life today when the object he thought was a marker buoy turned out to be a 400-pound mine.

Irving Chick saw the object floating in Jamaica Bay near his gas station. He lifted it to the bulkhead with a tow truck and then called the coast guard to tell them he had found a buoy. The coast guard sent two of its men to the scene. They immediately identified the spear-shaped object as a mine.

Police say that the mine is so rusted that it is impossible to identify its nationality.

Eye-Witness

An American in Europe

By John P. Kennedy, Jr.

(Editor's note: The following article is part of the observations of John P. Kennedy, Jr., a student at the University, who spent last year in England and in Europe. His opinions are not necessarily those of the staff.)

America today is incredibly rich, prosperous, and sleek. If we could see ourselves as visitors from the world outside see us, we should say, not only that Americans have that strange habit of chewing gum and that they walk with a kind of looseness that identifies them anywhere, but also that they are rich, that they all wear brand-new clothes, that nearly every family has an enormous car, and that every meal is a huge feast.

Last month I returned from a visit of a year in England and on the Continent, and I was surprised, when I landed in this country, at our amazing prosperity, at our bright neckties, at the extreme politeness of the South, and surprised also to see that we American university students are so little concerned about contemporary world problems.

Students in "pubs" at Oxford and Cambridge and in cafes on the Boulevard St. Michel are more concerned with the ideological conflict between Russia and America and the problem of rebuilding Europe than we are. We, Dr. Craig has pointed out, whose country is a principal in the ideological war, are hardly concerning ourselves at all to strengthen our position. We, on this side of the Atlantic, do not realize how real the threats to world peace of hunger, cold, and

Musical Merry-Go-Round to Be Presented By University's Communications Center

Young people all over North Carolina will hop onto a Musical Merry-Go-Round October 25, a week from this Saturday, when the University's Communication center presents the first program in a new radio series of great music for children from 10:45 to 11 in the morning.

The show will be carried by stations of the Tobacco network and may be heard locally over WRAL in Raleigh, announced Earl Wynn, Director of the Communication Center.

Highlighting music to be played this concert season by the North Carolina Little symphony and the full symphony orchestra, "Musical Merry-go-round" will feature recorded excerpts, student soloists and a musical quiz.

Stuart Lucas, University senior, will direct the shows. Production of the series will be under the supervision of Earl Wynn, and Miss Jane Grills.

Next Saturday's "Musical Merry-go-round" will include Ferde Grofe's "Grand Canyon Suite," the Russian song "Meadowland" by Knipper and "The Little White Donkey" by Ibert.

The program is only one of five separate series of weekly radio programs that will originate in the newly-constructed studios of the Communication Center. A schedule of programs will be printed at the beginning of next week.

SCHW Meets To Assist Unions

Fall activities of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare will get under way this evening at 7:30 when the organization meets at the Presbyterian church to discuss several new programs.

According to Chairman Georgia Ethridge, the local group will continue to work for recognition of the United Public workers, CIO, by the University.

During the summer session the group undertook, along with several other campus organizations, to bring to the attention of the student body the fact that employees of the University who belong to the union are denied the right of collective bargaining. This situation has arisen, conference members explained, because the University's trustees have passed a resolution which makes it impossible for any official in the administration to recognize the existence of a union.

Conference members here are also planning to discuss ways and means of taking action against the current high cost of living at this evening's meeting.

YWCA Outlines Committee Work For Coeds Here

The campus YWCA, in order to fulfill its fundamental purpose—"to live more fully and more creatively through a growing knowledge of God, and to have a part in making this life possible for all people"—has organized several discussion and service committees to suit the needs of all coeds.

Rev. Father F. J. Morrissey, assistant pastor of the Roman Catholic church, spoke Monday to the You and Your Religion committee, outlining the underlying principles of Catholicism. He stressed the continuity of the Church as handed down from Christ to Saint Peter, through the Bishops of Rome, who are the Popes. He also emphasized the distinction between the absolutism of the Church as contrasted with the relative qualities of Protestantism.

The weekly meetings of this committee are open to the public, and will from now on be held Thursday evenings at 7 o'clock in the YMCA library. At the next meeting, on October 23, a business meeting and discussion will be held. Jeanne Basnight and Helen Compton are co-chairmen of the committee.

At Monday's meeting of the Public Affairs committee, headed by Jo Fishel, chairman, and Mary Anne Daniel, secretary, two films, "The Northeastern Region" and "The Southeastern Region" were shown, and Mr. Harry Williams of the sociology department spoke briefly on the meaning of region and regionalism.

The political problems of the South will be discussed at next week's meeting, to be held at 5 p.m. Monday in the Town Girls room of the Y. All meetings of this committee are open to the public.

Mrs. N. B. Adams of the extension department of the library spoke briefly on Monday to the Career committee, of which Doris Harrell is chairman, outlining materials on vocations available in the library and where to find them. This committee's meetings are also open to the public, and their plans for the year include vocational interest and aptitude tests, talks by interviewers from large companies, and other aids

Legislature to Vote On $1200 Measure For Student Record

The most heated Student Legislative session of the year is expected Thursday night as a bill comes to the floor from the finance committee asking that $1200 be appropriated to the Publications Board for the setting up and publishing of the Student Government Record.

Although the establishing of the Record was approved by the Legislature during the summer, this bill to appropriate funds for it, has received an unfavorable report from the finance committee, according to Jack Folger, Speaker of the Legislature. The publication was designed to inform the students of the University of the proceedings of the Student Legislature. It was to be released twice each term.

Confirmation of two more executive appointments will be asked of the lawmakers in their third meeting of the year Thursday. Walter Arnold and Tom Lockhart have been named by Tom Eller, President of the Student Body, to seats in the Student Legislature. No opposition to these appointments is foreseen.

A bill to investigate the possibilities for a so-called "Community Chest" will be brought out of committee with a report by Bob Collins who originally introduced the bill last Thursday evening. The "Chest" as proposed would limit the various drives each year of the Red Cross, Cancer Prevention Society, etc. to one major drive for all. The funds would be controlled by a board to whom the charities would apply for aid.

ROBBED!

St. Louis, Oct. 14—(UP)—Police at St. Louis were called out to investigate a reported burglary today.

Finding an open window, they left their fingerprint equipment and a flashlight on the window sill while they interviewed the proprietor. When they returned, the print set and flashlight were gone.

Light Vote Of 1,051 Defeats Art Melton

By Chuck Hauser

With a light vote of 1,051, UP and CP candidates Ruth Evans, Gene Johnstone, and Harold Bursley took over the editorship of the Yackety-Yack last night with an almost three to one lead over their Student party opponent, Art Melton.

Johnstone, Evans, and Bursley, running as a board of editors for the University yearbook, received 781 votes out of the total cast, while Melton got 270.

Office Vacant

The office of Yack editor was left vacant at the end of the summer when Bill Moffitt, who was elected on a triple-party ticket last spring, handed in his resignation.

Almost two weeks ago the Student Legislature passed a bill calling for a special election scheduled for yesterday to fill the post.

Johnstone Comments

When informed of the board of editors' victory last night, Gene Johnstone, who is also president of the Publications board, released the following comment on the outcome of the election:

"Speaking for the board, I would like to thank the student body for the confidence it has expressed in us. We intend to do everything within our power to give Carolina a yearbook that she can take pride in as a reminder of this memorable year."

District Counts

Tabulations of votes by districts are as follows: Gerrard hall: Board—446, Melton—119; Aycock dormitory: Board—220, Melton—76; Lenoir hall: Board—50, Melton—44; Alderman dormitory: Board—65, Melton—30.

Students of Albemarle Plan New Year's Dance

Students from the Albemarle or north eastern section of North Carolina who are interested in organizing a New Year's Eve dance will meet in Gerrard Hall at 5 o'clock this afternoon. If a sufficient number does not appear, the plan will be abandoned.

Tides Damage Wrightsville Beach

Wrightsville Beach, Oct. 14—(UP)—Storm-borne high tides lashing Wrightsville beach have undermined a number of beach cottages and caused considerable damage. Police say waters rose a foot deep on several streets and two feet of the ocean strand has been cut away.

At Carolina Beach, police say no damage has been reported from the heavy rain and night wind resulting from the northward-bound Florida hurricane. The tide today was the highest veteran officers can remember in many years.

The city has turned out in force to help repair loose pilings supporting beach homes which have been battered by the waves. Police say one cottage on the landward end of the Atlantic View fishing pier at Carolina Beach has collapsed. Water and gas lines are also reported to have been undermined by the tides and the streets of the resort town are littered with seaweed and marsh grass.

University Club To Take Collection

Chuck Voigt, president of the University club, requests that all presidents of dormitories, sororities and fraternities who have not previously reported their appointments for representatives to the club please do so at once.

Tomorrow a table will be set up in the "Y" for collection of one dollar by all members so that a get-acquainted party may be held in the near future. President Voigt will be at the table between classes.

Meetings are held each Monday in the Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial at 7 o'clock.

This afternoon's jam session will be held in the Rendezvous of the student union from 3 until 6 o'clock, with Harry Shippman acting as moderator. A fourth year student majoring in music, Shippman is first sax and clarinet man with Johnny Satterfield's orchestra.

The program will consist of three hours of completely unrehearsed playing without sheet music. All student musicians and the general public are invited. Upon entering the room musicians will be asked to register. Six or eight man combinations, each to play a few numbers of their own choosing, will be chosen from the registration lists.

If possible, those planning to participate, with the exception of bass fiddlers and drummers, should bring their own instruments.

Enter the Villians: Curbstone Bandits

University students, car owners and otherwise, are riled over the recent decision of the Chapel Hill alderman's unanimous decision to install parking meters on the main drag and also on Columbia street from the police station to the Carolina Inn. Opposition to the proposed measure has grown to such a degree that the Order of the Grail discussed the matter thoroughly Monday night and decided to do all within its power to put an immediate stop to the proposal before final action is taken by the Alderman next Monday night. At the Grail meeting a spokesman was appointed to present their innumerable protests.

And these protests are justifiable. Granted that there is a traffic problem in Chapel Hill, the parking meters will not solve it. If parking meters are placed in front of the fraternity houses on Columbia street then the owners of the vehicles will have to drive their auto to class thus defying a request issued by University officials last spring, asking that all students living within one-half mile of the campus leave their autos at their residences and walk to class.

It would be highly impractical for a student to leave his auto parked in a parking space with a meter and rush back between classes to insert a coin to cover his next class period. The shopping district of Chapel Hill is expanding in the direction of Carrboro. When the new markets, and places of business are established in new quarters it will alleviate a great deal of the parking problem on Franklin street. The University is in an unusual period. Most of the owners of autos are veterans. After the crop of veterans graduate there will be a tremendous decrease in the number of autos. Veterans, living on th GI benefits are on the average the only students who are financially able to support an auto while they are in college.

It is our belief that the Chapel Hill aldermen will regret the installation of the parking meters if they are unwise enough to do so. With the existing conditions enumerated above, it seems a highly impractical thing to do. And there will be numerous student organizations and individuals fighting such a measure.

Select Publication Editors by Board

Tomorrow night the Dialectic senate will debate the pro and con concerning the electing of student publication editors. Here are a few pointers which the members of the Senate should note:

According to the authorities on the subject, there are two different conceptions of what is meant by "freedom of the press" as stated in the Constitution of the United States. One conception is that an editor of a publication has free reign in printing the news—he need not withhold any accurate information. Also the editor must reserve space in his publication to print pertinent comments from the reader.

Another faction believes that "Freedom of the press" means that any individual is free to publish a publication of his own expressing his thoughts and ideas—even if it is just a mimeographed sheet that he slaps on the side of a barn. These two concepts must be correlated in a student publication.

In many Universities such as Duke university, editors are selected by a board consisting of student and faculty members which is familiar with the accomplishments of the journalists on the campus and are therefore qualified for the job of selecting editors. If an editor is selected in this manner then there are no strings attaching him to the party which put him into office. He is free to observe the political scene and evaluate the individual candidates on their merits rather than their affiliations. This is highly desirable in a student publication. The front page coverage of the pre-election struggle must not be directed toward one single party of candidates. Each must be given space to introduce their platforms and ideas to the voters.

Then, too, there is the question of abilities. A publication is just as good as its leadership. And since the editor appoints his other departmental heads, it is necessary that they be appointed on merit rather than the "spoils system."

Community Chest and Y Proposal

The YMCA passed an innocent motion at a cabinet meeting Monday night, placing the YM on record with the YW as "favoring the establishment of a board to schedule and control various charity drives during the year." Their motion is important in that it opposes another suggestion, widely discussed on the campus and already in a committee of the legislature, that would establish a Carolina Community Chest.

The "Y" members placed on record their opposition to the Community Chest, in that they feel that one large chest and one large single drive would delete the individual effectiveness of certain causes which are considered more worthwhile and of more interest to the college student.

The proposed Board would receive all requests for drives from sponsoring organizations and would schedule and supervise the collections on the campus. It is possible that through such a plan, many small drives can be combined into one, with special emphasis placed on such large campaigns as the WSSF and American Red Cross.

It is expected that the proposal will be considered at the next meeting of the Legislature. Supporters of the Chest project and of the "Y" board proposal will probably encounter strong opposition to their respective suggestions. No student will deny the burden of digging into his pocket for seven dozen various drives during the year. It will be a welcome change to have organization in the drives, if the legislators see fit to adopt such a new system for campus collections.—(B.B.

We Better Be Sure

Communism are. And yet the fate of Europe can affect our lives as immediately and profoundly as the fate of our neighbors next door.

The problem of determining the part America ought to play in the world is, admittedly, enormous, but the first step in our role seems clear—the Marshall Plan. Western Europe has accepted it gratefully and enthusiastically. It has had enormous newspaper publicity, most of it flattering to America. If we fail now to follow through with our plan after arousing the hopes of Europe or if we follow through with too little and too late, we shall suffer an irreparable defeat in world public opinion.

Europe's need of our help is very real—that is apparent to anyone traveling there now—and the time allotted for getting the help to her is not long. Most of us know that last winter was the most severe in many, many years, but many of us do not know that the cold winter was followed in Europe by a mercilessly dry summer. France, a country that can just about supply herself with wheat under normal circumstances, had three-fourths of her winter wheat acreage damaged by the prolonged cold. There was not enough good seed to resow, in spring wheat, as much of the land as should have been resown.

Low wheat prices, held down by the government to fight a very dangerous inflation, may have encouraged some farmers to feed wheat to animals. The crop brought to market fell far below needs. Other crops were similarly cut down, not only by a winter that extended far into the spring, but also by a summer that has been so dry that in some parts of France even the trees have withered. As a result all foods are scarce and high.

The French bread ration this past summer has been 250 grams a day or about three slices of heavy French bread. The French ordinarily eat a great deal of bread with their ubiquitous soup and cheese, and three slices, when other food is very expensive, is very little indeed. Late in the summer the ration was reduced to 200 grams, lower than it ever went during the war, and officials in Paris fear that the allotment may even sink to 150 grams before the winter is out. The last cut brought strikes and demonstrations. Can another cut be sustained without bringing the fall of the present government and the accession of the Communists? This is a question that America cannot afford to gamble on.

(Next: Communists in Europe. To be concluded tomorrow.)

Vets of the World-- Unite!

Washington—Chat Paterson, national chairman of the American Veterans Committee (AVC), today announced the appointment of an AVC committee to work for the creation of United Nations Veterans' League.

"We call upon the veterans of the world to join in common through the creation of a United Nations Veterans' League," Paterson said. "We hope through the formation of this international group representing veterans from countries which fought together in the war to create a feeling of unity among world veterans."

"We hope that this group will eventually be recognized by the United Nations and be in a position to act in an advisory capacity to the UN in its constant effort to maintain world peace and security," he declared.

Paterson said that AVC had been in communication with veterans groups in Norway, France, South Africa, England, Czechoslovakia, and Brazil.

Paterson said that he is appointing Charles G. Bolte and Gilbert Harrison, past chairman and vicechairman of AVC, respectively, as co-chairmen of the AVC committee set up to form the Veterans League.

"One of AVC's major projects during the year will be the implementation of a convention mandate for AVC to take the lead in calling together an International Veterans Congress," he said. "I can think of no two men more fitted to represent AVC in this important undertaking than the men who founded and guided AVC in its first years."

"We hope to arrange a preparatory conference in England next spring among representatives of veterans groups," Paterson said. "Both Bolte and Harrison are in England and in an ideal position to make the preliminary arrangements." (Bolte is attending Oxford on a Rhodes scholarship and Harrison is also a student at Oxford.)

In addition to arranging for continuous liaison among world veterans organizations, AVC's committee will undertake to gather information concerning veterans' problems in other countries and to formulate an educational program on the world problems of veterans.

Blinding Glare Fades

Let's Keep Amateur Spirit

By Joe Allen & Lee Knowls

As the blinding glare of the "National Limelight" fades from our picture of our football team the lasting importance of athletics in general and football in particular emerges. We have been over-exposed to press clippings, publicity, ballyhoo, outside professional opinions of our own importance and the whole routine has left us with an under-exposed picture of the reasons we cheer for our team, regardless of its national standing, win, lose or draw, every Saturday of the football season.

We cheer it and support it because it is ours and represents us, because the men playing out there are our fellow students sharing with us the pleasures, privileges and responsibilities of playing, studying and being at the University.

They have won the privilege to represent us on the gridiron by their excellence as athletes. To us they symbolize our own desire to work hard and play hard, to develop and excel in mind and body on and off the athletic field. We are not let down when they have failed to win nor discouraged about the future any more than any one of us give up or becomes less determined and interested in doing our best when another human being is momentarily more successful. The spark of competition with others strikes hardest when it is first struck within ourselves by liking what we are doing or trying to do for its own sake, not because others, who are only professionally concerned, think we are great. In other words we are amateurs (lovers of what we do) and want to become and by our interest in and loyalty to the amateur within ourselves our future standing and ability after college is determined.

In this best sense of the word let us keep our amateur spirit at Chapel Hill and keep our football team in the limelight of our own spirited union as fellow students here to spend the years enjoying the opportunity, the big opportunity we have to develop ourselves. We might remember that opportunity knocks more than once. In college it's there all the time.

After any test, no matter how successful or disastrous, a team or an individual is only as good as the next time out. Even Notre Dame and 'L'il Abner' keep going on this fact. Look northward to Annapolis for a wonderful example of this. There, a Navy team, which no one will deny is superlative in fight and latent ability, lost 10 straight with no loss to themselves.

There are numerous other examples of college teams all over the country, teams which represent schools far wealthier and larger than UNC, teams which very seldom head for one of the various bowls at the end of the season, teams which, nevertheless, are cheered wildly and well throughout the season.

In fact we would do very well to be far more interested in the rest of the season than if things had turned out differently, for now we have a team which is much more ours and much less the concern of the national sportswriters and publicity experts.

Write Away

Advice: Let's Be Buddies

The Daily Tarheel:

In this afternoon's edition of the Greensboro Record, we note that Coach Carl Snavely is a lonely and puzzled man.

We do not pretend to be coaches, but we have been around enough to know that sometimes people are too close to their work to see the errors that are being committed. And being loyal Carolina alumni we write this letter in hopes that it might have some effect upon the Carolina team.

Let's look first at what Carolina has:

1) A smart, astute coach who knows his football.

2) Material that any college in the country would be glad to have.

But there can be no denying that she has not been delivering. Under such conditions there can usually be only one answer. There is no team work. Each man is playing his dead level best. But he is playing an individual game instead of a team game. It has been rumored that there is jealousy among the players as a result of some of them getting more for their efforts than others. As a result these players are spending their efforts to make an individual show rather than a team show.

Now, don't misunderstand us. We cannot believe that any Carolina man would agree to play ball for certain considerations and then consciously lay down even if he were jealous of another player. But we also know enough of psychology to know that his efforts will not bring results they should because his heart is not in it. We will offer a suggestion which, if followed in sincerity, we believe will result in Carolina not only winning her remaining games but in winning them by large margins.

Get all the players and coaches together. Then bring these petty jealousies out in the open. Let each man openly admit to every other man on the squad that he has been jealous or mad or disgusted with whatever player it is that he has his grudge against. Let the coach say the same thing. Then, let them all sincerely (and we emphasize the sincere angle, for unless the boys are sincere there will be no results) apologize to one another.

They say it takes guts to play football. It takes a lot more guts for men to get their petty jealousies out in the open and to admit to other men that they have been acting like school kids in Public School No. 9.

A couple of Carolina Alumni,
Chuck and Bob

More Football

Dear Sir:

A large part of the discussion and opinion which was printed in Sunday's Daily Tar Heel on the subject of the football team's defeat by Wake Forest appears to me to display the poorest sort of taste and sportmanship, if not a distorted idea of the significance of sporting events in general. I do not believe that in this case the view taken by the Daily Tar Heel corresponds to the feeling of the student body, and as a member of that body, I wish to protest against being misrepresented publicly.

A football game is a sporting event. Under the term "sportsmanship" I do not understand the whining, and the criticism of a team for failing to win, once, twice or any number of times. The team does the playing. We bystanders have every opportunity to play, if we are able to do it better. The team does not quit playing because the day goes against them. But it appears that the Daily Tar Heel feels that the onlookers get pretty tired of losing, pretty quickly. I have been told that one of the chief benefits of football as a college sport is that it builds up a fine group spirit and teaches the principles of fair play and civilized courtesy toward opponent and team mate. Maybe it does only for the players.

It may or may not have been, finally, anything which actually happened on the field that caused the defeat of the team by Texas and Wake Forest. But whatever it was, it is the mark of a fool or a barbarian to beat a horse for having failed to win a race. I personally would like to congratulate the men who played for their fine spirit and excellent form.

Praises Laundry

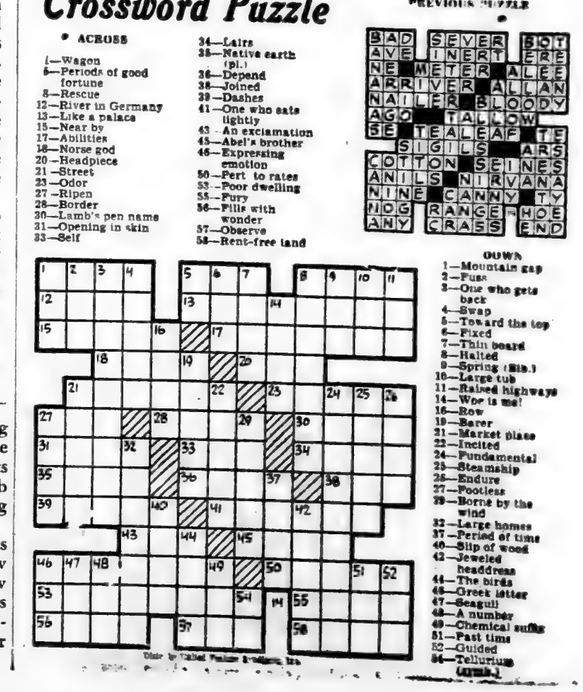
Dear Sir:

The column headed, "Laundry Bother You? Grin and Wear It." in last Saturday's DTH was cleverly written and highly amusing.

However, I would like to offer a word of praise for the University Laundry. After the bitter experiences I have had with various laundering establishments in a number of cities and towns in these states over the past ten years when almost every week some of the activities so aptly described by Mr. Stallworth took place, and it seemed that half my time was spent in trips to the laundries seeking my missing garments, returning others' garments, or entering claims for irreparable damage, the service rendered by our local plant since my arrival here last June has been truly a joy.

Because of former difficulties, it is my habit to list carefully every item I send out, and to make an equally careful check of the items returned. The facts are these: during the whole summer, and including the one batch of laundry so far handled this fall,

Con



1) One button on a pajama coat was broken in half
2) One item, a hankerchief, belonging to another was included

Pro

1) Not one item was lost
2) Not one item was torn
3) Two old and thin sport shirts which were torn and ripped across the shoulders when sent to the laundry, came back neatly patched and carefully darned.

Interrogative Outlook

In a season that thus far has had quite an interrogative outlook, another question of great possible consequence has arisen, that ing the eligibility of one Charlie Justice of the University of rth Carolina. That is, if the whole matter is considered a ques-n, since Justice's status as a Southern Conference competitor as settled when the Asheville flyer first entered Carolina over year ago, at which time he was given a clean bill of health. Now it seems that up in Richmond a young lad signed a pro-ssional baseball contract with the consent of his parents but now nts to return to collegiate action as a member of the Richmond niversity football squad. His plea has been denied and he will ot be allowed to compete.

Following this decision, a certain Richmond lawyer raised the uestion of Justice's status in an eye-for-an-eye action, and seeks o disbar the local lad from Conference play also. According to he Virginia barrister, Justice at one time signed a professional ontract with the Philadelphia Eagles of the National Profession-l Football League, and therefore is a pro. This accusation is true, ut Elmer Layden, who was Commissioner of the League at that ime, returned the contract because of Justice's age at the time which made the contract invalid. This was aired before the Con-erence committee after Charlie's arrival at Carolina and no ac-ion was taken to prevent the boy from playing last season. Now hat the question has been brought up again, one Dean Fisher of State College has hopped on the band wagon and says the issue will come before the Conference executive committee Saturday morning in Durham. What the outcome will be is left to the imag-nation.

t is somewhat doubted that the Committee will reverse its own decision as the body is composed of three other gentlemen besides Mr. Fisher who have reputations for fair dealing and square shooting—Cooper of VMI, Eppley of Maryland, and Mc-Allister of the Citadel. Yet there are those who remember an ac-ion by the same group in the past several years—to prevent hose having played at the two service schools, Army and Navy, rom again participating in Southern Conference play. This was primarily to prevent the return of devastating Doc Blanchard to Carolina, since only one other player was affected by the ruling, and might be taken as a direct slap in the University's now bat-tered face. So there is a possibility that Justice may be ruled out of play come Saturday morning.

That would bring one to the question of what would be the University's position if Justice were barred? It is very possible that the Athletic Council of the school might be prompted to some drastic step possibly even to go so far as to remove the Tar Heel teams from the Southern Conference and establish local sports on an independent basis. Virginia did this when it felt it was not getting what it hoped to achieve by competition in the Conference and has done well for itself since its secession. All of this is, of course, pure speculation, but if the worse comes to worse, one must expect the worse.

The Swift Kick

All of which boils down to the fact that everyone seems to be trying to get into position to administer to the Tar Heels a proverbial kick while they are down. Which seems to go double for certain powers of the Conference who are relying on the Uni-versity's easy-going attitude to accept no matter how harsh a verdict they may hand down. In this case, they may be trying their luck and our patience once too often. Independence might add a new touch of individuality to the Tar Heel sports picture.

Needless to say, none of this talk and chatter has effected the modest and easy-going way of Charlie Justice. Charlie, who has a heart as big as Kenan Stadium, was back at his regular post on the Carolina practice gridiron yesterday, doing his best as were his teammates. Such are the makings of a great competitor.

Whatever may happen, the Tar Heels are expected to appear in Williamsburg this Saturday, and will, excepting a greater calam-ity than has befallen the locals for the past two Saturdays, be there by game time. After that, there just isn't any telling.

Tar Babies' Next Foe To Be State Jayvees

Carolina's undefeated Tar Baby gridders settled down yes-terday to begin the two weeks of hard work confronting them before their next contest.

The Carolina Jayvees will tangle with State's powerful Wolf Cub eleven on October 24, in Raleigh. The baby Wolves will be out to chew up the Tar Babies' perfect record by hand-ing the locals their first loss of their young season.

Coach Little was pleased by the Tar Babies' performance against the South Carolina Jay-vees in Columbia, S. C. last Fri-day night and he disclosed that the outstanding line play against the Bantamcocks by guard Dick Featheroff and cen-ter Irvin Holdash had earned them tryouts with the varsity in the very near future.

"Our defense played well against South Carolina," Coach Little remarked. "But our of-fense was lagging because of our lack of practice. However, it should improve during the two weeks of practice remaining before the State game."

This week the Jayvees will aid the varsity's preparation for the William and Mary clash by running Indian plays against the Tar Heels.

Tar Heels Resume Football Practice For Game With William & Mary Team

Carolina's Tar Heels got back down to heavy work at Navy field yesterday in preparation for their battle with William & Mary's powerful Indians in a Southern Conference scrap set for Williamsburg, Va., on Sat-urday.

Coach Carl Snavely, seeking a means of stopping the Tar Heels' losing streak at two games, sent his charges through one of their most lengthy prac-tice sessions recently. Snavely was forced to order the lights of Navy field turned on in or-der that the boys might see during the latter part of the drills.

Much of the afternoon was devoted to accustoming the Tar Heels to the William and Mary plays and that type of defense that the Indians of Rube Mc-Cray likely will employ. The Carolina Jayvees ran off the William and Mary plays, while later in the session the varsity reserves tried out the Indian de-fense against the Tar Heel plays.

Rodgers Moves Up

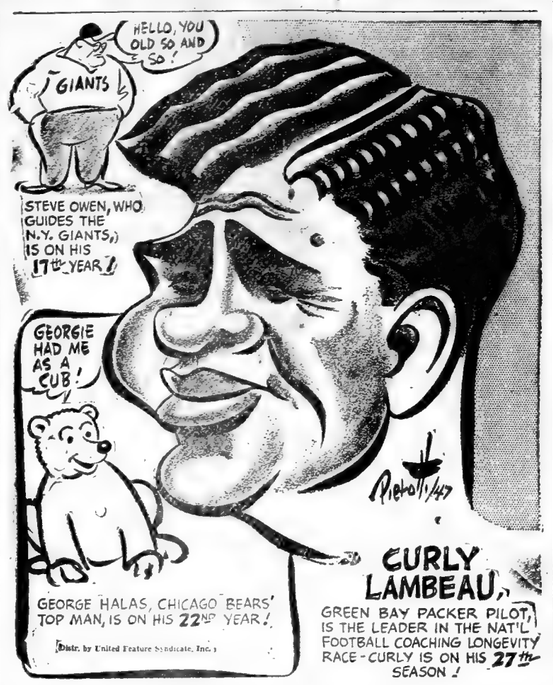
Hosea Rodgers was moved up to the first-string fullback post when the Carolina regulars ran through their plays during the workout, and his hard-running was one of the features of the afternoon. Rodgers also looked proficient in the passing depart-ment.

Carolina's pass defense, which was very poor in the 19-7 loss to Wake Forest last Saturday, also received attention from Coach Snavely.

Several key Tar Heels missed the rough work in the practice. Among these were Al Bernot, Dan Steigman, Haywood Fowle, and Jack Fitch. Guard Sid Var-ney is in the infirmary, nursing injuries to both his back and elbow.

Plenty of Pep

Despite the two recent losses to Texas and Wake Forest, the Tar Heels showed plenty of pep in the workout, and the entire squad is determined to get back to their winning ways against William and Mary.



The Williamsburg entry cur-rently is at the head of the perch in the Southern Confer-ence, boasting an undefeated record. The Indians have had a comparatively easy time in scor-ing victories over Davidson, the Citadel, and Virginia Tech. al-though the latter club gave Wil-liam and Mary some tough op-position until the last quarter.

None of the Indians' victories have been over particularly strong opposition, but McCray's boys now rate as the favorite team to cop the loop title. If they can get by the Tar Heels and Wake Forest, they should have smooth sailing on out.

Carolina defeated William and Mary last year, 21-7, in a game that was closer than the score indicated.

Swimmers Meet Today

There will be a meeting of all swimming team candidates this afternoon at 3:45 o'clock in 304 Woollen. Coach Dick Jamerson urges all prospective candidates to attend.

Only 72 Teams Remain Unbeaten

New York, Oct. 11—(UP)—A roundup of the nation's football scene reveals that 72 collegiate teams are still un-defeated and untied as the 1947 season moves into its fifth weekend of play.

A breakdown of the survey shows that the Midwest leads the pack with 24 teams that sport perfect records. The East comes next with 20, the South follows with 11, the Southwest has nine, the Pacific coast has eight, and the Rockies one.

Many sports fans will never have heard of some of the un-beaten clubs—teams such as Ellendale Normal of North Dakota, Pepperdine of Cali-fornia, Gustavus Adolphus of Minnesota, and Wilberforce State of Ohio. Others are per-enially among the nation's grid leaders.

Charlie "Choo-Choo" Jus-tice, the Asheville Express, who is running into quite a storm in the Southern con-ference, over his eligibility status.

The Executive committee of the conference will hold a spe-cial session, Saturday morning in Durham, to determine whether or not the express will be running on schedule.

Harriers Ready For Final Trial

The cross country team will go through a regulation meet time trial, this afternoon at 4 o'clock, to determine which men will take part in the meet with Georgia Tech here on Saturday.

Saturday's meet will get un-derway at Fetzer field at 11 o'clock. A cross country event is one of the few sporting events that the team with the lowest score wins. The total score is tabulated by the order of the finish and the school that fin-ishes five men first wins the meet. Score is given by the place position with the first man scor-ing one point, the second, two and so forth down the list until the five men have crossed the finish line. A perfect winning score for the sport is 15 points.

This year's harrier squad is a supposedly strong team but will probably run into more heavy going than the team of last year due to the strengthening of op-position.

The meet with the Yellow Jackets last year was held at Atlanta and Carolina took a 15-46 decision. The Engineers, however, got stronger as the season progressed and were fourth in the Southeastern con-ference event.

The leading member of the Tech squad will be little Johnny Corridan, who as a freshman last year turned in creditable per-formances in all the meets.

Carolina boasts eight return-ing lettermen plus three or four fine freshmen and new pros-pects. But as to who will be at the starting line when the gun goes off Saturday, that will be decided in hot competition this afternoon.

Basketball Squad Cut To 68 Players

Coach Tom Scott announced the list of 68 men who survived the first cut of the basketball squad late last night. These men are to report at the gym at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

The squad will be cut to ap-proximately 50 men by Monday, and this group in turn will be split into varsity, jayvee and freshmen squads.

All boys who have not attend-ed any of the practices thus far and who want to try out for the team, are requested to report to-day. No new boys will be allow-ed to report after the session this afternoon.

Working out in the gymna-sium this afternoon will be 68 candidates selected by Scott and his assistants from the freshmen and transfer students and any new men reporting.

The Carolina lettermen will report on Monday afternoon. Here is the list of palyers who are due to be on hand for that workout: Coy Carson, Fred Swartzburg, Nemo Nearman, Bill Miller, Bob Paxton, Dick Hartley, Roger Scholbe, Norm Kohler, Dan Nyicmicz, King Cole, Taylor Thorne, Vic Seixas, Rip Ryan, Harvey Weinstein, John Dillon, Ed Wagner, and Sandy Holt.

Yesterday another big squad of freshmen and transfer stu-dents were working out for the squad. Short scrimmages again comprised the day's work.

The following is the list of men who have survived the first cut of the basketball squad: Aldridge, William; Allsboro, Richard; Anlage, Ed; Baldwin, W. M.; Batts, John; Brookshire, James, A.; Brown, Bobby; Bur-gess, W. Dorm Elections Are Being Held

As elections of dormitory officers continues throughout this week and next Monday, Bill Hight, temporary president of the Interdormitory council, has announced that all dormitory officer elections which have been conducted prior to these are invalid.

Occupants of those dormitories in the lower quadrangle will vote today, those of Nash hall and the dormitories in the upper quadrangle vote tomorrow, and those in Steele, Old East, Old West, Whitehead, and Battle-Vance-Pettigrew cast ballots on Monday. The election hours will be from 8 in the morning until 9 o'clock at night.

The current polling system, outlined by student body president Tom Eller, eliminates nominations. Under the supervision of the dormitory advisors, ballot boxes will be placed in each dormitory, and the occupants will cast ballots on which they have written their room number and choices for officers.

After casting his ballot, each man will sign an honor pledge stating that he has adhered to the existing voting rules.

There will be a meeting of the newly elected presidents at 7:30 the night of October 27 in Graham Memorial, at which the new officers will be instructed in their duties.

Dave Beecher Misses Three Guesses To Win GM's Latest Football Contest

Missing only three guesses, Dave Beecher was declared winner of last week's Graham Memorial football contest. James Riley, 209 Aycock, had a similar entry, however Beecher was declared winner through having turned in his blank earlier. Of the 1550 entrants, only five foresaw a Wake Forest victory over the Tar Heels and roughly two-thirds predicted Carolina would take over where Texas left off and score an even 34 points against the Deacons.

An even dozen were runners-up in the grid quiz, all missing four predictions: R. B. Seligman, Charles Herty, Richard Lisk, Jack Peel, Ed Bagwell, Joe Zahran, Bob Edwards, Jim Hedrick, C. K. Royal, Harold Cummings, Joe Sills, John Gignilliat, and Roger Barnett.

This week's entry blank was printed on the sports page of yesterday's Daily Tar Heel. An extra one thousand entries were distributed to the YMCA and Graham Memorial offices this morning.

Last week's winner Dan Sullivan dove to a .500 average, and optimist-fullback Walt Pupa foresaw a 35-13 score in favor of the Tar Heels. Entrant Charlie Woodson did as well through merely filling out all of the left hand boxes in both columns. Optimist of the week Sam Whitehall saw a 12-touchdown 84-0 rout for Carolina.

In a group of the best predictions of the week six entrants foresaw the Duke-Navy tie.

INDEPENDENT COEDS

There will be an important meeting of the Carolina Independent Coed association tonight at 7:30 o'clock on the second floor of the "Y." All interested girls are urged to come, and plans for future social events are to be discussed.

DI SENATE TO MEET

The Di Senate will meet at 9 o'clock Wednesday evening in Old West to discuss a bill which would take the nomination of editors of campus publications out of the hands of political parties. Al Lowenstein will speak in favor of the bill.

Bull's Head Tea to Honor Hugh Holman, Chapel Hill Author

The first Bull's Head bookshop tea of the new term, honoring Hugh Holman, local author of five detective novels, will begin in the staff room on the ground floor of the library today at 4 o'clock.

Subject of the informal talk by Holman will be "Myths About the Detective Story."

An instructor of English and creative writing, Holman came to the University for graduate study from Clinton, S. C., where he served as academic dean of Presbyterian college. His most recent novel, "Another Man's Poison," was published in the spring by the M. S. Mill company of New York.

"All persons interested in creative writing, especially students, are invited to attend," said Mrs. N. B. Adams, hostess at the teas.

Veterans Group Supports Return Of Food Control

Branding President Truman's food conservation program as "a farcical half-way measure" the Chapel Hill chapter of the American Veterans committee came out Tuesday evening for "restoration of wartime food controls and restrictions on profiteering in food commodities" as the best means of meeting the current European crisis.

As a gesture of good will towards the veterans co-op store at Victory Village, the group voted to appropriate 20 dollars from its treasury for purchase of co-op stock. Also approved by the chapter was a petition drawn up by Henry Saunders advocating reforms in the method of leasing houses at Victory Village.

Van De Velde Elected

In the election which followed the meeting Jehan van de Velde, a sophomore and veteran of five year's service as an artillery lieutenant, was elected chairman to succeed Ben Rouzie. Rouzie was installed as vice-chairman, Martha Aiken as treasurer, Roland Giduz as recording secretary, and Rusty Kirsch, corresponding secretary.

Plans were discussed for sponsoring Representative Carl Durham of the district in an address on Universal Military training on October 29. Also passed was a telegram to Dr. Frank Graham urging him to come out for Indonesian independence in his capacity as a U. N. committee member.

Resolutions which would put the chapter on record as opposing Universal Military training and advocating the acceptance of negros in the University graduate school and proposed medical school met with sharp debate and were finally tabled for further investigation.

Radio Forum Will Discuss Possible War

"Need We Fight Russia?"—Four faculty members will thrash out this question next Thursday evening over the air when "The North Carolina Viewpoint," a new series of radio round-table forums, is presented from 8:30 to 8:55 by the University's Communication Center.

The broadcast will be carried by the Tobacco network and may be picked-up locally on stations WDUK and WRAL.

Dr. James L. Godfrey of the history department, Law school professor Frank W. Hanft and Dr. N. J. Demerath of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology will gather around the microphone in the new Swain hall radio studios to debate both sides of the "war with Russia" problems.

Moderator will be Dr. J. C. Lyons of the romance languages department. Earl Wynn, Director of the Communications Center, and Robert Schenkkan will produce the series.

Should teachers be encouraged to unionize? Is a Jewish state in Palestine practicable? Should we feed Europe? Can the United Nations work? How free is our free press? . . . These and other questions will be torn apart on subsequent programs in the series.

A full program of Communication Center radio shows with best stations for local reception will be printed at the beginning of next week.

JAZZ CLUB REORGANIZES

Mike Loftus has announced the reorganization of the popular Jazz Records club which will hold its opening meeting this afternoon at 5 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge No. 2.

At the request of a number of students, the club, formerly headed by Brad McCuen, will reassemble under new leadership.

Purpose of the club is to provide for exchanging and playing of records for the entertainment of interested music fans.

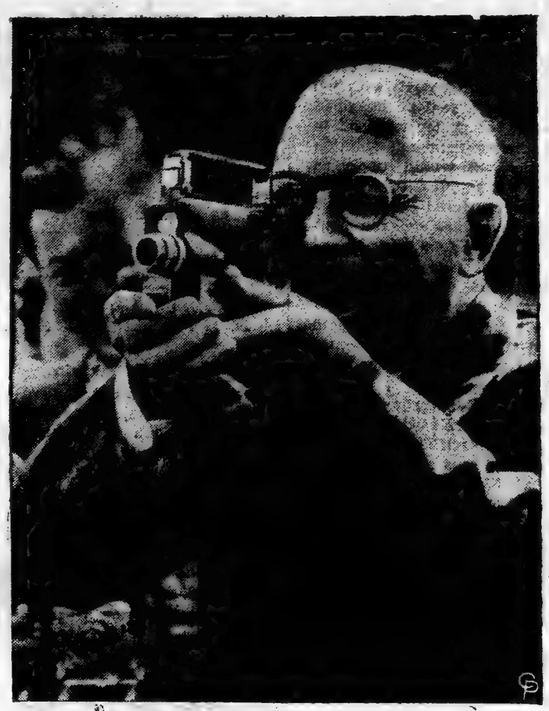
Future plans are being laid to present special programs, music clinics, and other forms of entertainment.

Friendship Council Picks New Officers

Graham Johnson has announced that there will be an election of permanent officers during the meeting of the Freshman Friendship council at 7 o'clock tomorrow night on the second floor of the YMCA building.

The nominees for president are Jack Park, John Langley, and Fred Thompson; those for vice president are Eugene Pickett, John Brockmann, and Russell Thompson; those for secretary are J. F. Colvard, A. C. Mangum, and Harold Rouse; and those for treasurer are Vines Cobb, Lewis Evans, and Tommy Williams.

A five-minute devotion will follow the balloting, which is to take place from 7 until 7:10. Herbert Sims, a magician, will then entertain the group until the presentation of the new officers at 7:30. Between 7:35 and 8 o'clock the organization will form "interest groups" on religious activities, social activities, social action, and intellectual discussions.



Johnson, who is temporary publicity manager, has extended a cordial invitation to all freshmen to attend the meeting and requests that all participants "please be on time."

Monogram Club Shows Deacon Movies Tonight

Movies of the UNC-Wake Forest football game will be shown in Memorial hall tonight at 8 o'clock. The showing of the films is sponsored by the Monogram club. All students, coeds included, are invited to attend.

Len Szafaryn, president of the Monogram club, in announcing the movies, stated that the organization is "endeavoring to promote activities on the campus for the benefit of the entire student body."

The presentation of the football movies tonight is the second in a series intended to cover every UNC football game this season.

WHEN THE WHITE HOUSE News Photographers Association presented a movie camera to President Truman, the Chief Executive, in good humor, promptly made the lensmen pose for pictures. More than 100 association members were on hand for the ceremony. (International)

Sour-Grapes Sam, the Moonglow Man, Highlights Rendezvous Rally Tonight

By Art Melton

Sour-Grapes Sam Beard, WPTF disc-jockey of Moonglow fame will be in his sarcastic seventh heaven here tonight when he takes over as master of ceremonies for dapper Don English in the Rendezvous Room at Graham Memorial.

Sammy will highlight a sports rally to bolster interest in the backsliding Tar Heel football squad. "This rally is designed to give the general Carolina student a chance to rub shoulders with our hard working gridiron greats and to sponsor mutual feeling between all," said Don, "we can't appreciate the problems that we don't understand nor understand the people we don's really know—so I'm urging everybody to come on down and meet the boys—let's show them we are with them through thick and thin.

Free Refreshments

"The whole football team will be on hand as guests of honor and will be informally interviewed by screwy-screwball Beard," said Don, "and they seemed quite enthused over the fact that some people still believe in them—and I don't believe it is because the Rendezvous Room is giving them refreshments on the house."

Sharing the floor with Sam will be Beverly Joslin, former Bon Air nightclub singer and vocalist with Johnny Satterfield's campus orchestra, singing her specialties "St. Louis Blues" and "Summertime."

Coline Smith is slated to provide a torchy touch to Don's pigskin pep session with a rendition of "Love for Sale."

The Community singing and a generally let's-get-together-and-go night will also be spotlighted by attractive Pat Ellis, campus thrush, giving out with the latest in popular music. Supporting Pat will be ivory-beating Skip Mann at the piano.

Sam Green and Forrest Covington, male songsters, in addition to Pat will take time out of their almost around the clock schedule in preparing for Sound and Fury's coming production to appear on the program.

Charlie Stancell, popular cheerleader, will be present to aid and abet in the voice vote of confidence with Carolina rah-rahs. Also on the program and making just as much noise will be Joe Combs with his drums.

Don Robertson will be present to augment the dry wit of Beard with a spicy blackface act.

As to the seating arrangements and the capacity of the Rendezvous, English commented, "We're hoping enough people will show that old pre-war Carolina spirit to fill the main room, the terrace, the hall, and overflow to the bank behind the terrace in the rear of Graham Memorial."

Madame Butterfly Scheduled For Chapel Hill Production

First class opera will make its Chapel Hill debut with the appearance here on November 5th of Charles L. Wagner's production of Puccini's melodious masterpiece, Madame Butterfly.

The 43-year-old musical drama has taken on even greater appeal under the sensitive conduction of Edwin McArthur who has appeared as guest conductor with such leading groups as the San Francisco opera, the New York Philharmonic Symphony, the Philadelphia Orchestra, and the Metropolitan Opera company. The distinguished young American conductor will preside over a complete orchestra of New York's finest musicians, a hand-picked chorus, and some of America's finest young singing actors.

The opera, although of Italian origin, concerns an American naval officer and his beautiful Japanese wife and has been immensely popular in this country since it was first presented. It features probably the most familiar music to be found in any operatic score; its strains have been described as having "all the beauty of fine music with yet much of the familiarity of today's Tin Pan Alley headliner."

Cirker and Robbins of New York have created a complete set of new scenery and costumes especially for Mr. Wagner's production. These colorful creations have been roundly acclaimed wherever the opera has played as adding much physical beauty to the charm of the program.

Tickets for this attraction and four others to be presented this winter will go on sale at Ledbetter-Pickard and at the Playmaker offices in Swain Hall on Friday. They will cost $6.50 for the series.

Memorial hall will be the site of the presentation and its small seating capacity will make it necessary to restrict the sale of tickets somewhat, according to Bill Carmichael, a member of the sponsoring committee.

"I believe," said Jack McBride, chairman of the Student Entertainment group which is sponsoring the series, "that 'Madame Butterfly' is the finest musical production ever to be presented in this part of North Carolina."

Other student members of the committee are Coleen Smith and Blanton Miller. Faculty members are Drs. Hayden and Harland and Mr. Parker of the Playmakers.

Winds Lash Coast

Wilmington, Oct. 15 — (UP) —Wind-lashed tides at the highest level since 1928 sent the Cape Fear river rolling into downtown streets here this morning and continue to drum the Carolina seaboard tonight.

As yet no storm damage has been reported, but observers at nearby Wrightsville reported tonight that the winds were growing stronger and that water level has increased dangerously.

LAST CHANCE FOR PICS

Yack photographers, scheduled to leave Chapel Hill Saturday, announced yesterday that 3,000 students have not yet had their pictures made.

Such students, who have already paid for the pictures out of their regular student fees, should get them taken at Graham Memorial any time from 9 o'clock to 11:30 in the morning, 1 to 5 o'clock in the afternoon, or 7:30 to 10 o'clock in the evening.

Take Politics From Publications, Long Tells Dialectic Senate Debate

National Student Delegates Will Report to Legislature

One of the first items of business on the Student Legislature agenda when it meets in Gerrard hall at 7:30 tonight will be a report by delegates to the National Students association Bill Miller, Johnny Clampitt, and Herman Baker.

The association met in Madison, Wisconsin, on the University of Wisconsin campus from August 29 through September 9 this fall as a constitutional convention to organize the group. The purpose of the association is to unite all American college students for betterment of student rights and to increase international activity among schools by exchange of students.

The three delegates will make a report of the meeting to the Legislature along with their recommendations as to whether the University student body should become a member or not.

Pictures for the 1948 Yackety Yack will be taken at this session on the Student Legislature, and Jack Folger and other officers have urged complete attendance.

Herman Baker, chairman of the Legislature Rules committee, has released a list of legislators who were absent from either the October 2 or October 9 meeting of the body.

These persons are advised to have written excuses prepared for the Rules committee at tonight's session. This was stressed in light of the fact that only two unexcused absences are permitted during an academic year.

The following were absent from one of the last two legislative sessions:

Annie Ben Beale, Vinnie DiLorenzo, Sue Everett, Jim Fox, Jim Fort, John Giles, Benson McCutcheon, Cecil Prince, Jane Rodgers, Earl Somers, Walt Talley, Ben Wood.

CAFETERIA CONFORMS

Officials of the N. C. Cafeteria yesterday informed the Daily Tar Heel that it will continue to adhere to the President's request for meatless Tuesdays and poultryless Thursdays.

It was also brought to the newspaper's attention that last week proprietors of local eating establishments met and agreed to abide by the President's request.

So far more than half of the establishments have adhered to the agreement.

Student Pair Tour Western Carolina Speaking for CCUN

Two CCUN officials returned to Chapel Hill yesterday following a two-day caravan across Western North Carolina speaking in behalf of United Nations and the Collegiate Council.

Travelling under sponsorship of the Statesville Lions club, CCUN State Director Lincoln Kan and Charles MacRae, local chapter official, appeared before civic organizations in Statesville and Boone and addressed a student convocation at Appalachian State Teachers college.

Adm. O. S. Colclough, judge-advocate general of the U. S. Navy, was a member of the Lions-sponsored cavalcade. Hugh Mitchell, Statesville attorney who is Lions International counselor for North Carolina and served last year as legal advisor on administration to the United Nations, was in charge of the two-day program.

In their addresses Kan and MacRae described the Collegiate Council for United Nations as a "non-partisan, non-profit" organization dedicated solely to "bringing U.N. to the people."

"By bringing speakers, movies, and literature to every town, every county, every school we hope to show the citizens of North Carolina that U.N. not only can work but must work," Kan told professional men in Boone and Statesville.

Urging a "healthy optimism" toward realization of world peace, Adm. Colclough warned that the U.S. must maintain strong armed force as precaution. "The Naval Disarmament Convention of 1922 was a greater blow to our Navy than any battle the Navy has experienced, including Pearl Harbor," he said.

The two-day caravan was the first of a series of field trips which the Carolina CCUN will make into the state. Kan and MacRae were accompanied by a Daily Tar Heel staff writer.

GABLE GONE

Budapest, Oct. 14—(UP)—Hungarians will no longer be able to gaze on one of America's leading movie stars. The Budapest Movie Projectionists' union has agreed to boycott Clark Gable's films because they say Gable is anti-Soviet.

At press time last night the Dialectic Senate was expected to vote down the often debated proposal of nominating candidates for the editorship of the various campus publications out of the hands of the political parties.

The question as resolved was: "That Article IV Section IV of the Constitution of the student body should be amended so as to remove the nomination of the editor-in-chiefs of the campus publications from the hands of the political parties."

John Zucker, president pro tempore introduced the first speaker, Charles O. Long, who presented the question briefly from the affirmative side.

Long's points were (1) The present system of selecting editors for the publications is a political "plum" to be picked and "batted around" each spring at elections. (2) The present system violates the principles of journalism in that the election of the editor should not be political, although the editor may be a politician, and that when they are political elections the result is that the best and most qualified men are not always picked.

President Long brought out, "If we wish to improve our publications, if we want to have the best men running the publications, then we must amend the system to pick men acceptable to not only the political parties but also to the staff of the publication and the board of editors.

Chairman of the Ways and Means committee of the senate John Zucker was the next speaker on the program and advocated the defeat of the proposal.

Zucker attempted to bring out that the proposal was not all that it appeared on the surface and should be carefully investigated before action is taken.

"If we distrust political parties, let's set up a committee to nominate the president of the student body and the other campus officers," Zucker retorted. The speaker also brought out that a capable editor may be unpopular as far as politics is concerned, he may even be unpopular with the people he works with, but if what he writes is beneficial to those who read it, that is the students, then he is the best selection.

Zucker finished by commenting, "If there is anything wrong with political parties on this campus let us come out in the open and say so. If there is anything wrong with democracy then why are we sitting here?"

Following the two main constructive speeches other members of the Senate and visitors took the floor to express their views or to submit a further proposal.

Main points brought out against the proposal were: (1) The political party will naturally want to win the election and will put up the most capable man possible for the job. (2) The student has a hold now in campus government and should not relinquish any of it. (3) Students must read what is written in the publication and should therefore have some say as to who is chosen to write it.

Phi Debaters Beat Cut in Grain Export

A resolution to drastically cut grain exports to Europe was defeated by a 20 to 3 vote of the Phi assembly in its first discussion meeting of the term Tuesday night.

Introduced by Frank Teague, the bill stressing humanitarian, economic, and political factors met heavy opposition from the floor, where it was hotly debated by the members who emphasized the fact that should the United States cut off exports, European nations would become communistic.

Teague, upholding the resolution, asserted that by cutting grain exports inflation and prices would be reduced in this country.

At the opening of the meeting, speaker John Giles delivered his inaugural address which stressed the opportunities that the Phi offers its members. He expressed his belief that this year the assembly will attain its pre-war level of activity.

A resolution temporarily changing the meeting time of the Phi from 7:30 to 9 o'clock at night was passed during the meeting.

Folger Picks Three For Safety Council

Three student representatives have been appointed by Jack Folger, speaker of the Legislature, to the Safety Council which Chancellor Robert B. House established last year as a means of correcting campus traffic problems. The new appointees are Ernest House, chairman, Leon Melvin, and William Wood.

This committee is composed of these three students, two faculty members, and invited representatives of the town of Chapel Hill, the State attorney general's office, State highway patrol, Institute of Government, and the University business office.

Last fall the Safety Council's work began when information from the attorney general's office showed that town ordinances of Chapel Hill and the state highway laws did not apply on campus. The group met at that time, formulating rules for the operation of motor vehicles at the University which the Board of Trustees later enforced legally. These rules are now the law of the campus. A police officer has been provided to regulate the speed of automobiles on Cameron avenue and to check on parking violations.

Safety Council identification stickers, as soon as they arrive from the manufacturer, will be distributed to approximately 200 student carowners who were required to register their vehicles at registration last month.

Although considerable progress has been made, the council at its first meeting of this year next Wednesday evening will be faced with such matters as limitation of use of motor vehicles by certain students, the reservation of definite parking places for faculty members and other University personnel, and the installation of parking meters.

Barrage of Telegrams to Justice, DTH, Others Hits Campus; Ostensibly Signed by William and Mary Prexy, Co-Captains

By Chuck Hauser

"Plan your next edition edged in black," the telegram said. It was signed "President Student Body College of William and Mary."

Thus started an endless barrage of wires which harrassed Western Union all day Monday, and kept the poor messenger boys on their toes.

Aside from the telegram received by the Daily Tar Heel, such campus and national notables as Dr. Frank Graham, Charlie Justice, Coach Snavely, and Tom Eller were besieged.

The DTH wire said in toto:

"THIS WILL MAKE IT THREE IN A ROW FOR YOU TAR HEELS. PLAN YOUR NEXT EDITION EDGED IN BLACK. WHAT IS TROLLEY CAR JUSTICES POSITION ON THE BENCH THIS WEEK? —PRESIDENT STUDENT BODY COLLEGE OF WILLIAM AND MARY."

Neither South building or the DTH actually believed that William and Mary's student body president would take it upon himself to wish us such cheery pre-game greetings, but naturally a check was in order.

At 11:15 Tuesday night we finally contacted the William and Mary prexy by long distance, a friendly-sounding fellow by the name of Howard Hyle. Asked whether or not he sent the wires, Hyle replied, "Naturally not. But if the telegrams are bolstering school spirit any down there don't say I denied it. I think it's a fine thing if it will promote a more exciting game Saturday."

Hyle's name was not the only one signed to the communications plaguing the campus. Charlie Justice received one ostensibly signed by the co-captains of the William and Mary football squad. Charlie's read as follows:

"TO THE CAROLINA FOOTBALL (?) TEAM — YOUR BOILER IS BUSTED HANDSOME—GET THE BEST PLASTIC SURGEON YOU CAN FIND SATURDAY—YOU WILL NEED HIM — COCAPTAINS WILLIAM AND MARY."

Student body president Tom Eller's telegram suggested that aside from a big team the Tar Heels should bring "lots of women" to the game because "the town goes to the victor." With Hyle's title affixed at the bottom it closed "with love."

Dr. Frank Graham's message is apparently top secret, because in his absence neither Chancellor House or Controller Carmichael would divulge its contents to the Daily Tar Heel.

The wire received by Mayor Bob Madry at the University News bureau warned that "We're going to finish up what Texas and Wake Forest started." It was signed Dust Ash, sports editor, William and Mary Flat Hat.

These few telegrams quoted are just a small percentage of those which hit the campus Monday and Tuesday, but at least they give a general idea of what William and Mary students (at least several of them) think of the coming grid battle on Saturday. Perhaps W & M student body president Hyle is right, that they will stir up a fighting urge in the Tar Heels to put on a good show in Virginia day after tomorrow. A show good enough to make William and Mary (both of them) eat their words.

Safety in Numbers

Three numbers figured prominently in yesterday's campus-wide election for editor of the Yackety Yack—1,051, 7,528, and 45,000.

1,051 represents the number of students out of a total enrollment of 7,528 who cared enough about 45,000 dollars of their money to vote. When this type of apathy displays itself, it is nothing but a disgrace!

The editorship of the Yack is an important and responsible job. The sum of approximately 45,000 dollars is going to pass through this year's editor's hands as he works toward the publication of the 1948 annual. This 45,000 dollars came out of student fees, which in turn came out of students' pockets. And only one-eighth of those students cared enough about their money to show a preference as to who is going to spend it.

It is a bad situation. And no one can correct it, unfortunately, but the students themselves. No political parties, whether there are two or three or even four on the campus, can ever hope to speak personally to each student and take the time to convince him that the only common-sense thing to do if he gives a tinker's dam about his own money is to go to the polls and cast a ballot when election day rolls around.

The most amazing thing about the light vote Tuesday is the fact that it is no trouble for anyone to vote these days. There are a total of four polling places set up on campus. If a student lives in Graham dormitory, for instance, he doesn't have to walk all the way over to Gerrard hall to vote, he merely has to step outside his dormitory and a hundred feet away, in front of Aycock, is a ballot box and poll-workers. It would take him no more than a minute to complete his duty to himself and to the school.

If only the separate members of the student body can have enough sense to realize just what they are losing by not voting, the final tabulations in the next election would not read 1,051, but would be printed in big black DTH headlines, "7,528 students voted in yesterday's campus-wide election."—C.H.

Maybe FDR Admired Them

Franklin D. Roosevelt's tenure as president still makes the news, but this time instead of the newspapers, magazines have established a new fad—reporting all of the underhand dealing attributed to FDR. First it was Jim Farley in the Saturday Evening Post who went into great detail concerning his relations with the president. In this month's Cosmopolitan, Merrill C. Meigs, internationally-known newspaperman tells of Roosevelt's attempt to smash the Republican party on the eve of its 1940 convention by scheming to appoint Alf M. Landon and Frank Knox—presidential and vice-presidental candidates in 1936—to his New Deal cabinet.

"The plan didn't quite work out," Meigs states. "Landon deliberately spoiled one end of the scheme by publicly denouncing Roosevelt's third term ambitions a few days before he was scheduled to have lunch at the White House and receive an offer of a cabinet seat. Roosevelt had better luck with Knox. He persuaded the Chicago publisher to consider the proposition by promising that he would never run for a third term. Before Knox reached a decision, Roosevelt hurriedly announced to the press behind Knox's back that he was the new Secretary of the Navy. Knox was furious, but feeling obligated to his country on the verge of war, he reluctantly accepted the appointment."

It is not our purpose in this article to try to defend the former president by calling Meigs a prevaricator. Surely Meigs obtained his information from Knox before his death, and later had it confirmed by Landon from his personal records. If this information had been released by the Landon-Knox team during the 1936 election, we would venture to say that it was political ballyhoo; but it was after the election and even following the death of FDR. Is it not just as plausible, therefore, to believe that Roosevelt admired the two Republicans and wanted them on his cabinet because he believed them qualified? The Republicans admired them enough to team them against FDR in 1936.

'Too Commercialized'

"Chapel Hill is already too commercialized," is the cry resounding from even the remotest spot on the campus upon learning that the Board of Aldermen are considering the possibilities of installing parking meters on the main drag and Columbia street. Their argument is important. They reason that Chapel Hill is nothing more than a college community. The residents of Chapel Hill who are not connected with the University or Franklin street live in Chapel Hill because it is a community that has in the past been less commercialized than the average American town of this size.

Several years ago the local merchants and authorities voted to pass a town ordinance requesting all building owners to remodel their buildings after a colonial style.

By this measure we assumed that the merchants also wanted the community to be informal and not take on a commercialized air.

Within two years there will be relative few vehicles owned by students. The present generation of veterans own the greatest percentage of autos now and when they graduate the majority of the meters will be used only by the passing parade of dogs who wander over the streets of Chapel Hill.

But at the present time many enraged students, offended by the parking meter proposal, are thinking of the esthetic change of the Chapel Hill streets. Especially are members of the student body living in houses on Fraternity court peeved. They have had a hard time keeping students off the grass, but if the parking meters are installed there will be no grass, because meter patrons will have to trample it down when inserting coins in the gadgets.

Eye-Witness

An American in Europe

(This concludes a series of two articles by Kennedy, who spent last year at school in England and on the European continent. His views are not necessarily those of the DTH staff.)

By John P. Kennedy, Jr.

In France nowadays one senses around every corner a Communist waiting, like a member of Al Capone's gang, ready to pounce the moment America makes her first big mistake.

Turn off the main streets in any French town and go into the poorer districts and you will see big placards put up by the Communist Party commenting on the particular crisis of the moment. One such poster last summer dealt with the wheat shortage. After pointing to various real or imagined mistakes of the present government, the poster went on to say approximately this: "What is the government's solution to the problem? It has said that the U. S. would supply us with wheat, but thus far the U. S. has supplied us with no more than half our wheat. We have suffered greater cuts recently in the bread ration in France than have our conquered enemies in our zone of Germany." Here, after an incredible attack on America, an effort is made to lead the French people to believe that, because the rations in France had been cut more than in Germany, the French ration allowance was less. The posters that the Communist Party puts up are very cleverly prepared, outwardly scholarly presentations of issues, but in fact using lies and half-truths whenever these will serve the purpose.

The Communists are also propagandizing through newspapers, some of the most influential of which they control, and through mammoth political rallies. Each city in France sees periodically a day of parades, circus acts, political speeches, and dancing sponsored by the Communist Party, which is, of course, the largest party in the country.

America, sending in ship after ship of supplies to France, does not bother to give much publicity to her kindness and, consequently, does not get much credit. But when Russia gives one shipload of wheat to France—she did at least give one—the whole country is told about it through the Party propaganda channels and is made to feel grateful.

The Communist propagandists are clever and relentless, but, more than that, they are decisive, and that is today their greatest asset. They have a very definite solution to offer the people. American indecisiveness suffers by comparison because hunger suggests to Europeans that they cannot wait very long for an uncertain help.

Germany and Austria are closed now to the average traveler, but reports from the few who were able to get into those countries this last summer seem unanimous: the plight of those two countries is worse than that of the rest of western Europe. All of us have heard stories of pathetic begging in Germany by families that were once well-off, and Austrian travelers say that the allotted rations there would make only about one really satisfying meal a week.

In Italy too, there is want and there is a Communist Party poised to strike. Florence and Bologna have Communist mayors, and across the country hammers and sickles are painted on walls and farm houses.

Two American students traveling last summer in Naples were accosted by a woman begging. She was old and bent but had a certain dignity. As she turned away from them after they had refused her, she said simply, "You are rich, and here I am starving."

We are richer than we know; we alone are able to give any substantial help. Individually then we must save food, and collectively we must implement the Marshall Plan. And all must be done very quickly. We may do these things on the purely selfish ground of keeping a European market. We may do them for strategic reasons, to keep Russia from controlling Europe and with it the Mediterranean and the Near East. We may act because we feel that we cannot stand by and see our neighbors starve to death. Or possibly our reason will be that we feel we must protect from the wind of a ruthless Bolshevism the flickering flame of belief in the individual's dignity. Whatever our reason, the action called for is clear.

Carolina Carousel

Community Chest Support

By R. Foo Giduz

Sorry to see the campus community chest meeting with platitudinous opposition even before it gets a fighting chance in the student legislature. To be brief, we are dead set against the Y's proposal (well-meaning as it surely was intended) to set up a control and scheduling board for all drives. Apologies to the authors of this measure if we misinterpret it, but Carousel just flatly believes this proposal misses entirely the whole idea behind a community chest. . . . And it is not a compromise measure.

Point of a community chest is to gather as much funds as possible and in the least painless and most efficient method. Emergency drives are not impossible under the chest system, and it has been consistently proven that by placing total emphasis on this one large annual drive, the final intake is larger than would be the returns from scattered individual drives. The "Y plan" admittedly proposes to combine smaller drives into several larger ones. (There are seldom more than six of any type drives annually.) This is only half-way doing the basic idea of the chest!

A bill almost identical to the "Y plan" was introduced in the student legislature by Don Shropshire about a year ago, and was quite fortunately defeated. —No hard feelings toward the "Y plan" sponsors, but for our money this measure would do nothing more than set up an all-powerful, systematic (if it works) organization of the usual method of carrying on drives. —We'd call it an "all-powerful panhandling group," but don't want to alienate any more contribution-minded readers.

. . . . Never counting the fighting Tar Heels out, this corner's rarin' to go to Williamsburg Saturday. . . . And but for a GI checkless month we'd have a nice taw on the contestt. . . . Suggestion to W and M-bound automobilers: Show the Virginians who y'are by decorating your buggy in Carolina blue and white crepe paper before you leave the Hill. . . . It's a good way to find your buddies in strange territory. . . . Get up there and YELL.

. . . . And here's a hearty welcome to the League of Ex-Managing Editors to T. Earl Heffner, erstwhile DTH type-jockey who now joins J. "Dan" Kinberg and Carousel in this ultra-exclusive club. . . . And on ex-editors many will be interested to know that Bill and Jo Woestendiek are now living in NY City, 520 W. 122nd street, Apt. 42-0. . . . Bill's in the Pulitzer Graduate School of Journalism at Columbia U.

Mudville Mutterings

Lights Out In The Village

DAN SAPP

Mudville's biggest mutter this week concerns the street light situation. The fact that the lights have a way of going out is the big problem. The situation was discussed at some length at the Village council meeting Monday night and Chairman Tom Crittenden said that as soon as the new council members are elected and in attendance, the council will appoint a committee to handle the problem. Until that time Tom says that if the street lights in your area go out you are to notify the University Service Plant as soon as possible.

The village has a new citizen. Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Alexander have just announced the birth of their daughter Kathryn Ann. E. H. said that both Kathryns are doing fine and he is expecting them home today.

The new baby sitters cooperative is now a going concern. According to Mrs. Tom McDade who was the group's organizer, each child will have a card filed in his name complete with his characteristics, and habits to help the mother who is to look after him. Each mother will keep three children including her own for three hours on the appointed afternoons.

This organization is just another answer to problems which arise in the village. Heretofore, recreation for village mothers has come pretty high with local baby sitters charging up to $.40 an hour for their often inexperienced services.

In case you've a storage problem, bookcases and small cupboards can be made from wooden packing cases. If you can find a case with the top still intact this can be used for shelves. Small metal braces can be found in most dime stores and they're all you need to hold the shelves in place.

The Exigency of the Age

Fer It Or Agin' It?

By Russell G. Baldwin

Are you for world government? If you are, then, why aren't you doing something about it? How do you expect world government ever to be achieved unless you do your part? If you really believe in world government, do something about it. And another thing, stop kidding yourself that you're the only one who believes in it and therefore it won't work.

Be logical for a moment. According to an Elmo Roper public opinion poll taken two years ago, 62.8 per cent of the people of the U.S. are in favor of world government, while only 19.8 per cent are against it. Yet, when an individual was asked if he thought world government would be achieved, he usually said "no" and the reason given was invariably the same :"I believe in world government, but all those other people—they're against it." Of course, they didn't have the advantage of the poll, being participants in it, but I doubt if that would have made much difference. If you want an excuse for doing nothing, you can always find one. Apply that to yourself.

And now for you who don't believe in world government. As the saying goes, "you're either fer it or agin' it." And, being college students, I assume that you have logical reasons for being "agin' " it. What are they? If you don't know, think about it awhile until you're sure. You can't afford to be vague on such an exigent problem as the need for world government.

One of the most common arguments against world government is that it is idealistic and impractical. However, this objection is easily over-ruled by an examination of the facts. Furthermore, the truth of the matter is that world government is the most practical solution ever offered for maintaining world peace. Comparison will prove the point. World government (federal world government is the full title) is the same type of government that stopped wars between the Swiss states, the German states, and the Italian states. It is the same type of government that stopped economic wars and headed off political wars between the 13 American colonies. Nowhere has this type of government been tried and found wanting. It has always secured peace between the states under it, without exception.

It goes without saying (or, at least, it should) that power politics and the old theory of balance of power has been thoroughly discredited. After being tried for centuries and having failed consistently, even an optimist, an intelligent one, that is, should be willing to admit its worthlessness. Another popular means for maintaining world peace has been treaties and trade agreements. Being usually based on balance of power or drawn according to balance of power, it is no wonder that treaties and trade agreements have failed to maintain peace.

One of the most idealistic and impractical methods of securing peace ever tried is the UN. You've heard of the veto, I'm sure. Here's why the veto is so important. It requires unanimity among the big-five powers, which means that one of the big-five can over-rule not only the other four but, also, all the rest of the nations of the world whenever it so desires. Is that practical? Or reasonable? Is it logical to believe that the five major world powers will agree on all international problems? The UN is all right as far as it goes, but, it doesn't go far enough. Not by a long shot!

Only federal world government will remedy the anarchy of the UN. Only by demand of the citizens of the world (you're one) can we get world government.

Write Away

Evans Clarifies Y Proposal

Dear Editor,

In nearby columns is about the fifth in a series of articles promoting the idea of a campus community chest. I should like to clarify several points on the other opinion of the matter, and with a view towards openmindedness, ask a few questions.

First, the YWCA cabinet and advisory board (a group made up of faculty, administrative, and community leaders) passed a resolution similar to the "YM plan." The proposal was for an impartial board, perhaps the already existing Student Welfare Board, to be given authority by the Legislature to conduct hearings from all sponsoring organizations on plans for campaigns each year. This board would consider the importance of each drive each year in respect to the contemporary Carolina student, and would grant clearance, or provide coordination for the drives that seem most valuable and most promising in effectiveness. It would be the board's duty to clarify anew each year the status of the joint or individual drives.

In answer to Carousel; a few questions:

1) How would a Campus Chest distribute funds?

2) What would happen to the initiative, and extra enthusiasm aroused often over one drive which would not be transferred to a medley drive? Why shouldn't groups who are especially committed to a single cause earn the results of their harder work for a drive, and not lose identity in a myriad of numerous alphabetical organizations?

3) What would be the long-term effect of a chest in years hence, when students have not had the experience of last year's unfortunately un-coordinated series of feeble drives? The very important united campaigns would solicit less and less as people reverted to thinking of giving once to one thing, and not once to many things.

Whatever the answers to these questions and others which arise in the minds of those of us who have the good of the campus, and the good of the campaigns at heart (as does Carousel, no doubt) let us not jump into an idea that sounds good because it appears to be less work, and a little less bothersome. Over-simplification might well become dangerous to the good of the various drives.

Sincerely,
Ruth Evans
President, YWCA

Booters Off to Baltimore Today For Tilts with Loyola and Navy

Soccer Coach Marvin Allen and a 17-man travelling squad will leave by bus this afternoon at 1 o'clock for Baltimore where the Carolina booters will open their 1947 season and a two-game road trip tomorrow afternoon against Loyola university's powerful outfit.

Following tomorrow's clash, the Tar Heel team will continue on to Annapolis to battle Navy, rated as one of the strongest soccer clubs in the East. "We have two very tough games against Loyola and Navy for they play a rugged brand of ball up there," Coach Allen commented yesterday. The Tar Heel mentor declined to say anything definite about his own team's chances.

Starting Lineup

Also making the trip are Dave Ferebee, S. M. Hagaman, Frank Levy, Duncan McCalman, William Moore, Jack Pfautz, and manager Walt DuPre.

Middies Strong

Little is known here regarding the strength of the Loyolans but the Middies will field an all-veteran eleven that includes several transfers from the Peruvian Naval academy. Another of their starters is goalie Al Schaufelberger, Navy's candidate for All-American soccer honors.

The Midshipmen lost six men from last year's team which won seven, lost one, and tied one against the toughest competition in the East. However, a host of high-class replacements will probably make the Middies as tough as ever.

Mat Practice Starts For 1948 Campaign

Wrestling practice began at Woollen gym yesterday afternoon for some 35 men who were on hand for the opening workout under the direction of Assistant Coach Hobie McKeever.

McKeever stated that he was anxious for a much larger group of boys to report, particularly freshmen, experienced or not. This is the last season that freshmen will be allowed to participate in varsity sports, but for those who do not make the regular squad, a junior varsity team will be organized. This jayvee outfit will wrestle full schedule.

Leading the lettermen on the squad will be Laurie Hooper and Irving Zirpel, Southern conference champions in their weight divisions last year. Other veterans are Doug Thompson, Tom Urquhart, Wilson Allen, Demont Roseman, Carroll Fisher, Bill Kemp, and Oscar Gupton. The Tar Heels captured the loop title last season.

Phil Kemp, 145, who was captain of the Woodbury Forest team last year seems to be the outstanding freshman prospect. Returning from last year's reserves are John Tillett, Hugh Eherd, and John Hallett.

Last year's co-captains, Tommy Hearn and Dick Seaver, will not be back this year. Hearn, 128-pound champ last year, has used up all his eligibility but will be around to help the coaching staff. Seaver has graduated and is now coaching a prep school squad in Connecticut.

The tentative schedule for the team shows matches with Duke, Davidson, State, VPI, VMI, Navy, Washington and Lee, and Maryland. The team also will compete in the Southern conference and National Intercollegiate tournaments.

Cross Country Starters Named For Opener with Georgia Tech

By Morty Schaap

Seven lettermen and one freshman have been named to be the starters in the first cross country meet of the season with Georgia Tech on Fetzer field Saturday morning.

The starting lineup was determined by a time trial over the four-mile course yesterday afternoon. Despite the wet weather and heavy footing, the harriers looked very impressive.

Mark Burnham and Alvin Smith crossed the line first but were followed closely by Sam Magill, Jack Milne and Frank Hooper.

Promising Freshman

Hooper is a freshman from Massena, N. Y., and finished high school last June. He has been very impressive in all of the squad's workouts this season and will join an all-letterman group at the start Saturday.

Others that will be out to keep the undefeated string rolling are Jimmy Miller, last year's captain, John Bristow, and Chuck Herty. Herty did not compete last year but has been a good competitor in his previous seasons on Carolina cinder paths.

Coach Ranson named three other men as alternates for the meet and their ability puts them only a fraction behind the top men. They are Halstead Holden, Jim Hunt and freshman Bobby Black. Black was quite a middle-distance runner at Mercersburg Academy in Pennsylvania, and track fans will probably hear a lot more about this slim lad before he graduates four years hence.

Tech Arrives Friday

Georgia Tech is expected to arrive in Chapel Hill late Friday afternoon and take a workout over the conference course. The course this year will be much more difficult than the one of last year, as pavement has been added to the streets all through Victory village and makes the course have almost two miles of hard top to be traversed.

Dolphins Hold Initial Swim Drills

Carolina's 1948 swimming team held its initial workout of the season yesterday afternoon with 60 potential swimmers, including 13 returning lettermen, reporting to assistant coach Ralph Casey.

The practice opened with an organizational meeting, following which the entire squad adjourned to Bowman Gray pool for its first working session.

The team will continue drills on a daily basis starting today and continuing until the season's opener set for early December.

Defending Title

The Blue Dolphins will be defending their Southern Conference title they won last season and are rated as favorites to repeat on the basis of their wealth of current talent. There is also speculation that Dick Twining, versatile ace of past seasons will be discharged from the service in time for the swim season, to further bolster the Dolphin hopes for a big year.

Head coach Dick Jamerson has been out of town for the past week, but will return this weekend to take over the coaching reins.

University Views On Justice Status Released by House

Chancellor R. B. House yesterday afternoon released the following statement on the eligibility of Charlie Justice:

"The University of North Carolina Faculty Committee on Athletic Eligibility was in possession, in the summer of 1946, of all the facts pertaining to the negotiations between Charles Justice and the Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League. After a complete study of these facts, which clearly reveal that there was no contract or agreement between the Eagles and Justice and no violation of Southern Conference rules, the University Faculty Committee at that time declared Justice eligible to represent the University in intercollegiate competition.

"It is my understanding that all facts pertaining to this case are known to President William Couper of the Southern Conference. No new facts relative to the matter have been revealed within the past year; and unless new facts affecting Justice's status are presented and proved, we are confident that the Southern Conference will continue to consider Justice eligible to represent the University of North Carolina."

The announcement came after a culmination of events relating to Justice's playing status in relation to competition in the Southern conference. The question was raised by Richmond lawyer John Wicker after a University of Richmond football baller was refused reinstatement in the conference following his signing of a pro-baseball contract.

The Justice case has been referred to the conference executive committee, consisting of Deans Cooper of VMI, Eppley of Maryland, McAllister of the Citadel, and Fisher of N. C. State. This group will meet in Durham on Saturday morning, and it is supposed that the question will be considered then.

Ping Pong Tourney In Quarter Finals

Four contestants have reached the quarter finals of Graham Memorial's 11-round ping-pong tournament, in which Carolina tennis star Ray Morris has been listed as the favorite to win by the participating players.

Already in the field of eight are Tom Wadden, Andy Lavin, George Whitted, and Bob Goldwater. Competing for the other four berths are Archie Goodwin, Harry Billerbeck, Morris, Dean Howard, Jim Jackson, Clark Taylor, Dave Boak, and Charlie Odell.

Losers in matches are reminded by tournament director Nancy Tucker that they are not eliminated from the tourney until they have been defeated twice. Under the system of double elimination play, those who lose preliminary matches proceed to the losers' side of the tournament, where the winner will challenge the victor on the winning side of the contest.

Doubles competition has also reached the quarter finals and two combinations, Goodwin-Lavin and Goldwater-Jackson, have gained semi-final berths.

Tar Heels Work Hard Despite Muddy Field

Rain and a muddy field failed to hamper yesterday's practice session for the Carolina Tar Heels as Coach Carl Snavely speeded up preparations for the team's game with William and Mary on Saturday.

The Tar Heel gridders concentrated on improving both their offense and defense during the workout. Coach Snavely had his two top teams running the ball from a position near the goal posts in an effort to improve the club's goal line punch. In most of the games thus far, Carolina has had considerable success in advancing the ball at mid-field, but the offense always seemed to choke up near the goal.

The regulars also got in a full session of defensive work, with the reserves throwing plenty of passes against the top-ranking teams.

Once again there were a number of Tar Heels that missed the practice because of injuries, but some of them jogged around the field in light togs.

Lineup Changes

There were several new faces on Snavely's "A" team, but the Tar Heel mentor may not stick by his revised lineup when game time rolls around. Hosea Rodgers was again at the fullback post, displaying a great deal of speed and aggressiveness. Johnny Clement ran at wingback for the first club, rounding out the backfield with Joe Wright and Charlie Justice. Larry Klosterman and Emmett Cheek held down the guard positions in the forward wall.

Neither the gloomy weather nor the rumors about Justice's eligibility could dampen the spirit of the squad. The boys continued to show great vigor in their work, and one member of the coaching staff remarked, "It seems to me that the boys have been definitely 'up' in their practice. I just hope they carry it on the field."

The Tar Heels will leave for Williamsburg on Friday by bus. Last season's engagement between the two outfits resulted in a 21-7 triumph for the boys from Chapel Hill. That game

Team statistics show that Carolina boasts the best punting record in the nation. Led by Justice, the Tar Heel booters have compiled a 46.9 average. Justice himself is number three in the nation, with 46.8.

Murals Halted By Heavy Rain

Heavy rain halted intramural tag football and tennis competition yesterday afternoon but play will be continued this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The rained-out football contests will be made up at a later date but Wednesday's tennis schedule will be followed today. Several matches in the novice division will be reeled off in addition to those scheduled in the open singles.

Alderman, Pi Phi, Alpha Gam Win

The second night of activities in the coed volleyball tournament saw Pi Phi, Alderman, and Alpha Gam registering one-sided victories.

Pi Phi ran up the high score of the evening, rubbing Archer by a 52-9 count. The Alderman girls came through with a 42-14 triumph over their sister dormitory, McIver. In the third tilt of the evening, Alpha Gam trounced Smith by 38-5.

With the first week of competition completed, six teams are now tied for first place in the 12-team field. Sporting victories in their lone encounters to date are Pi Phi, Alderman, Alpha Gam, Chi Omega, Tri Delt, and Town Girls.

Play will continue next Tuesday evening, when three games will run off.

Fraternity House Managers Organize To Exchange Operational Information

A spirit of cooperation for the improvement of fraternity house conditions has been shown by the banding together of all house managers into an interfraternity organization.

The Fraternity House Managers' association is attempting to bring a closer relationship among all fraternities to the benefit of all concerned by the exchange of facts, ideas and figures concerning the purchasing of food and the standardization of prices and wages.

The association, which meets Monday night at 7:30, urges the participation of all house and dining room managers in the effort to establish one meatless day each week in every dining room and to combat high food prices by collective bargaining with the dealers.

Len Butt, Sigma Chi, is replacing Bob Hedrick, Phi Gamma Delta, as president of the organization. Dick Barab, Phi Kappa Sigma, and Bill Fuess, Chi Phi, are the new vice president and secretary-treasurer, respectively.

The members now attending are Bill Webster and Bob Hedrick of Phi Gamma Delta, Jack Girard of Chi Phi, Don Carmichael of ATO, Fred Cates and Marvin Dillon of SPE, Fred Tucker of Kappa Sigma, Howell Murray and Duke Smith of Phi Delta Theta, Gerry Shor of ZBT, Lattie Brown and Bud Prats of Sigma Nu, Jerry La Suer of Sigma Chi, Charley Hondros and Ted Wall of Pi Kappa Alpha, Charles Berman of TEP, Bill Egeln of Phi Kappa Sigma, Howard Walters and Stuart Campell of DKE, Eddie Katzin and Jerry Blum of Alpha Epsilon Pi, Kurt Muller of SAE, Bill Millaway of Lamba Chi, Chuck Borton of Pi Lambda Phi, and Milton Cash of Beta.

In the interest of all fraternities, the council should consist of the house manager and steward of every fraternity on the campus.

Entertainment Set By Student Union

Graham Memorial will hold the entertainment limelight this weekend with a square dance, bingo party, and community sing set for successive evenings of student entertainment.

Continuing the popular open air dances, the student union in conjunction with the Y's will sponsor a square and round dance in the Y court beginning at 8:30 tomorrow night. Taylor Dodson will be caller for the square dances and music will be recorded.

Saturday evening's bingo party will be held in the Roland Parker lounges starting at 8 o'clock. Recreational director Nancy Tucker announced that prizes for the games will be drawn from the total cash pot of each game. Any number of cards may be purchased by participants for $.02 each.

Acting master of ceremonies and caller for the evening will be Ken Gammage, co-author of Sound and Fury's coming revue, "Gin Lane." Gammage will be assisted by Patsy McNutt and Nancy Tucker.

Reviving one of the campus' most popular entertainments in the past, the first weekly student community sing is set for Memorial hall Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. Directed by Mark Barker and Avery Gibson, the sing will feature Cole Porter tunes and several specialties and solos.

It is planned to include fraternities, sororities, and all other interested groups in future sing programs.

Splash Club Tryouts Scheduled for Today

Tryouts for the Splash club, the women's swimming group sponsored by the Women's Athletic association, will be held this afternoon from 4 to 5 o'clock in the Women's gym, chairman Bill Henderson announced yesterday. Tryouts will be held Monday evening from 7 to 8 o'clock.

Other officers in addition to Bill Henderson are Cathy Rankin Sprecklin, vice-president; Barbara Poole, secretary; and Joy Blumenthal, publicity chairman.

Regular meetings of the Splash club are held Monday evenings.

Landreth New Head Of Charlotte Club

During a meeting in Gerrard hall Tuesday night, the Charlotte Carolina club elected its officers for the coming year.

The new officers for the organization are Monroe Landreth, president; Joe Kumpe, vice president; Lillian De Armon, secretary; Lem Whitsett, treasurer; and "Ike" Belk, social chairman.

The club, one of the oldest of its kind on the campus, now has over 300 members, the largest membership of its history.

The plans for the Christmas dance in Charlotte are now being made by the new social committee that is comprised of John Baker, Lucie Hill Baxter, Charles Burns, Barbara deWitt, Marguerite Johnson, George Kenvon, and Bobby Kirby. The holiday dances given by the organization have always been the largest college dances to be given in Charlotte during the yuletide season.

Plans for activities to be held on the Carolina campus are also under way.

WORLD FEDERALISTS MEETING

World Federalists will hold their regular weekly meeting this afternoon at 5 o'clock in Roland Parker Lounge No. 2. Everyone is invited to attend and take part in the activities of the group.

The state convention of United World Federalists to be held in Greensboro Friday and Saturday will be discussed. The local chapter is expecting to send six delegates. However, anyone who so desires may attend the convention.

Whether Dorm or Quonset Hut, Dorm Priority System Is Same

To clarify the current policy of dormitory room assignment, J. E. Wadsworth, University housing director, says there is no truth in the rumor that these students living in the quonset huts will be assigned dormitory space before those staying in residences out in Chapel Hill or Carrboro.

It has come to Wadsworth's attention that some students with excellent rooms rented in private homes in this vicinity have given up these accommodations for fear that they are to be forgotten on the dormitory waiting lists. Wadsworth stated, "I assure all concerned that no one need spend a certain time in the huts as a prerequisite to a dormitory room. The available spaces will go to the men on our priority files according, first, to the date of their entrance into the University and, second, to the time they made a $6 room deposit."

The following men students are the next eligible for dormitory rooms and may receive assignments at the housing office, 207 South building, as soon as vacancies occur: Ward, Jr., William F.; Russes, Angeles N.; Hunter, Jr., Rufus A.; Blevins, Maurice F.; Milloway, Jr., John E.; Bell, Victer E.; Beeson, Jr., Otis; Sharpe, Eugene B.; Walker, Jr., Robert R.; Barr, James F.; Brumler, Robert; Cunningham, Charles A.; Savvas, Harry P.; Sanford, Robert G.; Jones, Bruce F.; Nifong, Paul D.; Hege, Philip F.; Willard, Forrest R.; Sper, Jr., Norman L.; and Ashby, Dan B.

Alderman Reports

Council Ignored Possible Revenue Of Parking Meters

By Bill Sexton

Revenue has not been considered as a possible reason for installation of parking meters in Chapel Hill, a member of the city council's committee on parking declared yesterday.

The alderman, who declined identification, said that the committee not only had disregarded meters as a source of income but also feared that the city might not break even on cost of installing and maintaining the equipment.

"The meters are expected to cost around $80 each," the unidentified alderman said. The city has insufficient funds at present to purchase the number required, and will obtain them on a "pay-as-you-go" basis, splitting income from meters between the manufacturer and maintenance costs.

The alderman said that another officer would be added to the city police force and assigned to full-time duty checking, collecting, and maintaining the meters.

"My personal opinion is that we will net little if anything from the meters," he said.

In a report issued last week, the three-man committee of the board of aldermen recommended six steps as a partial solution to Chapel Hill's traffic problem:

(1) Installation of parking meters on Columbia street and Franklin street through the congested business district.

(2) Prohibition of overnight parking in the meter zones.

(3) Limiting parking to one side only on ten narrow streets.

(4) Prohibiting parking of heavy trucks and trailers from 9 p.m. to 6 a.m. anywhere within the city limits.

(5) Cutting the parking areas allotted to taxi companies operating from Chapel Hill. The larger cab company would be assigned four spaces, the others two.

(6) A special stop-light at Henderson and Franklin streets (Post office corner) which would allow U-turns.

Action on the committee's recommendations is scheduled immediately following a public hearing on the proposals Monday evening at 7:30. At that meeting representatives of the fraternities fronting Columbia street are expected to register a vigorous protest against installing meters in front of their houses.

But the meter plan is expected to receive the support of most Chapel Hill merchants since it is believed installation will speed turnover of cars in the business zone.

World Federalists Meet at WC Today To Plan Campaign

Delegates from the 17 chapters of the World Fereralists in North Carolina will gather at Woman's college in Greensboro today to hash out a program for convincing three million North Carolinians of the need for world government.

Major speakers for the occasion will be Edgar Ansel Mowrer and Robert Lee Humber. Mowrer will speak at an 8 o'clock meeting tonight. The time for the address by Humber, who is author of the famed Humber Resolution, has not been set.

Chapel Hill, having two World Fereralists chapters, will be well represented, the studeat chapter sending six delegates. However, the town chapter is handicapped by the temporary loss of at least three of its most prominent members. Dr. Frank P. Graham was recently chosen by President Truman to be the U. S. representative on the U. N. commission to investigate the Indonesian situation.

Professor Henry P. Brandis, Jr., president of the town chapter, who was appointed as Dr. Graham's assistant, will also be unable to attend. Dr. Joseph W. Straley of the physics department will be in Chicago at a meeting of The American society of metals.

Journalists on Campus Differ on Plan To Take Editorship Away from Politics

The Di Senate's action Wednesday rejecting a change in the method of selecting publications editors has provoked a varied reaction among campus journalists.

The Daily Tar Heel and its editors have maintained their stand urging naming of editors by the publications board rather than by general campus election, but the staffs of other publications yesterday supported the Di Senate vote in favor of general election of editors.

In a statement issued last night, DTH Editor Barron Mills declared, "Under the present system of electing editors there is no assurance of getting the best qualified man to do the job—unless you orient each member of the student body. The Publications board during the course of the year meets every problem of the publications. They know the type of individual best suited to edit a publication, and are therefore qualified to elect editors at the end of the school year."

Concurring with Mills, former DTH Managing Editor Earl Heffner, now a Charlotte Observer staff writer, said, "So long as the Daily Tar Heel must remain the choicest morsel of the spoils system, the newspaper cannot be a free publication to inform and represent the student body."

Hodgson Hits Board

Tookie Hodgson, editor of Tarnation, took a sharply dissenting stand on the proposal, describing the Publications board as being "as full of politicians as Tammany hall on Saturday night."

"A shift from student voting to the PU Board and legislature would be transferring the matter from a political frying pan into the political fire," Hodgson charged.

Jacobson Concurs

Mag Editor Fred Jacobson concurred with Hodgson and the Di action. "It's extremely difficult to divorce politics from journalism," Jacobson declared; "what good, for example, is an editorial page if it doesn't represent a definite opinion."

"I don't recommend any change in the procedure of naming publications editors," the Mag editor said.

A milder dissent was scored by Gene Johnstone, member of the Yack editorial board. "The yearbook editor might best be appointed by a board of students and faculty members who have worked with publications long enough to know what the set-up is," Johnstone declared, "but I believe the other editors should be elected by the student body."

Johnstone pointed out that "if a PU board is elected as it is now, chances are that whatever party elects a board majority will name its own."

Di Senate Against Editorship Plan

Group Favors Leaving Post With Politics

Wednesday night's discussion by the Dialectic Senate to remove selection of candidates for editors-in-chief of campus publications from the hands of the political parties ended in defeat of the proposal with only two senators voting for approval of the measure.

A heated debate took place on the floor of the Senate. Both sides of the issue were hotly contended and at one time the enthusiasm of the speakers reached such a peak that Di president, Charles O. Long was forced to call for order before the debate could be continued.

Speeches Offered

Constructive speeches were offered by Long speaking for the proposal and officially introducing it to the assembly and John Zucker, chairman of the Di Ways and Means committee speaking against.

The question, one which has arisen time and again, was resolved: "That Article IV Section IV of the Constitution of the student body should be amended so as to remove the nomination of editors-in-chief of the campus publications from the hands of the political parties."

It was evident from the trend of the debate that the proposal would be defeated. However, the outcome could not be officially confirmed by this paper since the issue was not brought to a vote until after press time Wednesday night.

CCUN Will Discuss Suggestions Today

All members of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations are requested to attend a meeting to be held this afternoon in Room 211, Graham Memorial, at four-thirty.

Highlighting the afternoon's discussions will be announcement of recommendations suggested by the provisional board set up at an Executive Committee meeting last Friday. Committee member Randall McLeod will preside over the assembly. Speaking for the provisional board will be Roberta Stirling, secretary-general of state division of CCUN.

YMCA Members Will Meet Monday

The first entire membership meeting of the Y. M. C. A. is being held Monday night at 8 o'clock in Gerrard Hall. This is to be a short business meeting to explain the "Y" program for the school year of 1947-48.

The meeting is to be opened by a few minutes of worship led by Art Bridgman, Worship Chairman. Charles Foley, President of the "Y", is planning to outline the overall program and then introduce the committee chairman, who will speak briefly on their proposed plans for the year. This is to be followed by committee meetings, and it hoped that all members will desire to participate.

State Fair in Raleigh Draws Record Crowd

Raleigh, Oct. 16 — (UP) — Sunny weather is luring the biggest crowds yet of the week to the State fair in Raleigh. State offices are closed in the capital city to give employees a chance to visit the annual exposition.

One highlight of today's program is the crowning of dairy queens by the State's beauty queen. Vivian White, 18-year-old Fayetteville brunette, is crowning the four champion cows with garlands of flowers. Agriculture exhibits and amusements report heavy attendance.

IN THE WAKE OF THE HURRICANE which swept across southern Florida, a final deluge of rain resulted in flood waters inundating a large area of Fort Lauderdale, above. The rising waters created grave problems of health and housing in many parts of the lower Florida east coast. The hurricane, which blew out to sea, turned back toward the coast states. Dramatic Association Books Address by Playwright Green

By Mark Sumner

Paul Green, Chapel Hill playwright and Pulitzer prize winner, will be one of the featured speakers at the twenty-fifth annual conference of Carolina Dramatic association which is to meet here Saturday. Mr. Green's topic will be "Theater of the People."

C. R. Sumner of Asheville, president of the association, will preside over the one day conference, which is for teachers and directors of dramatic art in North Carolina. The meeting will open with a breakfast and business session in the Carolina Inn, and the program which follows is open to the public.

Other features of the conference are talks by Harry Davis of the Carolina Playmaker staff, who will speak on "Producing With Minimum Scenery," and Dr. Lucille H. Charles of East Carolina Teachers college, who will talk about "Drama among the Primitives." A panel discussion led by Clifton Britton, Goldsboro, will inquire into "The Value of Regional Festivals."

John W. Parker, head of the University bureau of community drama, is executive secretary for the Association, which is a clearing house for ideas and information for 300 organized drama groups throughout the state. Every year the Carolina Dramatic association sponsors a number of regional dramatic festivals, and conducts the state drama festival in Chapel Hill each spring.

Student Entertainment Committee Plans Outstanding Program for Coming Year

A new high in the level of imported professional entertainment at Carolina is expected to be reached by the program arranged for this winter by the Student Entertainment committee.

Headlined by the presentation of Pucini's operatic masterpiece, "Madame Butterfly," the series includes Gilbert and Sullivan's "Mikado," the Philharmonic Piano Quartette, Iva Kitchell, the dance satirist, and Franz Polgar, noted hypnotist and mind reader.

On Sale

Tickets for the entire series will go on sale this morning at Ledbetter-Pickard's and at the Playmaker offices in Swain hall. They will be priced at $6.50 for the series. Although individual prices have not been released as yet, they will run about $.60 per production more than the series price according to Jack McBride, chairman of the sponsoring group.

Member Bill Carmichael of the committee stated that only 1700 tickets will be available, because of the limited seating capacity of Memorial Hall where the series will be presented. "However," he declared, "we have secured the largest auditorium available, and I hope that all interested students will be able to secure tickets and see this remarkable series."

"Madame Butterfly" which is the lead-off feature of the series will be presented by Charles L. Wagner, prominent New York impressario. It is a story with a Japanese setting but has always had great appeal in the United States. The leading character is an American naval officer, and the music is said to be the most familiar to the layman of all opera scores.

All-Star Cast

It will be presented here with an all-star professional cast under the direction of the veteran conductor Edwin McArthur The 43-year-old musical drama is regarded by the committee as the outstanding 'must' of the series.

Dates of the other productions are Iva Kitchell on January 19th, the "Mikado" on January 30 and 31st, the Philharmonic Quartette on February 20th, and Franz Polgar on April 5th.

The "Mikado" is also regarded as a particularly outstanding attraction and has been billed for two performances.

Rally Scheduled For 12:15 Today To See Team Off

A rousing sendoff, complete with band and cheerleaders, is planned for 12:15 at Woollen gym this morning when the Tar Heels board the bus for Williamsburg and Saturday's battle with the Indians of William and Mary.

Yesterday, Coach Crowell Little, who scouted the Indians last week, offered this suggestion to the student body: "The boys on the team know they have yet to play the best football of which they are capable. For the past two weeks everyone from the oldest alumnus to the youngest freshman has let them know it. The boys are determined to prove themselves this Saturday. A real sendoff by the entire school will show the team that their school is behind them all the way."

Following Coach Little's suggestion, the University club urges everyone to join the band and cheerleaders at 12:15 at Woollen gym.

Square Dance Opens GM Weekend Activities

The second session of Sadie Hawkins day practice will be held at the Y court square dance from 8:30 through midnight this evening. Under the sponsorship of Graham Memorial, the dance will be called by Taylor Dodson, and music will be recorded.

At the same time Scott Gardner's popular campus orchestra will be playing in the Rendezvous of Graham Memorial. The band will also appear tomorrow evening from 8:30-12:30.

Union recreation director Nancy Tucker reminded all students of tomorrow evening's bingo party, to be held in the Roland Parker lounges. Cash orizes will be awarded game winners, and Ken Gammage will act as master of ceremonies.

Starring in Sunday evening's Sunday Night Sing, revival program of the popular Graham Memorial community sings, will be torchy Audrey Green, well-known campus blues singer. A fourth-year English major from Augusta, Ga., Audrey will present one or two blues numbers.

Mistress of ceremonies for the occasion will be Coline Smith, and Frank Matthews will be pianist-accompanist. The program will begin at 8 o'clock in Memorial hall.

Legislators Defer Redistricting Bill

Clampitt, Miller and Baker Give Report on NSA Session

By Chuck Hauser

In a two-and-a-half hour session which threatened to be explosive but moved smoothly to adjournment, the Student Legislature last night heard Speaker pro-tempore Charlie Long introduce a complete campus-town redistricting bill to cut up the old four-voting-district set-up student government now operates under.

Seventeen Districts

The bill which was referred to committee, would provide for 17 voting districts—two dorm women's, one town women's, five dorm men's, and nine town men's—to replace the four districts established by the student constitution, one dorm and town district each for men and women.

According to Long, "The bill is designed to correct faults of the representation where legislators are from a vague constituency and cannot act in the interests of all factions on campus.

Break Party Lines

"Further, it is hoped that this bill, by giving legislators a distinct constituency, will help to break up party line voting in the Legislature."

Tag Montague, UP town representative, said of the bill, "It adds a great many unnecessary complications to the form of student government, whereas simplicity is the essence of sound government."

NSA Report

First item of business on the Legislature's agenda last night was the report on the National Students association by delegates Johnny Clampitt, Herman Baker, and Bill Miller.

The three delegates to the association gave the Legislature a general discussion of the activities of the ten-day conference, mentioning the much-discussed race and communist questions.

Baker, Clampitt Officers

During the run of the convention, it was reported, delegate Herman Baker was given the presidency of the four-state district of North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia, while Johnny Clampitt took over the position of treasurer.

The much-discussed Student Government Record bill was set aside by the legislators, and Ernest House's bill to provide for the Record's being published at established intervals in the Daily Tar Heel was passed. The Record will contain complete accounts of student government

Radio Workshop Plans Drama Series To Start Wednesday

A famous actor's voice gets stuck in a radio tube next Wednesday evening at 8:30 on stations WRAL and WHHT when the University's new radio drama workshop presents its premier production, "Pi R Squared."

The show will open a series "Thirty-Three By Air," presented from campus studios of the Communication Center.

"Pi R Squared" traces the comical attempts of a radio thespian to recapture his voice. Elliott Gruskin, former student, wrote the fantasy while taking a radio script writing course taught by Robert Schenkkan of the Department of Radio.

"Most of the 33 plays in the series are unusual experiments in radio writing running the gamut from comedy to stark drama," said Earl Wynn, Director of the Communication Center. "They have been written by students, faculty and alumni."

Earl Wynn, Miss Jane Grills, Robert Schenkkan and Miss Rhoda Hunter will produce the shows along with various student directors. Casts will consist of talented students and townspeople.

Eight stations of the Tobacco network will carry "Thirty-Three By Air." Best local pick-up is over station WHHT, Durham, 1590 kilocycles.

For those students going home for the week-end, Earl Wynn announced that "The University Hour" can be heard Sunday afternoon from 1:30 to 2 o'clock in all parts of the state

The following stations will carry the variety program: WPTF, Raleigh; WBT, Charlotte; WBIG, Greensboro, WWNC Asheville; and WSJS, Winston-Salem.

MOORE COUNTY CLUB

The Moore County club will meet Monday night at 7 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge No. 3 of Graham Memorial. All new students from Moore county are especially invited.

Violincellist to Appear Here; Piano Recital Will Be Given

William Klentz Recitals Booked

William Klenz, violincellist, in association with Wilton Mason of the piano faculty of the Department of music, will present a series of three recitals in Hill hall on the successive Friday evenings of October 24, October 31, and November 7, at 8:30 o'clock.

The first recital will consist of duo-sonatas with keyboard, ranging from an irregular sonata of Bach to a modern one by Debussy, and including works by Beethoven and Faure.

Under the title "Origins of the Violincello Sonata," Mr Klenz will present, at the second recital, a group of ancient sonatas of especial interest, including two by Domenico Gabrielli. This recital will also mark the first public appearance of the Music department's new harpsichord.

Mr. Klenz's third recital will consist entirely of Johann Sebastian Bach's Suites I, II, and VI for solo violincello.

Pianist Will Be Here Wednesday

Stuart Pratt, head of the piano department at Meredith college, Raleigh, will appear in recital on Wednesday, October 22, at 8:30 in Hill hall under the sponsorship of the Music department.

Included on his program will be the following selections: "Sheep May Safely Graze" (from the "Birthday Cantata), by Bach, arranged by Petri; "Sonata, Opus 78" by Beethoven; "Twenty-four Preludes, Opus 28," by Chopin, and the Liszt variations of the Bach theme, "Weinen, Klagen, Sorgen, Zagen."

Mr. Pratt took his A. B. at Hartwick college, and his Mus. B. at the Philadelphia Musical academy. For two years he studied in Berlin as a pupil of Siebold, Kaun, and Scharwenka; while for the past three seasons he has been an artist pupil of Egon Petri. He has been head of the Piano department at Meredith for five years.

Cross-Section View Of American Students

By Bill Miller

This summer I have seen a cross-section of American College Students in action. I have seen white and black, Jews, Catholics and Protestants meet and discuss student needs Communism, the race issue and its relation to them. The occasion was the National Student Association Constitutional Convention and the place was the campus of the University of Wisconsin during one of the warmest Septembers in the history of that state. From this experience there is a story I should like to tell. It is primarily of the National Student Association but it concerns itself with the mind of American Students of today. I will tell you first of the background of the organization and the factors which brought John Clampitt, Herman Baker and I to Madison this summer.

At a meeting of the World Student Congress in Prague, Czechoslovakia, held in the summer of 1946, it was realized by the American delegation, one of whom was Jimmy Wallace of this University, that America was one of the few countries in the world without a National Student Association for the attainment of common student needs. They envisioned the formation of such an organization which would work for "improvement of educational facilities and standards, the maintenence of equal rights to education without discrimination, the development and improvement of student publications, student government, academic, social and physical conditions of student life, and the furtherance of cooperation between students, faculties, and administrations, to further the program of exchange scholarships internationally, to plan and conduct summer travel programs for American students visiting foreign nations, and to represent American College Students in all phases of international student activity."

They called American students together for a Conference to determine interest and the result was the Chicago Conference of the National Student Organization held at the University of Chicago during the Christmas holidays and to which Jimmy Wallace, Jim Chestnut, Tom Eller, and I were elected to attend. Seven hundred students attended this Conference, representing three hundred schools and a student population of 800,000 students. The Conference adjourned leaving considerable doubt in the minds of all delegates, particularly Southerners as to the extent it could apply its aims, and the actual benefit derived by each campus in proportion to the required monetary investment (approximately five cents per student per member school). We suspected the Communist and other leftist organizations might be attempting to form a "front" and that other National Student Welfare Organizations such as YMCA and Federation of Newman Clubs might have ulterior motives in the great interest they showed in the group.

Many feared the Northern groups who favored the immediate elimination of segregated school systems and many other changes not consistent with our present Southern position might become so strong in the organization as to force the southern white schools to withdraw rather than be a part of something they could not secure support for in their regions. To most students who barely found time to devote to local student affairs there was doubt that the work required would reap the rewards all have a right to hope for after such an undertaking. With these questions still to be answered and instructions from the Legislature of the University to stand for "equal educational opportunity in a dual educational system, the barring of Communist from the organization, and elimination of Student Welfare Organizations influence," the Student Legislature voted to send the delegates to the Convention.

Upon my arrival at the University of Wisconsin, I found that nearly 800 delegates had been registered, representing over 50 per cent of the American College student population with some 350 schools. I was much impressed with Wisconsin and the University. It is truly America's dairyland. It is a sparsely populated state with a population largely of a German decent. Having risen very late to its position of prominence the people of Wisconsin have incorporated many economic and industrial developments which have recently come into prominence in our country. The Student Union Building was one of the most impressive features of the trip. It is built on Lake Mendota which is generally dotted with University owned canoes and sailboats most of the day and night. It is student run, non-profit, and incorporates a cafeteria, dining room, and Raths Keller which is distinguished by the the quantity of beer, which made Wisconsin famous, sold over its counters at ten cents per glass from 10 'til 10. (Local politicos take note).

The left wing of the Union is composed of an ultra modern auditorium not quite the size of Memorial hall and a student-owned movie theater which has good first run movies every other day (local theater take note) and both of which are air conditioned. The student co-up clothing store is located a block from the Union building and is four times the size of the largest clothing store in Chapel Hill. I learned from the manager that the Co-op was founded in 189- by a number of student and faculty members and it is now one of the five largest in the country of its kind adhering to the policy of non-profit operation through original low prices and trade refund. They handle nationally advertised goods. (I have more information on this for anyone interested).

Upon registration we could choose one of three panels into which members of the Convention would be divided. They were (1) Student Government and Student Government Functions. (2) Educational Opportunities. (3) International Student Activities.

Herman Baker selected Panel I, the purpose of which was to strengthen student governments throughout America so they might become "laboratories in democracy" for the training of future citizens. I chose Panel II which later became the most heated panel of them all as it concerned itself with the race question and the South. I will tell you of our debates, The southern stand, and final conclusions reached by this panel in the next article.

In Melton's Opinion

The Lemon of the Week

By Art Melton

The lemon of the week goes to a letter writer of a couple of days ago for his sharp criticism of the DTH's sports staff. However, we hasten also to award him an orchid for retaining his naievty and innocence here at Carolina.

We gather from the tone of the gentleman's letter that he believes Southern conference gridmen are giving their all for their dear ole' Alma Mammy —filthy lucre has nothing to do with putting out a squad. . .no . . .no! Who expects the boys to get out and go. . . .work like mad. . .take a chance of getting their necks broke without it?

Tell us, Mr. Letterwriter, is sportsmanship and Carolina spirit blind allegiance or is it sticking up for a win-or-lose team when you know it's the best that you can get! As for "whining, and the criticism of a team for failing to win, once, twice, or any number of times" tell us—if you had a few-thousand-dollar business rated by some of the best in the business among the top ten of the nation and it failed to deliver the goods what would you do—fire the hired help—raise the pay in order to raise production. . . . especially when they have more than proven their worth in the past year. . .or would you look for a new executive head. . .or at least find out what is wrong with the management? Mein Freund that is why we elect a president every four years.

Loyal Carolina alumni, letterwriters of the same day, we also agree with you that there is a "nigger in the woodpile" but we take you to task for suggesting that it might be—by inference seemingly Choo-Choo Justice and Walt Pupa. We do this because we have during the past few weeks made the offer numerous times that we would pay five dollars if we could be shown a man on the first team that would say something against the Asheville speedster — all without takers. We don't believe it is as you say, "It has been rumored that there is jealousy among the players as a result of some of them getting more for their efforts than others" . . .we might agree with the idea that the men are not getting what they are worth. . .allegedly not as much as equal players on other teams.

Now back to this thing of football games—they are paid entertainment—you are not getting your money's worth—you are entitled to yell to the high heavens—spirit or no spirit—that's cold hard business the kind that most of the people on this campus understand. Let's remember that some of these boys have babies at home to feed and they can't put heart into a game when they don't receive as much remuneration as the average afternoon-working student.

One more question—why-oh-why have so many potential and proven players departed from the stadium. . .Ray Jordan. . . Hugh "Shot" Cox. . .Billy Myers. . .former All Southern Conference Guard at another school prior to coming to Carolina??? . . .is the molder letting air into the mold causing the metal to fall apart when put into use?

Hey, Jack get off their back—back the boys and beat Dook!

We'll Win, Naturally

By Pete Gerns

Carolina will win this Saturday afternoon when our team will tangle with a power-laden outfit from William and Mary, according to the answers received to date. An informal poll was taken by the writer of 150 students who were asked to voice their sentiments regarding the game, win, lose, or draw: Here are the results of the 150 students polled, 133 said that we will win, but def; 14 favored W and M, and 3 predicted a tie.

Several people were asked to give their reasons for voting the way they did and here they are: Jack Burney believes that "both teams are good, and if we will win we'll do it by a close margin." Ruth Evans's intuition told her that Carolina will win by a score of 14-6. "The team has regained its self-confidence and they are out to win," says Kenneth Rhodes, while Phil Atkins thinks that "William and Mary has a more powerful team."

Other opinions were given by Joe Travis: "We can't lose three times in a row" and Chuck Hilty: "With everybody blocking and some concerted action we'll have a good chance to win this one."

"Do you believe that world government is a path to peace" will be the question for Tuesday's column. Please put your opinion on paper and leave it in the "Campus Forum" box in Graham Memorial or the DTH office by 6 p. m. Sunday.

Time For A 'Strike'

The First Word

Anything Worth Doing

No meat on Tuesday, no eggs or poultry on Thursday. It would seem to be just as sensible to propose a "foodless week"—not that we mind giving up breakfast or anything like that. It's just that the whole business seems so futile and unorganized. President Truman must have learned during the war that voluntary rationing of food won't work. If we wouldn't do it then, when we could see the need clearly, it doesn't seem logical that we will do it now when most of us are uncertain about where the food we don't eat will go. Europe is noted for making political capital of relief materials. Most Americans have a deep-seated repugnance toward being taken for fools. The answer: strict food rationing. Anything worth doing is worth doing well.

Very noble plan underway in Graham Memorial's basement: Jazz every Wednesday afternoon. Difficulty is that it isn't very good advertising for jazz. Lots of unformed personalities wander in, hear loafers making bets on who can guess the name of the tune the musicians are playing. Usually a couple of dozen campus sax-man, drummers, brass-blowers and pianists show up for the jam sessions and play what they don't get a chance to play with their bands. Some of the music is fine; most of it is. But, though we know that this is music for musicians, we can't help but think that the moderator of the sessions should ask more of a man than that he own a horn. There should be some system to keep one squarebop from ruining what four or five others in a combo work hard to achieve. However, jazz in the basement is a boon and a joy; half a riff is better than none.

"Tookie" Hodgson, enfant terrible of the campus publications world, expects his humor mag blessed event (prenatally dubbed "Tarnation") on or about November 15. Whether or not the campus can or will support a new humor mag in addition to the old lit book is still a moot point; but we have one. If "Tarnation" is, as Hodgson says it will be, a downsouth "New Yorker," there's plenty of room for it.

Incidentally, there'll be two humor markets for scarce funny writers on campus. The Carolina Mag, just up the stairs and around the corner from the "Tarnation" office, will continue to use some humor. Editor Fred Jacobson says the Mag won't be competing with friend Hodgson's endeavor. (Look for a boom in hatchet stock.)

The millenium (whatever that is) has arrived! Wrist watches with alarms have hit the market—at $120 a tinkle. Think of it! The two of them in passionate embrace—brrrr! goes her timepiece. "Sorry, an appointment," says she. "&$*$!" says he.

About readers and writers: Peirson Ricks, ex-Carolina man now of Winston-Salem and author of the new novel "Hunter's Horn" will move soon to Chapel Hill to join the thriving writers' colony here. Says it's so he can be close to a good library. He'll work on a new historical novel with a North Carolina background.... Big Burke Davis, Charlotte News special writer, is another one of the Tar Heel voices getting national hearing soon. His novel is scheduled to appear in the spring. It's about Charlotte and he doesn't expect the Queen City to be to happy about it.... Somebody should write a letter of thanks to Bob Ruark, who once learned and yearned after fame here. Now a big time columnist, Ruark has written a humourous satire on novels in the "Forever Amber" vein. The field has needed just that treatment for quite a while....Paul Ader, an Ashville man, seems also to be arriving in the literary world. His second novel will be in the bookshops any day now. It too, has a Tar Heel background. (I will review it on this page soon.) What does the state government need with a publicity bureau?

Write Away

One of the Very Few

Dear Sir:

It is of increasing astonishment to those of us who helped form the local Henry Wallace Club to see such limited response from the student body of a University renowned for its liberal spirit. In an attempt to give married students and veterans a chance to participate in liberal activities, we are calling a public meeting in the Horace Williams Lounge for this coming Friday night, October 17, at 7:30.

Those of us who sense a deepening world crisis know that now is a crucial time for the liberal movement. We must assert ourselves for basic American and humanitarian principles now or see ourselves overwhelmed by another war hysteria. Henry Wallace does not consider war inevitable, he believes in a positive program of world cooperation, and he has a living and practicable faith in mankind and in Americans. We have pitifully few great men left in this country, and Henry Wallace is one of the very few with the courage, the imagination, and the resourcefulness to lead us through the crisis ahead of us. When we rally around Henry Wallace, America will have regained her true direction.

Sincerely,
BILL MCGIRT

This Changing World

Another War Inevitable?

By Bill Robertson

At the present time there is a question which appears to dominate the minds of large numbers of people in our country. It is the question of the inevitability of World War III. Two or three articles have already appeared in this publication supporting the thesis that there will be another world war—not to mention the headlines to be found in newspapers all over the country tending to support the same thesis. All sorts of wild rumors and saucers have been flying around. The poor little Dominican Republic, under the "benevolent" dictatorship of General Trujillo, has been threatened with invasion by armed communist bands from Cuba. It was not so long ago that Drew Pearson informed us that Marshal Zhukhov had taken over command of Soviet troops in preparation for an invasion of "democratic" Turkey—and so on and so forth.

What IS the objective situation existing in the world today?

As a result of World War II extremely important changes have taken place in the international political situation. Fascist Germany, Italy, and Japan have been eliminated as powers threatening the peace and security of the world. Further, the majority of the states comprising our modern world society, including all of those states containing the decisive economic, political, and military power, have organized a working relationship on the basis of common needs in the course of the war against the aggressor states. I refer to the United Nations organization.

However, it has become apparent since the conclusion of the war that this working relationship is not harmonious. Antagonisms exist in the relations between the various states in the UN,—and particularly among the most powerful states: that is, those states which are permanent members of the Security Council—Great Britain, Soviet Union, U. S. A., France, and China.

It is these antagonisms that certain people have in mind when they predict World War III. More exactly, they have in mind the antagonisms between the two most powerful states in the world—the U. S. A. and the Soviet Union. What war danger do we find here? It goes without saying, or rather, it is said very often, that American reactionaries, including Bullitt, Earl, et al., hate the Soviet Union and they wish to carry on an open war against her. But anti-Sovietism is one thing and war between the American people and the Soviet people is another. Until those groups which long for a war with the Soviet Union have brought into submission the people of the U. S. A. and the peoples of various other countries, colonies, and semi-colonies, they will be unable to bring about war.

Concretely, the Wallace movement in our own country (plus the following of such liberals as Pepper and Taylor) is actually growing, along with the resentment of the American people, in the face of the Hearst-McCormick-Patterson "war hysteria" line.

America is very far from the Soviet Union. There are vast territories separating America from the Soviet Union. These in-between countries, comprise the semi-socialist countries, colonies, and semi-colonial countries of Europe, Asia, and Africa. Under these conditions it is very difficult for the U. S. to attack the Soviet Union or vice versa.

If the concrete situation renders an American-Soviet war unders an American-Soviet war unfeasible—what is the explanation of the wave of war hysteria?

Hitler's anti-Sovietism was another name for enslaving the German people and trampling on the peoples of all Europe. Fascist Japan's anti-Sovietism was another work for enslaving the Japanese people and invading all countries on both sides of the Pacific. (The two states signed an anti-Comintern Pact.)

American anti-Sovietism is supported by the authors of the Taft-Hartley Bill and the wreckers of O.P.A. (or don't you read the Wall Street Journal?) When a country refuses to accept American capital (which could be used to industrialize our poverty-stricken South or to finance a national housing program) it is said to be "totalitarian."

American monopoly capitalists today are suffering from a "crisis of over-production." They have made huge profits from the war and are searching for "areas of investment." When they speak of "Soviet expansion" they mean their "areas of investment are being restricted. Unfortunately, the "big shots" can't bring their problems to us in an open manner—and so we have the "Truman Doctrine" and the "Marshall Plan."

It is obvious that under such conditions the men in Wall street and their followers are pessimistic. They have no faith in the future—their future. But their future is not the future of the majority of the American people—nor of the peoples of the world. These men control a lot of the press and are able "to drive us to drink" with their mad ravings. Their pessimism has infected outstanding intellectuals, such as Dr. Hardin Craig, but there is no objective reason why their pessimism should infect the student body of U. N. C.

Certainly, we have many tough problems to solve. But with an approach based upon a clear understanding of conditions—and of the elements in our society which have created these conditions—we students can organize ourselves along with the majority of the people in our country for effective action on the pressing problems of high prices, high rents, etc., —the real day-to-day problems facing us which the present "war hysteria" beclouds.

We shall discuss these immediate problems, and the means of dealing with them in our next few articles.

Bobbing In Sports

—with—

Bob Goldwater

It looks like there will be a lot kicks on the Carolina sports front this weekend. It isn't that the fans will be kicking at how the athletes are performing. Nor do we mean that the players themselves will be kicking about the rulings of officials. But what will be happening is that Tar Heel athletes in three different sports will be using kicks of one sort or another in their attempts for victory today and tomorrow.

FOR THOSE who are wondering what part the kicks play in the plans for victory, it should be stated that the sports that see action over the busy weekend are football, cross country, and soccer. Charlie Justice will be doing most of the kicking for the gridders and his booming punts will be a major asset for the Snavelymen come tomorrow afternoon.

The cross-country lads will be calling on their strongest finishing kicks when they begin their over-hill-and-dale grind tomorrow morning. And everyone knows that kicking is the main feature of a soccer game, which means that the Carolina booters will be right in there feet first both today and again tomorrow. Incidentally, maybe the fact that they are Tar Heels will help.

Whether it does or not, though, the local booters will open the hostilities for Carolina's busiest weekend of the three-week-old season up in Baltimore this afternoon. Providing the strong opposition for Coach Marvin Allen's lads will be the owners of the toughest feet and shins to be found in Loyola university.

THE NEXT EVENT on the weekend schedule, chronologically speaking, will be the lone home engagement of the four contests in which the Tar Heels take part. It comes off on Fetzer field at 11:30 o'clock tomorrow morning when Coach Dale Ranson's harrier octet toes the starting mark with some Ramblers from Georgia Tech. The climax to the morning's activities is expected somewhere around 11:45, when the harriers reappear after their 5-8-mile tour of Chapel Hill on the distant end of Fetzer field. Then follows Carolina's finishing kicks, should one be necessary for a Tar Heel victory.

THE SPORTS BUG taking in all four Carolina activities would have to take off immediately after the cross-country finish for a return trip to Maryland. For up in Annapolis, the booters return to action shortly after noontime tomorrow against the classy, hard-stepping kickers from Navy.

Completing the sporting picture for the weekend is the number one attraction of them all—Carolina vs. William and Mary on the gridiron up in Williamsburg, Va., tomorrow afternoon. Tar Heel rooters ought to receive a big kick should their team come through in fine fashion.

Which just goes to show what athletes—and sports writers too—will do just for kicks!

AND SPEAKING OF WILLIAM AND MARY, a note of interest to Carolina tennis fans was lost at the bottom of the sports pages last week. Gardner Larned, the Indians' number one netter, has left the Williamsburg school and is enrolling at Rollins college in Florida. All of which leaves the Indian racquet crew with only Kovaleski, Baetzen, Macken, and several other lesser lights for their defense of the Southern conference net title next year against the threat of Vic Seixas and Company.

PREDICTION TIME AGAIN, and out we climb on our five respective limbs. And as usual, the members of the board disagree on the final result of the score closest to our hearts—and pocketbooks. Jake Wade is the most optimistic with his 21-0 call, causing the rest of us to think that he has some secret wire between his and Coach Snavely's office.

Bill Lamkin and Morty Schaap also feel that the Tar Heels will come through with three touchdowns—and Bob Cox with three extra points. But they disagree as to the Indians' total. Yours truly thinks Carolina good for four TD's, and Cox likewise in his specialty. Colleague Bill Carmichael refuses to guess the score, having been so wrong in the past two weeks.

TWO FORMER Carolina head grid mentors attempt to take after MacArthur with his "I shall return" statement this week when Jim Tatum and Ray Wolf come back to the Old North State at the head of their respective teams. But whereas MacArthur followed through with a triumph, both former Tar Heels are expected to return home with a loss on the ledger.

Tatum's Terps from Maryland tackle an old Tatum toughie, Duke, while Wolf's 'Gators slither up from Florida to battle N. C. State.

Here's hoping the two ex-Carolinians do well!

Gridders Leave Today For Tilt with Indians

A determined band of Carolina Tar Heels will leave Chapel Hill today for Williamsburg, Va., where they have high hopes of breaking back into the win column against William & Mary's powerful Indians.

Two big problems for Carolina's Tar Heels to solve on Saturday when they meet William & Mary will be how to block out the Indians' co-captains, end Bob Steckroth (top) and tackle Ralph Sazio. The two have been outstanding with their rugged line play.

Coach Carl Snavely will send his squad through a final light workout this morning before the game, but the practice will be held in Chapel Hill rather than in the town of the opposing team, as is the usual custom.

The final tuneup for the team is slated to begin at Navy field at about 9:30 this morning. There will be no contact work, but Snavely is expected to give the boys a few last minute pointers and a checkup of the timing on the team's plays.

Travel by Bus

Following the drill, the Carolina squad will leave by bus for Virginia. The bus is scheduled to pull out some time after 12 o'clock.

Yesterday Snavely sent his charges through a lengthy workout on soggy Navy field. There was no tackling or full-scale scrimmage work, but the Tar Heel mentor gave his boys a full afternoon of work. Much of the session was devoted to pass defense, a department that has been extremely weak in the Heels' other games thus far.

The Carolina players also received some advice on bettering their blocking, particularly on plays that are to be used near the goal line. Other offensive maneuvers during the afternoon saw an abundance of passes, indicating that Snavely may be counting heavily on his aerial game to go over William and Mary's strong forward wall, which is paced by guard Knox Ramsey, a potential All-American prospect.

Carolina's injured list was a bit smaller yesterday, but there are at least three men on the Tar Heel roster who likely will miss the game. They are Dick Bunting, Hays, and Al Bernot. Sid Varney, the scrappy guard, did not work out with the team but jogged around the field in gym equipment. The Tar Heel trainers are hopeful that he will be ready for action.

Jack Fitch, the hard-running tailback who missed the drills on Wednesday, was back in uniform yesterday.

Carolina ranks eighth in the nation in passing despite two big losses to Texas and Wake Forest. Of the 62 passes thrown by the Tar Heels, 26 have been completed for a .419 completion average. Incidentally, all three of Carolina's touchdowns have come on passes.

The Tar Heels will leave for Williamsburg on Friday by bus. Last season's engagement between the two outfits resulted in a 21-7 triumph for the boys from Chapel Hill. That game was played in Richmond.

AAU Declares Justice Is Clearly An Amateur

High Point, Oct. 16—(UP)—The president of the Carolinas amateur athletic union has declared that the AAU considers Charlie Justice clearly an amateur.

The University of North Carolina halfback has recently had his eligibility under fire on charges that he had signed with a professional team. But says Fisher, "The AAU certainly does not consider Justice a professional."

Booters Face Loyola In Baltimore Today

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

Baltimore, Oct. 16—Carolina's soccer squad, 18 men strong, arrived in Baltimore late tonight and was immediately hustled off to bed by Coach Marvin Allen so that they would be in tip-top physical condition for tomorrow's tilt with the Loyola Greyhounds.

The Tar Heel booters wind up the Maryland foray against a potent Navy eleven on Saturday afternoon in Annapolis.

Jesse Greenbaum, ace outside left will be out to chew up the Greyhound attack tomorrow afternoon for he'll be performing before the home folks.

Other booters slated to see action on the trip in addition to the starters include Hank Pfautz, Bob Plumb, Dave Ferebee, Bill Moore, Gomer Williams, Duncan McCalman, and Dave Sobel.

The Carolina starting lineup:

inside right	Joe Bach
outside right	Basil Jackson
center half	Charles Johnston
right half	Al Singer
left fullback	Frank Nelson
center fullback	Hank Pallulat
right fullback	Porter VanZandt
goalie	Al Williams

Scott Puts Cagers Through Workouts

Basketball practice under the direction of Coach Tom Scott continued on the main floor of Woollen yesterday afternoon with a whole host of candidates still vieing for spots on varsity, junior varsity, and freshman cage squads.

The group spent the early part of the afternoon in floor drills, with the remainder of the day being devoted to scrimmaging.

This afternoon's practice session will be the last before Coach Scott is forced to make another cut, to enable the court practice to move into high gear come the first of the week.

On Monday all lettermen and jayvee holdovers from last year will join the squad, to begin work for the season which opens early in December.

William and Mary's football stock took a drop this week when Tom Korczowski, brilliant tailback, broke his ankle in last week's game.

Nevertheless the Indians boast a potent attack, backed up by a hard-charging line which is headed by guard Knox Ramsey, a potential All-American.

Hotly Contested Games Feature Intramural Tag Football Play

The intramural tag football program closed out its second week of play yesterday afternoon with several hotly contested battles taking place on the seven mural gridirons while tennis matches were held up once again because of rain.

Kap Psi and Pi Lamb fraternity squads staged the tightest clash, with Kap Psi finally coming across in an overtime period by a 1-0 score. Another overtime battle raged between Old East and Ruffin dorm teams, with Old East winning by a 7-6 margin.

Bill Ellington blocked a kick and covered it for a safety in helping assure Phi Gam of a 9-0 victory over Lambda Chi.

No games will be played today which is the usual custom for Friday. Play will be resumed in both tag football and tennis divisions on Monday.

The Pacific Coast Baseball League drew 4,068,432 paid fans in the season just closed, eclipsing the minor league record of 3,718,716 hung up by the eight-club loop in 1946.

Ping Pong Tourney Nears Final Rounds

Two entries in Graham Memorial's ping-pong tournament moved into the semi-finals yesterday and another player joined the field of eight.

Favorite Ray Morris scored victories over Dean Howard and Andy Lavin to gain his semi-final berth. Bob Goldwater upset Tom Wadden in a three-game match to also gain the field-of-four round. Archie Goodwin moved into the quarter finals by defeating Harry Billerbeck.

In doubles competition, the combination of Stevens-White became the third duo to enter the semi-finals. The fourth berth will be occupied by the winner of the match between Parker-Grubbs and Whitted-Brown.

Williams Succeeds Georgia Ethridge As SCHW Chairman

Aubrey Williams, Jr., of Montgomery, Alabama, was unanimously elected chairman of the Chapel Hill chapter of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare Wednesday evening to succeed Georgia Ethridge of Louisville, Kentucky.

Dorothy Arnett of Greensboro was selected as vice-chairman, George Wirth, secretary, and Paul Morehead of Little Rock, Arkansas as treasurer.

The group discussed plans for launching a campus-wide protest against the high prices now prevalent in Chapel Hill and the nation. Mrs. Vera Scales of Chapel Hill presented a brief summary of her experiences at Prague, Czechoslovakia as a delegate to the International Youth festival this past summer.

A motion to endorse the petition which the American Veterans committee is planning to present to the University on the subject of housing passed unanimously.

CITIZENS FOOD COMMITTEE Chairman Charles E. Luckman (right) confers in Washington with Harold Krieger, general counsel for the AFL Distillery, Rectifying and Wine Workers union. They discussed the agreement of the distilling industry to shut down its manufacturing operations for 60 days beginning October 25 to help conserve the nation's grain supply. (International)

YWCA to Hold Worship Services In Coed Dormitories, Sororities

"What Do You Want From College?" is the fall quarter theme of "Y Time Out," a series of weekly worship and discussion services held in all women's dormitories and sorority houses. Planned by the YWCA Worship committee, headed by Joan Butler, and administered by chairmen from each dorm, the programs are given from 11 to 11:15 one night each week.

In cooperation with the Music committee of the Y, of which Mary Murphey is chairman, and with the Women's Glee club, musical programs will be presented later in the term. Speakers from the university community will also be presented, among them ministers from Chapel Hill, and Miss Katherine Cook, vocational adviser, who will speak on careers. A Christmas program, open to students and townspeople, will be given by the Worship committee in conjunction with the Modern dance group.

Members of the committee, who plan and write the services, as well as present them in their respective dormitories, are as follows: Jo Ogelsby, Alderman; Barbara Ann Ray, Archer house; Elizabeth Osborne, Carr; Martha Aiken, Keenan; Joyce Jones and Jo West, McIver; Maebelle Enman, Smith; and Gertrude Osborne, Spencer.

Jean Snyler, Alpha Gamma Delta; Venita Sanders, Alpha Delta Pi; Catherine Holt, Delta Delta Delta; and Dabney Little, Pi Beta Phi. Joan Butler, chairman of the committee, is in charge of programs for the Chi Omega house.

Matilda McDonald has done the art work for the programs which are distributed at each service.

councils, legislature sessions, etc.

Appointments Approved

Three appointments made by student body president Tom Eller to the Student Legislature were passed, two with no opposition. Walt Arnold, Thurman Williams, and Tom Lockhart were approved, the latter coming under some discussion before the vote.

The last business to come before the student law-makers was the approval of the House Privileges board visiting agreement. The Legislature has power to review the agreement according to article three, section seven of the student body constitution. The agreement was passed upon almost without discussion, and will go into effect on schedule at 12 o'clock noon today.

Conservative Club Officers Elected At First Session

New officers were elected and aims and ideals were discussed during the reorganization meeting of the Carolina Conservative club Wednesday night.

Paul Mullinax, who had resigned the presidency because of his heavy schedule, was elected to the vice presidency, and Charles York was selected to succeed Mullinax as president. Charles Kauffman and James Craddock were re-elected to the positions of secretary and treasurer, respectively.

In an address to the new members, Mullinax voiced the democratic principles of the organization and its determination to cleanse Carolina of the "communistic-socialistic" position the club maintains the campus holds in the public eye.

In a semi-informal discussion led by Mullinax, the group briefly examined the problems of Russian policies, the Palestine question, and British socialism.

The club will meet again in the Grail Room in Graham Memorial at 7:30 next Thursday night.

Methodist Group to Inaugurate Christian Life Series

By Sally Woodhull

In order to facilitate friendship and informal discussion among its members, the Wesley Foundation, student group of the University Methodist church, will inaugurate on Sunday a series of seminars on Christian life, it was announced yesterday by Program Chairman Marvin Horton.

The four seminar groups will meet at 7 o'clock Sunday nights, following the regular supper served at 5:45 each week in the basement of the University Methodist church. Each group will be under the direction of an adult counselior or research expert, but actual trends of discussion will be planned by participating students. This series will run for four Sunday nights, from October 19 through November 9.

Dr. Guy Johnson, professor of sociology and former chairman of the Southern regional council, will be consellor for the seminar on "The Radical Dilemna," and Mr. Claude Shotts. YMCA general secretary, will lead the group discussing "The Christian Influence in Western Culture." Mr. Shotts has recently returned from Europe, where he worked in Germany with the American Friends Service committee.

"Ethics of Love and Marriage" will be discussed by a group under the direction of Mrs. Arnold Nash, well-known lecturer on the subject and wife of the newly appointed head of the Department of religion. "How Science Undergirds Religious Faith" will be the topic of a fourth group under the counselorship of Dr. Fred Ellis, professor of pharmacology. This group will use as its source book the currently best selling "Human Destiny," by Lecomte du Nouy, and other current publications will be secured for use by the remaining seminars.

Although the program has been planned by Methodist students, and is primarily for them, visitors are always welcome, according to the Rev. J. Robert Nelson, director of the Wesley Foundation.

Members of the program committee assisting Horton include Jack Grant, Dave Cameron, Sybile Mitchell, Martha Manning, and Irby Nichols.

Boycott May Be Used By Veto-less Russians

By The United Press

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 17—Russian delegates to the United Nations are talking boycott tonight in the face of the veto-less U.N. assembly which is considering the American proposal of a year-round "Little Assembly" to take over major problems with which the Security council makes no head way.

The new weapon in the diplomatic war was suggested as Little Assembly plans seem to be turning into reality, although the safety-valve measure will probably not have all the powers the United States would like to see it have.

British delegates, seeking a compromise which might be agreeable to Russian interests, proposed a plan to water down the original U.S. proposal, but it was scoffed at by Andrei Gromyko, the bristling defender of Soviet diplomacy, who shouted, "There is no possibility of a compromise. So far as this proposal is concerned the word compromise is not in the Russian vocabulary."

British delegate Sir Hartley Shawcross had hoped to make the Little Assembly more palatable to the Soviet bloc by suggesting that it should operate by a two-thirds instead of the regular majority rule. He also suggested that the year-round committee should not be allowed to set up investigating commissions in any country without that country's consent.

Gromyko charged that the Little Assembly was thought up by American diplomats to bypass the Security council with its big-power veto. He further accused the United States of undermining the United Nations by dictatorial tactics or by merely ignoring the Charter rules.

General Dwight D. Eisenhower holds up the jewel-encrusted, handmade [illegible] sword which was given to him on his 57th birthday by Queen Wilhelmina of Holland "in grateful memory of the glorious liberation of my country and my people" by Dutch ambassador E. N. Van Kleffens in Washington. Major Gen. Floyd Parks, chief of the Army's Public Information Division, issued a statement in behalf of Gen. Eisenhower Thursday which he interpreted as a repudiation of movements to draft him as a Presidential nominee.

Mayor Madry Voices Food Conservation Cooperation Plea

Chapel Hill Mayor Bob Madry, speaking before a group of townspeople and students Thursday night, asked everyone in the community of Chapel Hill to cooperate in President Truman's food conservation program.

The meeting, called by the Students for Democratic Action, was presided over by Mayor Madry. Student body president Tom Eller represented the campus in the conference whose purpose it was to organize a committee to work for the whole-hearted support of the community and University for the President's program.

The meatless day schedule has been modified, according to the mayor, to the extent that citizens are encouraged to use meat by-products, such as livers, kidneys, brains, sweetbreads, hearts, pigs feet, pigs knuckles, tripe, oxtails, and tongues.

Mayor Madry went on to say, "Well-informed persons in this country and abroad say that conditions in Europe, from a material, political, and spiritual standpoint are so desperate that millions will die of starvation and disease during the coming winter unless provisions are made for substantial aid from America.

"By complying with President Truman's food economy program," the mayor continued, "this nation will be able to ship larger quantities of vital food abroad and, through reduced consumption of meat, eggs, and poultry at home, may be able to stave off further inflation."

The Chapel Hill food conservation committee will meet again this coming Thursday at the Baptist Church.

'Sadie Hawkins Day' Plans Are Set by Graham Memorial

Again under the sponsorship of Graham Memorial plans are now forming for the annual Sadie Hawkins day. Coordinating all schemes for the day are Mike Loftus and Chuck Hilty, assistant director of the student union. Cooperating groups at present include the Western North Carolina club, Carolina Independent Coeds association, Town girls, and the Monogram club.

If agreeable to administration officials, it is possible that afternoon classes will be suspended in respect for the occasion. This has been done on some Sadie Hawkins days in the past depending on the curricular set-up at the time. The entire campus is encouraged to dress in mountaineer style all day, and many prizes will be awarded at the SH ball Friday evening, for the most distinctive costumes.

A recent letter from Al Capp, comic strip author of Li'l Abner and chief booster of Sadie Hawkins days the world over stated that more than 40,000 SH celebrations were held last year. Referring to it as "the all-American youth holiday," Capp stated that Tokyo, Berlin, Paris, Hamburg, Iceland, Afghanistan, and Korea "all had their own flavor of Sadie Hawkins days."

The letter also warned of two surprise characters to be featured in coming Li'l Abner strips, in connection with the celebration.

CATHOLIC CHOIR

All Catholic students interested in forming a choir will meet tomorrow morning at 9:30 in Gerrard hall. Everyone interested is welcome, it was announced yesterday.

GM Slates Singing, Bingo for Weekend

Probably no one will make any killing, but an evening of good old fashioned entertainment is in store for all who attend this evening's Graham Memorial bingo party. And though it won't be as lucrative, tomorrow night's union sponsored Sunday Sing in Memorial hall at 8 o'clock will undoubtedly be as healthful and far more tuneful.

The bingo session will begin at 8 this evening in the Roland Parker lounges of the student union. Recreational director Nancy Tucker announced cards for the games will be sold at $.02 each per game, and the proceeds pooled as the prize for each Bingo. Acting master of ceremonies and caller for the occasion is Ken Gammage, clown prince of Sound and Fury.

Open Rehearsal Is Scheduled Tuesday By Playmaker Unit

Guest lecturer Hans Rothe, who is directing the opening production of the Carolina Playmakers thirtieth season, Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan," announced last night that an open rehearsal will be held on Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock for all dramatic arts students and other students and townspeople who are interested in seeing how a play is made to come alive on the stage.

"This is not a preview of the play," he pointed out, "and there will be no scenery, properties or costumes. It is merely an opportunity for people who are interested in dramatic technique to see how the cast and director work to interpret the author's score. Scene six and the epilogue will be in rehearsal that night.

"Although this session is primarily for dramatic arts students, we shall be glad to have anyone else who is interested in learning how a play is rehearsed," he said.

"Saint Joan" will be presented in the Playmaker Theatre on October 29, 30, 31 and November 1. Season tickets are now on sale at Ledbetter Pickard's on Franklin street, and at the Playmaker business office in Swain hall.

Radio Center Lists Broadcast Schedule

Broadcasting schedule for the first week of radio programs from the University's campus studios was released today by the Communications Center.

Tuesday: "Writers At Work"—10 to 10:30 p.m.—WDNC. Chapel Hill authors Paul Green, James Street, Noel Houston and Foster - Fitz - Simons tear apart each others stories.

Wednesday: "Thirty-Three By Air"—8:30 to 9 p.m.—WRAL and WHHT. A campus dramatic group acts out a comic fantasy entitled "Pi R Squared."

Thursday: "North Carolina Viewpoint"—8:30 to 8:55 p.m.—WHHT and WRAL. Four faculty experts fight out the question "Need We Fight Russia?"

Saturday: "Musical Merry-Go-Round"—10:45 to 11 a.m.—WDUK. Classical and semi-classical music is featured on this show designed for children.

Yackety-Yack Photographers to Speed Shooting of Group Pictures Next Week

Yackety-Yack group picture-taking will swing into high gear next week with a heavy schedule set for Monday and every day thereafter.

As previously announced, most of the group pictures will be taken at routine meetings of the groups in their regular meeting places. Accordingly, the Baptist Student union will be the first group handled when they are photographed in the Baptist Church at 6:45 on Monday.

Other groups which will be handled on Monday are the YWCA at 7:30 in the Y building, the Interfraternity Council at 8 o'clock in the Grail Room of Graham Memorial, and the Campus party steering committee at a yet unnamed place.

The other times and places for groups will be released next week by Yack picture co-ordinator Bill Duncan.

COED SENATE CANDIDATES

All candidates for seats in the Coed Senate must turn in a campaign expense account whether they have incurred any actual expenses or not. The candidates will be disqualified if these are not submitted to Katie Guion, Spencer dormitory by 1 o'clock Tuesday.

YACK PICTURES

Yackety-Yack individual pictures will be taken daily from 1 to 6 o'clock and from 7 to 10 o'clock all next week on the second floor of Graham Memorial.

Unpredictable Tar Heels Battle William and Mary In Loop Headliner Today

By Dick Jenrette

Williamsburg, Va., Oct. 17.—Carolina's unpredictable Tar Heels will attempt to snap their two-game losing streak when they meet a strong William and Mary eleven at Cary field here tomorrow in a Southern conference headliner.

A crowd of 20,000 is expected to fill the Indians' stadium to capacity for the game which will play an important roll in determining the conference champion. Carolina defeated William and Mary, 21-7, last year and went on to the loop title. But this season finds the Indians of Coach Rube McCray at the head of the Southern circuit with a record of three straight wins, all at the expense of conference teams.

Carolina's hopes for a repeat performance of last year's acquisition of the laurels took a severe jolt last week when a surprising Wake Forest team ran all over the Tar Heels for a 19-7 victory. Coach Carl Snavely's Chapel Hill boys still retain a chance for the championship, but most observers now foresee a scrap between Wake Forest, also undefeated, and William and Mary for the title, that is if the Indians get by Carolina tomorrow.

Because of the many surprising results thus far in the 1947 season, the selection of a favorite team in the William and Mary-Carolina game has become a perplexing problem to most of the experts. Carolina's poor record to date plus the Indians' perfect record seems to point toward a win for the Williamsburg crowd, but the fact remains that Coach Snavely has most of the boys back from last year's outfit that disposed of the Indians in rather systematic fashion.

The result of the game should show whether the Tar Heels will be able to rally their forces and march to a successful conclusion of their season or whether William and Mary is to advance in its bid for the conference championship.

Coach Snavely, in an effort to bolster his Carolina squad, has instituted several changes in his starting lineup. All week long, Hosea Rodgers, the big fullback who was quite a star on the 1943 edition of the Tar Heels, has been running at the number one fullback post, and the Alabama lad has been doing some nifty plunging. Walt Pu-

HOSEA RODGERS, will start at the fullback spot this afternoon in the William & Mary game. This is his first opening assignment since the VPI game last season.

'No Dissension on Carolina Team', Says Wingback Jim Camp in Rendezvous Rally

By Art Melton

"There is no dissension on the Carolina team among the players; there was none last year; and there will be none next year," cut loose chesty wingback Jim Camp Thursday night in an informal pep session at Graham Memorial's Rendezvous Room. "I want to quiet some of this chatter that is going around and straighten out some of the facts about our squad. And I am referring partly to a letter in one of the Daily Tar Heels this week signed by a couple of guys by the name of Chuck and Bob, who in my opinion don't have too much of the guts they talked about in their letter to the editor since they didn't sign their last names.

"The backs are supporting the line and the line is supporting the backs," continued Camp, "everybody's doing their best and I challenge anyone to find me a player who will say anything about another player on the team." In general Camp had plenty to say to the almost 1000 students that attended the sports rally sponsored by Don English. He literally "cussed out" those who had chit-chatted unfavorably about the team.

Quipped Camp to Sam Beard, WPTF's Moonglow disc-jockey and collegiate favorite, "the only time there has been any dissension in the team that I know of is the time that one of the players got two A's in campusology and the rest of us only got one." Beard acted as moderator of the program and kept the students in stitches with his dry, poker-faced humor.

In his own unimatatable way Beard insulted and patted on the back most of the twenty odd players on hand for the shindig. The players, grouped at long tables, were subjected to unexpected interviews and comments by bogeyman Beard. Several returned very good repartee—especially co-captain George Sparger whose jokes were only overshaded by Camp's remarks, and his deadpan delivery topped only by sarcastic Sam.

Charlie Stancill, one of the outstanding campus cheerleaders, really went all out in stepping up community singing and rally ing yells.

Beard introduced specialty numbers all during the evening, tops of which was a three-way act including torch singer Beverly Joslin, ivory pounding Bob MacDonald, and skin beating Joe Combs. All performed as well in solo spots as in a combine.

Music Frosh Usurps Dr. Newman's Study

Albeit the music department is in a complete stew these days, the office staff doesn't lack for lighter moments.

As most music students know, what the music department terms a "practice room" is a small airless cubicle which could more aptly be called a padded cell or solitary confinement room, with no more room than is necessary to turn around, where suffocation is inevitable.

One confused freshman, however, had his practice problems temporarily solved-until this morning. He bustled into the music office shortly after 8:00, much disturbed because some one seemed to be occupying his practice room. "What's the number of your room?" asked the girl at the desk. "209," said the freshman.

"Did you say 209?" The freshman nodded.

"The large corner room with 2 Steinway Grand pianos, 2 enormous bay windows, a phonograph and a desk and a bear rug?" gasped the girl aghast.

"That's my room," asserted the freshman.

Well, justice was done; and Dr. Newman's private studio is now available for his use between 8 and 9 o'clock, and the freshman is unhappily esconsed in one of the small cubicles marked "219".

Volunteer Coed Baby Sitters Are 'Scared to Death' by Six-weeks-old Youngster As YWCA Social Service Committee Members Take Lessons in Proper Infant Care

By Sally Woodhull

Diaper changing, feeding, and other essentials of baby care were the order of the day last Monday for members of the Baby Sitters division of the YWCA Social Service committee, which has been organized in order to provide volunteer baby sitters for student families.

Miss Kay Currie and Miss Nan Bugn, nurses attached to the local office of the District Health service, presented a demonstration, using a six-week-old colored baby, Gladys Fiske, as a model. They explained how to change diapers, get a child ready for bed, what to do when she cries, and how to hold and feed her. Gladys cooperated beautifully, according to Miss Currie, doing everything that was expected of her, in spite of her infancy.

Although the girls at first appeared "scared to death" of the baby, the demonstration seemed to be quite successful when one of the girls succeeded in feeding her, and the girls now feel far more confidence in themselves as nursemaids.

Following the demonstration there was a question period, and some instruction on the handling of children from one to six years old. The girls were advised to read two booklets distributed by the United States Children's bureau, "The Child from One to Six" and "Infant Care," both of which can be secured free of charge at the District Health office.

The necessity for a training session was indicated, according to Mrs. Betty Rose Dowden, YWCA secretary, by the fact that last year several dates of baby sitters were required to change diapers because the sitters themselves were ignorant of the proper technique. Miss Currie also told of a case where a telephone operator was requested to explain diaper changing procedure over the phone.

The services of this group are available to all student families on a purely volunteer basis on Monday through Thursday evenings. Those families who take advantage of the service should, however, see that the girls get to and from their dormitories safely, and that they are allowed sufficient time to get in before

Sculptor Puccinelli Eyes Tar Heels in Envy: He'd Use Pigskin Boys as Artists' Models

By Margaret Gaston

"I heard Chapel Hill was quite an interesting place, and it turned out to be even more alive than I anticipated," said Raymond Puccinelli, new faculty member in the art department. Puccinelli, born in San Francisco, is a renowned sculptor and portraitist. He came to the University this year from the University of California.

Puccinelli's teaching experience centers mostly around the University of California and Mills College. He was a lecturer in sculpture and sculptural design at the University of California for five years. At Mills College he instructed for two years in sculpture and drawing. Puccinelli conducted his own sculpture and drawing school in New York.

He attended the California School of Fine Arts and Rudolph Schaeffer School of Design, where he was a scholarship student and also assistant to Schaeffer. In 1927 Puccinelli studied sculpture in Italy, and the next year in New York. He studied with various wood and stone sculptors and craftsmen, and pursued phychology with Alfred Odler in New York.

Puccinelli has traveled throughout the greater part of the United States and throughout all of Italy, France, Spain, and North America.

Receiving recognition is nothing new for Puccinelli. His awards and honors include the Artist's Fund First Award, San Francisco Art Association Exhibition of Painting and Sculpture; Sculpture award, all California Exhibition; First award—Oakland Art Gallery; and honorable mention, San Francisco Art Association Exhibition of Painting and Sculpture.

Puccinelli is represented in public and private collections. He has had 14 one-man exhibitions and many group exhibitions. Approximately 50 works of Puccinelli have been gathered into one large gallery, De-Young Museum in San Francisco. This exhibition covers a good deal of ground and covers practically all of it with equal skill and effectiveness. Most of his bronzes are erect, composed in sharp long planes.

Puccinelli, wife and daughter, live in Victory Village. Daughter Rodi intends to follow in her father's footsteps. Mrs. Puccinelli, an enthusiastic weaver, has done extensive work in design and weaving for well-known architects. She expects her loom to arrive in Chapel Hill this week, and will continue her weaving here.

When asked how he likes Chapel Hill, Mr. Puccinelli smiled and said it was wonderful. He especially likes the football games. "I enjoy the excitement of a football game, yes, but I also look at football as movements and space. I look at it abstractly, as I do many things," he said. Mr. Puccinelli has visions of the statute of a football player and Ramases down around Kenan Stadium. His own propensity for creating immovable objects is astounding. The bigger the chunk, the happier the artist—but it has to be good hard stone. Mr. Puccinelli looks enviously at all the potential "models" on the football squad.

A Plug for Mr. Miller

"The National Student Association must deal with concret problems of the students," is the cry of the campuses of the country. A group established themselves at the University of Chicago during the fall of 1946 and issued a call to the other Universities of the nation and asked them to meet in Chicago in December 1946 to discuss the possibilities of establishing a national student organization. This was the birth of the NSA.

The initial meeting of the delegates was to decide if the students of the United States felt the need for such an organization as the NSA.

Many such organizations have died out after a short loud life; but European organizations of college students have met with great success before the war and are again on their feet.

There is a two-fold job for the NSA to perform. First there are those activities "which are intended to enhance the welfare of students in their campus lives. The second phase included the activities which will bring the American student into closer contact with the students and cultures of foreign countries."

When the students get together in NSA meetings they discuss such problems of student welfare as academic standards and the buildings of student union buildings. The cultural aspects of college life will be dealt with by the group. The organization will furnish information on studying abroad and keep in contact with foreign colleges.

A need for all of these things has been felt by the organizers of the NSA and the delegates.

Bill Miller began his series of articles on the NSA in yesterday's edition. His columns, relating what actually happened at the convention this past September, will appear next week.

Read his reports and see if you agree with the National Continuations committee in that the NSA can perform a great service to you as a student.

Puritan's We Shall Doubtless Remain

"Strategically, economically, politically, the United States enjoys in 1947 a security the like of which it has never attained before. Yet terror is the order of the day," declares Gerald W. Johnson, free-lance newspaperman.

In his article, "The Devil is Dead, and What a Loss!", Johnson points out that censorship of books, the ban on liberal radio commentators and artists, and the recent purge of government employees substantiates the paradoxical fact that "not in many years has free expression of opinion in America been so dangerous."

Johnson traces the basis for our spiritual condition to an element seldom given credence by public analysts—"sheer boredom following the death of the Devil." The persisting Puritanical spirit in the American mind, having lost Hitler, he explains, must have a new object for hate and persecution. But, he adds, the witch-hunting of artists and job holders is only temporary for "we are ready to vent our hate on a Mephistopheles of real stature and Stalin is obviously to be the arch-fiend. . .a synthetic Stalin adapted to our purposes."

Calling attention to the great danger of electing Stalin as Devil-in-chief, Johnson sees no immediate change in the American temper. "Puritan we are, and Puritan we shall doubtless remain indefinitely. If that involves us in any unnecessary war, the fact is to be regretted. But to suggest that at this late date we should bend our energies to the elimination of Puritanism from our mental make-up is certainly un-American and perhaps un-constitutional. The Devil is dead and we must speed the search for another."—(American Scholar.)

Operational Costs

Managers of the fraternity dining rooms met several nights ago to form an organization for the improvement of management and to try to devise some way whereby the fraternities could bargain collectively in order to cut food prices. The group also discussed the standardization of wages and prices.

A group such as this can do much toward slashing operational expenses. The fraternity dining halls are at a disadvantage in slicing prices so that they are comparable to those of the University eating establishments, but through organized buying they can save much money in the course of nine months.

Then too, by such a group the managers are able to exchange schedules and practices in the expediting of serving meals, menus that are nourishing with little cost. They will be able to regulate the wages of the kitchen and dining room help so that the various houses will not be competitors in the hiring of help.

Probably one of the most important functions that the new group will be able to perform will be in getting their dining halls to conform to the president's request that citizens abstain from eating meats on Tuesday and poultry and eggs on Thursday. The managers have done a commendable job toward this end.

"Education is great," says Lane Ganeway in the Lapeer County, Michigan Press. "It enables you to worry about things in all parts of the world.

Soul Filled with Disgust

Everytime I hear somebody say, "it was too hot in Lower Slobovia two weeks ago," or "something was certainly missing in Kenan last weekend," it fills my soul with disgust. Let's don't live in the past; look ahead, man, look ahead. The events of the last two Saturdays are history. Let by-gones be by-gones.

Are we going to be the kind of student body who will cheer their team in victory, and then when the boys hit a temporary slump, (as everyone does now and then) start making excuses and blame our tough luck on a "missing something"?

Have you ever heard of good sportsmanship? Do you know what it is? I interpret it as the quality in a person or a group of people which makes them stand fast and keep their faith in the face of defeat and adverse criticism.

The thing that impressed us most about the Texas game was a short sentence I read in the Daily Tar Heel. One of the Texas co-captains said after the game, "they're the cleanest and fightin'est bunch we ever played." That means something, boy.

I said something a minute ago about "defeat and adverse critcism." Well, our boys have been getting some of both lately, but come on Tar Heels, don't be cowards, don't turn tail and run, if the boys ever needed our support, it's now.

No matter what the outcome of today's game; when they come back, we hope everybody will be on hand to let 'em know we're "wid 'em all the way."

The Exigency of the Age

Main Event: World War III

By Russell G. Baldwin

Do you expect to be alive in 1960? What do you think your chances are? They aren't very good—maybe 1 to 100. But, even at that, you can count yourself lucky. Suppose you lived in New York or Chicago or Philadelphia, then you'd really have something to worry about. You'd have about one chance out of a thousand of being alive in 1960.

Perhaps you think the above statements are just so much baloney, but you can't ignore them—not if you're a thinking person. Let's get down to cases. What are the prospects for the future? War or peace? Will the Russians give up Communism in order to preserve peace? Or, will we give up Democracy? Or, will we go to war to see which of the two is the stronger? Those first two questions can be answered with an emphatic "no," and the third question can be answered by almost as emphatic a "yes." There's your answer—war.

No one can say for certain when war will come, but it is inevitable that it will come—unless different means than those now being employed are used to prevent it. As a matter of fact, we are already well-advanced in the first stage of World War III. The first blows have already been struck. The East against the West—what a war that's going to be! Now they're sparring for position; tomorrow they'll be ready for the knockout blow.

Did you ever see a double knock-out? It's the craziest thing you ever saw. The two brutes are up there murdering each other and having one helluva time when all at once they're both lying flat on the canvas out cold. And that, sir, is the kind of war World War III will be—a double knock-out. Atomic bombs made by the Russians will kill people and destroy cities just as well as those made by the U. S.

World War III could be a lot of fun if you could only get away from it all. If you could just pay a little visit to Mars and observe Earth and its barbarians from a safe distance, you'd get a big kick out of it. You'd watch the poor fools knock each other off and you'd howl with laughter; but, then, you'd probably pity them for all their suffering and misery, especially if you heard all the babies and innocent kids crying. Yes, I imagine that would soften you a bit.

If there was some way we we could send all our leaders —Russian, American, British, Chinese, French, etc.—to Mars for a while, where they could see beyond national borders, there would be some reason for optimism for the future. I readily admit that this suggestion is impractical at the present time, but only because we have no way of getting to Mars. The nearest approach to the above method of solving international problems is to establish a federal world government. A federal world government, deriving its just powers by the consent of the governed, composed of representatives of the people, would have that same perspective, that same completeness of vision which is so vitally needed and so totally lacking in the world today.

This is a plea for world government—a plea for mankind. It is an appeal to reason and to common sense. Have we a right to expect anything but world government to preserve peace? Think about it, and ACT!

The din of the throbbing tom-toms is growing louder; the grains of sand in the hourglass are numbered.

Community Chest In Legislature; Football, Java

By R. Foo Giduz

Legislators still can't seem to talk themselves into the idea of a campus community chest, or any immediate step towards fund campaigns-regulation; but they did go far enough out on the limb Thursday evening to consider Bob Collins' chest investigation measure. — and refer it to Basil Sherrill's ways and means committee. Muse: Cant's figure out what they'd have lost by passing by bill right then and there, though.)

But with luck and a lot of legislative lobbying they may consider and pass it next week. The bill does no more than set up a legislative community chest investigating group to follow fund campaigns this year, gather information, and draw up a bill for presentation to the Student Legislature at its first meeting next spring.

The Student Welfare board would also be instructed to regulate drive periods during the coming year, and make recommendations to the Legislature.. Here's the fervent hope that at least that goes through....It certainly can't harm anything.

Williamsburging Tar Heels will rally 'round for a final pregame pep session this morning in the W and M city.... Williamsburg Inn, 11:30 a. m. ....better hurry! And just remember one thing for today's game: YELL!

—Perusing the University of Texas, Daily Texan other day we read as follows: "The following telegram was received in the Texan offices yesterday: 'To the Texas student body: UNCLE! —Signed, UNC student body!

A stalk of sauerkraut to the jerk wot sent that....Just wait! .... But our hearty thanx to Tommy and his lads who will now keep the Marathon Sandwich shop open all night.... We late "studyers" can really use that 4 a.m. java lift! Time to take off for Indian town.. Bread and butter 'til Tuesday.

The Facts About Our Economy

By Bill Robertson

The question has arisen: is an economic crisis inevitable? In discussing this question I shall be concrete; that it, I shall deal with facts. However, this does not imply that I do not consider the various theories on crises important. On the contrary, when a theory is correct it gives us a proper orientation — it shows us how to proceed and what to search for in the investigation of any phenomenon—natural or social. But theories arise from facts and not vice versa. And so—what are the facts about the economic situation in our country?

President Truman has made a Midyear Economic Report to Congress. This report comes from high authority. It reveals that total production is now running at the annual rate of 225 billion dollars, higher than in 1929, and that June employment stood at 60 million. These figures are very impressive. But the Report also reveals that this high level of production and employment is being sustained by "temporary props" such as 1) reconversion demands of industry; 2) the backlog demands of consumers; and 3) an extraordinary excess of exports over imports. These "props" are revealed by the report to be weakening.

For example, as reconversion needs come to an end capital investments in new plans, equipment, etc. are becoming "normal" again. (However, this does not mean that the people do not need new plants, equipment, etc.)

Concretely, domestic business investments have fallen from an anual rate of 30.4 billion dollars (from Oct. to Dec. 1946) to an annual rate of 30.4 billion dollars (from Jan. to June, 1947). Incidentally, this fall has been accompanied by an increased desire by big businessmen to invest abroad.

As for the back-log of consumers' demands we have a very peculiar situation—a crisis of under-production exists in certain durable consumer goods (housing, automobiles, refrigerators, washing-machines, etc.) But with high prices and rents eating away at the savings of the people the market for these goods is not increasing.

As for the "excess of exports over imports"—exports of goods and services in the first six months of 1947 ran at an annual rate of 20.7 billion dollars, as compared with 15.3 billion dollars in the last quarter of 1946. At present 10 to 15 per cent of goods produced are going abroad. It is clear that the foreign market is none too stable.

Now let us sink our teeth into what I am sure the economics professors will agree to be a "sour apple." I refer to the factor of decline in the mass-purchasing power of the people—already touched upon in discussing under-production of consumers' good. Wage increases (including salaries of professors and white-collar workers) are not catching up with price increases. Why? May I refer you to the following item from the President's Report:

Total corporate profits, both before and after taxes, increased in the first halt of 1947 above the RECORD levels of the last quarter of 1946: an annual rate increase from 10.2 billion to 11.2 billion dollars.

What does all of this mean? It means, in each detail, that in our society there is an unsolved problem which is in the course of expressing itself in a crisis. This unsolved problem consists in the SOCIAL character of production and needs—(that is, people work together to produce what we have and many people need what we produce) and the private nature of appropriation (that is, distribtion in accordance with the "profit motive" and not in accordance with the needs of the people.) Such is the economic basis of the pessimism of some of America's leading intellectuals.

DREW PEARSON ON The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Washington.—Sometimes it looks as if Government officials make it a special point not to let the right hand know what the left hand doeth.

The War Assets Administration has just sold the famous Canol pipeline built in the Canadian Arctic during the war to pump oil to the Alaskan seaboard. President Truman, when a Senator, raised Cain about construction of this line. He called it wasteful and unnecessary.

But now, one branch of the Truman Administration is selling this pipeline for a pittance, while another branch of the same Truman Administration is proposing to build another pipeline in Alaska, not far away.

Why the Government could not dig up the pipe from the original Canol line in the Canadian Arctic and use it in Alaska, instead of selling the Canol line for junk and buying new pipe for the new project is hard to understand.

This summer the Navy Department undertook highly important oil explorations in Alaska, which, if successful, should prevent gasoline rationing in the USA, also give the Navy a badly-needed additional supply of oil. Scientists predict that if the explorations bear out the first Alaskan oil samples, deposits will be discovered richer than California's gushing oil lands.

But in order to market this oil, a 700-mile pipeline must be built across the Arctic. And to get Congress to vote the money for this pipeline, the Navy flew the House Interstate Commerce Committee across northern Alaska this summer, pointing out the importance of such a line.

Meanwhile in Washington the War Assets Administration proceeded to sell for the paltry sum of $700,000 the Canol pipeline to the L. B. Foster Co., Inc., of Pittsburgh, and the Albert and Davidson Pipe Corporation of New York City—for junk. Originally the cost of materials alone for this pipeline was $9,000,000. In view of the increased cost of steel and the extreme difficulty of buying pipe, the new proposed pipeline across Alaska would cost at least double this amount.

Sale of the Canol pipeline now goes to Attorney General Tom Clark for approval. Betting is that he will not OK the deal.

Maj. Gen. Leslie Groves, in charge of development of the atomic bomb, had a highly significant off-the-record meeting with Army and Navy officers the other day, during which he told them that Russia has the secret of the atomic bomb. But, he added, the Soviets do not have the industrial power to produce it.

"The earliest date Russia will be able to produce the bomb," estimated America's No. 1 atomic soldier, "will be 1951."

Groves explained that Russia lacks not technical knowledge, but industrial facilities. Soviet scientists know the secret of atomic bomb except for a few minor details, though these can be solved easily by experimentation.

One minor step which the Soviets have not yet discovered, explained a scientist who addressed the group with Groves, is the exact ratio of uranium particles that should be mixed with other substances. The physicist also predicted it would take 15 years to develop an effective atomic V-2 rocket.

Gen. Groves suggested that atomic development inside Russia would be hindered rather than helped by the dictator system. To illustrate this, he recalled his own experiences in developing the bomb.

"Some of our scientists were too pessimistic, and I would have to encourage them. Others were too optimistic, and I would have to discourage them," said Groves. "Then both would go to Mr. Stimson (then Secretary of War) and tell what I had said. The Secretary would call me in, and ask which story was correct. I just told him I knew what I was doing and would have to do it in my own way. In Russia, I would have been purged immediately."

Democratic leaders have long been griping over the increasing number of Republicans appointed by President Truman, which has now reached a climax with the appointment of Arthur S. Barrows, Chicago, bank director and former head of Sears Roebuck, to the new job of Undersecretary for Air.

Mr. Barrows isn't advertising it, but he not only is a Republican, but a bitter Roosevelt-hater.

During the war, Barrows was dining with his old friend Lester H. DeMuth, head of the DeMuth Steel Products Co. Mr. DeMuth is a Missouri Democrat and a conservative one. He had known Mr. Barrows for many years and the families were good friends.

However, at this dinner, Barrows became so vituperative in his name-calling of President Roosevelt that DeMuth finally rose and left the dinner table. The incident broke up an old friendship.

Now, Mr. Barrows has given a highly important sub-Cabinet job by the very same man who was made Vice President of the late President whom Mr. Barrows so bitterly hated.

The Sporting Picture

The People vs. The 1947 Tar Heels

The case of the 1947 Tar Heel football team goes on trial again this afternoon, this time in Williamsburg, at which session the local lads will be out to prove to a jury of 11 William and Mary Indians that they do know how to play big time football. A packed courtroom is expected to be on hand when the action convenes.

Among some of the "former" followers of the Carolina team of vintage BT (before Texas) there is the speculation that the Tar Heels are as washed up as a pile of Monday's laundry, and that the men of Snavely are merely making the trip to Virginia in an effort to give the game back to the Indians. Still, there are about a phone booth full of still-loyal Tar Heel fans who are sporting the good old theory of—this is the Tar Heels' week to snap out of a daze of defeat and start winning football games as they did in the days of old. The minority may well be rewarded for their unfailing, undying, and "above it all" loyalty.

That they may is attributed to the fact of the numerous changes which have been made in the Tar Heel lineup by the man presently caught in the vicious cross-firing of student, alumni, and public opinion—Carl Snavely. Woe is the lot of the poor football coach no matter what they pay him—for he counts his true friends only when losing. On the subject of changes though, the backfield has produced two, Hammerin' Hosea Rodgers, moving up to replace Walt Pupa, who is he never gains another yard, will have done as much plunging and passing as a man can be asked of; and Johnny Clements, who swapped spots with Jim Camp.

The big change, if it comes through, will be in the physical and mental condition of the entire team which has obviously prevented the Tar Heels from extending themselves to the true limits of their abilities during the past three weeks. There is nothing basically wrong with that team one good performance can't cure.

Controversial Charlie

The question of the eligibility of Charlie Justice comes before the Southern conference executive committee in Durham this morning, to which meeting one could probably sell more tickets, were it an open session, than to the Duke-Maryland tussle appearing later in the day. Though he has denied it of late, the big gun behind the whole move to oust Justice looks to be Dr. H. A. Fisher of State College, who has been booming all week long on the subject, reportedly telling one writer that he will defend Justice, while telling another that as far as he is concerned, Justice will never take the field against State. Such is the manner of men.

Fisher, being connected with a textile college, likes to chew the rag with most anyone, and has occupied most of his time this week giving all comers the straight, unadulterated, and strictly inside poop on the whole subject. Fisher seems to have been speaking with an authority that rocks the Bell Tower at its very foundations, but it might be remembered that he is only one of a committee of four and then, not the chairman.

There are four possible positions the committee can possibly take on the question—vote him eligible, vote him ineligible, vote to table, or not vote at all. The University, athletic and academic, has taken its stand in the case, and it looks as if they will back Justice as a principle and an individual whatever the decision. Mr. Fisher may be biting off more rag than he can chew.

From the looks of things, Justice should and will be cleared of all charges. He has never legally signed a contract with the Philadelphia Eagles since the League office voided it immediately, and Justice returned to the Eagles the only check he received from them. If the committee though, on a definite flyer, rules against the Asheville lad, then watch for the roof to fall or cave in at any moment. The whole question seems entertaining to all, except to Charlie Justice, who is getting pushed around by numerous and sundry persons outside the University for a matter in which he is completely guiltless. It seems that the great abundance of "i's" in the word—eligibility—are symbolic of the egotistical attitude of the majority of the Choo Choo's adversaries.

Split T-Tatum

Big Jim Tatum, ex-Carolina tackle and grid coach makes his post-war coaching debut in North Carolina this afternoon, coming home for a weekend roost by way of Oklahoma and Maryland. Currently coaching a team from the latter, Tatum will give North State football fans a chance to gaze with possible awe and envy on the s-p-l-i-t-T which he ran headlong into in the service and hasn't been able to escape from since. It seems the formation spreads the guards and tackles, and jams the quarterback up close enough to enable a back-of-the-hand conversion between him and the center. The accomplished effect can be rather devastating according to the three teams that have already suffered because of it.

All of which points to an exciting Saturday afternoon, with Tatum out to be the home state boy making good, while Justice and Company, or better, Justice, Unlimited, possibly making news in two places at once. Which is a nice trick if you can do it.

Melancholy Melton

There appeared on the editorial page of yesterday's Daily Tar Heel an article by one Art Melton that doesn't even bear answering because of its content. It seems Melton has an axe or possibly several axes to grind. Possibly Melton, who has run for every other major tost on the campus, now feels the urge to take over Snavely's job to the general benefit of all.

Harriers Open Campaign With Tech Here Today

Ransonmen Boast Six Lettermen On Starting Team

By Morty Schaap

The powerful North Carolina cross country team will swing into action for the first time this season when they meet the Georgia Tech harriers this morning at 11:30.

The meet will be over the three and five-eighths mile course starting at Fetzer field and then moving out through Victory village on the Mason Farm road.

The Techsters will arrive in town early this morning. They are coached by Dean of men George Griffin, who is a renowned figure in southern track circles.

Carolina will send a squad of eight men into action officially with three men running unofficially. The top eight men will be wearing light blue shirts with the secondary squad decked out in white tops.

Six lettermen from last year's unbeaten crew will team up with Chuck Herty, a freshman numeral winner in 1942 and a freshman newcomer, Frank Hooper. The holdovers from last year are Jimmy Miller, Jack Milne, Sam Magill, Alvin Smith, Mark Burnham and John Bristow. Halstead Holden, Bob Black and Jim Hunt will be running unofficially for the blue and white.

Little is known of the team strength of the yellow jackets as this is their first meet. They boast two powerful runners in Johnny Corridan and Red Smith. Smith is a freshman who ran for Boys High of Atlanta and copped most of the distance titles in the scholastic division for the last few years. Among his outstanding victories was the 1000 yard run in the Southern Invitation games at Chapel Hill in 1946. Last year he placed second in that event.

The Tar Heel team strength is potentially great and Jimmy Miller, last year's captain, will be out to duplicate his record of 1946, in which he finished in first place in every dual meet he competed in. He also copped the conference individual title in record time.

Campus Radio Airs Satire on Football

College football fans will hear themselves satirized over the air this Sunday afternoon at 1:30 when "The University Hour" is broadcast from the Communication Center's campus studios over WPTF and a state-wide network.

The comedy, "Hurtling Herbie Helzabeck" traces the escapades of a little college freshman mistaken for a big football star with the same name.

"I came here to major in library science," the befuddled Herbie protests to the coach. "I'm not very quick at competitive sports."

The comedy will be acted out by a cast of students under the direction of Bob Enstein.

LARRY KLOSTERMAN, right, and EMMETT CHEEK, will be at the starting guard slots in today's football clash at Williamsburg, Va.

Snavelymen To Field New Starting Lineup

pa, the former possessor of the position, also has shown improvement.

Johnny Clements appears to have taken over the wingback spot from Jim Camp. Both are speedy but Clements probably will rate the starting nod in view of his good work this week.

Other expected starters for Carolina are Art Weiner and Bob Cox, ends; Len Szafaryn and Haywood Fowie, tackles; Emmett Cheek and Larry Klosterman, guards; George Sparger, center, Charley Justice, tailback, and Joe Wright, blocking back.

Guard Positions

Cheek is a replacement for Sid Varney, regular guard who has been bothered by both his back and elbow this week. Klosterman will split duty with Bob Mitten at the other guard post.

Jack Fitch, understudy to Justice at tailback, has been on the sidelines for much of the week with an injury, but the husky veteran appeared in good shape in the drills held Thursday and should be at top speed tomorrow.

The Tar Heels went through their final tuneup practice in Chapel Hill this morning, just prior to embarking for the Virginia colonial city. The team did not work out here, which is the traditional procedure, The Carolina boys won't tread the turf of Cary stadium until they trot onto the field just before game time tomorrow.

Fans in Virginia are extremely proud of the William and Mary eleven, but that situation is not unusual. Each year the Indians have come up with a highly regarded club that met with considerable success against other Virginia opponents. But whenever the Indians have run up against a team from the Tar Heel state they usually have faltered. N. C. State is a team that has enjoyed marked success against the Indians in previous years.

Rube McCray and his boys will be doubly anxious to take tomorrow's scrap, first to prove that they can whip a North Carolina club and then to prove that they are a team to be reckoned with in the matter of the 1947 conference crown.

Leading the Indians this year are Co-Captains Bob Steckroth and Ralph Sazio. Steckroth, an end, weighs in at 197 pounds and proved himself one of the most able ends in the South last season. Sazio, a 215-pounder, was All-State for William and Mary last year.

Perhaps the outstanding lineman on the Indian roster, however, is rugged Knox Ramsey. Twice an All-Southern performer, he gained a third team berth on both the Associated Press and NEA All-American teams last fall.

The Indians will be without the services of Tom Korczowski, their flashy tailback who broke his ankle against Virginia Tech last week. But McCray can count on a host of other capable runners to give the Tar Heels an afternoon of defensive headaches. Jack Cloud paced William and Mary's scoring parade last year with 66 points, and Stan Magdziak, who produced 46 Indians tallies last year, is also back. Other topflight men in the backfield are Tom Mikula, Henry Blanc, Jack Bruce, Chet Mackiewicz, and Herb Poplinger.

Single-Wing Elevens

The green-shirted Indians operate from the single-wing formation, as do the Tar Heels.

Both clubs have fairly heavy lines, with the William and Mary contingent holding a slight advantage in this department. The Indian line averages 205 pounds per man to about 200 for Carolina.

The husky William and Mary forwards have been sparkling in their defensive work all season, ranking second in the nation in defense. Carolina although not impressive from a scoring standpoint thus far, will probably offer this record a stern test. The Tar Heels have the eighth best passing record in the country.

Carolina also ranks first in the

Devils and Wolfpack Play at Home Today

While Carolina journeys outside the state for its Williamsburg clash with William and Mary, Duke and N. C. State hold down the football fort in the Old North State today against teams coached by former Tar Heel grid mentors.

The Blue Devils risk their unbeaten but once-tied record against an undefeated Maryland eleven directed by Coach Jim Tatum, Tar Heel tutor in 1942. Coach Wallace Wade's lads, with only a 14-14 stalemate with Navy to mar their record, are favored to topple the T-formation Terps from the unbeaten ranks and thus continue their bid for the Southern conference crown this year.

Over in Raleigh, State's highly-rated Wolfpack also rank as the expected victors when they tackle Florida, coached by Ray Wolf who headed the Tar Heel grid activities between 1936 and 1941. The State gridders sport two victories and a loss to Duke in their three games this year while the 'Gators will be trying for their first win since the 1945 campaign, having lost 10 games last year and three during the present season.

The remaining member of the Big Four, Wake Forest, is slated to register its fourth straight triumph up in Washington, D. C., against George Washington university. Davidson also leaves the state to play Hampden-Sydney in Virginia.

Other top games throughout the South have Tennessee opposing Alabama, Kentucky tackling Vanderbilt in one of the nation's outstanding contests, Georgia Tech catching its breath against Auborn, Tulane meeting Mississippi, and the powerful Cavaliers of Virginia easing off against Washington and Lee.

Highlighting the grid action in the East are the battles between Navy and Cornell, Penn and Columbia, Harvard and Holy Cross, Princeton and Colgate, Yale and Wisconsin, Army and VPI, and Boston College and LSU.

The rugged Southwest conference lists three tough tilts for the day in Texas against Arkansas, Rice against SMU, and JOHNNY CLEMENTS has been promoted to the starting wingback spot for the William & Mary game. Clements hails from Crewe, Va.

Late Scoring Spree Gives Greyhounds Win Over Carolina

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

Baltimore, Oct. 17—A more xperienced Loyola soccer squad, today spoiled Coach Marvin Allen's debut by outbooting the Tar Heel eleven, 4-0.

The Carolinians held the favored Loyola team at bay the first quarter and when the teams took the half time rest, the home team had a 1-0 lead.

The first half play was seesaw all the way with Goalie Al Williams making some beautiful saves at the net. Charlie Johnston was outstanding with his smashing style of play.

In the third quarter, paced by their star forward, Mike Kropfelder, the Greyhounds notched one more marker and followed through with two more in the final period. Kropfelder playing from his inside left position tallied three goals. The fourth Loyola score was accounted for by Walt Linz.

This was the first game for the Tar Heels since their promotion to the rank of a monogram sport. Even in going down to defeat it was no disgrace in bowing to as fine a club as the locals were. Tomorrow the squad moves on to Annapolis to engage the Middies, who are one of the leading collegiate aggregations in the country. Coach Allen is none to optimistic on Carolina's chances for victory, but he is hoping that his club can turn in as creditable a performance as they did today.

Al Williams was singled out for praise by the Carolina mentor and his play in the nets prevented the game from being a rout.

Score by periods.

DAVIS CHARLES PARKER

Here are five of the principals on the program of the 25th annual conference of the Carolina Dramatic Association being held at Chapel Hill this weekend to map plans for the annual State Drama Festival at the University next spring.

Bottom row: Harry Davis, associate director of the Carolina Playmakers, and Dr. Lucille H. Charles, East Carolina Teachers College, two other principal speakers and John W. Parker, head of the University Bureau of Community Drama and executive secretary of the Association.

Public Health Body Appoints Local Men To National Groups

Several of the eight members of the staff of the University at the 75th annual meeting of School of Public Health were named to national committees the American Health Association just held at Atlantic City.

Attending from Chapel Hill were Dr. E. G. McGavran, new Dean of the school; Dr. John J. Wright, head of the department of public health administration; Dr. Lucy C. Morgan, head of the department of public health education; Prof. Ruth W. Hay, head of the department of public health nursing; Profs. Paul D. Haney and Emil T. Chanlett, both of the department of sanitary engineering; Dr. Cecil G. Shops, department of public health administration. and Miss Lake Allen, research assistant.

Dean McGavran, who is a member of the executive committee of the governing council of the APHA, was appointed to the sub-committee on field training of the professional education committee, and was elected chairman of the committee on salaries for the health officers' section.

Dr. Morgan was named to the nominating committee for the governing council members of the public health education section. She is also a member of the advisory board of the Cleveland health museum, the section council of the health education group, the governing council, and the health education committee of the American Red Cross.

Professor Haney was named to the nominating committee of the engineering section. He is also on the committee on rural sewerage disposal of that section.

New Hat Causes Three-way Wreck By Woman Driver

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 17—(UP)—A woman's new hat caused not only varied comments but a three-way automobile smash-up here today when Mrs. Mary Partenope careened into a parked car which in turn hit another one.

Mrs. Partenope, in the hospital with painful injuries, told police that she was driving along minding her own business when a feather from her new hat fluttered down into her eyes and caused her to lose control of the car.

The police thought that her story was one for the books—the police books. There obviously was no law against driving while wearing a feathered hat, so they charged her instead with reckless driving.

As one of the Memphis minions of the law observed, "Some of these new hats, especially the feathery ones, are a menace to public safety."

FALSE ALARM

Spiked by eye-witness reports, fast-flying rumors yesterday morning that a student had been struck and killed by a hit and run motorist near Woollen gym nearly drove the Daily Tar Heel and city police batty, but it was all a false alarm.

Passing motorists and students leaving the gym at approximately 9 o'clock actually saw a body lying on Raleigh road with state highway patrolmen on the scene studying evidence. But the body was quite alive, and the whole episode was another class at the Highway Patrol school.

Elizabeth's Wedding Plans Might Have Upset Henry VIII

By Robert Musel
United Press Staff Correspondent

London—(UP)—In the state apartments of the dusty red brick palace Henry VIII built as a London residence four centuries ago, officials of the royal household are busy cataloguing.

They are displaying hundreds of presents sent for the wedding Nov. 20 of Princess Elizabeth, heiress presumptive to the throne, and Lieut. Philip Mountbatten.

It will not be the sort of wedding flamboyant Henry VIII would have approved. For in the simplicity and dedication to "austerity," the marriage of the 21-year-old royal princess and her handsome former prince of Greece is unprecedented. It perhaps will be one of the plainest weddings of any heir to a throne in modern times. King George himself, anxious that the royal family share all of his people's hardships, has rejected any effort to make the marriage a great state occasion.

It would seem as incredible in the fairy tales as it does in real life that a princess of the House of Windsor would have to worry about a wedding trousseau, that she would have to appeal to the Board of Trade for additional clothing coupons, that—and this is no secret—part of her honeymoon costume would consist of her mother's worn clothes adapted to fit her own figure.

The wedding breakfast—always a grand affair in the past—will be noteworthy only for the toast to the bride and bridegroom offered by the King. The Ministry of Food has not been asked for additional rations. Thus the plain menu will include a fish dish, toast, sandwiches and liquors. Henry VIII, whose gargantuan appetite happily coincided with an ear of a dozen meat courses per meal, would hardly bother to peck at the severely simple offering.

Nor will Elizabeth and her consort sail grandly away in a battleship on a honeymoon to distant places. King George's couple appear on the balcony, subjects are in the main confined to their little island by the new exchange restrictions and he has suggested a honeymoon within the homeland. They probably will stay at the castles or homes of friends or relatives—possibly fabled Glamis Castle in Scotland, scene of Shakespeare's "Macbeth," where Elizabeth's mother was born.

For the wedding itself some of the lesser's state coaches will be used in the brief drive from Buckingham Palace along the Mall, Whitehall and to the Abbey. The route will be lined with soldiers of regiments in which Elizabeth holds honorary rank and some naval detachments because of Philip's active service in the navy.

There will be no grandstands in the streets—the Ministry of Supply curtly announced that it could not spare the manpower from the national effort. There will be no fireworks display, nor will there be dancing in the parks except as it originates spontaneously with the populace. There will, of course, be crowds in front of Buckingham Palace demanding that the but that is a normal procedure.

Around and About The Old North State

By United Press

Raleigh. . .

Goernor Cherry will leave Raleigh this morning for Asheville where he will attend the Southern Governors' conference. Executives of 15 southern states will be on hand to discuss problems relating to present-day state government. Cherry is chairman of the conference.

Rocky Mount. . .

A House agriculture committee at Rocky Mount has held a hearing at which farmers from the Carolinas and Virginia told the House committee that they are firmly in favor of the governments agriculture program and want it to be continued.

Charlotte. . .

Teachers and principals of the South Piedmont district have called for legislative action to curtail the power of the State board of Education. Some 4,800 teachers say they want action to make it impossible for the state board to revoke a teaching certificate, as they put it, by summary action and at its own discretion. The statement did not mention the name of R. L. Fritz, Jr., who lost his certificate for admittedly mishandling state funds at his school at Hudson, North Carolina.

national punting statistics, with Justice doing most of the booting, Justice himself ranks third in the individual punting race. Tar Heel fans are also hopeful the Ashville speedster is able to rip off some long runs.

Despite Carolina's good passing and punting record, the Tar Heels have met with little success thus far. Snavely's club opened with a 14-7 win over Georgia and then dropped a 34-0 decision to Texas and a 19-7 game to Wake Forest. The Indians hold decisive wins over Davidson, the Citadel, and Virginia Tech.

YWCA Baby Sitters

11 p.m.

A list of the girls on the committee and where they can be reached will be found on page 4 of today's DAILY TAR HEEL. When none of these is available, students desiring a sitter should call Eleanor Highsmith at 6096, and she will try to find someone else.

"This seems to me a wonderful project," said Miss Currie, "for not only will it provide a much needed service—baby sitters being as scarce as everything else these days—but the girls engaging in it will benefit from it, and also have a lot of fun.

The following girls are members of the Baby Sitting division of the YWCA Social Service committee. Story will be found on page 1, Monday—Virginia Nash, 316 Spencer, phone 4066; Pat Lane, Tri Delt House, phone 8036; Kitty Miller, Tri Delt House, phone 8036.

Tuesday—Ben Beale, Tri Delt House, phone 8036; Martha Rainsford, 204 Alderman, phone 6096; Doris Beasley, 213 Spencer, phone 4061; Jackie Goodwin, 213 Spencer, phone 4061; Alberta Mercer, 316 Alderman, phone 3071; Beverly Morrison, 206 Spencer, phone 4061; Cattie Holr, Tri Delt House, phone 8036.

Wednesday—Ann Clark, 209 Alderman; phone 6096 (after 9); June Gilbert, 217 Alderman, phone 6096; Effie Senn Mason, 217 Alderman, phone 6096; Beverly Morrison, 206 Spencer, phone 4061.

Thursday—Kate Connor, 213 Spencer, phone 4061; Dolly Colwell, 210 Spencer, phone 4061; Elizabeth Browning, 213 Smith, phone 6052.

NOTICE

Beginning with the first issue next week, the Daily Tar Heel will run a calendar of routine meetings as a standing feature on the back page. Only special events will be run as notices.

CAMPUS PARTY

There will be an important meeting of the Campus party in the Roland Parker lounge on Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock. All members are urged to be present.

CHURCH OF CHRIST

The Church of Christ will congregate in the "Y" tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock for bible study, followed at 11 o'clock by Holy Communion. Vardiman Forrister will be in charge of services.

CORRECTION

Dr. Guy Johnson will be counsellor for the seminar on "The Racial Dilemma" for the weekly Sunday night seminars of the Wesley Foundation student group October 19 through November 9 rather than on "The Radical Dilemma" as was printed in the Daily Tar Heel Friday.

Tar Heels Rebound For 13-7 Win Over Indians

Plans Formulated For WSSF Program To Open November 2

By Sally Woodhull

Approximately 50 representatives from dormitories and fraternity and sorority houses met Wednesday at luncheon in the University Methodist church to formulate plans for the World Student Service Fund drive, scheduled to begin Sunday, November 2.

Wilmer Kitchun, national executive secretary of the World Student Service fund, and Mrs. Phyllis I. Farley from the regional office in Atlanta, spoke to the group, and Ruth Evans, YWCA president, and Pat Carruthers, chairman of solicitors, outlined plans which had been made by the executive council.

"It is not an over-estimation," said Kitchun, "to state that the life and future of European students, and it may be of us in America, too, is in our hands; and WSSF with its student-to-student aid is the one direct way we can aid them."

He outlined the program of WSSF, listing countries which receive aid, organizations which support its activities, and colleges in this country which last year contributed to the drive.

According to statements which Mr. Kitchun quoted from such national and international authorities as President Truman, Charles Luckman of the Citizens Food committee, Sir John Orr, chairman of FAO, and the Kiplinger newsletter from Washington, the situation in Europe this year will be worse than it has been at any time since the war.

American students' goal this year through WSSF was set at one million dollars, endorced by the NSA convention at Madison, Wisconsin. Contributions at Carolina last year totaled about $2,500, while at Duke more than $5,000 was raised.

Mrs. Farley, a native of the Scotch highlands whose home is now in London, described to the group conditions which she saw in her recent trip through Poland.

Students in Polish universities have no clothes, she said, because many of them had been taken away at the start of the war to concentration camps or forced labor, and when they returned could not locate their belongings. They have no place to live; many of them sleep in their classrooms, providing that the professor is not using it as a home for himself and his family.

Not only are the actual living conditions so horrible, according to Mrs. Farley, but the political insecurity of the country preys greatly on the minds of the students, and the moral degredation of adolescents brought about by the deliberate programs of demoralization carried on by occupying forces poses a great problem.

"It is not just the material aid we give these students," Kitchun and Mrs. Farley both stressed, "but the consciousness that students of the world can unite to help each other, that some one does care what happens to them, that will give them the courage to face insurmountable difficulties."

Czar Petrillo Bans Records After 1947

New York, Oct. 18—(UP)—James C. Petrillo, the big czar of almost all musicians who make their living by the instrumental trade, tonight declared that after January 1, 1948, his musicians will make no recordings, electrical transcriptions, or transcribed radio broadcasts.

This means that the men who make music will have to make it in person after New Year's day, and if a company wants to make a record, it must rely solely on the human voice. No accompaniment, not even the rattle of a snare drum, will be allowed.

In announcing the decision, Petrillo called recordings "the instrument that will eventually destroy the musicians whom it imitates." The music czar explained that whenever the men make a record or a transcription they are creating their own competition.

The resolution to ban all future recordings is prompted by the Taft-Hartley law, which prohibits the payment of royalties to a union. Up until now the union has been receiving payments on every waxing made by the record companies. The Taft-Hartley act says this must stop when contracts expire at the end of the year.

Entire Membership of YWCA Schedules Meeting Tomorrow

The first meeting of the entire membership of the campus YMCA will be held in Gerrard hall tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock, Y President Charles Foley said yesterday.

"We hope that a large proportion of the Y's 1500 members can attend this session," Foley said, "because we will outline the organization's overall plans for the year, and get the various committees functioning to carry out these plans."

Foley explained that after general policy of the Y has been discussed, the seven chairmen of the organization's administration and program committee will be introduced to explain the functions of these smaller groups. These committee heads, selected by the Y Cabinet, are as follows: Art Bridgman, chairman of christian heritage; Coye Rogers, personal and campus affairs; George Worth, social responsibility; Sam Magill, world relatedness; Don Broad, Hi-Y Club; Charlie Britt, administration; and Bill Powell, publicity.

After these leaders have explained the area and scope of their commissions' activities, the large meeting will divide into smaller groups and meet in conference rooms in the Y building with these chairmen, according to the individual preferences of those attending. There, said President Foley, the actual student participation in the work of the Y for the coming year will get underway.

Preceding the business session, devotionals will be conducted by Art Bridgman. Music for the program will be under the direction of Bobbie Whitesides and Lanier Davis.

Hold that Hemline, Diaper Group Votes

Phoenix, Arizona, Oct. 18—(UP)—The National institute of Diaper Services in convention here pledged itself, today to "hold that hemline."

In the face of steadily dropping skirt-lines, the convention vetoed the suggestion brought up for longer diapers. It was decided to leave them at their present 30 by 30 inches.

Jubilance Reigns As Tar Heels Win

By Bill Kellum

Williamsburg, Va., Oct. 18—"We're beginning to look like ourselves. These words uttered by pokerfaced Carl Snavely in Carolina's rservedly jubilant dressing rooms, pretty well summed up the Tar Heels showing this afternoon.

As usual this reporter aimost had to twist the tight-lipped Tar Heel mentor's arm to make him comment on the game.

Snavely also uttered a phrase that was echoed by each of his exhausted charges, "It was a tough game against a strong team." A soggy field, shirt sleeve weather, and a rugged battle against an excellent opponent took it out of the victors physically.

Len Szafaryn wearily muttered at the end of the game, as he fought his way through the crowd to the Tar Hel quarters, "It's the sack for me." Incidentally, the team members had to fight almost as hard to cross the threshold of their dressing room as they did to cross the Indians' goal line.

The Carolina gridders were just too tired after they had escaped to their dressing rooms to stage the riotous celebration expected of a team that had bounced back into the victory column

Last Period Score Ends William and Mary Three Game Streak

By Dick Jenrette

Cary Stadium, Williamsburg, Va., Oct. 18—Carolina's Tar Heels rallied for a fourth quarter touchdown here this afternoon to take a hard-earned 13-7 victory over a powerful William and Mary eleven before some 20,000 fans who turned out for the Southern conference battle.

The game was a well-played affair throughout, with the close play keeping the big crowd, largest in the history of the Indians' home field on edge. The struggle was waged under a broiling sun, which prompted both coaches to make frequent substitutions.

The victory maintained Carolina's record of never having lost a game to the Indians. The two clubs have met five times, with the Tar Heels winning on each occasion with the exception of one tie. The loss was also the first of the season for the Indians of Coach Rube McCray. Carolina now boasts a 2-2 won-lost mark.

KEN POWELL recovered a fumble that set up the winning score. He also turned in a bang-up game offensively and defensively.

Team Victory

For the Tar Heels, today's victory was a team victory. Each of the Carolina players turned in a top-flight game, and each could be proud of winning a game from a foe that had been primed for Carolina since the opening practice session.

A recovered fumble in the early minutes of the fourth quarter paved the way for the Tar Heels winning score, which came with the count deadlocked at 7-7. Ken Powell was the alert Tar Heel who pounced on the loose pigskin for Carolina on the William and Mary 20. Big Walt Pupa started the ball rolling by picking up three yards straight through the center of the line. Controversial Charlie Justice, who only this morning was ruled eligible for conference competition in a special meeting of loop heads in Durham, then twisted his way through left tackle all the way to the nine for a first down.

Justice then threw a pass intended for Art Weiner, but the "University Hour" Makes Debut Today With Half-Hour Show Over NC Stations

By Bob Rolnik

"Quiet Please! We're on the air!!"—These words will signal the broadcasting debut of "The University Hour" this afternoon at 1:30 over WPTF and other key stations in a state-wide hook-up.

Thirty minutes of student comedy and music will be beamed to people all over North Carolina from the Communication Center's new Swain hall radio studios.

The series will be a joint project of all three branches of the Consolidated University including State College in Raleigh and Woman's college in Greensboro.

Stepping into the radio spotlight this afternoon is variety entertainment designed to suit many tastes:

1. The State college band plays a composition by its conductor, Major C. H. Kutschinski.

2. The popular campus orchestra under Roy Cole's baton presents an original number by Dick Bobbit with vocals by George Demas.

3. A student dramatic group will act out a comic fantasy, "Hurtling Herbert Helzabeck," tracing the escapades of a college freshman mistaken for a famous football hero with the same name. The playlet is directed by Bob Epstein.

4. The combined men's and women's glee clubs of 300-voices render Randall Thomson's stirring "Alleluia," under the direction of Paul Young.

5. Edward R. Morrow, whose Columbia Broadcasting System newscasts from blitzed London brought him radio fame and a CBS vice-presidency, welcomes the University's Communication center to the air. Morrow, a Tar Heel from Guilford county, received an honorary Ph.D. here last year.

6. News tid-bits from the three campuses of the Consolidated University presented by Bob Gutknecht.

"The University Hour" is produced by Miss Jane Grills of the Communication Center's radio division assisted by student-producers Robert Andrew and Robert Epstein. Andrew will also announce the program. For Sunday's show Edward Easter acts as assistant musical director.

Cast of "Hurtling Herbert Helzabeck" consists entirely of students: Herbie—Bob Rolnik, Coach—Bob Andrew, Clerk—Sandy Minnix, Lummox—Claude Rayburn, Miss Debunk—Edna Dooley, Doctor—Bob Gutknecht, Prexy—Jim Geiger, Encyclopedia—Dick Katzin, Official—Ernie Rosenberg, Fan—Bob Bidgood.

Schedule of the coming week's University radio shows was released yesterday by the Communication center:

Sunday: "University Hour"—1:30 to 2 p.m.—WPTF.

Tuesday: "Writers At Work"—10 to 10:30 p.m.—WDNC.

Wednesday: "Thirty-Three By Air—8:30 to 9 p.m.—WRAL, WHHT.

Thursday: "North Carolina Viewpoint"—8:30 to 8:55 p.m.—WRAL, WHHT.

Saturday: "Musical Merry-Go-Round"—10:45 to 11 a.m.—WDUK.

PRE-RUSHING MEETING

The interfraternity council has announced a meeting of all freshman boys who have received invitations from fraternities on campus, this afternoon at 2 o'clock in Hill Hall.

The council has asked that all men having invitations be present to pick up their fraternity handbooks.

These pictures illustrate the many and varied projects that are to be conducted at the new Communication center here.

Communication Center Is Joint Project Of University, Woman's College, State

By Sam Summerlin

The most dynamic new force on the University of North Carolina campus is the Communication Center, a joint project of State College in Raleigh, Woman's College in Greensboro, and the University at Chapel Hill, which seems destined to become one of the most important divisions of the consolidated University.

The Center is located in Swain Hall, formerly for many years the main campus dining hall and often jocularly referred to by students as "Swine Hole."

There construction has been completed on radio studios, a photographic laboratory, a motion picture projection room, a distribution department, numerous offices and classrooms, and soon work will be finished on a motion picture studio and animation room. Future plans call for television apparatus and an FM radio station.

Director of this ambitious new project is Earl Wynn, a young man who looks more like a football player than a college professor. Many of his friends thought he was pipe dreaming when he laid his far-reaching plan before the University administration two years ago.

A graduate of Augustana College and Northwestern University, Mr. Wynn was before the war an assistant professor in the Department of Dramatic Art, teaching classes in speech and radio production. When the war came, he was assigned to the Navy's Training Film and Motion Picture Branch of the Photography Division where he directed two pictures which were among the most widely distributed of all Navy films, "A Letter to Mary," and "The Story of the DE-733."

While working in these Navy training aids, Wynn began to think about the teaching methods back at Carolina, Northwestern and at Augustana. Why, he wondered, could not civilian education use the same tools which the armed forces found so helpful and forceful?

He talked to University administrative officials; they were interested. Later they became enthusiastic. Plans were drawn up, placed before the Trustees of the University, and they were approved in September, 19

The Communication Center was born. Wynn's "dream" was becoming a reality.

Stated in academic terms, the basic plan of the Center was to bring together in one place all types of tools of communication: 1. to provide a wider educational and cultural opportunity for more people through planned educational programming; 2. to provide training in the effective use of these tools of communication for educational and professional purposes; and 3. to provide opportunity for research in the effectiveness of these tools as media of educational and mass communication.

Won't Be Same Chapel Hill

The following editorial appearing in Friday's issue of the Durham Morning Herald expresses our sentiments to a "T"!

The question of parking meters for Chapel Hill is strictly academic so far as Durham is concerned. It isn't our nickles that are affected, nor our sidewalks, nor our tempers. It is a question for Chapel Hill to decide. In true democratic fashion, the Aldermen, presumably in favor of the meters, have scheduled a public meeting for October 20 so that Chapel Hillians can express their approval or disapproval. If those who oppose parking meters do not take advantage of their democratic rights of free speech at this meeting, let them forever hold their peace and disburse their nickles.

One of Chapel Hill's city fathers recently asserted that a capsule poll of the populace indicated overwhelming approval of the meters as a stopgap solution to the parking congestion on East Franklin and Columbia streets. Durham, having successfully weathered several attempts to install the sidewalk eyesores here, has found that a conscientious and strict enforcement of parking laws can do more than parking meters to solve our own parking problems.

If the permanent residents of Chapel Hill like the idea of parking meters, then what of the students at the University who make up such a large part of Chapel Hill's population? Their nickles and pennies will fill the parking meters. Their opinions should be considered. No doubt they will be represented at the meeting on the twentieth.

Certainly this newspaper has no desire to interfere with Chapel Hill's solution of its problem. If the people want parking meters, then we advise them to get them. But it won't be the same Chapel Hill. Those sidewalk eyesores will never have been in fairer surroundings.

Parking meters! Phooey!

Nurses

We Need 'Em

The American Nurse's Association is duly concerned about the shortage of trained nurses. The ANA says that "the public must be roused to a clearer understanding of the present crisis in nursing if the situation is to be met and the health of the American people is to remain safeguarded.

DTH herewith prints a portion of the Association's statement:

"No one solution, pat plan, panacea will cover the situation. Many groups — lawmakers, hospital administrators and trustees, government officials, physicians, social welfare groups and the nurses themselves must work together to solve the vital problems which are of such great concern to the health of the American people.

"The increased demand for registered professional nurses by the American public must be met. If the public has a clear recognition of the problem, it will be better able to help in the solution and will then be assured of the nursing care, of the quality and quantity to which they are entitled. However, nursing must be made competitive with other careers if it is to attract young women today. Adequate economic security must be assured to nurses. Hospitals must not be permitted to exploit nurses.

All School Spirit Is Not Healthful

The mystery of the telegrams signed by various William and Mary dignitaries directed toward student body leaders the football team, etc. has been cleared up. Calling from W & M Friday afternoon, Dean Hocutt told Dean Weaver that the telegrams were sent by a group of students on campus, who acted unwisely. He stated that the telegram authors thought they would receive some hot retorts from the Carolina student body—some retorts that would enliven the William and Mary team, cheering squad, and the college in general.

But to our knowledge the "baited" telegrams were not answered. William and Mary has tried several plans to try to bolster their school spirit. According to an editorial appearing in the Flat Hat, William and Mary student newspaper, "not in the last three years have the Indians won a single game that really counted."

The editorial goes further and remarks that teams such as North Carolina have a tough schedule, playing tough teams with a push-over thrown in for a breather. W&M, the editorial states, has been doing just the opposite. They have been playing push-overs. (They have not lost to a State of Virginia foe since 1939) with a first-rate team thrown in every once in a while.

School spirit is one of the most valuable commodities that a school can have. It boosts the sentiments of the athletic teams, it helps the faculty members in their daily grind, and of course, the whole student body is uplifted. But often we do harmful things and foster ill feelings in trying to promote a lively feeling of competition between our athletic teams.

William & Mary authors of the telegrams had no motive other than hoping to place a fire under their team to try to break their three year record. Last year Clemson rooters became excited to the extent they stirred up much animosity bringing the neck of the University of South Carolina gamecock. There was great mob spirit culminating in a pop bottle throwing exhibition at the Texas-Oklahoma football classic last Saturday. Students at the University of Maryland, upon learning that their bronze Terrapin had been stolen by a rival college, formed a large mob that could be dispersed only by a police brigade.

All of the activities mentioned above have happened away from our campus. We could have instead used specific examples, telling of the vandalism and bad feelings between Carolina and rival teams. We could go into a dissertation offering the reasons why the Carolina-State classic was erased from the schedule and not resumed until this year. We could tell of the vandalism between Duke and Carolina—of the painting of columns, stadiums and the statue of Washington Duke. We are not going to refreshen these unfortunate things in your memory. We believe that this year's student body is much more mature and such foolish acts are a thing of the past. We only hope that we are correct.

According to authorities on the subject, it takes from two to 10 times as long to become rested after being overly tired as it does to recuperate at the first signs of fatigue. A nap when one first becomes tired will work wonders and be far more valuable than several hours when exhausted.

DREW PEARSON ON The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Washington.—Michigan's bombastic Congressman Clare Hoffman showed what he thought of the public's right to scrutinize the acts of Congressmen when he cross-examined the editor of the staid Washington Star. The Star had poked fun at the gentleman from Allegan, Mich., because he didn't like the fact that the Civil Service Commission kept a file on him. Apparently the Congressman thought the Civil Service Commission should keep a file on everybody except him.

What the public did not know, however, and what Hoffman probably did know, was that the Civil Service Commission's file contained some highly interesting but rather damaging Hoffman remarks. Here are some of them:

"We might now profit from what Hitler has done by adopting at least some of his decent methods of production, or preparedness." (Speech by Hoffman one year and a half after Hitler invaded Poland and just as France was falling.)

"I charge, upon my responsibility as a Representative, that this Administration is deliberately sabotaging our national defense." (Hoffman made this speech on Jan. 31, 1941, after he had voted against most Roosevelt measures for preparedness.)

"What matters it to us whether our independence be taken from us by the force of Germany and Japan or stolen from us by a Streit, an Ickes, and their associates?" (Jan. 22, 1942).

"All of us, if we would stop to read—think—know that there is a war right here within our own Government, carried on by an enemy more dangerous than either the one on the Atlantic or the Pacific." (Feb. 16, 1942).

Also in the Civil Service files is the interesting notation that Congressman Hoffman's speeches have been sold and distributed by Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling, later indicated for sedition, and that George Sylvester Viereck, who served a jail term for his activities as a German agent, sent out 30,000 copies of an editorial under Hoffman's frank. Others of Hoffman's speeches were distributed under his frank by Charles Hudson, Gerald Winrod and David Baxter, all indicted for sedition.

"I have no apology to offer for making those speeches, for sending them out, or for the manner in which they were sent out," Hoffman said afterward.

However, it was another matter when he discovered that the Civil Service Commission had kept in its files the history and background of these speeches.

Star-studded Generals are a dime-a-dozen around the White House, but no other military man spends as much time with the president as a lowly sergeant. He is J. P. Leverett, who enjoys the unique distinction of being the only person who can pinch and poke the President. Sgt. Leverett is Truman's rubdown man.

It is the President's custom to start off his day with a brisk dip in the White House pool, after which he turns himself over to Sgt. Leverett who kneads the Presidential muscles under a sun lamp.

Usually this is an occasion for profound barbershop talk. Once or twice the sarge found the President's conversation so absorbing he forgot to turn off the sun lamp, and gave Mr. Truman a slight toasting.

The other day, however, it was Truman who did the listening as the sarge spoke uneasily of a problem of his own. His wife was at the Army's Walter Reed Hospital, about to have a baby. Truman asked to be notified whether it was a boy or a girl, and not long after the event, Mrs. Leverett received a telegram:

"Congratulations on your new four-star General."
It was signed Harry Truman.

The much-ballyhooed migration of ex-GIs to Australia actually is moving in reverse. Pioneer-minded Americans who looked to Australia's wide-open spaces for new frontiers, are turning back discouraged. The return voyage is not launched in a blaze of bursting photographers bulbs, but it is more crowded than the trip over. The Americans have found the Aussies hospitable enough. But labor restrictions are too tight and housing too critical.

America's genial Ambassador to Australia, Robert Butler, the St. Paul shipbuilder, is quietly discouraging the GI tide. At the risk of offending his Australian friends, he cautions U. S. citizens to investigate before they pull up roots at home. First, they should double check whether they will be able to crash the unions and practice their crafts in Australia. Second, they should make sure housing facilities are available in the new location.

"The Aussies want immigrants from the States, and are friendly toward Americans," Butler points out. "But the problem is labor. The unions resent outsiders and won't let them get jobs."

Look Looks At South In Pictures

By Bob Sain

The South, by the editors of "Look" and David L. Cohn, Houghton Mifflin, 393 pps.

Look magazine's quick but comprehensive photographic glance at The South takes in a lot of territory. So much territory that one can hardly believe that it could be given sufficient coverage in less than 400 pages. But "The South" does it; from the precise, formal history of Williamsburg to the iron lace of New Orleans, from the cluttered confusion of a North Carolina tobacco market to the unimposing Ernest Hemingway home in Key West, from the dust of the Churchill Downs Derby course of the quiet, cool, expensive bridal paths of Aiken, "The South" is a friendly, complimentary picture of southeastern states, states which still possess gracious ante-bellum beauty, and yet, are moving progressively forward to match their neighbors to the north in economics, education, government.

Literally hundreds of photographs, a few in color, back up Southerner David Cohn's "South" as defined in an entertaining preliminary to the pictures. Cohn says:

"Hospitality flourishes along with a host of other institutions: fried chicken, beaten bisquit, spoon bread, corn-bread, Virginia, Tennesee and Kentucky Hams, breakfast grits; the Mississippi River discovered by Hernando de Soto three centuries ago and lately marketed in the form of "Showboat" by Edna Ferber and Jerome Kern; the levee, without which dozens of Northern songwriters would have starved; honeysuckle; belles ve'y Suthun at home in Nitta Yuma and twice as Suthun in New Yawk; the statue of the Confederate soldier on the courthouse lawn; barbecues; catfish parlors; revivals; possum hunts; hoodoo doctors; Coca-Cola; lady poets of the Confederacy; cottonfields; magnolias; mockingbirds; the New Orleans mardi gras; snuff, baptizings in the creek, and oratory."

But Cohn's "South" is not always the traditional "South" Norfolk's shipyards, the TVA, the Atlanta rail center; Birmingham's blast furnaces share billing with magnolias and old mansions. Pictures of the South's mountain people are carefully correct: the rude wooden, one-room school house with the old stove, the sturdy, tight-haired marm, the longhaired students; the mountain boy with his old rifle and his hound; a wedding ceremony in a log church with the bashful bride in her teens and the groom with his hair waterslick. Still "The South" is no sociological treatise; it's a guide book to fun in the sun and a thorough introduction for Yankees.

(Incidenrally, North Carolina came off badly in space allotment; tobacco process shots took most of our space while Chapel Hill was ignored. There was one picture of the Duke campus. However, we recognized one photograph by Carolina man Hugh Morton: a misty, Smoky Mountain shot.)

YW Chatter

Early Planning Pays Off

By Sally Woodhull

Activities at the YWCA, as everywhere else on campus, have really gone into full swing this past week. Plans laid last spring by far-seeing cabinet members are now well on their way to being carried out, aided by a little added inspiration gained at the fall retreat. (According to reports, a grand time was had by all —cabinet members, counsellors, and a group of freshman boys—at Camp Betty Hastings for a three-day period before school started.)

Baby sitters, storekeepers, newshounds, career gals, and any number of other kinds of enthusiasts, have found their niche in life on one of the dozen or so committees organized by the Y for service and discussion. Incidentally, interested students, whether or not they are members of the Y or of this committee, are invited to hear Dr. Rupert Vance of the sociology department discuss some of the political problems of the South at the Public Affairs committee meeting tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Town Girls room of the Y.

Which brings up another point—have you ever noticed how much there is going on in that YMCA building every minute? No, we're not talking about the tete-a-tetes over cokes in the lobby, but about the myriads of committee meet like that of Public Affairs tomorrow afternoon. You could hardly be expected to have noticed all of them—such always-on-the-ball gals as Mrs. Betty Rose Dowden, pert and purty executive director of the YW, and Ruth Evans, alert and vivacious president, find it rather hard to keep a constant finger on the rapid pulse of the building. It's used every day and every evening for meetings, conferences, office space, and numerous other things of more lasting importance (sometimes) than the coke-surrounded conversations.

The building itself is now in the midst of a face-lifting operation which should, if work completed so far can be used as a measuring stick, end up being really fine. Last year's grads will hardly recognize the whitened and brightened Y when they wander in on some nostalgic weekend return trip. On the first floor, where last year there was a card room, there are now offices for Mr. Claude Shotts, new YMCA director, and for his secretary. Mr. Joe McArthur, new assistant to Mr. Shotts, has taken over Bill Poteat's office.

On your right on entering the building, in a room which used to be filled with stacks of dusty books waiting to be sold to students so they could get dustier, there is now Betty Rose Dowden's office, a beautifully decorated, and usually well-organized mad-house. Here it is, midst blue tinted walls and flowered drapes, filing cases and mimeograph machines, that the work of the YW is carried on. It's one of those delightfully friendly places that all kinds of people wander into for a short chat with whoever's there, and more often than not they find themselves engaging in some intriguing occupation before they leave.

Next room to Betty Rose's will be occupied, when the furniture arrives, by a group of ministers who direct student activities here on campus. They will keep regular office hours—when they get some chairs to sit on—so that they can see students at this convenient location. Sharing the office will be the Rev. J. C. Herrin, Baptist; J. Robert Nelson, Methodist; Bert Cooper, Episcopal; Bernard D. Munger, Congregational; and Hilton Seals, Presbyterian.

Upstairs there is the beautifully redocorated YWCA library, another committee room, the Town Girls room, and the Hillel foundation lounge. Father F. J. Murphy, assistant pastor of the Roman Catholic church, and the Rev. E. C. Cooper of the Lutheran church will also have offices upstairs.

Food For Thought And Europe's Hungry

Dear Tar Heel,

Inasmuch as there has recently been a host of articles, letters, etc., about the starving peoples of Europe and a good deal of abstract rumination on the misfortunes of the hungry, I think it apropos to add one more letter which attempts to indicate more precisely what happens in the field of human behavior where hungry people are involved. Doubtless this material is a recapitulation of the obvious for some who have taken the trouble to investigate researches on hunger. (To other, however, Europe's plight still means no more than a diet stripped of luxuries like pate.) Perhaps these considerations will serve to point up the consequences of a form of hunger which is quickly reaching a stage of inanition for the peoples of Europe.

(1) Inanition calls forth a fundamental change in all psysiological processes. This is a matter of mere observation, but the phenomenon has been extensively investigated in the science of physiology.

(2) Changes in body and its physiology caused by inanition are paralleled by a series of changes in subjective psychical experience. In the field of feeling and emotion, appetite turns into hunger and later into feelings of weakness, dull pain, emptiness, and apathy, interrupted by moments of irritation, angriness, low feeling, and general psychical depression. In the field of sensation, preception and attention the first stages of inanition are followed by a decrease of sensitiveness and attention toward all phenomena which do not have a relation to food and nutrition. Continued inanition brings about a disorganization of the whole receptive system. One is not able to analyze the exterior world and its components. In the field of reproductive imagination and association of ideas "food" hallucinations and delirium of inanition occur. Memory is weakened. Desires, wishes, and volitions unrelated to food are weakened. The "self" degenerates; presonality is disorganized; one cannot think cohesively.

(3) The greater are the obstacles to obtaining food, the greater is the proportion of food-approaching actions in the whole of human behavior. Even sex appetite is weakened. On the other hand, sex chastity is sacrificed to prostitution for food. Convictions, opinions, and beliefs readily undergo change if they hinder the satisfaction of hunger.

(4) Social implications: Starving societies invade nonstarving societies unless prevented by force. Crimes against property increases. Disorder, revolution, and internal chaos increase. National solidarity collapses and anomic suicide increases. A starving stat-socialism, or its substitute arises. Mortality increases; net reproduction rates decrease. Ideologies leading to food acquisition are popular (perhaps involving conflict over food), and other ideologies lose popularity.

There's no point whatsoever in indulging in pathos manipulations about starvation. But nobody but a real fool will fail to comply with the President's request for more food for Europe immediately, whatever the means of its dispensation. However, I think, we must anticipate future events to the best of our ability, and, relating them to this food program, we must try seriously to prepare, at least in our thinking, for a backfire. Let the dog starve long enough and he will try to snap off food, hand, and all.

Open House Program At Woollen Monday

By Taylor Vaden

The second Open House program sponsored by the intramural department will be held tomorrow night from seven to nine o'clock in Woollen gym.

In explaining the recreational program, mural director Walt Rabb said, "All students and faculty, both men and women, are invited to come down to the gym on Monday evenings and enjoy an hour or two of relaxation. Special invitation is extended to veterans and their wives." Coach Rabb added that if enough poeple are interested in swimming, the pool will be opened on Monday evenings.

Badminton League

A result of the Open House program, the University Badminton club, recently joined a league composed of teams from Durham, Raleigh, Greensboro, Burlington, and possibly Duke, State and Wake Forest. Games will be played on Monday nights with play starting later in the fall. Announcements concerning games will appear in the Daily Tar Heel.

The Carolina badminton team will be made up of men and women who have been attending the Monday evening meetings of the Badminton club. The league is strictly recreational with no eligibility rules, and faculty or graduate student may play. The team has not yet been announced, but such men as Charlie Rice, Clark Taylor, Vic Seixas, and Ham Strayhorn are expected to form its nucleus.

Last Monday's open house saw a good turnout for the badminton, tumbling, handball, volleyball, and table tennis activities.

Hockey Club Seeks More Members

Coeds who are interested in joining the hockey club may still do so, Chairman Scotty Dellinger announced yesterday.

The group meets every Tuesday and Thursday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock in the women's gym. Girls desiring to join are invited to attend either meeting this week.

Later in the quarter, the hockey team will play teams from Duke and Meredith. The dates for these games, to be held here, have not yet been set.

Ransonmen Victory Sparked by Milne, Miller and Magill

By Morty Schaap

The Carolina harriers opened their season with an impressive 18-40 win over Georgia Tech yesterday morning in a meet at Fetzer field.

Jack Milne, Sam Magill and Jimmy Miller all finished together in a tie for first place. Red Smith, Georgia Tech freshman star, captured fourth place.

Magill took the lead at the start of the race and set a fast pace as the boys left the track and went into the woods. Milne moved out front at the two-mile mark and when the teams came over Deadman's hill, Milne had a lead of almost 200 yards. He then slowed up as the men reached the track and let Miller and Magill team up with him to cross the finish line together. The time was 18:57, which is excellent for the condition of the course.

Alvin Smith was the fourth Tar Heel finisher in fifth spot and he was followed by Johnny Corridan of Tech. Frank Hooper, newest addition to the cross country ranks took sixth along with Chuck Herty who was running unofficially. John Bristow was in eighth place and he was followed by Jimmy Hunt, who was also an unofficial runner. The next group of runners were Techsters Howard Ghormly, Carl Branson, Bob Renshaw and Bill Turner. Halstead Holden the last of the Tar Heel unofficial runners placed next and he was followed by Tech's Carver Gunn and Carolina's Mark Burnham.

The harriers will make their first defense of the Southern conference championship in their next outing when they tangle with the Duke Blue Devils, here on October 29.

The squad is not as yet in shape to make a bid for the IC4A championship, which is a month off, but with hard work and three more dual meets, Carolina may be a definite threat to the crown that now rests uneasily on the head of NYU.

Weather Humid

With the weather as humid as it was and the course being wet from the last week's rain, the coaches were well pleased with the time turned in by the leaders.

Varsity Cage Drills To Begin Monday

Coach Tom Scott announced that basketball practice for all holdovers from last year's varsity and junior varsity will start tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The newcomers that have survived the cuts will also join the lettermen in preparations for the opening game that is scheduled for December 1.

Back from last year's varsity are Captain Bob Paxton, John Dillon, Nemo Nearman, Norm Kohler, Tee Thorne, Roger Scholbe, Coy Carson, King Cole, Rip Ryan and Vic Seixas.

Blue Devils Top Maryland 19-7 To Remain in Unbeaten Class

Duke Stadium, Durham, N. C., Oct. 18—An offensive-minded Duke football team, today outscored a rugged Maryland team, 19-7, before some 20,000 fans.

It was a loosely played contest with the difference in the teams being, the passing, kicking and running of tailback Fred Folger. Folger scored one of the three Devil touchdowns and his long kicks kept the Terrapins deep in their own territory most of the game. It was his 61-yard runback on a pass interception that set up the second score.

Lou Gambino, Maryland's high scorer, made the longest run of the game when he circled end and travelled 64 yards before he was hauled down. When he was tackled he fumbled and Duke recovered to break the back of the Maryland scoring chance.

Maryland's lone tally came in the third period when Vic Turyn tossed a 12-yard pass to to end George Simler in the end zone.

Duke iced the game when blocking back Tommy Hughes grabbed a Maryland pass and ran it back 18 yards to score untouched.

Pupa Scores Winning Touchdown After Ken Powell Recovers Fumble

toss was a bit too high. Johnny Clements then lugged the ball around left end for three yards to the six. Pupa found a nice hole at center, getting to the one yard line. On fourth down, it was once again Pupa who lugged the ball, and the big fullback leaped high in the air over the line for a touchdown.

Midway in the second quarter, Jack Fitch returned an Indian punt from the William and Mary 45 to the 32, from which point the men of Coach Carl Snavely drove to a score. Two plays failed to gain, but a beautiful pass from Pupa to Powell on the five gave Carolina a first down with goal to go. Justice could get but one yard off tackle, but the Carolina Choo Choo hit Jim Camp with a perfect pass in the right corner of the end zone for a touchdown. Bob Cox's conversion gave the Tar Heels a 7-0 edge.

Goal Line Stand

Carolina had threatened seriously just before the score, driving from its own 11 to the Indian one-foot marker, only to be stopped by a determined green-clad line. A circus catch by Weiner on a Pupa aerial, with the play starting on the NC 41 and sailing to the Indian nine, ate up most of the yardage.

There was no further scoring until late in the third quarter when William and Mary staged a sustained drive of 48 yards for its only touchdown of the afternoon. Justice kicked to Jack Bruce, who returned to the Carolina 28. Two Tar Heels missed good tackles on the flying Indian.

Lex Stars

Two running plays produced negative yardage, but Buddy Lex, who played a great game at tailback for the Indians, broke through to the Tar Heel fifteen for a first down. Cloud gained four yards on two carries and then shot a short pass over the line to Bob Streckroth, who got to the two for another first down. Cloud then drove into the line for a touchdown. Stan Magdziak converted the extra point from placement.

CHARLIE JUSTICE, given a clean bill of health by conference committee, turned in an excellent game from his tailback spot. His pass to Camp gave the Tar Heels their first score.

The starting lineup:

with a performance like theirs.

The Tar Heels quietly shed their sweat-soaked, grimy uniforms, showered, dressed and hurried to the buses waiting to carry them back to supper at the Williamsburg Lodge where they are quartered. There was no horseplay and little shouting while the Carolinans bathed, but one could sense the players' feeling of a hard job done well.

Big Art Weiner spoke for the team when he said of the victory, "at last." Weiner's beautiful catch deep in William and Mary territory of a partially blacked pass from Charlie Justice eventually set up the Tar Heels' first score.

"It was a good and rough game" was Charlie Justice's weary but happy comment as he emerged from the showers where he had just finished shedding several pounds of Cary Field mud.

Justice, Camp, Fowle and Hazelwood started the game with beautiful white uniforms but at the end it was hard to distinguish them from the turf.

Not only was this the hardest-fought battle of the year for the Tar Heels but it was also the cleanest according to big flankman Mike Rubish. "They are one of the cleanest teams we ever played. We played our best game of the year and we also played together. We hustled and fought every play," he drawled.

Chunky Don Hartig, the Tar Heels' scrappy blocking back echoed a general feeling among the team members when he "We were on."

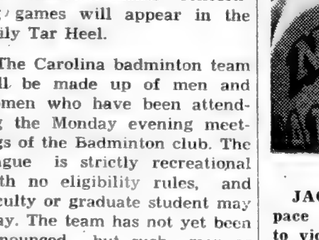
Booters Outkicked In Overtime, 2-1; Al Williams Stars

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 18—A battling North Carolina soccer team today fought Navy to a deadlock in regular game play, only to succumb in overtime, 2-1.

Co-Captains Al Williams and Gus Johnston were outstanding in the Carolina cause and the entire team aided with a magnificant demonstration of soccer.

Navy was seeking its third consecutive victory, having already shut out Lehigh and Gettysburgh this season. The Middies were rated near the top of the collegiate booting circles. Carolina was given little or no chance of even preventing the game from being a rout.



Pallulat Scores

Hank Pallulat tallied the Tar Heel marker which was matched by a goal from the toe of Navy's Manuel Bentin. This was the scoring for the regulation game distance with both teams being set back by the brilliant play of the goalies, Williams for Carolina and Al Schaufelberger for the Middies. Schaufelberger, incidentally, was picked as the All-American goalie last year.

In the overtime with both teams fighting to take the decision, Frank Bendell, Tar center half, drove through and beat Williams with the winning tally.

The starting lineups:

Pos.	Navy	UNC
G	Schaufelberger	Williams
RB	Ghormley	Van Zandt
LB	Chew	Nelson
RH	Coulter	Singer
CH	McDonald	Johnston
LH	Peard	Williams, T.

will you join them after you graduate?

You probably know a number of men in your class who were pilots in the wartime Air Force. They are the best advertisements for the Aviation Cadet program. Talk with them about it.

Chances are, they'll tell you their service as pilots was one of the most interesting and exciting phases of their lives. Fast action, comradeship, and the chance to serve their country paid them dividends they don't forget . . . added something to their stature and poise that they couldn't have gotten anywhere else.

Cadet life today is no different. As a potential pilot in the new U. S. Air Force, you serve at a time of equal importance to the nation. Freedom, responsibility, the chance to use your own initiative are all yours.

The training you get is the finest your government can provide — $35,000 worth for every Cadet. You're taught by skilled instructors, fly the best airplanes. Your living facilities are excellent.

Learning to fly today opens profitable fields to you in aviation — which is expanding more rapidly than at any other time in history.

Pilot training is open, now, to single men, 20 to 26½ years old, who have completed at least one-half the credits for a degree from an accredited college or university — or pass an equivalent examination. Cadets completing the course will be commissioned Second Lieutenants, ORC, and assigned to active duty as pilots with the Air Force. During their tours of duty they will be given a chance to qualify for Regular Air Force Commissions. This is your opportunity! Look into it today at your nearest U. S. Army and Air Force Recruiting Station.

GM Community Sing Scheduled for Tonight

Carolina's new Fight Song will lead off this evening's initial Sunday sing, to be sponsored by Graham Memorial at 8 o'clock in Memorial hall. Arranged in the style of a streamlined community sing the program is planned for every Sunday evening from now on, and is under the direction of Mark Barker of the student union staff.

Old and new favorites, especially adapted for mass harmony, and three specialty numbers compose the program. Among the eleven scheduled songs are Blue Skies, Apple Blossom Wedding, Stout Hearted Men, That's My Desire, Don't Fence Me In, I'm in the Mood for Love, and Tallahassee.

Coline Smith, of Sound and Fury fame is mistress of ceremonis and song leader. She will be assisted by Frank Matthews on the piano. Lyrics for all tunes will be flashed on a screen on the Memorial hall stage.

Leading off the specialty numbers Sam Greene will play and sing Gershwin's immortal "I Got Plenty O' Nuthin'." Piano clown artist "Skippy" Mann, will render two well-known soloes, "I'm Tired," and "Cal'donia." Blonde, sultry Audrey Green, famous on the campus for her blues singing, will present "Can't Help Lovin' That Man."

APPROVED SANITONE SERVICE

A REVOLUTIONARY CLEANING METHOD . . . Sanitoning is a unique dry cleaning method which cleans clothes more thoroughly—yet more gently—than any ordinary method. Only the leading cleaners in every city are licensed to use Sanitone. Wherever you see the Sanitone emblem displayed, you can be sure of the finest in quality cleaning.

NATIONALLY ADVERTISED in the Saturday Evening Post Ladies' Home Journal and Vogue

NATIONALLY KNOWN . . . Throughout the country, Sanitone is recognized as a superior cleaning method. For years it has been advertised in leading national magazines. Today, it is the world's best known cleaning method.

WHAT SANITONE DOES . . . The patented Sanitone cleaning method removes sugar and most fruit juice soils, perspiration, and water spots in addition to all those soils removed by ordinary cleaning. It cleans fabrics clear through, revives the brilliance of colors and the softness of textures.

THOROUGHLY TESTED . . . The Sanitone method has been tested in actual use in our plant, in hundreds of the leading dry cleaning plants in the United States and Canada and in the laboratories of Emery Industries, Inc. Sanitone cleaning is performed according to laboratory specifications.

WHY IT MAKES CLOTHES LAST LONGER . . . Because it eases out soil, perspiration, and even embedded grit particles—the enemies of fabric life—regular Sanitone cleaning makes clothes give extra months of wear. Remember, clean clothes last longer, and Sanitoned clothes are thoroughly clean.

EMERY INDUSTRIES, INC. . . . Emery Industries, the developers and patent owners of Sanitone, have been important factors in the development of materials used in the textile industry and in the laundry and dry cleaning fields. Emery's reputation is behind that of every licensee in guaranteeing fine results from the Sanitone method

Student's Autos May Be Limited, Umstead Asserts

By Bill Sexton

A limitation may be placed on student autos on campus, John W. Umstead, member of the University trustee's executive committee, indicated last night at a town meeting on Chapel Hill parking problems.

"Unless there arises a different attitude taken by student drivers in town and on campus," Umstead said, "the Board of Trustees will have to do something." He said the subject of a ban on student-owned cars had already been discussed by the trustees.

Highlights Meeting

Umstead's declaration highlighted a spirited meeting called by the Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen to sound out public opinion concerning installation of parking meters in the business district. The move had been recommended by a city committee on parking and traffic.

L. J. Phipps, local attorney and alumnus, opposed parking meters but suggested parallel parking and strict enforcement of parking time limits as an alternative. Phipps appeared at the meeting in behalf of a group of Chapel Hill merchants.

Fraternities Object

Strong opposition was registered by representatives of the fraternities on Columbia street, which under the proposed parking control plan would be limited to one-hour parking with meters installed in front of their properties. Chief spokesmen for the group were Ernest House of Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Tag Montague of Delta Kappa Epsilon.

House and Montague suggested that the plan of the aldermen be tabled on the grounds that the number of student cars would drop as veterans finish schooling under the G.I. bill.

Though the meeting, which attracted nearly a hundred citizens and students to the city hall courtroom, devoted most of its time to opposing installation of meters, equally strong support was scored by several speakers.

Louis Graves, editor of the Chapel Hill Weekly, reiterated the complete accord with the plan which he expressed in an editorial Friday. And R. H. Hamilton, political science department instructor, urged installation as the only solution.

Co-op Board Chair Filled By Elmendorf

By Ken Rothwell

John Elmendorf, a graduate student from Lumberton, has been elected chairman of the Victory Village veterans co-op store to succeed Tom McDade, it was announced yesterday.

Rumors current at Victory Village that McDade was asked to resign have absolutely no basis, according to responsible co-op officials. Rather, they said. McDade, a brilliant student and winner of this year's Phi Beta Kappa award, has planned to resign for several weeks. Pressure of his studies, a part-time job, and family obligations forced him to that decision, they said.

At the same time it was pointed out that Elmendorf comes to the job with a wealth of co-op experience. He has served in similar posts at Yale university and in Europe.

McDade steps down from the job after guiding the co-op from its inception. Since it was founded last September it has progressed from a small buying club to a full-sized grocery store doing a large volume of business. Last week the co-op paid 5 per cent dividend to its member-customers based on the amount of their purchases.

"The co-op board of directors and every veteran on campus who has used the store are deeply obligated to McDade for the sacrifices he has made in time and effort on behalf of the co-op," said Henry Saunders, speaking for the board of directors.

Delegate Vishinsky Again Attacks U.S.

Lake Success, Oct. 20—(UP)—Russia held the center of the United Nations General assembly stage today as Delegate Andrei Vishinsky took up where he left off last week with an impassioned attack on the United States that lasted for more than 90 minutes.

First Vishinsky struck at the American proposal for a semi-permanent U.N. "Watchdog" commission on the Greek-Balkan border which the Political and Security committee has already approved.

The Russian delegate reiterated his demand that American and British troops be forced out of Greece and that the U.N. supervise all outside aid to that country.

Going a little further this time, Vishinsky then demanded that the United Nations indict the Western powers for causing strife in Greece. As a final point he asked for U.N. controls on American aid to the Greek government under the Truman plan.

The silver-haired Russian diplomat then took off on another tack, with the United States still his target. His oratorical fire was directed on the American proposal for U.N.-supervised elections in Korea.

He called this plan, which was put forth by Secretary George Marshall, a plot to hold Korean elections under the domination of American troops, comparing such elections to those of Greece, which, he charged, were run under the guns of the Western powers.

The American plans as given to the assembly calls for elections on Russian and American zones of Korea with a U.N. commission as observer. The elections would establish a legislature which would negotiate for the withdrawal of Soviet and American troops. Russia countered this plan with a proposal that both occupation forces withdraw soon with no further ado.

Yackety Yack Pictures Have Not Been Taken for 3,000 Stuaents

Three thousand Carolina students apparently will not be pictured in the 1948 Yackety Yack, according to figures issued yesterday by the Yack board of editors.

Although the photographers are being held over to accommodate late-comers, little better than 50 per cent of the student body had taken advantage of the arrangements at the end of last week. As the end of the photographer's contract period nears, the editors are becoming increasingly worried over the situation.

They have announced that those who have already filled out the sitting cards at the desk on the second floor of Graham Memorial are especially asked to have their picture made as the uncalled-for cards are snarling the photographer's records. They have also again called to the attention of the student body that the times for this week's picture-taking has been changed to 1 to 6 o'clock and 7:30 until 10.

Law, pharmacy, and public health students who missed their special periods are also asked to come.

According to the editors, the unexpected slowness of the student body in responding to their repeated attempts to get them photographed is seriously delaying all phases of Yack preparation, and is making the creation of a "representative" book impossible.

University Veterans Association Begins Open-house Series Tonight At Clubhouse

Social chairman Al Pitteway announced today that the University Veterans association will inaugurate its fall open-house series by entertaining the coeds of McIver dormitory tonight at 8:30.

The entertainment will feature dancing on the "smoothest floor in town," refreshments, and songs by Nina Thomas.

The series, designed to stimulate social relations between veterans and coeds, will be a regular Tuesday night feature at the UVA club house. Each coed dormitory will be entertained in turn. Tentatively the order is McIver. Spencer, Alderman, Kenan, Carr, Smith, and Archer house.

Veterans wishing to serve on the escort committee are urged to be at the clubhouse at 8:15 and to remember, "first come, first served."

PLAN CONTEST

Chi Delta Phi, national honorary literary sorority, has announced a membership contest, which will close October 21. Manuscripts may be of any type of original literature, preferably 500 words or over. If poetry is submitted, four to five poems is the minimum. Manuscripts should be submitted to Marcella Harrer, 203 Alderman Dorm.

Radio Show Features Four Authors Tonight

Four prominent Chapel Hill authors will tear each other's stories apart this evening over radio station WDNC from 10 to 10:30 when "Writers At Work," a new University radio show, is broadcast from the Communication Center's campus studios.

Presentation of an original story by writer James Street will open the program. Pulitzer prize-winner Paul Green and novelist Foster Fitz-Simons will criticize the story and work out their own versions of the same plot.

Moderator for the literary "free-for-all' will be Noel Houston, author of "The Great Promise."

When James Street is not writing such well-know novels as "By Valor and Arms" and "The Gauntlet," he runs his experimental farm near Chapel Hill. Motion picture production of Street's book "Tap Roots" is now in progress.

Service to Handle Qualification Tests

The U. S. Civil Service commission will give general qualifications tests here on November 4 to any seniors to be graduated this June who are interested in well-paying government positions, according to an announcement today by Miss Kathryn Cook, University vocational guidance director.

Explaining that no knowledge of shorthand or typing was necessary as a prerequisite for these tests, Miss Cook stated that all seniors who would like further information should contact her office in 209 South building as soon as possible. There she can give them detail instructions about filing civil service applications and show them a sample of the November test which will include paragraph reading, vocabulary, English usage, graph and table interpretation, arithmetic reasoning, abstract reasoning, and spatial perception.

Candidates picked after the aptitude tests are given nationally will be classified as junior professional assistants to be taught the agencies and functions of government by the National Institute of Public Affairs beginning in October. After sufficient training, those accepted will be assigned to government departments for permanent work.

The jobs open to college graduates with salaries ranging from $2,644 to $3,397 a year cover such varied professions as administrative technician, archeologist, astronomer, bacteriologist, chemist, economist, engineer, geographer, legal assistant, librarian, mathematician, metallurgist, patent examiner, physicist, psychologist, social science analyst, and statistician.

Jacksonville Man Is Lone Survivor In Yacht Disaster

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 20—(UP)—The U.S. Marine hospital here has identified the lone survivor of a yacht rammed and sunk today in Norfolk harbor as A. H. Girard, 39, of Jacksonville, Florida.

Two other persons on the yacht, the "Lone Star," were drowned. Girard, who is reported in "satisfactory condition," told hospital authorities that his wife Frances and the third person aboard the Lone Star, Richard Bord of New York, went down with the yacht. Girard said he was headed for Florida from Long Island, where he had been visiting.

The 45-foot yacht was rammed about 4:30 this morning 200 yards west of the Norfolk grain elevator pier by an oil barge. Barge skipper J. Miller Haldeman says the tug Pocahontas was lashed alongside the barge to the rear. The prow of the barge smashed into the anchored vessel. Haldeman says his lookout man reported that the Lone Star was not displaying anchor lights.

Skipper Haldeman says he was in the galley, partly dressed, when he heard the crash. He says he came on deck and saw wreckage floating off the starboard side.

Smith, House, Ripps, Beale Take UP Posts

Officially releasing its slate of party officers this weekend, the University party steering committee also set forth party projects for this year.

Miles J. Smith, junior from Salisbury, was elected chairman, following the resignation of Bob Perry due to a heavy burden of studies. Smith, former secretary-treasurer of the sophomore class, is chairman of the Elections committee of the Student Legislature.

Ernest House, who has served on many committees of the Legislature, of which he has been a member for quite some time, is vice-chairman, while Norman Ripps serves as treasurer and Annie Ben Beale fills the secretarial post.

Ripps, a senior from Bayonne, New Jersey, has served on the IFC, the Hillel cabinet, the Freshman Friendship council, and the swimming squad.

Annie Ben Beale, also a senior, comes from Greensboro, and is secretary of the senior class, member of the Legislature, member of the Coalition cabinet, constitutional committee, orientation committee, the Yackety Yack staff, and the YWCA committee. The latter two she also served on last year, along with the Student council.

Publicty for the University party is currently being handled by Chuck Hauser and Charlie Gibson.

Important projects presently being handled by the party are (1) Effort to gain more University party dormitory men, (2) Improved conditions in the quonset huts, (3) Extensive investigations of the following: Administration disposition of funds in Carolina Inn, Lenoir hall, Scuttlebutts, "Y", book exchange; veterans' fees, and system of housing priorities.

CPU Adds Three Men To Swelling Roster

Three students were accepted into the membership of the Carolina Political union at their meeting last Sunday: Herbert Alexander, sophomore from Waterbury, Connecticut, John Sevier, senior from Greensboro, and Robert Watson, junior from Winston-Salem.

The membership of the union now totals 21, which leaves nine openings to be filled. Membership is limited to 30 according to the constitution under which the organization has operated since its inception in 1936.

Pete Gerns, senior from Canton, Ohio, was elected secretary of CPU to fill the vacancy created by Jo Fishel's withdrawal. Dick Simpson, sophomore from Chevy Chase, Missouri, was appointed to the position of forum chairman.

Baldwin To Represent World Federalist Body

By Don MacDonald

Delegates from 17 state chapters of United World Federalists elected Russell G. Baldwin, president of the University chapter, to membership on the North Carolina executive committee at the group's first two-day state convention which ended in Greensboro Saturday.

Dr. Joseph W. Straley and Professor Henry P. Brandis, Jr., prominent members of the Chapel Hill town chapter, were also elected to the 24-member committee. Straley, in Chicago at a meeting of atomic scientists, and Brandis, recently appointed assistant to Dr. Frank P. Graham on the Indonesian commission, were not present at the convention.

Public Opinion Poll

In two days of business sessions and committee meetings at Woman's college, the delegates adopted a resolution calling for a public opinion poll to determine sentiment in North Carolina on world government. Additional resolutions adopted were an approval of the Marshall plan as an initial step towards permanent peace and the commendation of the appointments of Graham and Brandis to the Indonesian commission. The group also endorsed leadership of the United States in revising of the United Nations charter.

Deletion from the UWF by-laws specifically disqualifying Communists and Fascists from membership was approved by the convention after considerable discussion. The official board does, however, reserve power to bar from membership any person determined by a three-fourth vote to be antagonistic to purposes of the Federalist movement.

J. McNeill Smith, Jr., Greensboro attorney, acted as executive director as the convention opened with a meeting of the advisory board in the Alumnae house at Woman's college Friday afternoon.

Featured speaker at the Friday night session was Edgar Ansel Mowrer, Pulitzer Prize winning Washington correspondent. The convention ended Saturday with an afternoon address by Robert Lee Humber, Greenville attorney.

Coed Candidates Vie For Seats in Senate

Coeds will elect three representatives to Coed Senate, governmental body for inacting coed regulations and privileges, today from 2 to 5 o'clock in Gerrard hall. All coeds must present their I.D. card in order to vote, and all candidates must turn in an expense account to Katie Guion of Spencer dorm by one o'clock today, Al Winn, chairman of the election board said yesterday. Any candidates failing to do so will be disqualified.

The candidates from which two dorm girls are to be elected are: Anne Huske, Barbara Ann Pope, June Gilbert, Weddy Thorpe, Marjorie Yokley, Lynn Blanchard, Barbara Stockton, Katherine Royall, Anna (Chick) Slack, Scotty Dellinger, Ann Wells, and Edith Knight.

The candidates from which the town girls' representative is to be elected are Chris White, Nelle Ring, Jo Butler, and Betty Vashaw.

Final results of the election will be announced in the Daily Tar Heel.

Hill Hall Recital Will Feature Four

John D. von Canon, baritone, and William Kirkpatrick, tenor, will appear in the second student recital for this year tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock in Hill hall.

Accompanied by Gwen Howard, von Canon will sing "O cessate di piagarmi," by Scarlatti, and "Lasciatemi morire" by Monteverdi.

Charles Stevens will accompany Kirkpatrick, who will perform the following numbers: "Nel cor piu non mi sento," Paisielle; "Tu lo sai," Torelli; "Selve, voi che le spevanze," Roza; "Armor dormiglione," Strozza.

TICKETS ON SALE

The sale of reserved seat tickets to Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan," first major production of the Carolina Playmakers thirtieth season, will go on sale today at Ledbetter-Pickard's on Franklin street and at the Playmakers business office in Swain hall.

The play, which tells the story of Joan of Arc, is to be presented on October 29, 30, 31, and November 1. Hans Rothe, guest lecturer in the department of dramatic art, is directing the production.

Pi Beta Phi Sorority Elects Year's Officers

In a meeting held last Thursday night, this year's pledge class of Pi Beta Phi Sorority elected their officers for the coming year. They are as follows:

President, Louise Hodson; vice-president, Weddy Thorp; secretary, Sally Woodhull; treasurer, Charmian Griffin; scholarship chairman, Jean Roberts; activities chairman, Teenie Royall; historian, Harriet Sipple, and censor, Donna Barnett. The social committee will be Lidybet Myatt, chairman, Goodie Nufer, and Jane Pointer.

Students Capture "Beat Carolina" Banner; Free-for-all Bait Now Hangs in KA House

By Charlie Gibson

In one of the fraternity game rooms during this rush week there is a huge pennant 4 feet wide and 15 feet long which reads "Beat Carolina"; and the Kappa Alphas are proud of the thing.

What might seem like poor school spirit is really a major accomplishment. Among the telegrams with which anonymous William and Mary fans piqued such ardent Tar Heel fans as the DTH, President Frank Graham, and Charlie Justice last week were identical wires sent to most of the University fraternities defying anyone to take down a certain banner that would be hanging in Williamsburg as part of the propaganda for the big game Saturday. The terms of the wires were about as hospitable as those in treaties with Hitler, and slander flowed like wine.

How was the challenged accepted? There was nothing at all to grabbing the main feather from the W. and M. Indians' warbonnet, according to five modest K.A.'s and a friend, Randolph "Hookus" Smith, Dick Dunlea, Hunter Howard, Bill Creal, and Ken Bland, K.A.'s, and Emil Saleeby. After locating the supposed free-for-all bait in front of a sorority house, the conquering heroes calmly climbed a couple trees untied their loot, and walked away with it without bloodshed.

Strategy, they confess, did help. The two or three dozen William and Mary followers standing under those same trees became a bit inquisitive and asked what was going on. Since only coeds and fools contend with odds of seven to one, the sly invaders turned practical. While they were in the trees, the Tar Hellians announced that the pennant was going to a pep rally; and then when they were safe in their trusty Town and Country nearby, they announced that the pep rally would be one in Chapel Hill. Further remarks are censored.

Now "Beat Carolina" hangs for all to see along with the final outcome of the game—ample reason for William and Mary to go to pieces about childish telegram pranks and be two very sad people.

Phil Brito, Vocalist with Randy Brooks, Has Voice Like 'Fireside Chat to Music'

By Chuck Hauser

Phil Brito, featured vocalist with Randy Brooks and his orchestra, will be here the Tennessee weekend of October 31-November 1 when the "Golden Trumpet" plays for the Fall Germans.

The crooner's voice, which allegedly resembles Frank Sinatra's, was described by the New York Journal American night-spot reviewer as "a fireside chat set to music."

Other advance publicity on Brito, headed "Press Raves," included some of the following: "Boston Record: 'BOBBY SOXERS tore the tie off PHIL BRITO....they got his shirt too ..... THEY LIKE PHIL BRITO!'"

"Boston Post: 'BOBBY SOXERS altogether too enthusiastic ....THEY LOVE HIM DEARLY.'"

From the deluge of propaganda of which the above is typical, the following facts were culled about the singer's life:

1. His first public appearance was at a New Jersey Moose lodge benefit at the age of 13. This was in Irving, New Jersey. Phil lived in Newark where his his birth on September 15, 1918, family had moved shortly after in Boomer, West Virginia.

2. He took violin lessons as a child, but found it easier to play by ear. He is also an artist on the piano, clarinet, saxophone, guitar, and drums.

3. He has been featured with the orchestras of Lloyd Huntley, Jan Savitt, on various radio pro- Al Donahue, Freddy Martin, Jan Savitt on various radio programs and in the Monogram picture, "The Sweetheart of Sigma Chi."

4. He married Edith Dello Russo and they now have two children, Suzanne, seven, and Phil, Jr., two.

5. He doesn't like bobby soxers, and even goes so far as to sternly lecture his several sisters, all in their teens, on the proprieties of young womanhood from time to time.

A Job for the Election Board

The election of class officers is not too far in the future, and the Board of Elections should be formulating plans to conduct the election in an orthodox manner. Last year's method of the president of the student body appointing a few members of the student body to conduct the election caused much comment and necessitated a second election.

A bill authorizing the election for class officers, according to the constitution, must be passed by the Student Legislature and then the election itself is conducted by the Board of Elections.

To the persons familiar with the unpleasantness and antagonism that was aroused because of the manner in which the freshmen and sophomore elections were conducted, the need of a correctly conducted election is quite obvious. The election meeting was announced just a few days before it was held and it gave the candidates and the voters little time for preparing for an election. Instead of holding the voting by secret ballot, a hand-counting method by monitors was employed.

A strong segment of the members of the class felt very strongly that the election was not being conducted in a democratic and fair manner and they presented their case to the Honor council to take action. By the ruling of the Council another election was held after which there was still dissatisfaction and another election was anticipated.

Situations such as this can be alleviated if the Board of Elections exercises their constitutional powers and conducts the balloting according to the constitution.

Last year's procedure resulted in ill feelings in all quarters. It left a bad taste in the mouths of the freshmen and more than likely alienated them against voting in any future elections. The officers who were elected no doubt felt that they were not wanted by a large faction of the class, and the losing candidates sensed that coersion and unfair election procedure was used. But all of this can be alleviated if the Board of Elections takes charge this time and carries out the rules which govern elections.

The Listener Will Profit

Sunday the first radio program in the weekly series originated from the studios of the University Communication center. With this initial broadcast the tremendous amount of preparation of planning for such an endeavor comes to the attention of the public. It was a job requiring considerable skill and forethought to turn the Navy mess hall, Swain Hall, into the only radio department in the South and adapt it to all of the necessities of a radio station and the extras necessary for the teaching of radio.

Young, indefatigible Earl Wynn is the man who undertook the job and selected his key personnel for the Center. It was while he was in the Navy directing films for the training of Blue Jackets that Wynn realized the value of training films and became convinced that they had a prominent place in education. Director Wynn is equally convinced that radio has its own personal virtues in the task of educating the public.

The programs are tailored to suit the tastes of listeners of all ages and interests. For the kids there will be a program of "Great Music for Children." There is a weekly series of roundtable discussions on current events. Noel Houston, noted Chapel Hill writer, will be moderator of the series of discussions pertaining to writing as a craft. The talents of the students in the department of radio will be demonstrated in the series of "Thirty-three by Air," which presents scripts written by students, faculty, and alumni of the University.

The five program series of weekly broadcasts definitely lives up to their classification—public service series. They will be fed into radio stations throughout the state on a non-commercial basis. And the nature of the programs are such that they will be rendering a valuable service to all. The radio listeners will profit. The radio stations will offer programs that are not filled with commercials and programs that are of interest. The students in the department of radio will gain professional experience in the writing of radio continuity and in the technical operations of actual broadcasting.

World Government: Path to Peace

By Pete Gerns

"World government is a path to peace" was echoed by the writers who attempted to answer the current question of this column.

One student, Bonnie Simmons takes exception to the phraseology and intimates that "prerequisite" should be substituted for "path." She says in effect: "World government is not a "path" to peace. Rather, I would call it a "prerequisite," The word "government" implies a ruling body; hence World Government, a ruling body of the world. If the government is not sufficient within itself, giving rise to serious differences and revolutions, then more than one ruling unit has evolved, and government becomes a name rather than a fact.

Then, if true world government exists, and all people are abiding by common rules and codes, by virtue of the government itself, peace is a reality.. Peace will be more than a dream when there is mutual understanding between all nations. This understanding is World Government, and this government is peace."

Three writers believe that world government is a path to peace, rather than a prerequisite: Russell Baldwin thinks that "World Government is the only hope of securing world peace. The UN lacks adequate powers to maintain it."

Martha Aiken states emphatically that "World Government is the most plausible and possible path to permanent peace. This question is almost as rhetorical (but more optimistic) as "Do you think that civilization will be paralyzed or only crippled in another World War?" (That depends on who get there farthest with the mostest, Martha!)

"In considering the problems of world peace" write Bill Robertson, "we should be most practical and realistic, act in accordance with the limitations of the present stage in world history, which excludes the immediate possibility of a world state. We should make use of organizational forms of international cooperation..specifically the United Nations."

A very controversial question has been suggested for Friday's column: "Are long skirts here to stay?" All answers are to be handed in by Wednesday evening to the DTH office or the box in Graham Memorial.

I'd Rather Be Right

Politics Sour Editor's Job

By Earl Heffner

When Secretary of State George Marshall and Soviet Andrei Vishinsky agree on a point, international headlines blare the modern miracle. An analogous situation resulted here last week when Tarnation Tookie Hodgson and Mag Fred Jacobson both concurred in the belief that publication editors should continue to be selected under the present political spoils system.

Hodgson, who should know, said that removing the editorships from popular election and placing them in the hands of the Publications board—"as full of politicians as Tammany Hall" according to the ex-member of the board—"would be transferring the matter from a political frying pan into the political fire."

Plaudits indeed should be sent with orchids to Di Senate Leader Charlie Long, a former party leader, who listened to competent newsmen and brought the potential campus issue before the Senate. There the matter was temporarily slain for lack of support.

With men who know the Daily Tar Heel best, there is strong opinion that the newspaper will continue to be a vacillating organ incapable of rendering impartial analysis of political parties and their neophyte politicoes under the present conditions.

Last year's editor, Bill Woestendiek, campaigned vigorously to remove the editorship from its status of a political plum. He was aided in his unsuccessful drive by his associate editors, Eddie Allen, now a Charlotte Observer sports writer, and myself, former Observer reporter, sports writer, and desk man.

Under the present set-up, the newspaper is constantly subjected to bitter accusations of party leaders. Instead of weighing the value of a party story against the rest of the news for a particular day, the managing editor is expected to accord it the same play as granted another party on a similar story several days before.

For example: On Tuesday a party may nominate a candidate for a political office. For the same issue, the major nonpolitical news may be an address by a department head to a campus group such as the Di or Phi. As a result, the managing editor gives top play to the nomination.

On Wednesday, another party may endorse the previously mentioned candidate. Top story beside this is the approaching meeting of the Student Legislature. Since the candidate was previously mentioned, the story is played in its proper perspective from a news standpoint, at the bottom of the page perhaps. Party leaders become incensed, cry about DTH partisanship.

On Friday, a third party makes a nomination of a different candidate. This story gets second play because a football contest is to be played on Saturday, the date of publication of the DTH. Another party is angry.

Hence, a managing editor with aspirations to someday become the editor of the publication must subscribe as nearly as possible to the wishes of the party leaders whose very requests are tantamount to demands.

Should the managing editor, who is appointed by the editor, choose rather to publish a newspaper, the probable result is political suicide.

Thus the prospective editorship subtlely is held before the eyes of each managing editor. Under these conditions, a strong will is required for the newspaperman to adhere to his instincts and not to prostitute his reportorial integrity.

Since many persons on this campus have long bemoaned the absence of issues over which the voters may ballot rather than personalities as are now offered in each election, this problem of publication editorships is a vital matter worthy of party attention.

If the political parties are to function for the benefit of the student body, it behooves them to take a stand on this matter, to carry it as the fundamental oak in their platform.

Naturally, an alternative plan must be advanced which would remove the editor as far as possible from the political machines on campus. Once approved, the alternative would have to be intergrated into the student body constitution.

Yet, on a mature campus, certainly there exists competent legislators capable of assisting in the creation of a workable alternative based upon newspaper rather than political prerequisites.

To introduce a more personal note, I should like to invite letters to the Daily Tar Heel which would include suggestions. The tentative solutions may then receive proper consideration, may be integrated into a system which could be published for the consumption of the student body and its party politicians.

Mechanically, the Daily Tar Heel has made great strides. But journalistic improvement of any noticeable extent requires an altering of the present method of selecting editors.

DTH Not Appreciated

The residents of 902 W. Chapel Hill street in Durham don't appreciate the Daily Tar Heel, in spite of the fact that they live on Chapel Hill street.

According to a post card received by Owen Lewis, DTH circulation manager, the house at that address is occupied by "only Duke students." Therefore, according to Edna Babykin, who wrote the card, the Daily Tar Heel mailed to that address and intended for Dale M. Shephard "isn't appreciated."

Give People An Active Part

Dear Sir:

To say that I almost choked over my bacon and eggs at breakfast when I read Mr. McGirt's letter in the Friday DTH on Henry Wallace would only slightly indicate my reaction to that letter.

I believe that, if the University of North Carolina is truly liberal (and free-thinking), it will recognize Henry Wallace and his associates for what they really are. Mr. Wallace is, and has been, acting like a spanked brat ever since he was not chosen as a running mate for the late President Roosevelt in 1944. Since that time he and his cohorts have been heaping abundant criticism on our present Administration, but have offered absolutuely nothing in the way of constructive criticism and practical solutions to the problems of today. They have played the idealogical aspects of Politics and diplomacy to the very hilt, and it seems that they have at last run out of ammunition.

I was very glad to hear that "he (Mr. Wallace) has a living and practicable faith in mankind and in Americans." Mr. Wallace obviously does not recognize the obvious; that in this day of complex National States, the individual is no longer able to "throw his weight around" as was done, for example, in the days of early American colonization. I, too, have faith in mankind and in Americans, but I try to be frank with myself and with others. We have a Democracy here, but let us not forget that we elect our President once every four, mind you, four years. That's a long time. For example, we were at war less than four years—yet it seemed like all eternity. Our congressmen are elected for variable terms, and, if they are able to keep their mistakes from reaching us, we happily elect them again and again.

Just as a reminder, it took us two years to get from Pearl Harbor to the Gilbert Islands—two long years. So let's don't go off half-cocked and say we have a true Democracy—that is, where the people control the actions of their Representatives. There just isn't such a thing, anywhere. I do agree that if people could have an active part in their governments, wars would be prevented, but, as I have shown, even in a Democracy people don't take a truly active part in their government, and, if this is the case here, what chances have the peoples of countries which don't have anything resembling a Democracy of shaping their own destiny. Russia is a good example of this. You and I know that the Russians don't want to fight us, but what can they do about it?

In conclusion, I might add that if we rally around Henry Wallace so that America will regain her true direction, it will probably lead straight to H. . . .

Questions Housing

Dear Editor;

What is the policy of the University in regard to the placement of married veterans in Victory Village? I know a statement from the University in regards to it's policy would do much in clearing up some of the dissatifaction that exist.

Is it true that new faculty members are able to get one of these government houses in Victory Village at once, or do they have to wait on the "list?" Do friends and instructors get priority? Do couples with children get the better houses or do other persons get them? Who is in charge of placement of families in Victory Village and how does one go about getting in?

I have a personal reason for asking these questions: I have been trying for over a year to get in one of the government housing units in Victory Village and on my last report I was number 150 on the "list." The only movement on my "list" is caused by death or dropping out of the University. Maybe I am on the wrong "list." In a movie line you can eventually get in but if enough keep gouging in ahead the line or list (which ever it may be) the show will be over before you get in. I also hate to have to pay my landlady $35 per month for the use of a dingy 6 by 8 attic room with no privileges except sharing the bathroom. This rent and conditions are very reasonable in this colonial writers colony.

For the same money I could rent one of the government houses in Victory Village and have the privileges and comforts of a home.

Volunteers Taken

Dear Sir:

It seems to me that it's about time for some of these local football experts to stop condemning our football squad and do a little yelling for them.

If there is anyone who thinks he can do a better job than the boys on the squad, I am quite sure that said character will be welcomed on lower Navy Field most any afternoon by Coach Snavely.

Carolina Carousel

Williamsburg Memoranda

By E. Foo Giduz

So we've really got a ball team. The eleven hundred-plus Carolinians who witnessed Saturday's comeback classic are convinced of that. . . Both clubs may have looked a little ragged, but no one doubted the Tar Heels were the great ball club we've always known. . . . . The game must have been ok: Buddy of ours asked Coach Carl what he thought of the team's playing . . . . Whereupon the Gray Fox ejaculated, with a wide grin, "Pretty good, yep, pretty good". . And that, gentlemen, is no less than effusive for Snavely!

Nemesis of countless W and M-bound Tar Heels was the Jamestown ferry boat bottleneck. . . . A lot of "wise guys," Carousel included, decided to take a short cut, via the James river ferry near Williamsburg . . And timing our arrival there about an hour before game time, we found ourselves only about five miles from the stadium, but five hours away! . . Yep, twenty-two wagons. . er cars per hour, that's the ferry's capacity. . And we were about car number 88 in line. So had to dash clear down to Newport News and back to Williamsburg. . . . Let this be sufficient warning to future Williamsburg-bounders: Take the LONG way around! . . via Richmond!

"Sour-Grapes" Sam Beard, of WPTF "Moonglow" and "Breakfast With" . . . fame, was driving our buggy . . . And it seems the Beard didn't have a ticket. . . . A situation which the Carolina cheerleaders, (God bless all of 'em) remedied but quick . . . They just make a flying wedge through the main stadium gate and hauled the guy through . . . Shades of big league baseball in the second quarter, as some sidelines stand fan ran away with the pigskin . . . He nearly through the gate when agile judge Jobie Hawn caught him . . . And talk about hot! . . . Man, Texas had nothing on Williamsburg!

But that didn't hurt spirit any . . Myrt said cheering was about the best of any game yet. . . . A good half-time band show would have been nice. The Indians had a band, of a sort, but no uniforms. . Carolina's ace marching band could have really shined there. . W and M'ers did have one nice cheering stunt, though. . . Six freshmen, all in dogged-up Indian outfits, took over the whole stadium with their continous cavorting all around the field.

. . . . Enough for the Injuns! . . Bring on your 'Gators!

JEEP OVERRUN PAMPAS

Cleveland (UP) — Ex-GI's might not feel out of place on the vast pampas of Argentina these days, for Argentina has been sold 8,200 jeeps and other units by the Willys-Overland Export Corp. The jeep's four wheel drive mobility makes it a big asset in the interior of Argentina, where roads are poor.

DTH Not Appreciated

The residents of 902 W. Chapel Hill street in Durham don't appreciate the Daily Tar Heel, in spite of the fact that they live on Chapel Hill street.

According to a post card received by Owen Lewis, DTH circulation manager, the house at that address is occupied by "only Duke students." Therefore, according to Edna Babykin, who wrote the card, the Daily Tar Heel mailed to that address and intended for Dale M. Shephard "isn't appreciated."

Bobbing In Sports

—with—

Bob Goldwater

TWO-TO-TWO. That, in plain and simple victories and defeats, represents the score turned in by three Tar Heel outfits over the past weekend. On the surface, it doesn't look overly impressive—only a .500 average—but then scores don't always tell the whole story. And that includes this time!

The pair of wins were registered by Coach Carl Snavely's gridders and Coach Dale Ranson's harriers. But there wasn't anything too unusual about either result—both teams were slight favorites over their opposition.

But the biggest orchids of the week belong to the Tar Heel aggregation that suffered both losses on the weekend list. We refer, of course, to Coach Marvin Allen's soccer crew, which almost provided the soccer world with one of the upsets of the 1947 season in Annapolis last Saturday.

THE NEAR UPSET came about when the Tar Heel booters held a heavily favored Navy eleven to a one-all stalemate in regulation time only to lose in overtime by a 2-1 count. "I'm extremely proud of the way the boys played up there," Allen declared yesterday. Both Loyola and Navy had several games behind them when they played us. But our boys performed like seasoned veterans. We'll give anyone we run up against from here on a rough time."

What made the close battle with Navy seem even more spectacular is the fact that the Tar Heel booters had been blanked, 4-0, only the day before by Loyola. Thus the Middies, one of the top soccer powers in the country and unscored upon in their first two games of the season, were given even more of an edge against the Carolinians. But they were sure hard pressed to keep it.

RETURNING TO football, the Snavelymen also turned in one of their outstanding performances of the campaign, if not the most outstanding. And no less an authority than Carl Snavely himself attests to that fact.

"We're finally beginning to look the way we should," the head grid mentor observed yesterday. "William and Mary has a very good team, especially that fine line. But our passing came through for us when we needed it and that's what decided the game in our favor."

Snavely praised the whole team for its fine play but singled out flankman Kenny Powell as one of the top stars. "Powell set up our winning touchdown by recovering that fumble," the coach pointed out. "And he also did very well in rushing the passer on certain plays and dropping back to cover pass receivers on others."

As for the coming week, Coach Snavely belittles any talk of Florida being a breather on the schedule. "They have a good team despite their record," he remarked of the 'Gators. "And they have a fine passing combination with which to test our pass defenses. There aren't any breathers on our schedule—they'll all be rough," he concluded.

FOR A COACH whose team so completely dominated the weekend competition as much as his harriers did with Georgia Tech's cross-country crew, Coach Dale Ranson was not bubbling over with enthusiasm yesterday as might be expected. "We still need quite a few more first-year men for our freshman team," he explained. "Naturally I think the boys looked good on Saturday but we're going to need more runners if we expect to compete in both the IC4A and Southern conference meets on the same day. I sure hope there are some freshmen in school who haven't come out yet and who will now."

DESPITE A NUMBER of upsets on the past week's grid card, the Daily Tar Heel prediction board turned in its best showing of the season, although all far off on the Carolina score. Jake

Soccer Team Begins Workouts for Clash Against High Point

Bloody but unbowed after the two heart-breaking defeats suffered during their Chesapeake foray, Carolina's booters settled down to work yesterday afternoon to ready themselves for their home opener against High Point College Thursday afternoon on Fetzer Field.

Center half Gus Johnston and Goalie Al Williams, both of whom played all but five minutes of each of the Blue and White's losing efforts, were appointed co-captains for the tilt by Allen and will lead the Tar Heels against the Panthers.

The visitors boasted potent elevens before the war and will probably field a strong team on Thursday. The tilt will be the opening contest for the men from the furniture city.

Coach Allen naturally was disappointed over the outcomes of the two contests, but he was very pleased by the spirit and hustle of the Carolina booters during the two rough and tough tilts. The Tar Heel mentor was especially impressed by the performance of husky left fullback Frank Nelson.

The officials at the Navy contest unanimously agreed that "Nelson was as good a fullback as they had ever seen in college competition." Incidentally, Nelson played all the way in both contests.

Center forward Hank Pallulat and right fullback Porter Van-Zandt were the other Allenmen who went the roure in both games; goalie Al Williams and outside left Jesse Greenbaum went all the way against Loyola.

Cagers Settle Down To Serious Practice After Team Slash

Coach Tom Scott put away his paring knife yesterday afternoon and officially opened practice for Carolina's 1948 basketball teams.

Fifty-three men, including the returnees from last year's varsity and junior varsity squads and the survivors of the freshman cuts which ended on Friday, greeted Scott, assistant Pete Mullis, and newly appointed jayvee mentor Jim Hamilton.

Scott ran his large squad of cage aspirants through a threefold session which included large doses of limbering up exercises, drills on the various fundamentals of the game, and short scrimmages.

DKE, SAE, Kap Sig, Sigma Nu Score Mural Tag Football Wins

The top intramural tag football teams came through in fine style yesterday afternoon, as mural grid play entered its third week. A total of 26 teams saw action.

The feature tilts of the day saw undefeated DKE, defending fraternity champions cop their fourth straight with an impressive win over Sigma Nu No. 2, while potent SAE No. 1 topped Chi Phi No. 1, 27-0.

In other games, Kappa Sigma edged out Phi Gam in a thriller, 8-6, as Sigma Nu No. 1 was taking the measure of Zeta Psi No. 1, 15-0.

In other mural activity, play in the novice and open play, with all brackets moving ahead after a brief rest afforded the netters by the recent bad weather.

Play in all phases of mural activity will continue today according to schedule.

350,000 Fans To See Locals Play 10 Tilts

Indications are that the Carolina Tar Heels, win, lose or draw, will play to by far its largest crowds in history this season.

Three of the four games Carolina has played so far this season have been sellouts: Georgia, 43,500, at Chapel Hill; Texas, 47,000, at Austin; William and Mary, 20,000, at Williamsburg.

An estimated 33,000 saw the Carolina - Wake Forest game here.

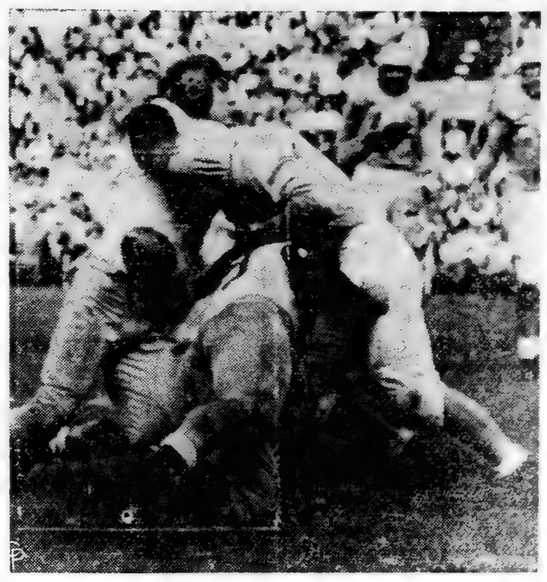
This week Carolina likely will play before another sellout gathering. Word comes that most of the seats have been sold for the Carolina-Florida game at Gainesville. Florida stadium seats 22,500.

There have been heavy advance sales for Carolina's three remaining home games, Tennessee on November 1, N. C. State on November 8, and Virginia on November 29. There are still seats on sale for all these games, however.

The Carolina-Duke game at Durham on November 22 has been a sellout for several weeks. Duke Stadium holds approximately 60,000 complete with temporary bleachers.

Little Opens Drills For State Jayvees

Coach Crowell Little put his Jayvee footballers through a stiff afternoon's workout yesterday in preparation for their second clash of the season with the jayvees of State College this weekend.



The locals, victors over South Carolina in their only game thus far, will journey to Raleigh to meet the Wolfcubs in a Friday matinee at Riddick Stadium. The State boys lost their opener to Duke, 7-0.

During the local practice session yesterday, Little put the emphasis on his running and passing offense with secondary attention being given to defensive play.

Javelin Clinic

Coach Joe Hilton of the track squad announces that a javelin clinic will be initiated this afternoon at 3 o'clock at Fetzer field.

Gridmen Hold Lengthy Practice; Florida To Promise Stiff Contest

IT'S ANYBODY'S BALL as John Kusserow, Columbia left half back, lets go the pigskin as he was hit by Penn tacklers in their game in Philadelphia. Kusserow was trying to snare a pass in the first quarter. Penn's powerful, unbeaten eleven took its third straight triumph by a 34-14 tally. (International Soundphoto)

With prospects pointing toward another hard game next Saturday against the Florida Gators, Carolina's Tar Heels wasted no time in getting back to work, as Coach Carl Snavely sent his gridders through a lengthy practice session at Navy field yesterday afternoon.

The Tar Heels, apparently heartened by their victory over William & Mary, sped through the workout with plenty of pep. Snavely let part of the squad off early, but the major portion of the team worked until it was necessary to cut on the lights of the practice field.

The game between Florida and the Carolinians is shaping up as an evenly matched affair. Coach Ray Wolf's Gators hadn't had much success this season until last Saturday, when they stopped a highly-regarded N. C. State eleven, 7-6, in Raleigh. The Gators, who operate from the T-formation, have been reported as having a strong club all season, but the win over State was their first of the year.

Prior to that game the Florida outfit had a losing streak dating back for a couple of seasons which had reached 13 games before the State victory. In most of those contests, Florida put up a good battle but never seemed to have quite enough to win.

Gators To Go

The Gators, undoubtedly elevated in spirits as a result of ending this streak, will go all out to stop the Tar Heels. The game will be played on Florida's home field in Gainsville.

Carolina also came in for its share of the spotlight this week with its 13-7 win over William and Mary. The Heels had to come through with a fourth quarter touchdown to win, but most observers thought it was Carolina's best game yet. The Indians definitely had a good club, and with a little more luck they might have gotten a tie or win out of the game.

The men of Coach Snavely came out of that game in rather good physical condition. There were no serious injuries, and all hands are expected to be ready against the Gators, barring injuries in practice this week.

Harriers Hold Long Drill After Win in Jacket Meet

The cross country team having tucked its first victory of the season under its belt, now must wait until October 29 for the next outing.

On that date Duke will be the team out to end the Tar Heels' two year win streak. The Devils have been none to potent thus far this season, but they have a great deal of talent in the form of Roger Neighborgal, Ralph Ellsworth and Henry Bullock.

On November 1, the Tar Heels will get their first stiff test when the University of Tennessee harriers invade Chapel Hill. It is the same Tennessee outfit that finished a close second to the Ransonmen in the mile team race last spring in the Carolina relays.

The Tar Heel hill and dalers spent yesterday jogging over the four mile course and will put in most of the week in speed tests and building up their endurance.

Volleyball Tourney Enters Second Week

The coed volleyball tournament swings into its second week of action this evening in the women's gym when three games will be reeled off.

Kenan and ADPi will start the evening's festivities at 7:15 o'clock. Smith and Tri Delt follow at 7:30 and Alpha Gam and Chi Omega wind up the night's competition in a clash slated for 8:25.

Graham Memorial Football Contest Won By Peterson, First in 1,850 Entries

The games were tougher, but the entrants were sharper last week, as T. J. Peterson, Jr., 206 Aycock, came out on top of a heap of 1850 entries to capture first place in the Graham Memorial football contest by virtue of his missing only two prognostications out of 20. SMU's upset of Rice, and Kentucky's win over Vanderbilt were Peterson's only slip-ups in the contest.

Entries for this week's grid quiz will be placed in the YMCA and Graham Memorial offices this afternoon. The form is also printed on the sports page of today's Daily Tar Heel. Contestants are again reminded that all blanks must be blacked in, not merely checked or "X'ed." Over 120 entries were disqualified on this count last week.

The general run of entrants counted on the Tar Heels to score three times. However, more than ten percent barely missed the correct tally for Carolina and William and Mary, by guessing a 14-7, or 14-6 final score.

Mark V. Barker, Jr., 114 Aycock, is the winner of a carton of Chesterfield cigarettes through correctly prognosticating the score, 13-7. Eight others, Ed Bryant, B. Pease, Rufus Hunter, Luther McCombs, Bob Tate, Blacky Trevathan, William B. Green, and Gurney Boren, also listed the correct prediction, however Barker's entry was the first to be handed in.

Hitting a high in pessimistic prognostication were 85 contestants who foresaw a third defeat for the Tar Heels. One of the greatest aids to all entrants was the fact that no games on the blank resulted in ties.

Runners-up to contest winner Peterson, with three games missed each, were the following: T. W. Elliott, Marvin Dillon, Harold Moses, Roscoe Strickland, William C. Morris, Jr., Yo-Yo Dickinson, Charles M. Howe, Jim Poole, Hardy L. Thompson, Bill D. Strayhorn, and Jess Dedmond.

First Program Involves Work

Behind the scenes on last Sunday's "University Hour" radio show, student musical and engineering talent helped produce the Communication Center's premier broadcast from studios in Swain hall.

David Arner, assistant in charge of music, composed and orchestrated transition music for the program. He also wrote the opening and closing themes for "The University Hour" and the dramatic series, "Thirty-Three By Air."

Studio engineer John Young sat at the control board during Sunday's variety show beaming the broadcast to radio stations throughout the state.

Martha Jane Pearsall donned earphones as turn-table operator for the broadcast.

"Major responsibility for the success of the University's broadcasts this season will rest with students who participate in these broadcasts," stated Earl Wynn, Director of the Communication Center.

BOBBING IN SPORTS

Wade led the parade with 15 for 20, thus proving the advantages of conservative selections.

Yours truly hit for 14 correct, including the solo dash on SMU over Rice. Bill Lamkin had 13, Bill Carmichael scored on 11, and Morty Schaap, despite a one-man victory on TCU over Texas Aggies, could only garner 10.

WE ALSO WENT to the trouble of keeping tabs on the selections of Paul Williamson, one of the nation's foremost prognosticators. And of the 20 games on our list, Williamson hit correctly on only 11.

The four-week totals show one change in the standings from last week's order. Morty Schaap gave up his third-place slot to yours truly, who continued his upward climb from fifth to fourth to third to. . . .

The totals on the 80 games to date:

	W	L	Pct.	GB
Bill Lamkin	51	29	.638	—
Jake Wade	50	30	.625	1
Bob Goldwater	47	33	.588	4
Morty Schaap	44	36	.550	7

"Mr. ABC" to Be Here Each Week

"Mr. ABC" is coming to the campus one day each week for the rest of the fall quarter.

"Mr. ABC" is an unknown Chesterfield representative who will stop students on the campus and give them free packs of Chesterfield cigarettes—on one condition. If the student is carrying Chesterfields, he will be given a free pack. If the student is smoking a Chesterfield when he is stopped, he will receive two free packs.

The time and place of "Mr. ABC's" appearance each week will not be disclosed in advance, so be prepared—"Always buy Chesterfields" from now on," he warns.

STUDENT DIRECTORY

Student directory galley proofs are now completed through the last names beginning with "Pri," Peggy Jurgensen, secretary of the Y, said today. These latest additions, as the ones previous, will be open for inspection today at the main office in Graham Memorial, the Information desk on the first floor of South building, and the Y building.

"All students included in this category should check these proofs to be sure their names and addresses appear correctly in the 1947-48 student directory," Mrs. Jurgensen explained.

Debate Council States Year's Forensic Plans

The University Debate council, after a meeting yesterday, announced its plans to discover new oratorical talent in prep ration for an extensive year of debating to include such highlights as a meet with Oxford university.* The English squad will appear here on Januaury 6.

Monday at 8 o'clock in the Dialetic Senate hall in New West try-outs will be held with all interested students giving three minute discussions on the subject "Resolved: That there should be established a world federal government." No previous training in public speaking is required, and applicants may chose either the affirmative or the negative side of the issue.

To answer any questions prospective debaters may have about these try-outs, an earlier meeting will be staged tomorrow afternoon in the Di hall at 5 o'clock by the Debate Council. However, this explanation period is in no way a prerequisite to entering the try-outs next Monday evening.

Present members of the Debate Council are Jim Taylor, Earl Fitzgerald, Blanton Miller, Charlie Hodson, and Maurice Braswell. In addition to their newly appointed faculty adviser, Gerald A. Barrett, professor of business law, one more faculty member and another student are soon to be selected to serve on the Council.

Debating candidates picked after the forthcoming try-outs will be excused from all classes and have their expenses paid to attend two porensic tournaments and to take a week-long road trip throughout the South. With the season opening November 15, there is considerable work to be done immediately.

Schedule

The schedule the University squad will face is as follows:

Saturday, November 15—Asheville-Biltmore college in Asheville.

Monday, December 1—University of South Carolina at Columbia, S. C.

Tuesday, December 2—North Georgia college at Dahlonega, Ga.

Wednesday, December 3—University of Georgia at Athens, Ga.

Friday, December 5—University of Florida at Gainsville.

Saturday, December 6—Miami university at Miami, Fla.

Tuesday, January 6—Oxford university, here.

During the first week in December more debaters will also be needed to represent the University at the Grand Eastern Forensic tournament in Charlotte. Around Easter plans already call for a trip to the annual Grand National Porensic tournament at Fredericksburg, Va. Perhaps during the winter term, another week-long road jaunt will carry the University squad to vie with leading universities and colleges in the North.

Laura Castellano Holds Title Role In Butterfly Opus

Laura Castellano, rising young American-trained soprano will sing the title role of Madame Butterfly (Cio Cio San) in Charles L. Wagner's production of Puccini's melodious opera scheduled to appear here November 5th, according to an announcement received yesterday.

Called by Wagner "opera's most difficult feminine role," this assignment is regarded throughout the musical world as one which requires an unusually fine combination of vocal and dramatic talent. The star handling it is required to be on stage continually after her entrance at the beginning of the first act.

During this time, she is expected to run the gamut of characterization from a coy young girl to that of a mature woman "whom the gods may destroy, but not defeat." Although she must convey these subtle changes from shyness to tragic despair in a scant two hours, she is aided in her task by music which Wagner calls the best work of a great composer.

Despite the exacting demands of the role, Bill Carmichael, a member of the student entertainment committee which is sponsoring the local appearance of the opera said yesterday that the committee feels that Miss Castellano will be found far from lacking in every respect. He pointed out that she has been a "holdover hit"in recent appearances in Ohio, West Virginia, and Indiana. Last year in a series of appearances with the NBC concert orchestra she was singled out as one of the season's best by such diverse sources of opinion as James Melton and the New York Daily News.

She will be joined in the cast by Edward Nayborg and Valfrido Patacci of the New York company, who will sing the male leads of Lt. Pinkerton and U. S. Consul Sharpless respectively. Other members of the 'all star' cast will be announced later.

The local performance will go on stage in Memorial hall auditorium at 8:30, November 5th. and tickets are on sale at Ledbetter-Pickard's and in Swain Hall.

San Antonio, Tex. (UP)—Sheriff's deputies and San Antonio police hurried to an abandoned adobe house after being advised a "stab victim" was in the basement. The "victim" was a clothing store dummy with a screwdriver wedged in its back and the clothing generously sprinkled with ketchup.

DeLancey to Head GM Jam Session

Norman DeLancey, ace trombonist with Johnny Satterfield's orchestra, will act as moderator at this afternoon's jam session in the Rendezvous of Graham Memorial. The first combo for the program will be chosen by DeLancey at 3 o'clock, from the lists of the student musicians registered there.

Nearly 150 musicians and spectators jammed the room last week for the three-hour session, which is under the direction of Jack Burney. If possible, those planning to participate, with the exception of bass fiddlers and drummers, should bring their own instruments.

Each group of six or eight musicians chosen during the show is asked to play three selections of their own choosing. No music whatsoever is used, making the program a true "jam session," and in nearly all cases none of the participants have ever played together before.

First Play in 'Thirty-Three by Air' To Be Broadcast Here at 8:30 Tonight

Student radio actors will broadcast the comic saga of a lost voice, "Pi R Squared," tonight over stations WRAL and WHHT when the Communication Center presents the first in the "Thirty-Three By Air" series of experimental radio plays from 8:30 to 9 o'clock.

The fantasy, written by Elliott Gruskin, concerns the voice of a famous radio thespian which gets trapped in a radio tube.

Background music was written by Alan Bergman, who will also conduct the orchestra during the show.

"Pi R Squared" has a large cast: Bill Moore, played by Bob Epstein, Sam Jones—Stuart Lucas, Mary—Alice Ross, John Shaw's voice—Bill Collins, Mrs. Shaw—Edna Dooley, Dr. Ohm—W. P. Covington, Josephine Dawes—Gloria Gunn, President—Jim Geiger, First vice-pres.—Bill Workman, Second vice-pres.—Bob Gutknecht, Frank—George Grizzard.

Playing the part of radio announcers in the play will be Bob Andrew, George Norwig and Bob Gutknecht. Others in the cast include: Jean—Betty Jane Blalock, Tough — Bill Workman, Mrs. Grey—Katherine Covington, Lady — Gloria Gunn.

Miss Jane Grills is director of the show with John Young as studio engineer. Avery Gibson serves as assistant producer. Sound technicians are Babe Hooks, Bill Workman, George Grizzard and Betty Jane Blalock. Announcer for the series will be Stuart Lucas.

SPEAKS TO BIRD CLUB

John Trott, University student, was guest speaker at last night's meeting of the Raleigh Bird club.

A member of the Chapel Hill Bird club, Trott gave a talk on scholarship work which he did during the summer at the Audubon Nature camp in Medomak, Maine. The speaker showed colored slides of photographs taken of plant and animal life at the summer camp.

IFC Votes to Send Men to Conference

In a session Monday evening the Interfraternity Council unanimously voted to send two delegates to the National Interfraternity conference in New York City next month.

Two representatives from the UNC fraternities, one to be a member of the IFC, will attend the nation-wide assembly of campus social fraternities, set for Hotel Commodore November 28 and 29.

The IFC also took action warning campus fraternities to submit their rushee lists as soon as possible.

In an unofficial vote the council members voted to oppose any action to revise the coed visiting agreements, already approved by the administration. A provision granting the IFC power to try agreement violations is to be tested for constitutionality before the Student Council Thursday, and permanent approval by the student legislature is still pending.

Family Statistics For Housing Asked

Married students on the waiting lists for Victory Village accommodations should keep the housing office, 208 South building, notified on the status of their family, according to an announcement today from J. E. Wadsworth, University housing director.

It is necessary for Wadsworth to have an accurate file on the number of children in each family in order to provide adequate living space as soon as it is available. All couples should report any changes in their status to Wadsworth immediately since the families with babies who require housing facilities will be given special priority over others waiting.

One Hand

Washington, Oct. 21—(UP)—The first one-handed electric typewriter manufactured for the Veterans Administration has been given to a Georgetown university law student.

The student-veteran is 34-year-old Albin Ulrickson of Fort Worth, Texas, whose left side was paralyzed from a battle wound.

Ulrickson says with a little practice, he'll be able to type almost as well as a person with two hands. The one-handed machine has the letter keys in the right half of the four banks. The figures and punctuation marks are on the left.

UVA Slates Dance For Friday Evening

The first in the fall series of University Veterans association informal dances will be held Friday night at the UVA clubhouse, according to President Hugh Wells.

Music for the dance, which will last from 8:30 to 12 o'clock, will be provided by a musical combo headed by Ned Reap, who will be making his first campus appearance this fall.

Wells stated yesterday that all tables will be cleared from the floor Friday to provide a larger area for dancing. Chaperones for the affair will be several married veterans and their wives.

Veterans who are not members of the organization are cordially invited to take this opportunity to visit the UVA club, which claims to have "the smoothest dance-floor in town."

Pilot Tricked Into Betrayal, Critic Claims

By United Press

Washington, Oct. 21—The Hearings on Communism in Hollywood took on the air of a fast-action movie melodrama today.

In a true Hollywood atmosphere of klieg lights and newsreel cameras, the session broke into a bedlam during the testimony of an anti-communist film critic, John Moffitt. Over a clamor of pounding gavels, hooting spectators and shouting lawyers, Moffitt said that a top-flight literary agent tricked a test pilot into writing an article about a secret, super-sonic military plane.

He identified the agent as John Weber, head of the literary department of the William Morris agency. The pilot, Moffitt said, was Chalmers Goodlin, who flew the super-sonic X-S-1 in its first 20 test flights at Muroc field in California.

Before Moffitt could get any further, Hollywood Lawyer Charles Katz, who represents a group of movie writers, leaped from his seat in the front row of spectators. He shouted, "Mr. Chairman, Mr. Chairman."

Chairman Parnell Thomas of the House un-American Activities committee pounded his gavel angrily and shouted that he would permit no interruptions. That started a din over which a raucous voice bellowed, "Throw the bum out."

Two policemen grabbed the lawyer under the arms and hustled him out of the room. As Katz reached the door, he shouted over his shoulder, "I thought this was to be a fair hearing."

Both Moffitt and dapper actor Adolphe Menjou, who preceded him to the stand, told the committee that Hollywood has many communists and fellow travelers.

Special Session of Congress To Be Di Discussion Tonight

The Dialectic Senate meeting tonight at 9 o'clock on the third floor of New West will be highlighted by a discussion on the feasibility of calling a special session of Congress to avert starvation in Europe by setting up a Federal Food commission to replace the OPA.

Paul Guthrie of the Economics department will speak briefly on this subject before answering questions for the open debate from the floor.

"Hot debate is expected on the issue," according to Charlie Long, Di speaker. "We appreciate the authoritative opinion Mr. Guthrie will have to offer during the argument as to whether the proposed Federal Food commission should set production quotas, fix prices, and allocate grain and other foods for export."

Also on the agenda tonight will be the swearing in of 11 new members who were approved by the Senate last week. Senator Gran Childress, chairman of the membership committee, has announced that there are still several vacancies in the Senate and has asked that all persons interested procure application blanks at the Senate hall in New West between 6:30 and 8:30 o'clock this evening.

The meeting tonight will be open to the general public, and the entire campus is invited to attend to express views on the issue freely.

Miss Payoff Contest To Be Run by WSSF

All dormitories, sororities, fraternities, and other campus organizations will have the opportunity to enter a contestant in the "Miss Payoff of 1947" contest, it was announced today by Wayne Brenengen, chairman of the dance committee sponsoring the contest.

Miss Payoff will be crowned at the Battle of Bands dance, to be held November 8 in Woollen gym as the closing event of the World Student Service fund campus drive.

All organizations will receive a letter from Brenengen, stating the regulations of the contest. Entrants names must be submitted to the information desk in the YMCA building by Tuesday, October 28.

Each organization will put up an entrance fee for its candidate, which will secure for her a certain number of votes. Other votes will be purchased by her supporters. The contest will close at 10 p.m. November 8, the night of the dance, and the winner will be revealed about an hour later.

The contest and dance are but one phase of the campus-wide effort to raise funds to aid students in devastated countries of Europe and Asia.

Student Council Will Test Coed Visiting Agreements

By Bill Sexton

Legality of the coed visiting agreements will be tested before the Student Council Thursday evening in a hearing expected to stir up considerable controversy over fraternity self-government.

At a meeting Monday the council agreed to hear charges that the agreements drawn up last week by the House Privileges board are unconstitutional. Specific fire is directed against the provision that frarernity violations of the agreements are to be tried by the Interfraternity council.

Controversy over wording of a minor provision in the Student constitution has rapidly grown to considerable proportion after the Interfraternity council voted Monday to oppose any removal of the Judicial power granted the IFC in the visiting agreements.

(No provision for trial of fraternity violations is made in the constitution. The IFC is merely assigned power to deal with all matters concerning fraternities alone. It is over the question of whether or not violations of the visiting agreements concern only the fraternities that the constitutional case has arisen.)

Information as to identity of the group filing the suit has not been made available. The council did announce yesterday that the hearing would probably be closed though witnesses would be admitted to present testimony on constitutional questions.

Last Thursday the legislature placed the agreements in effect for a period of one week until a complete review could be made, as provided in the constitution. It was learned last night that the regular Thursday session of the legislature would be postponed a week due to rushing, but no ruling on operation of the agreements during the interim has been made.

Student Body President Tom Eller has announced he will appear before the Council Thursday evening to present the executive viewpoint on the case, but he did not announce what his stand would be.

Coed Ballot Is 138 As Butler, Thorpe, Royall Take Seats

A surprizingly light vote of only 138 coeds out of almost 1,500 women on campus turned out yesterday to cast ballots in the general election of three members to the Coed Senate.

Results of the election released last night by Al Winn, Chairman of the Elections board, gave Jo Butler a seat in the women's governing body as a town representative, while Weddy Thorpe and Katherine Royall took the dormitory seats.

Candidates voted on in the election included 12 coeds vying for the dormitory positions and four from the town district.

Polls for the balloting remained open at Gerrard hall from 2 until 5 o'clock in the afternoon. The voting, however, was continuously sparse.

Stuart Pratt to Play In Recital Tonight

Stuart Pratt, head of the Music department of Meredith college, will appear in recital tonight at 8:30 o'clock in Hill hall.

Included on his program will be "Sheep May Safely Graze," from "Birthday Cantata" by Bach; Beethoven's Sonata, Opus 78; Chopin's Twenty-four Preludes, Opus 28; and the Liszt Variations on the Bach theme, "Weinen, Klagen, Sorgen, Zagen."

First State Showing Of "Saint Joan" Set

Word was received last night that the Carolina Playmaker production of Shaw's "Saint Joan" will be the first time that the Irish playwright's drama about Joan of Arc has ever been staged in North Carolina. The information came in a special letter from Samuel French, New York play agents, to John W. Parker, Playmaker business manager.

The colorful costumes for the play are being made under the supervision of Mary Jo Cain, graduate assistant for the costume shop, and many of them are already completed.

Circulation Manager's Life Not a Happy One, Wails Lewis, Bemoaning Fate as Holder of Daily Tar Heel's Dirtiest Job

"Where the h— is my Tar Heel?" an irate voice screams into the phone. On the receiving end of this verbal barrage is the university's most harrassed individual, the Daily Tar Heel circulation manager. The long-suffering student continues. "This is E. Alburquerque Zilch of 15G Parkwell Lane, and I haven't had a Tar Heel this quarter."

"Did you fill out a Daily Tar Heel delivery card in the registration line, Mr. Zilch? We don't seem to have your address in our files."

"Do you mean I have to fill out one of those stupid things every time I turn around? I was getting the DTH last year, and I thought you gourdheads would have sense enough to send it to me again this year."

"Unfortunately, Mr. Zilch, it doesn't work quite that way. With 7500 students, there is a considerable turnover in the address files from year to year, and consequently we must have entirely new listings each year. Now that we know where you are, we'll see to it that you get the paper."

After locating Joshua Q. Hillsborough, who first came to Chapel Hill as a young man in 1879, that target for universal scorn, the circulation manager, learns that Parkwell Lane which of course is not shown on our little 3 x 6 ft. map of Chapel Hill, is the first set of mud ruts to the right past Boodlewinkle's General Store. The following morning, however, young William F. Toteright, a most capable and dependable carrier, returns with the tale of woe that there are no numbers on any of the houses on Parkwell Lane, as is the case with about one-third of the streets in Chapel Hill.

"Do I have to call you rattlebrains every morning in order to get my DTH? Yesterday, you lying !!!, you told me I'd get my DTH "promptly" this morning. It is now 7:32, and still no DTH," is Mr. Zilch's quick retaliation.

The miserable circulation manager now inquires, "Does your house have a number on it?"

"Number!!! Don't talk foolishness, son. I've been living here nine years and never had a number. The other boy found us. Whyinell can't you? The house is in plain view, just as soon as you go down the third path past the end of the street, turn left, walk fifty yards to a tall oak, turn right, and push aside a clump of shrubbery. You can't possibly miss it, stupid. The very idea, talking about house numbers—absurd!"

Thus one learns that by two simple expedients: (1) Providing the DTH circulation department with your name and complete local address, and (2) placing the correct number on your house, or in some way identifying your house—he can be assured of prompt, efficient delivery.

In the event that the circulation department still falls short, call or complain in person to the circulation department, Daily Tar Heel, second floor Graham Memorial, phone F-3371. The office hours are 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. daily except Monday.

Governor Cherry Expected to Visit Here To Address Highway Patrol School Men

Governor Cherry is expected in Chapel Hill Saturday to speak at graduation exercises for the 120 men enrolled in the Institute of Government's third state highway patrol school of the year.

The ceremonies are scheduled to begin at 10 o'clock Saturday morning, Terry Sanford, training instructor in charge of the school, announced today.

"Governor Cherry," said Sanford, "has indicated that he will speak unless unforeseen circumstances arise."

Colonel H. J. Hatcher, commanding officer of the state highway patrol; Captain David Lambert, of Greensboro, director of the school; and Colonel L. C. Rosser, commissioner of motor vehicles, will be present to award certificates to the graduates. The men will have completed six weeks of training in traffic law enforcement.

"The graduates will not be sworn into membership of the state highway patrol," said Sanford, "until November 1. Addition of the new graduates into the patrol will bring North Carolina's highway patrol to rank as the fifth largest in the nation."

The school which ends Saturday is the third of its kind to be sponsored by the Institute of Government during this year. Before the state legislative session ended, authorization was granted for the doubling in size of the state highway patrol.

The Institute of Government, in charge of training and education of future state highway patrolmen, selected the 120 men after careful intelligence tests and physical examinations from a group of 1,200 men. The graduates will bring the total of North Carolina state highway patrolmen to 220.

Gold Plaque May Be Petrified

Secretary of State George C. Marshall has st received the 1947 Freedom award and a ower of praise from international leaders. e Award, which is presented annually by eedom House, an organization dedicated to ace, was presented to Marshall for projecting much-discussed plan for European recon-ruction.

The plaque which was awarded to Marshall ould have been much more valuable to him his plan was more than just a plan—if it were w being applied. But in Europe the Marshall an has been denounced by the Soviet Union just another American method to fight the ad-ance of communism. An answer of this type is be expected from the Kremlin, but even in r own country there have been not a few op-onents of the plan. It has been termed by one estern Senator as a "grandiose world WPA."

Secretary of the Interior Krug, one of the en in the know concerning United States ec-nomy, assures the president that the United tates can afford a $20,000,000,000 Marshall lan without seriously straining our resources. he need in Europe is great. Last week the ouse Appropriations and Armed Services Com-ittee returned from Europe and urged that the ation take immediate action before "a com-lete downfall of Europe."

But more committee reports are to come. One ow in the process, is being conducted by a com-ittee headed by Secretary of Commerce Harri-an. This report deals specifically with the haracter and quantity of aid which may be endered without damage. Another report will delve into the economic impact of foreign aid.

The Marshall Plan is a long-range program and it looks as though it will be a long, long time before the proposal will be adopted in the country of its author. It is quite evident that the committee reports will not be ready before Congress reassembles in January—which virtually relieves the President of the task of calling the Houses back for a special session to consider European aid.

A long delay in giving Europe aid at a time when conditions are such that aid must be forthcoming immediately in order to forestall a "complete downfall of Europe," may be closing the gates after the horse had gone. Then on the other hand, Secretary Marshall may be forced to give back the Freedom Award plaque in humiliation and take his place in American History with Woodrow Wilson as a statesman who advanced a plan which his own country would not accept.

Victimized

Remark of the Week: From Old Gold and Black of Carolina's Wake in the Forest:

"Let us not fall victim to the type of boasting to which the Tar Heels fell victim."

Don't be buddies with skunks, says the Arkansas conservation committee. Not only do skunks smell bad, but they often have rabies which is worse. Moral: bad as things seem on the surface they may be a lot worse.

Questions Architecture

By Joe Allan and Lee Knowles

On would expect to find the various elements of a grow-

One would expect to find the various elements of a growing progressive university so integrating themselves to form a recognizable consistent pattern—consistent in thought and action, resembling in its parts as in its entirety an ever evolving organism such as we find in all of Nature. Surely Chapel Hill is one of the first places where one would expect to find this process flourishing; however, upon investigation there are some startling trends which are in their very essence and nature a departure from this progressive consistency. One of these trends is in the field of architecture.

Recently the city fathers decreed that the prevailing style for Chapel Hill is to be Colonial, and more specifically, Georgian. The shops, stores, and offices are to have facades matching those already erected, such as the Dairy, the Bus Station, the Carolina theatre, and the Post Office. Every structure built from now on must conform rigidly to this standard form, with only minor exceptions. Now that this general plan has been instituted there is nothing that can be done but evaluate the decision.

Since the growth of the University has been and always will be the determining factor in the growth of the town it is well to review briefly the architectural history of the University. In 1850, one of the distinguished architects of his time, Alexander Jackson Davis was engaged to come to Chapel Hill and lay out plans for the further development of the campus. Many of his plans were executed, including the Playmakers theatre, the north facades of Old East and Old West. The designs he employed were in keeping with the very latest trends of his day. Subsequent architects have carried on in a like manner, designing buildings which conformed to the style then prevailing. Now the University campus is studded with buildings which express the bold fact of the transit stages American architecture has taken. Today this transitional growth has been stopped, a direct reversal of policy.

One of the main contributing factors toward the reversal of this old policy is the tremendous influence that Williamsburg has had upon the minds of many, many people. One of the most distressing facts about the restoration of Williamsburg is that the general public has misconstrued the real nature of the work done there and given the work a mistaken importance. It must be remembered that Williamsburg is essentially a restoration of the Colonial or Georgia style and even as such actually has far less authority and distinction than its original English models. In the last analysis what we see at Williamsburg is a museum of a particular style of architecture which was once practiced widely in this country. Now it seems that certain segments of the general public have become so enamored of this museum piece that they wish to duplicate this concept in their own community.

It is this infatuation which has led to the repudiation of our architectural policy here at Chapel Hill and represents a step backwards. This retrogression means only one undeniable fact, that the governing citizens of this community have failed to meet the challenge of modern life and have allowed themselves to seek an easy out of the situation by harking back to the past to find substitute forms, instead of searching out the present problems and adapting present and future construction designs to fulfill needs and intracacies inherent to Chapel Hill. This decision to use the Georgian style is a definite manifestation of a sterility of mind which is truly deplorable in a college community where the most intelligent and forward looking minds are supposed to be found and make their influence felt.

This present trend must be reversed and the orderly organic progress of development must resume its inexorable march onward. By listening to the heart and thinking with the mind we will be able to create for ourselves new forms suited to our present natural physical and cultural needs. Our architecture will be distinctive, indigenous to the community. Chapel Hill will be further noted for the individuality of its architecture and dynamic interpretation of life.

Tain't Necessarily So, but...

Strong US Can Prevent War

By Bill Buchan

An ex-marine, veteran of five years of various Pacific campaigns, with whom we talked last week was very firm in his views on the United States and Russia. He is one of the "war now" reactionaries who base their opinions on the theory that we're going to have to fight Russia sooner or later anyway, and that there is on reason to waste any time in going on and finishing the job now, once and for all.

The veteran, an ex-major, was as serious about his idea as are some of the people in this country who follow the line of thought that Henry Wallace is inclined to encourage...that of appeasement. These are the Americans who still maintain a firm trust in their fellow humans and who believe that just because the US does'nt advocate war, no other nation does. They are people who talk about fighting the Russians with courtesy and generosity. They are also the people who agree with Russian leaders when they call American senators, officials, and newspapermen "war-mongers."

Walter Winchell is an alert American who people either do or do not approve of. There are those of us who feel that he is one of the most loyal and conscientious of our American citizens. In a column this week, Winchell pointed out that critics were accusing him of "seeing Russians under every bed." They forget, Winchell commented, that he was also accused of seeing Nazis under his bed in 1937.

As long as the United States is able to stand on its own beliefs in Democracy, we are not going to be the leading power in starting any war, therefore, it is not likely that the marine's attitude if immediate war will develop into actuality. The appeasers, who obviously are stalling and preventing war as long as possible, will gain nothing by their profuse loyalty but give Russia and any other Communists with aggressive ideas, time to arm and prepare for battle.

War, regardless of the beliefs of many Americans, can be prevented. It can be prevented, however, only by the United States building and maintaining a thorough defense network on all sides.

It is altogether logical that no country, Russia included, will attack another if the country on the defense is throughly prepared for any emergency. Russia with all her big, threatening talk and aggressive tendencies, will not go on a conquering rampage through Europe if she knows that we are backing the "little countries" with war equipment equal to theirs.

The United Nations and world government are worthwhile projects, which in the long run will prove beneficial to placing the world on genial relations. There are few who will deny, however, that we made a gross error in staking our chips on the UN pile and literally destroying our armed might before the United Nations had a chance to change from diapers to sun suits.

If we are to keep a safe place for ourselves in the world, there is but one procedure for this country to follow. A plan that will give us an adequate army, navy, and air force with the money and supplies to back them into recognized leadership throughout the world.

In addition to armed power, we must have a well organized and workable civilian plan of defense that can be put into effect on short notice without any of the seemingly never-ending political tie-ups.

Before anything else, however, we have to get up from our comfortable seats and go into action. Co-ordinated, interested action on the part of each American citizen who appreciates even a little of the freedom we enjoy is essential.

If there are those who would disagree with any policy that the government sets which would assure us safety and continued freedom, they should be shown the nearest exit.

We're going to have to get on the ball, or else. And soon.

Lip Service To Monopoly?

To the Editor:

I suspect that Dr. Hardin Craig's recent Convocation address has been received in certain quarters with just as much enthusiasm as his last one and that it will be just as eagerly reprinted for distribution to the employees of some of our leading industrialists. But the Hosannas are not universal—and I would like to point out here why I think Dr. Craig's kind of thought extremely dangerous to the survival of the freedom he so sincerely champions.

Dr. Craig's ideological astigmatism prevents him from seeing that Communism and Socialism are two very different animals. Condemning "red tape and bureaucracy," he, by inference, includes any governmental interference in the economy as a part of his Socialist - Communist bogy. Bureaucracy is the great threat to our freedom and to its particular champions, the virtuous and industrious middle class.

Just what does democracy mean? Dr. Craig seems to think that the essence of democracy is absolute freedom of action for the individual. I reject this freedom—it is freedom for the powerful only. I believe in democracy that promotes freedom of opportunity for all and as much freedom of action for individuals as will not interfere with the free opportunity of their fellows. One of our great governors, Charles B. Aycock, puts it this way, "No man is so high that the law shall not be enforced against him, and no man is so low that it shall not reach down to him to lift him up if may be and set him on his feet again and bid him Godspeed to better things."

It is folly to suppose, in these days of vast industrial and financial combinations, that freedom of opportunity for ordinary men and women can be secured by a hands off attitude. Dr. Craig paid lip service to the danger of monopoly. Yet can he show us how to either efficiently break up a monopoly or effectively control it in the public interest? If he can, he is more ingenious than several generations.

The Exigency of the Age

To Satisfy the Desire

By Russell G. Baldwin

Is world government possible? That is a question on millions of lips the world over today. What is your answer? Before you decide, consider the alternative. Consider the present trend toward war and the inability of the UN to cope with the situation. If you consider these things fairly, you will say that world government must be possible. But still the question persists: Is World Government Possible?

To get the correct answer, we must consider the obstacles which lie in the way. Whether or not world government is desirable is no longer the question. The desire has been established; the next task is to satisfy the desire.

The chief obstacle to attaining world government is lack of faith. There are others, of course, but none so important as lack of faith. Defeatism and pessimism are deadly diseases; they destroy hope and incentive, courage and will; destruction is their reward.

Approach someone who says that world government is impossible and ask him why it is impossible. He will probably say that it is because only a few people believe in it. It will die of lack of support, he will say. He has adopted that defeatist attitude without questioning its logic. If you show him the results of the Roper and Gallup public opinion polls, in which approximately 55 per cent of the people of the United States are for world government, while less than 20 per cent are against it, and if you point out that most of the countries of Europe favor world government to a much greater extent than the U. S., he will probably shrug his shoulders and mention Russia.

You can't have a world government without Russia, Calamitas Citizen will say. If Russia wants war, there is nothing we can do about it. At this point, Calamitas Citizen thinks he has you up a tree. As a matter of fact, you are up a tree, but, at least, you're on a lower limb than Calamitas Citizen. It is true that Russia might refuse to join a world government.

At the same time there is reason for hope that she will join, if not at the outset, later on. It would be foolish to throw away this hope. Calamitas Citizen is so high up the tree that the winds will waft him away, but you are on the limb of hope and your chances of holding on are excellent.

Next, Calamitas Citizen cries down from his precarious perch that federal world government is impossible because of barriers of language and custom. By this time you will have reminded him of the great American experiment in federal government, but he will wave that aside by saying that the customs and language were the same in all the colonies. Then you can mention the fact that the sovereign states of Switzerland united under a federal government even though their customs were different and despite the fact that their languages were different (and still are).

By this time Calamitas Citizen will realize that you cannot be persuaded to join him in his swaying tree-top. If he possesses average intelligence, he will start climbing downward toward the limb of hope; he will join you and regain a belief in the future; he will realize that if we all row against the rapids we can be saved, but that if some of us give up and say it is no use, we will all go down to destruction.

You are Calamitas Citizen, unless you are actively working for world government. Shall you join me at the limb of hope or will you wait for the winds?

Is world government possible? I ask you. You hold the answer in your hands.

Umstead Acts Again

Cars Too Good For UNC Men

By Earl Heffner

Roder Sande, Victory village mudder with the tract record from Saunders 201 to his Mudville domicile, is not a relation of Earl Sande, jockey king of past decades. But this poor stepchild of UNC chuckled with glee yesterday ayem when the Daily Tar Heel informed him that Umstead was acting again.

Scanning the newspaper over coffee and waffles, Luckman-style, he said to his ever loving missus.

"Baby, no more must I be a victim of this capitalistic system. Umstead has spoken. We shall have a socialized campus strata of society."

Pouring his java with one hand while kicking around stray hair strands with another, Mrs. Sande, the family boss spilled a hot stream on her hubby's trousers.

"It would be better my marathon man should you delve into your Chaucer like a verray worthy husbande than fret your C-grade mentality with problems of capitalism and socialism. Let Uncle Joe care for his kiddies."

"You miss the point," said the fugitive from the cross country team. "I care not about Uncle Joe or even his brand of Turkish tobacco.

"I merely wish to point out that the Greeks are being brought to our level. No longer will they be able to drive chariots, vintage Ford 1947, for the great equalizer has arrived.

"Here in the upper left vicinity of the Daily Tar Heel, Scribe Bill Sexton, our campus Pearson, reports that a limitation may be placed on student autos on campus. He quotes the Honorable John W. Umstead."

Mrs. Sande, ever loving but ever more sardonic, spoke gently, "It is my recollection, my pet, that since we were united ..at the justice's door as it were ..you have enjoyed to its fullest our bicycle built for two. And my poor legs still hurt from the dual weight that I must peddle daily as you watch your varicose contracted while fighting for dear old Central high back in the late thirties. So what's it to you, bud?"

Rubbing his bearded countenance, friend student-hubby countered.

"Enough of such complaint. We both well remember my physical breakdown on Seperation hill at Fort Leonard Wood. There we had no automobiles either.

"Soon we may have none here. For the solons have taken dead aim at this great evil.

"Why should a man be allowed to set himself up as one of the patrician class merely because he has an automobile that did not break down during the great war? It's uniust. Moreover, it works a handicap on the poor city merchants.

"Have you noted that on football game week ends, our wealthy patrons of the game are unable to park their vehicles in order to purchase a lucious sandwiche?"

"And for fifty cents," remarks his wife.

But Mr. Sande doesn't counter this unfair observation.

Convinced that the automobile owners are becoming the vanishing Indians of William and Mary, he grabs up his crossword puzzle and departs for class.

To himself he mutters, "To hell with the Bill of Rights. If Umstead says that we shouldn't have automobiles, then we shouldn't have 'em."

Greeting the postman at the general delivery box of the post office he gathers in his mail. Dental bills. Doctor bills. Clothing bills. And a letter from the contest editor:

"We are pleased to inform you that for your selection of your favorite politician we are sending you a 1948 Coedmobile."

To the home-castle he rushes.

"Wife of mine," he ejaculates. "We have won a car!"

"Trade it in for a bottle of milk and loaf of bread," says she. "Umstead won't let you keep it."

"And why not," answers Rodger Sande, student. "My attitude is correct. What's this guy Umstead got to say about my rights anyway? Pop pays our taxes."

Drunk Horses?

Raleigh, Oct. 21—(UP)—The North Carolina laws say nothing about spirited horses. But persons driving horses under the influences of spirits had better whoa down.

One of the latest rulings by Attorney General Harry McMullan says it is a criminal offense to operate a horse-drawn vehicle of any sort under the influence of intoxicants.

Another ruling states that only unmarried persons may marry in North Carolina. Where it appears that a valid marriage exists under the laws of another state or country McMullan says, the persons can't get a marriage license in this state.

Branch of NAACP Being Formed Here

A new branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is being formed in Chapel Hill. Meetings will be held at the Colored community center every second and fourth Sunday of each month at 8:30 o'clock. The first meeting will be held Thursday, October 23. All interested people, both students and townspeople, are invited to attend.

The Sporting Picture

Super Spies

To the average Joe fan who weekly attends college football games, what goes on on the field of play is little more than twenty-two stars of a pair of colleges conducting an organized madhouse. Yet, believe it or not, there is more to the game than meets the eye, and one of its leading complexities is that of scouting.

Contrary to popular opinion, scouting is not quite the clandestine activity magazine cartoonists and radio comedians make it out to be, with present day footballists recognizing it as a science of the highest nature which most of the nation's coaches consider adds polish and interest to the game. The scouts do not use dark glasses, beards, or periscopes, as might be supposed, but instead are guests of the schools and colleges they are spying on, and get those fifty yard line seats everyone drams of. Which are all the better to see you with.

The importance of scouting can be easily demonstrated by such grid clashes as the Carolina-Georgia game of this year in which each team lay in deadly ambush for each other with fiendish defensive plans that left little to be desired. The result was almost a stalemate.

The fact that little Choo Choo Charlie Justice has yet to scamper the length of the field this year can be somewhat attributed to scouting. Justice last season raced to countless touchdowns before the opposition knew where the trouble was coming from. This year teams have had a chance to reorganize and after sitting up nights for the past months, have devised somewhat successful measures of coping with Justice's amazing running skill. Georgia came up with the brilliant idea of charging its backers, preventing the Asheville flyer from ever getting started, while Duke last season went so far as to concede it was inevitable that Justice would break loose, and therefore played its safety man some forty yards from the line of scrimmage at all times to hold Choo Choo to thirty or forty yards at a clip.

Stopping the Greats

The ability of a scout has stopped many other great backs in some of their biggest games. The New York Giants neutralized Doc Blanchard in the College All-Star game this fall, by fighting fire with fire. The New Yorkers bulldozed their defensive backers straight into the hole everytime Blanchard carried, which resulted in some ghastly head banging, but stopped big Doc in his respective tracks.

Duke is another school who points for great stars, as mentioned before, with their classic example of success being the day many years ago the Blue Devils did everything short of massacre Beattie Feathers, now coaching State, in a year that Feathers was the Jack Armstrong of the day.

Not that scouting is the answer to all evils; for Pennsylvania worked for one solid year one time just to devise tactics to render the immortal Red Grange harmless only to have the great one score four times in the first twelve minutes. Such things can be discouraging.

The majority of colleges use their own coaches and alumni for scouting purposes, but there are such things as professional scouts for hire in a case where a team can't spare enough men for the job, or where distance may prevent the sending of a man. Notre Dame a few years ago used the biggest scouting detail of all times by sending 11 operatives to take a look at Army each covering a separate position. They had a useless trip though, for Blanchard, Davis and company were not impressed by their quality or quantity and proceeded to trample the Irish by some astronomical figure.

Local Tactics

The men who scout Duke for the Tar Heels see the Blue Devils play every Saturday during the season before the game, and by the time late November rolls around, they are well enough informed to even tell you who on the team has split personalities. These coaches collect each and every play Duke runs in their nine games prior to the big clash and probably get to know the Methodist plays twice as well as most of the Devil linemen. They notice the tendencies of each and every ball player who will possibly get into the game against Carolina—catching little habits such as a certain back's continually cutting to the right when moving into the secondary or the way a blocking back shuttles or shifts slightly on certain running plays. All these go into the little black book for future reference. So good are some scouts that a Duke halfback once asked what his favorite running play, was quick to reply, "Ask the Carolina scouts, they know better than I do."

Once the field work is completed, the scouts retire home to check notes and organize their report to the head coach. Together they formulate the offensive and defensive plans for the week which are first introduced to the team on Monday afternoon. Then for a week scrubs and jayvees become Blue Devils which brings to mind Max Spellman of vintage 1946 who portrayed everybody from George Clark to Charlie Trippi all in one person which is a serious drain on anyone's personality.

By Saturday, the Tar Heels know all about their opponents the scouts have been able to tell them. The scout at point retires to a crow's nest position high above the stadium, where during the course of the game he observes his study of the season, and relates to the bench, by telephone, sweet little nothings concerning possible switches to cope the situations that may arise.

In turn for all this, the scout receives little, that is in the way of physical plaudits from newspaper and radio, but in winning, has the satisfaction of a job well done, and perhaps the thanks of some tackle who found Lou Gambino or Fred Folger running right into his arms all afternoon long. If his team happens to come out on the short end, the scout has at least got a good start for the next year. Win or lose, much credit should be reflected on this man behind the scenes.

After all, where would the Lone Ranger be without Tonto?

In Dubious Battle

The Tar Heel football team takes a vacation with play to the land of Eastern Sunshine this weekend to do dubious battle with the popular Gators of Florida in Gainesville. Popular, that is, with anyone except never quite genial State College whose Wolves of Coach Ray Wolf won thier first game in the last fourteen from last Saturday night in Raleigh

The Gators were a one-play team in this encounter with a Ivd

All Mural Grid Tussles Won By Shutout Scores

All 14 of the intramural tag football contests were shutout jobs yesterday afternoon as mural play continued on the University gridirons. Close and exciting tilts were the order of the day with sports-minded participants beginning to feel the strain of close competition.

Alexander's No. 1 grid team came through in an overtime period to edge by the Wesley Rockets, 1-0 in the battle royal of the afternoon.

Everett dorm finally eased by Steele's team by a touchdown margin, 6-0, with Don Robertson carrying the ball over for the lone tally of the ball game. Another 6-0 score was the story of Quonset Hut's victory over Old East dorm in a thriller that saw Tom Hollingsworth cross the goalline with a six pointer.

Tom Smith recovered a fumble for a safety to give Mangum their first two points in an exciting clash with Whitehead. Mangum later pushed over a touchdown to win by an 8-0 score.

In the high scoring clashes of the afternoon, Lewis' gridders trounced Graham dorm, 40-0, as Jim Mocks turned in an excellent offensive game by scoring twice and kicking an extra point, while the Grads were overwhelming Brockwell, 39-0.

The high scoring honors of the day's play went to Dick Bennett of the Mud Dobbens who trounced Ruffin dorm, 32-0. Bennett crashed over the double white line for three TD's and booted an extra marker.

Competition continues this afternoon in both tag football and tennis divisions.

Ping Pong Play In Final Stages

Play in the Graham Memorial ping pong tournament is nearing the final stages and several entries have already gained the final rounds of both singles and doubles.

In singles competition, Bob Goldwater moved into a finals berth on the unbeaten side of the double-elimniation tourney by downing Archie Goodwin, 17-21, 21-15, 21-19. He will play the winner of the match between net stars Ray Morris and Clark Taylor.

Taylor advanced into the semi finals yesterday by defeating Dave Boak, 10-21, 21-11, 21-12. Morris, the tourney favorite, made his way into the round of four last week.

In Doubles Finals

Doubles play yesterday saw Jim Jackson and Goldwater reach the finals with a hard-fought, 22-20, 21-17 victory over Andy Lavin and Goodwin. The other finals berth will be filled today when George Whitted and Burt Brown oppose Charlie Stevens and Frank White.

In the once-beaten side of the singles tourney, play is progressing slowly and tournament director Nancy Tucker warns that forfeits will result should contestants fail to play off their fifth and sixth round matches by today.

Leading the way among the one-time losers in the race to the finals in the loser's bracket are Lavin, Goodwin, Boak, Jackson, Whitted, Tom Wadden, and Chuck Hilty.

The tournament champion will be decided when all but one competitor have suffered two loses. The loser of the unbeaten finals will play the winner of the once-defeated bracket for the right to challenge the unbeaten winner for the tourney championship.

Governali Swapped In Pro Grid Trade

Boston, Oct. 21——(UP)—The biggest deal of the National Football league season was announced here today. Passing ace Paul Governali of the Boston Yanks has been traded to the New York Giants for fullback Bill Paschal and the draft rights to captain George Connor of Notre Dame.

Owner Ted Collins of the Yanks has been blessed with two of the top passers in the league, but has nothing else. Now he has weakened and given up Governali, moving Boley Dancewicz, former Notre Dame passing star into his first team lineup.

Monogram Movies

The Monogram club will sponsor the movies of the Carolina-William and Mary football game at Memorial hall at 7:45, Thursday night.

President Len Szafaryn cordially invites all interested to attend the weekly function.

Tar Heels Work Hard For Florida Tilt; Jayvees Polish Offense For State Contest

Tar Babies Seek Second Straight

Jayvee grid mentor Crowell Little sent his squad through another brisk workout yesterday afternoon as he pushed preparations for the Tar Babies' meeting with N. C. State's Wolf Cubs in Raleigh Friday afternoon.

The Jayvees again concentrated on polishing their offense in order to smooth out the rough spots revealed in it during their tilt with the South Carolina Bantams two weeks ago.

Coach Little as yet had no idea of whom he would take to the capital city for the State clash. However, he disclosed that he intended to take a squad of around 40 men.

Since varsity mentor Carl Snavely intends to take around 37 or 38 men to Gainesville, Florida for the Tar Heel-Gator game, quite a few fourth-string varsity men will probably be available to bolster the Tar Baby lineup for the State contest.

The Jayvees will be after their second victory of the season against the State junior varsity. Coach Little's charges turned in a 13-0 triumph over the Bantams of South Carolina in their opening clash of the year.

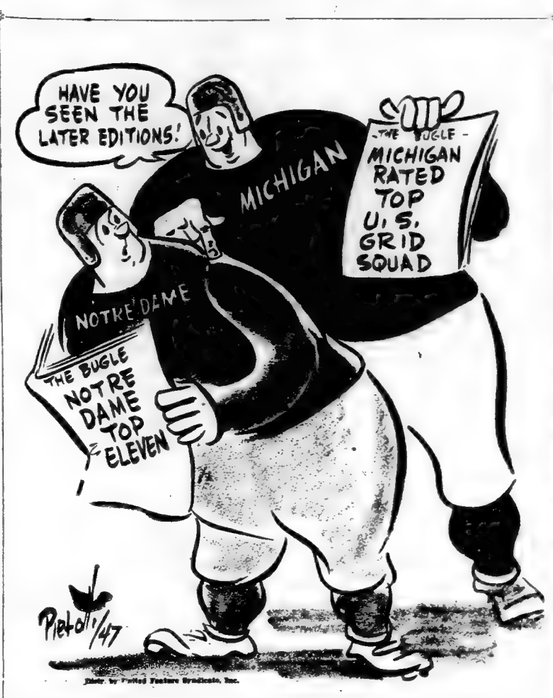
Chi Omega, Kenan Cop Coed Contests

The Chi Omegas turned in the top performance of the coed volleyball play last night by downing the Alpha Gams, 28-22, but not before the contest was forced into an overtime.

The score was knotted 20-20 at the end of the regulation game, but the winners put on an eight-goal spurt in the five minute extra period to capture the contest.

In other games, powerful Kenan dorm turned in an impressive 45-11 win over outclassed AD Pi, to give notice that they would be right up front in the fight for the coed championship.

The third game of the evening saw the Tri Delts win by forfeit from Smith. Play in the league will continue on Thursday night.



University Student Has Big Fish Story

Fred Sternberger of Wilmington, a student at the University, is the first college man to cop a prize in the $15,000 Southeastern North Carolina Fall Fishing rodeo.

The judges have announced that Sternberger carried off the first week's prize for pompano with a husky specimen hooked from the surf at Wrightsville beach.

The prize will enable the 23-year-old college student to go fishing for more awards.

Carolina Racquetmen to Oppose Davidson In Off-Season Practice Encounter Friday

Carolina's powerful tennis team takes to the varsity courts this Friday for an off-season practice match with Davidson, Coach John Kenfield announced yesterday.

Those playing for the Tar Heels will come from a list of nine members of the 1947 outfit that finished in the runner-up position in the Southern conference. Clark Taylor, number two on the team last Spring, will play number one for this encounter.

Others who may see action in either singles or doubles are Ray Morris, Stan Gruner, Heath Alexander, Jack Kenfield, Charlie Rice, Don Peck, Duke Wilder, and Bert Ingram. Missing will be Carolina's top netter, Vic Seixas, and Don Skakle, both of whom are out for basketball.

Davidson will be led by Bo Roddey, one of the state's top tennis stars. The clash between Taylor and Roddey, both of whom performed in the nationals at Forest Hills this year, looms as a very even struggle.

The Tar Heels will also play one other practice match during the fall quarter, that coming over the Virginia football weekend when the Blue and White racquetmen and the Cavaliers battle in their annual fall net engagement.

Snavely Authors Magazine Article

Coach Carl Snavely is the author of an article entitled "The Line on Offense" which appears in the October issue of "Southern Coach and Athlete" sports magazine.

The accompanying editorial comment discloses that the article is the first in a series to be published in successive issues. Of Snavely, the editors write. "Football has no closer student or harder worker."

Tune in WDUK's new sports show every afternoon, Monday through Friday at 1:20 o'clock.

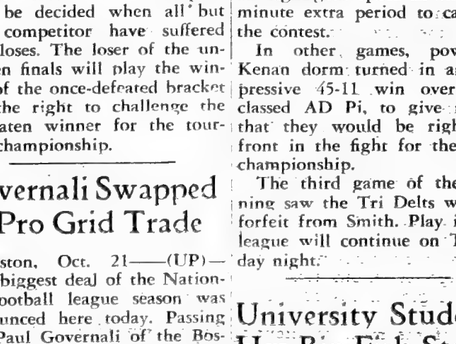
Carolina Practices For Gator Passing

Coach Carl Snavely speeded up the drills for his Carolina Tar Heels at Navy field yesterday as the number of practice sessions before the team's game with Florida in Gainsville grew fewer.

In an effort to get a large amount of work done in a minimum time, the Tar Heel mentor split his squad into several groups, each concentrating on a certain phase of the team's game. The boys changed groups throughout the afternoon so that all got in some work in each department of the team's play.

One of these groups showed the Carolina regulars on defense against plays from the T-formation, the style of attack which Florida Coach Ray Wolf employs. The T-formation will not be new to the Tar Heels. Georgia and Texas each ran from that formation, with the latter enjoying great success against the Carolina defense.

Coach Snavely, mindful that any team coached by Ray Wolf turns up with a good passing attack, had some of his boys working on pass defense. The Carolina aerial game, which has been the Tar Heels' most potent offensive weapon thus far, also received attention.



Work on Ground Game

When the Carolinians were not working on their defense, Snavely had the team running their own plays, most of which were on the ground yesterday. Carolina's running game showed signs of improvement in the victory over William and Mary, and the Tar Heels may tend to rely on it more than their passing from now on.

Still another feature of the team's play that received a checkup was the punting. Charlie Justice and Johnny Clements were the boys doing the most booting, and Justice and Jack Fitch looked good at running back the boots.

The squad was not at full strength yesterday, with a number of players being present in light togs. All are expected to be ready for the Gators.

ARE FOOTBALL PROS "SOFTIES"?
The boys who play for pay, says Stanley Frank, are often thrown for a loss by the tiniest personal crises. They develop more complexes than any psych major ever heard of. But Red Smith, the New York Giants' line coach, knows how to baby the bruisers . . . and make 'em outdo even Frank Merriwell himself when it comes to the old college try. Don't miss the amusing article in this week's Post about the fellow who is pro football's one-man court of human relations.

Craig's 'Lip Service To Monopoly'

tions of economists. But, as another alternative, there is the "socialistic" TVA, which has forced power monopolies throughout the Southeast to lower their rates, without endangering their profits. Has TVA threatened our liberties? Has it not meant new freedom for the people of the Valley?

Trying to face these same problems, complicated beyond measure by the ravages of war, a number of Western European countries have extended the area of government participation in the economy. Has this meant suppression and tyranny? Dr. Craig's admission that complaints in Britain were of inefficiency and not of Socialism is significant. Though Dr. Craig did not mention it, the British Government is actually receiving heavy criticism today because socialization is not proceeding faster. Britons still control their own free government; their historic liberties are in no danger; but the economic freedom of the few has been restricted so that the opportunity of the many can be expanded.

A friend of mine who has recently spent a year in England (and who has never been suspected of "radical" tendencies) told me only a few days ago that the majority of the British people are unquestionably freer than formerly. And this is Socialism.

The real issue in the world today is between democracy and totalitarianism, and as for Europe, the choice is between democratic Socialism and totalitarian Socialism. We might as well face the fact that Socialism is the last bulwark of personal liberty in Europe. It is under attack from within and from without, and if it falls, we will stand almost alone in the world. Shall we also join in the attack? Certain Republican leaders have already threatened to withhold operation of the Marshall Plan, unless Europe goes back to good old free enterprise, which is now absolutely impossible.

Shall we alienate the only other forces in the world that stand for the integrity of the individual and steer blindly for destruction, praising free enterprise? Or shall we recognize the changing role of democracy in a changing world, champion those democratic nations which are today enlarging the boundaries of human freedom and opportunity, and view without prejudice new solutions to our own problems? This is not only the avenue to our own Renaissance; it offers us a good chance of saving our skins.

Men who know exactly what they want have always frightened their fellows with words. For many years after the Civil War, anyone who advocated real free public education in this state was speedily shut up by constant repetition of the word "Negro." Today the word is "Socialism." It is especially disappointing to see men of sincerity and good will zealously singing songs composed (or at least popularized) by the National Association of Manufacturers and others who measure truth in terms of dollars and cents.

named Hunsinger, all-service All-American a few years back, galloping three score and seven yards for a touchdown before most of the patrons were even in their seats. Another Florida player whose name has been lost in the rush, then entered the game to add the extra point which became the margin of victory. State tallied a touchdown in the second period, but failed as miserably in the try for the conversion as they did on two later field goal attempts. If State could kick the football about as well as they kick about Charlie Justice, they might not lose 7-6 ball games.

Even though they won, there is not too much that can be said about the Florida boys, except that they are coached by an awfully nice guy.

Just like a Hollywood set, with cameras and lights trained on the principals, is the scene at the Un-American Activities Committee hearing in Washington where alleged Communist infiltration of the movie capital is being probed. On the stand (left) is Sam Wood, the famous producer who charged that several prominent members of the Screen Directors Guild had "tried to steer us into the red river." At right, seated behind bench facing witness (l. to r.) are these committee members: Rep. Richard Vail (R-Ill.); Rep. John McDowell (R-Pa.); Rep. J. Parnell Thomas (R-N. J.), committee chairman, and Rep. Richard Nixon (R-Calif.). In the foreground are members of the committee counsel. (International Soundphoto)

Taylor Shows Grim Outlook OfCommunist

By the United Press

Washington, Oct. 22—Bitter, anger-filled words failed to quench the flames in the hearts of movie-star Robert Taylor's feminine admirers today as Taylor blasted Hollywood Communists before the House committee on un-American activities.

The actor, grim and dead-serious, stated flatly that he would never work in a film which employed a single Communist and that if he had his way he would fire all the Communists now working in Hollywood and send them back to Russia.

He added, however, "I have seen more evidence of Communism in Hollywood in the past four years than ever before." Taylor went on to deny reports that anyone connected with the government had ever high-pressured him into appearing in the controversial moving picture, "Song of Russia," which has been accused of Communistic tendencies.

In addition to Taylor's testimony, the congressmen heard one-time Communist Howard Rushmore tell how in 1939 Communists boycotted a film which they thought was anti-red.

Hollywood author Morrie Ryskind made the accusing statement that, "You'd have to be deaf, dumb, and blind not to observe Communism in Hollywood!"

The committee room in the House building, stifling under the heat of kleig lights, was almost emptied of spectators when Robert Taylor walked out after giving his testimony. The observers of the proceedings, almost all women of varying ages, started lining up two hours before the session opened to see their Hollywood idol.

Few of them heard what the star said after his testimony began, due to the abundance of "oh's" and "ah's." His first sentence was the only one which rang clearly over the room, as he answered the query as to how long he had been an actor.

"I have been employed as an actor since 1934," he replied. The rest was lost.

At the close of today's investigation, the committee released an interesting preview of coming attractions. Additional evidence of wartime spying by Communists in the movie capital was promised with the coming testimony of Robert Montgomery, Gary Cooper, Ronald Reagan, and George Murphy tomorrow.

Chairman J. Parnell Thomas also promised that within the very near future he will put on the record the names of at least 75 prominent Hollywood Communists.

Councils Meet In Secret To Discuss Dropping Students' Appellate Powers

In a secret and unprecedented joint meeting of the three campus judiciary bodies last night, the Student council was reportedly asked to relinquish its constitutional function of hearing appeals from the Men's and Women's Honor councils.

The Daily Tar Heel has learned that an undercover move is underway to eliminate the Student council as an appelate court. With strong support from the two honor councils, the action would send student appeals from council decisions directly to a faculty board, leaving the Student council with the duty of hearing cases on constitutional questions only.

Member of the Student council are not permitted to release any information on activities at council meetings, but the calling in of the other two councils to discuss the proposed change made possible a leak in information. The action was not intended to receive publicity.

A proposed amendment to the constitution eliminating the Student council appellate power received a slight majority in the general election last spring. The vote was 1447 in favor to 1326 against, but lack of a two-thirds affirmative vote caused the amendment to fail.

The present move against appeal power is a unilateral action involving no constitutional change, it is believed. Rather the council was merely asked to relinquish its duty in a "private" arrangement between the two honor councils, the Student council, and the faculty appeal board. The latter, under the constitution, sits as a supreme court over appeals from the Student council.

The Daily Tar Heel has been unable to obtain any statement from any member of the Student council over the action, and the outcome of last night's joint meeting has not been released.

Legislature Defers Meeting One Week

The triple-threat of the Student Legislature, the three explosive bills due to come up in tonight's session, will not come to pass until next Thursday, according to Speaker Jack Folger.

All three of the bills were scheduled for hot debate and strong dissension, sharing almost equally the privilege of being the most controversial.

Charlie Long's redistricting bill, which was proposed last week and sent to committee, was expected to meet strong opposition from representatives of the present town districts in particular.

The coed visiting agreement jurisdictional dispute will also be hotly contested, according to all reports at this time. The dispute arises from the contesting of the Interfraternity council's power to try violations of the agreement.

At latest report, the publications appropriation bill which was supposed to hit the floor tonight is also in for its share of the discussion. Legislative sources have disclosed that there will be parties next week who will definitely attempt to kill the measure.

Unsigned Note Says AWOL's Maltreated

Las Vegas, Nevada, Oct. 22—(UP)—A scribbled aftermath to the cross-country trip of the Army's so-called riot-train has been found here today. It consists of an unsigned note which was found near the railroad tracks in Las Vegas where the train halted on its trip from New York to Camp Cook, California. The note charged that A.W.O.L. soldiers being transported to disciplinary barracks were treated like murderers.

It went on to claim that the recent riot consisted to emptying gas guns into a group of shackled men who, the unidentified author wrote, could not create a riot should they desire to. The note invited its reader to demand to know what goes on behind the fences and cement walls of so-called disciplinary barracks.

Army spokesman at Camp Cook refused official comment but said the note was far from the truth.

The train passed across the the country last week, leaving a trail of escaped and wounded prisoners across three midwestern states.

BOTTLE MYSTERY

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 22—(UP)—The Coast Guard at Norfolk, Va., has uncorked the mystery concerning seven bottles washed up on the Outer Banks of North Carolina last week. The Coast Guard in examination of the contents of the bottles shows that they contain medicine and not narcotics. The Coast Guard says the bottles evidently were dumped by a Navy transport and washed ashore in the wake of the tropical hurricane.

Soviet Army Must Evacuate Germany, Byrnes Maintains

Columbia, S. C., Oct. 22—(UP)—Former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes reiterated tonight his belief that if the Russian army does not leave eastern Germany voluntarily, the United States and other nations must band together to take "measures of last resort" against the Soviet union.

He denied, however, that this meant, as interpreted in a United Press dispatch, that he called for the use of force if necessary to drive the Red army out.

Byrnes made his statement in a speech to the South Carolina Grand lodge of Masons. It was his first formal speech since resigning as secretary in January and was made eight days after publication of his memoirs, "Speaking Frankly."

Most of the speech was devoted to his proposals for dealing with Russia on the German question. He urged the United States, Britain and France—without Russia if necessary—to call "now" a general German peace conference of all nations which declared war on Germany. "If they are going to do it a year hence, why not do it now?" he said.

Byrnes specifically deplored a United Press dispatch about his book October 15, the day of publication. He said he was satisfied that in his book he had given convincing evidence of his adherence to "the policy of patience and my abhorrence of war."

"Therefore," he added, "you can imagine my surprise when I saw in a newspaper in Washington a glaring headline that I urged that we build bigger A-bombs and use force to drive the Reds from Germany."

Town Girls Plan Picnic Saturday

At a supper meeting last Tuesday night, the Town Girl's association made plans for a picnic to be held Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Betsy Anne Barbee, president, has announced that trucks will pick up the couples in front of the Y and has issued an invitation to all town girls who would like to come. In charge of plans for the outing is Nancy Shields, who was recently elected social chairman for the year.

The town girls also made plans for their part in the Sadie Hawkins' day affair, in which they are working on the afternoon races together with CICA and CAA.

The meeting was climaxed by a talk on social regulations by Bill Lloyd, after which pictures for the Yack were taken.

Thomas Wolfe Award Planned For Year's Best Mag Story

As an incentive to bring out more and better stories for publication, Carolina Mag Editor Fred Jacobson said yesterday the Thomas Wolfe Literary Award, a cash prize of $15, will be made next June to the student contributing the most outstanding short story of the year.

The award, to be made by a board of judges composed of faculty members, will be made on the basis of originality, style, and quality of material.

In order to insure fair judgment, and to include a wider range of reader interest, in the material to be published in this year's Mag, Editor Jacobson announced that a Literary Board composed of representative student opinion has been inaugurated to review and select all stories for publication.

Jacobson also pointed out that all students are eligible to contribute any stories that they might have, and that as a protection to authors, the magazine grants copy rights for all published material.

The magazine was highly commended last year by the National Scholastic Press Association for its literary content and every effort is being made to maintain the same high standards of quality.

Trailer-Truck

Chicago, Oct. 22—(UP)—A Los Angeles man, Joseph Carrington, wants to get rid of a trailer-truck here today.

Carrington says the truck doesn't belong to him, and he can't find the owner. He says he was hired in Detroit to drive the truck to California. The owner was to follow the truck in an automobile.

When Carrington ran out of gas and got out of the truck, the owner, James Zavouliotis, was nowhere in sight, and he hasn't shown up yet.

Jap Peace Treaty May Be Completed

Washington, Oct. 22—(UP)—Acting Secretary of State Robert Lovett says there is a chance that negotiations for a Japanese peace treaty may get underway this year. However, he emphasizes that the big powers still are unable to settle their differences on the important issue.

The United States wants the Far Eastrn commission to draw up the peace pact. Russia says the Big Four foreign ministers were assigned the job and should be allowed to carry it out. China has taken the middle road by suggesting that the Far Eastern commission work out the blueprint for the Japanese peace treaty with the big powers given the right to veto any of the provisions.

Lovett reports that American diplomats are talking the matter over with the Soviet and Chinese governments.

Memories Are Pictures, Bursley Insists; Yack Wants Unposed Campus Snapshots

By John Stump

Originally, we were assigned to pick up an announcement at the Yack office. But we found editorial board member Harold Bursley in a talkative mood, and got instead something of an idea of the stuff of which memories are made.

"Memories are pictures," Bursley assured us. "Although they may be drawn with words, a good informal snapshot or scene will hold one better than all of the prose which we could ever gather."

"Here at the Yackety-Yack office, memories are our stock in trade. We have a staff of photographers who spend the year gathering them. However, we still have plenty of room for any picture from anybody which may suggest to some old grad of the 1947 class a little of the Carolina he once knew."

We pressed Bursley for his idea of what sort of a photograph can hold a memory for twenty years or more. And it appeared from his answer that any unposed shot of the people or the sights of our campus could be the key to long train of memories—to a good Yackety-Yack.

"A pile of burning leaves, a shot of a co-ed bull session, a 'future president' buttonholing a voter, the crowd at a football game, Dr. Frank speaking at a pep rally. . . There're plenty of answers to that one," he replied.

We had a shot in last year's Yack of a man trying to read the Daily Tar Heel. He was sitting on the edge of his bed with his feet covering the newspaper and his eyes half shut."

"Do you see what I mean?" he asked.—We did.

And the announcement we were supposed to get? It reads like this: All those students who have pictures of general interest are asked to submit same to the Yack office with the name and address of the photographers on the back.

UWF Meets to Pick Convention Delegate

Election of a delegate to the national convention of United World Federalists in St. Louis will feature the World Federalists meeting at 5 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge number 2, President Russell G. Baldwin announced today.

The student chapter will appropriate expenses at this meeting to send one member to the two-day convention which begins November 1.

Other important issues on the agenda will include a discussion of a membership drive and a report by delegates to the state convention held last weekend at Woman's college.

Besides Baldwin, members who attended the Greensboro convention were Harold Bock, Martha Aiken, Joy Blumenthal, Ernest Boatman, Hale Chamberlain and Sally Malpass. Open-floor discussion of the membership drive, designed to convince more University students of the need for world government, will be presided over by Martha Aiken, membership chairman.

Claude Shotts Delivers Address to Phi On Displaced Persons Entering America

By Elaine Patton

"This is a problem that is paramount regarding the world in human relationship," said Claude Shotts, Secretary of YMCA as he spoke before the Phi Assembly Tuesday night. The bill under discussion was: "Resolved: That the Phi Assembly go on record as favoring the admittance of 400,000 displaced persons in America."

Shotts, because of his affiliation with the American Friends Service committee as director of relief in Germany, was the first American civilian in Berlin after the war. A native of Alabama, he received his education at the University of Alabama where he was member of Debate Society.

Shotts pointed out the necessity of America's solving successfully the problem of displaced persons, indicating that only by the proper handling of this problem can we hope to avoid another war. He reminded the Assembly that in 1932 the United States sent metal to the Japanese and supplied the Japanese with gas, both of which were later used to kill Americans. Had a small amount of the tremendous expenditures been used constructively instead of destructively, he said, all displaced persons could easily be cared for.

While many people have the attitude that refugees are undesirable people, Shotts pointed out that this country was settled by similar people—people from prisons, as those who settled Georgia, people from poor houses, and factories, and people searching for religious freedom as those who settled Maryland. He pointed out the great value these refugees might be to America in industry and in cultivating some of the numerous acres of farm land which lie idle.

In conclusion Shotts quoted Secretary of State Marshall in saying, "We cannot ignore the plight of Europe."

An animated discussion followed Shott's speech and at the close of the meeting the bill was passed with a vote of 18 to 3.

Confusion Reigns But Fire Put Out

Whether it was Raleigh street or Raleigh road the man didn't say, but commando tactics on the part of Chapel Hill firemen yesterday afternoon got one engine quickly on the scene of a minor blaze. But the fire was already out.

An overheated engine in construction equipment being used in building the new dormitories on Raleigh street resulted in a hurried—and somewhat confused—call yesterday to the city fire department. Not sure whether the fire was on Raleigh street or Raleigh road, firemen sent one engine one way and another the other. It turned out to be Raleigh street, but workmen had extinguished the blaze when the truck arrived.

At 5 o'clock this afternoon in the Di Senate hall in New West the Debate Council will hold an explanatory discussion for all persons interested in trying out for the University debate squad next Monday.

Dr. Guy B. Johnson Will Talk to Hillels

Dr. Guy B. Johnson, sociology professor recognized last month as "greatest contributor to Southern progress during 1947" by the Roman Catholic church, will address a meeting of the Hillel foundation in Roland Parker lounge at 7:30 Friday evening. Johnson will discuss amelioration of racial tensions and solutions of minority problems.

In an announcement of coming activities the Hillel cabinet yesterday invited students to attend an open meeting in Roland Parker lounge at 8 o'clock Monday evening. Functioning of the Hillel foundation at Chapel Hill will be the subject of the meeting.

Other Hillel announcements include a change in office hours in the organizations office on the second floor of the Y.M.C.A. The office will be open from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 2 to 4 daily. Mrs. L. Rosenberg is serving as advisor to the foundation until a new director arrives.

YWCA Starts Dorm Stores; Coeds Get Nighttime Snacks

By Sally Woodhull

Because coeds cannot take advantage of down town eateries' staying open all night, the YWCA Dorm Stores committee has been organized to fill the need of a quick snack while quiz-cramming.

Operating in women's dorms from 10:45 until 11 o'clock each night, except week-ends, the stores handle candy, crackers, gum, potato chips, and apples. They also run the coke machines, new feature of dorm life this year.

Katherine McLean is chairman of the committee, and working with her are Jean Umstead in Alderman, Jackie Rogers in McIver, Dorothy Day in Carr.

Dorm store keepers run into many problems. They are called upon to advise between "Snickers" and "Forever Yours;" to decide whether Susie's complexion is too bad to allow her a Hershey bar tonight, to find unavailable nickels for the coke machine, and to handle the ever increasing pennies that girls seem to save just to drive them wild.

Each dorm manages to consume about four crates of coke a day, five dozen apples a week, two boxes of gum, five of candy, and dozens of potato chips.

Although food is sold at prices as close as possible to cost, whatever profit accrues goes to the Y treasury.

Punishment: The Parent's Right

The Student council should get set for a stiff session Monday when they assemble to review cases concerning constitutionality. We refer, in particular, to the foremost cases on the agenda which will deal with the interfraternity council's judiciary power in trying violations of the coed visiting agreement. Under the present setup the IFC assumes the authority to try any irregularities which occur. This is the usual manner in which violations have been handled and it should continue thus.

Monday the individuals who present the case to the council will question the judicial authority of the MPB and will attempt to get the visiting agreement violations placed in the hands of the Mens or Womens Honor council and authorize them to prosecute individuals who violate the agreement and then they will plead that the Student council should prosecute the cases involving fraternities as a whole. An arrangement of this type would stir up much animosity and bitter feeling between fraternity and non-fraternity men, and would be beginnings of a campus civil war.

There is a very strong competive spirit between the fraternities on campus. It is a spirit which is helpful in making the members walk a chalk line. The existing agreement is such that if an individual does not comply with the regulations laid down by HPB, then the reputation of the whole fraternity is in jeopardy. This discourages violations because the individual members of the chapters are careful to see that their brothers comply with the rules established. They are quick to reprimand any persons who may be on the verge of breaking a clause of the agreement. If the responsibility were removed from the fraternity and made a responsibility of the individual concerned, then there would be a laxness in the enforcement of the agreement.

The Interfraternity council court seems to be doing a creditable job in carrying out their judiciary functions. The judges of the court are members of fraternities and they realize full well that the administration continually keeps a discerning eye on the judgement passed, and therefore, take every precaution to review each detail concerning the violations and then pass the sentence. They value the privilege of being able to review the cases brought before them since it is strictly an agreement between the fraternities and the coeds. They are quick to reprimand the fraternity violating any clause of the agreement because they value the privilige of home rule.

A parent is at liberty to reprimand his child and punish him according to his misbehavior. But if a neighbor takes the child in hand and punishes him there will be repercussions from both the parent and the child. If the punishment of violations is not keep within the Interfraternity council then you can expect many repercussions.

Regional Grad School for Negroes?

Wits who from time immemorial have panned the Southern governors' conferences as "years' biggest party-party" will have to find as new target for their gubernatorial scorn, for Southland's chief executives this year have set the wheels in motion to create an unprecendented development of regional cooperation.

In resolutions passed at the final session of the 1947 conference Tuesday the 13 governors asked Congress to authorize compacts between the Southern states establishing regional graduate schools for both white and Negro students.

The executives themselves described the move as "the most important ever taken by the Southern governors' conference." And their wording is conservative, for in the action the governors have found a solution to what many sociologists have long termed the South's number one problem..poor educational opportunity at home and the resulting dearth of doctors, dentists, lawyers, and other professional men with advanced training.

Lack of money more than any so-called "cultural lag" has been responsible for the lack of graduate educational facilities in the South, particularly for Negroes. The states have been too poor individually to set up advanced schools, and if they did exist chances are only a few in each state would be able to attend. The governors' action strikes the cord of the problem, pooling the 13 states' financial resources as well as the number of students needing graduate training.

As a start a committee was apointed to study use of Meharry Medical college at Nashville, Tenn., as a regional school to train Negro doctors, dentists, and nurses. And the committee received orders to push congressional approval, as required by the national constitution for interstate agreements.

It is to be hoped that there will be no delay in formulating a virile legislative program for the plan..both in Washington and in the state governments of the South, where the movement really begins.—W.S.

A member of the House of representatives, who was very much impressed by the dignity of his position, was awakened by his wife one night with "oh, there are burglars in the house."

"You must be mistaken my dear," replied the lawmaker. sleepily. "There may be a few in the Senate, but in the House—the idea is preposterous!"

"When this country was discovered," says the Russell, Kansas, Record, "the Indians were running it. There were no taxes, there was no debt and the women did all the work. And the white man thought he could improve on a system like that."

"Where? Sodas 12 cents, Malts 15 cents. The Dutch Door, Rio Grande 1 1-2 Blocks N. of Central." Too bad this advertisement didn't appear in the Daily Tar Heel instead of the New Mexico Lobo.

Mud-dobbers Under Lights

By Dan Sapp

Mudville's own "Mud-dobbers" brought glory to the village Tuesday with a 32-0 victory over Ruffin dormitory. The "Mud-dobbers" who were organized by L. C. Couch and Bert Brock won the game on plays worked out by Nevin Rice. Rice says that the team studied the plays and practiced for the first time under street lights Monday night before the game. The stars of the game were Richard Bennet who made three touchdowns and a total of 19 points, and Dewitt Foard and Bill Logan who both scored one touchdown.

According to Couch and Brock one game was forfeited because of a player shortage but now that they're organized they expect big things. Couch says that he hopes enough interest will be shown so that village sports will extend to include all campus intramurals.

At the Monday night council meeting, new members were oriented and some reorganization was done. The members now include: Charles "Pot" Walker, Bill Anderson, Art Foster, R. N. Morgan, Haywood Wyatt, Ken Blodgett, Sue Hunt, C. M. Clarke, Bill Goulding, Tom Cole, Tom Fields, Marge Nelson, Ken Wells, Charlotte Hayes, Tom Crittenden and Henry Gifford.

Three new committees were formed: A lighting committee which will work to get more complete lighting units, lights for telephone booths, and better maintenance of Village lighting, a coal committee will see about getting a better grade of coal for the coal burning units; and a third committee which will be concerned with requiring peddlers who operate in the village to be licensed.

The Council also discussed and adopted a resolution concerning the assignment of units. This resolution is being discussed by various student organizations and copies are being circulated.

On the social side of the news this week: Ruby Lewis was entertained at a surprise stork shower recently by Grayce Broili and Marge Nelson. Halloween decorations were used. Guests played bridge and Jackie Ingram won high score prize. Guests were: Ann Shannonhouse, Jackie Ingram, Haenn Bailey, Margaret Hawkins, Pat Hines, Harriet Rhynne, Ruth Travathyn, Estelle Rice, Jean Williams and Ruth Brodk.

NSA Widens Its Scope

The newly formed United States National Student Association has been granted membership in the National Commission for UNESCO (United Nations Economic, Scientific, and Cultural Organization). Notification to this effect was received by the national office of the USNSA located in Madison, Wis., from the State Department in Washington.

William B. Welsh, president of the USNSA, announced that Robert S. Smith, Vice-President of the association, would be the representative of the National Student Association to the National Commission for UNESCO. Bob Smith is chairman of the International Activities Commission of the USNSA, which is located at Harvard University.

The twenty-six regional chairman of the National Student Association will coordinate their efforts with those of the regional UNESCO committees to implement the programs of the National Commission for UNESCO.

The United States National Student Association is an organization based upon the student government bodies of colleges and universities all over the United States. Delegates who attended the Constitutional Convention at Madison, Wis. came from 356 campuses, and were directly representing 1,389,000 American college students. The programs of the USNSA will benefit the individual college student through his student governing body.

Direct student exchange between Canadian and U. S. Universities is one of the projects now being developed. Special travel and study tours are being formulated for American students in Europe next summer. Tours are being planned for students from foreign countries to the United States.

One of the primary purposes of forming the USNSA was to provide a means by which all American students, working through their democratically elected student governing bodies, can help to create a world community based on better understanding between all the peoples of the world.

AYCOCK ELECTS OFFICERS

In the run-off election held Monday, Aycock Dormitory elected its officers in a spirited and close contest. The final results gave the Presidency to John C. Bunch. Richard (Silky) Marston of Charlotte, N. C., gained the Vice Presidency, while Thomas E. Holden of Louisburg, N. C. was elected Secretary-Treasurer. With well over half of the men in the dorm voting, this second election was held after the results of the first election, held last Wednesday, were protested by petition.

Congressmen Like Private Eyes

By Bob Sain

It is time somebody gave out a little inside dope on the current Hollywood red-hunt. I am just the boy to do this, since I was on the inside.

I know all about this malarkey, but everything. I once was an extra for MGM. I saw these writers every day. (Well, they could have been writers. Who knows in that Vine street crowd? I saw lots of guys with ascot ties lapel-less coats. Sure, they were probably writers.)

I want to comment on the fine points of the very un-American committee's investigation. We find things not as they should be. The congressmen are making like private eyes. They are playing a little political game of cops and robbers. All very juvenile in the first place; what's the FBI for? And, besides, since when has it been against the law to be a communist? (Sure, against nature, but not the law.)

First off we would like to protest against the highhanded manner in which a spokesman for the accused screenwriters was pitched neatly from the hearing room when he asked to be allowed to cross-examine a man named John Moffitt who had got his name in the papers by saying that a Hollywood literary agent was a communist spy. The spokesman—he was a lawyer hired by the writers—was shut up quick like.

Now is that not just the thing that causes the starry eyed group to let their neuroses slide toward communism—the only group, they feel (no matter what its other aims) that has consistently put a finger on fascism in the backyard? We admit, however, that there must be a better way to stop such goings on.

Anyway, I can't figure why the producers keep these writers on salaries up to $100.000 a year if they know they're communists. I know lots of people who'd like a hundred bucks a year in such surroundings. Me, for instance.

Coline Smith, Sound and Fury lurer, could probably have had the lead in S & F's upcoming fiasco "Gin Lane" if she had "had the right attitude," according to them who knows. She may get it yet.

Some Playmakers can't quite dig the way director Hans Rothe is taking season-opener "Saint Joan" through rehearsels. It's most European, they comment. They seem unanimous, though, in the opinion that this top-notch Shaw play will also be one of the top-notchest Playmaker jobs.

A coed explains that she is offended no end by the male attitude here. "Overbearing, irritating." Digging out my Freud I explained that, with the ratio seven to one, men are prone to say they don't want that which they know they can't have. Next patient . . .

Foo Giduz: With His Neck Out

By R. Foo Giduz

Pardon our unartistic souls if we poke out our necks far enough to flatly state we LIKE the colonial style architecture, in which the business zone of Chapel Hill is gradually being built up.

First it was the lads in the art department—very learned souls admittedly; then the far-famed R. Haskell Hamilton; after that a number of sundry DTH Letters-to-the-editor writers; and now, yesterday our close friend and colleague Joe Allan (and Lee Knowles) explains via DTH to us degenerate, unappreciative, ordinary garden variety folks that this Williamsburg—er Georgian style architecture is nothing short of a "manifestation of a sterility of mind."

So we don't know from good architecture, and have sterility of the mind. But us home folks who have lived in this great old town for 'lo some 20 years now, just sort of take a liking to this trim, uniform, easy-on-the eye architecture. And we'll have to trust to our horse sense not to let 200-year old architecture influence our every-day thinking. Can't put it much simpler, and don't want to take up any more space on the topic.

Old Carousel (and a few-thousand other Chapel Hillians) stands squarely in back of the Town Planning Commission for their action in requesting new buildings be constructed on these lines, and hereby renders thanks. Pardon us.

Sorry the Legislature won't get to the Collins (Community Chest) bill this week, since tonight's scheduled session was canceled due to fraternity rushing. (Hmmm, thought the dormitory-dominated Student party now had a majority in the Leg.)—But it looks like Basil Sherrill's Ways and Means Committee will have a darn good bill to report out to the Legislature next week. The W and M committee reported the carefully written campus chest measure completely favorably in a meeting yesterday. . .Their only suggested revision was that the chest study, and the supervision of this year's fund campaigns be left entirely in the hands of a Student Legislature special committee, instead of the cumbersome Student Welfare Board. . .And a darn good idea that seems like, too. A final plea to the Legislature with regards to this: ACT!

So it's about time to take off for the Gainesville 'Gator killing. . .If you're going down, just remember: YELL! —And team HQ is the Hotel Thomas, Gainesville. . .They tell me the weather is just right down there about now!

LEGISLATURE POSTPONED

According to information released yesterday afternoon by Speaker of the Student Legislature Jack Folger, the Legislature will not meet tomorrow night as scheduled, but will meet a week from tomorrow.

No War Hysteria?

Dear Editor:

Until I read Bill Robertson's article in the DTH last Friday, I thought that isolationism was totally discredited and abandoned. It is a source of great amazement to me to what extent an isolationist will go to prove his point, and the willingness with which he flagrantly violates logic.

To be specific, Mr. Robertson says: "America is very far from the Soviet Union. There are vast territories separating America from the Soviet Union. . . Under these conditions it is very difficult for the U. S. to attack the Soviet Union or vice versa." I don't know when Mr. Robertson was born, but it must have been a number of years before 1900. As I recall, the airplane was invented back there around the turn of the century and places have been closer together ever since.

From these distortions of logic, Mr. Robertson concludes that "the concrete situation renders an American-Soviet war unfeasible." Mr. Robertson, you've lost a hundred years somewhere! Now, if this were 1847. . . Do you realize that it would be much easier for Russia to attack the U. S. or vice versa than it was for Hannibal to invade the Roman provinces in Europe, or for Caesar to invade England? Think of poor Napoleon! He had a much more difficult time invading Russia than it would be today. Relatively speaking, Russia was farther away from France than it is from the U. S. today.

No, Mr. Robertson, I haven't seen any wave of war hysteria, but I have seen a wave of realism. You seem to have the two mixed up. But that is understandable, since you are so pressed by the "real" day-to-day problems of high prices, high rents, etc

—with—

Bob Goldwater

When one begins to discuss gruelling athletics, the two fall sports of football and cross country are invariably near the top of the list. But any one of the 40 members of Carolina's soccer team can put up a pretty good argument to the effect that his sport is just as gruelling—if not more so.

It isn't that football and cross country are such easy-going activities—definitely not! The gridders spend a rough afternoon every Saturday bumping heads with neighboring and distant rivals. And the harriers face no small task in trotting over a hilly four or five-mile course on the few occasions that another bunch of harriers appears willing to provide the opposition.

But the total actual playing or running time spent in both sports together—60 minutes in football and about 23 in cross country for a four-mile run—still falls five minutes short of the playing time of a soccer tilt!! Astonishing, but true. A regulation soccer game consists of four quarters of 22 minutes each—a total of 88 tiresome minutes.

And that isn't all. Whereas in football, any number of substitutes may be sent in, that's definitely not the case in soccer. Only 16 players see action, five substitutes being allowed to enter the game and three of those five replaced eligible to reenter. What's more, there are no time outs except when called for by an official. And the officials don't call for time unless a player is hurt. All of which makes soccer even rougher.

WE WENT DOWN to Fetzer field yesterday to watch the Blue and White booters as they practiced their tricky offensive maneuvers in preparation for their game with the High Point Panthers at 3 o'clock today. And the thing that impressed us the most was that soccer, probably more than any other sport, is a TEAM game. We don't mean to say that cooperation isn't needed in other sports. The halfbacks don't get anywhere without good blocking, the forwards don't sink baskets good passing, and the pitchers don't gain victories without good hitting and fielding. But in soccer it's slightly different. The players advance the ball as a unit and cooperation of the closest sort is necessary if they are to maneuver the ball at all close to the enemy goal.

There's also more headwork in soccer than in most other sports. We don't mean that it takes more brains to play the game. But using the old noggin is one of the important methods of advancing the ball. Which just goes to show what one can do when he's playing heads-up ball.

Needless to say, there's also lots of running in soccer. The ball moves up and down the field a great many times and the players follow right after it. This is especially true for the three halfbacks, whose job it is to advance the ball up the field.

Naturally, it's hard to realize what a rough sport soccer can be just from reading about it. Which brings us around to the point of our story. Coach Marvin Allen's charges open their home season this afternoon down on Fetzer field and the players would certainly appreciate the home folks turning out to cheer them on. So if you can manage to get down there about 3 o'clock, we're sure the players won't be the only ones to get a kick out of the game.

It may be a little hot to start thinking about winter, but that's exactly what some 150 athletes are doing down at Woollen gym every afternoon. And all their time isn't spent just in thinking about winter—it's mostly in hard, physical activity. The occasion, naturally, is the pre-season practice for Carolina's three winter sports.

Out on the main floor of Woollen gym, Coach Tom Scott, two assistants, and 60 candidates are going through their conditioning and fundamental sessions. Across the hall, assistant mat mentor Hobie McKeever is doing the same with 30 wrestlers. And down in Bowman Gray pool, Coach Dick Jamerson has 60 prospects churning through the water.

All of which indicates that the Tar Heels ought to be in the best of shape for the heavy winter schedules when January rolls around. In two of the sports—swimming and wrestling—Carolina will be defending Southern conference crowns while the cagers finished one notch from the top of the ladder in the basketball race last year.

FOOTBALL FILLER: Charlie Justice ranks second in the nation in individual punting averages and North Carolina ranks first on the team list. The Asheville speedster has a 46.2 average on 29 punts and is second only to Joe Geri of Georgia, who has a 46.4 mark. . . .The Tar Heels are also 13th in the nation in forward passing offense, with a 136.8 average. The Tar Heel aerial artists have completed 30 passes in 74 attempts, for a total of 547 yards.

Morris Gains Finals In GM Tournament

Two semi-final battles featured the competition in the Graham Memorial ping pong tournament yesterday.

In the day's headliner, net stars Ray Morris and Clark Taylor battled for four games before Morris finally captured the match. Morris, the pre-tourney choice to cop the crown, joins Bob Goldwater as the only two unbeaten players in the tournament. They will meet in the finals later this week.

In doubles play, Burt Brown and George Whitted reached the finals by defeating Charlie Stevens and Frank White in straight games. Brown and Whitted opposed Jim Jackson and Goldwater for the doubles championship this afternoon.

In the one-time losers' bracket of the double-elimination tourney, Archie Goodwin and Taylor have already reached the semi finals by virtue of staying unbeaten so long.

Tar Heels Depart This Evening For Battle With Florida Gators

Squad to Leave from Woollen at 7:30; Snavely Holds Stiff Drills for Tilt

Hard work was again the order of the day for Carolina's Tar Heels as they prepped for their battle witn the Florida Gators this weekend, but Coach Carl Snavely is expected to begin tapering off the drills this afternoon.

The team is scheduled to leave Chapel Hill from Woollen gym at 7:30 this evening. The squad will journey over to Raleigh by bus, catching a Seaboard train at 10:30 for Gainesville. The Tar Heels' train is scheduled to arrive in the Florida city tomorrow morning at about 10:30, with quarters set up at the Thomas hotel. A light workout is scheduled for Friday afternoon, and the team will return to Chapel Hill immediately following the game. A squad of 41 will make the trip.

Once again in yesterday's workout, Snavely had his boys on defense while the Jayvees employed the T-formation and the plays that the Tar Heels anticipate from Florida. Also, there was work on defense against the double-wing formation, the system that Wolf has used in all his previous coaching years.

Wolf, a former Tar Heel mentor himself, made that double-wing style of offense popular when he was coaching at the Hill. His passing plays from this setup are particularly effective, and Snavely probably expects Wolf to mix the double-wing with the T-formation.

In last season's Carolina-Florida game, which the Tar Heels won, 40-19, the Gators turned up with a terrific passing game that threatened to upset the North Carolinians, but Charlie Justice also had a big afternoon that day, and the Tar Heels managed to outscore their opponents.

Carolina did not neglect its own offensive yesterday, with both the aerial and ground games coming in for attention. Snavely had the boys running from a few new formations and plays that he cooked up this week after the William and Mary game.

The workout yesterday was as lengthy as usual, with the Tar Heel coaches finding it necessary to cut on the lights of Navy field before the termination of the drills.

The squad appears in good physical shape, with no seri-

Coed Tripleheader Slated for Tonight

Coed volleyball play will continue this evening in the Woman's Gym with three tilts scheduled to be reeled off.

Kenan and CICA will open the session at 7:15 with Carr and McIver following at 7:50 and Archer meeting AD Pi in the nightcap at 8:25.

Spectators are cordially invited to attend the games.

McKeever Has Seven Lettermen Forming Nucleus of '48 Wrestling Aggregation

Seven lettermen from last year's wrestling team which lost only one dual match and copped the Southern Conference title, greeted assistant coach Hobie McKeever last week at the opening practice session for the 1948 season and on their sturdy shoulders will rest Carolina's hopes for the second straight conference crown.

The returning stalwarts include Doug Thompson, 121; Tom Urquhart, 128; Irv Zirpel, 155; Oscar Gupton, 165; Bill Kemp, 175; and Laurie Hooper, heavyweight. Zirpel and Hooper both hold the 1947 Southern conference championship for their weight divisions.

The matmen's nine-game schedule, which they open early in January, include matches with VMI, VPI, Virginia, Maryland, Washington and Lee, Navy—whose grapplers handed the Tar Heels their sole defeat last year—Duke, NC State, and Davidson. The grapplers will also enter the Southern Conference Tournament and possibly the NCAA tournament.

Mural Tag Play Paced By Overtime Contests

Of the 14 intramural football games played yesterday, nine teams blanked their opponents and won by margins of one to 50 points.

Tne highest scoring game played thus far in league play was Chi Psi's rout over TEP, with the winners scoring 25 points in each half of the game and holding the losers scoreless. Leading the winners to victory with two touchdowns each were Vic Seixas and Jim Kelly.

DKE, defending champs in the Fraternity division, barely preserved their faultless record by eking out a one to nothing margin over Lambda Chi Alpha in an overtime tussle.

In other close games which lasted into overtime periods, ATO edged SAE No. 2, 1-0, and Sigma Chi defeated Pi Lambda Phi, 13-6. The defeat was the latter's second overtime loss.

Pacing Oakwood Drive's win over Alexander No. 3 was Jack Feinberg, who scored three touchdowns and captured high scoring honors for the day.

Deciding factor in Phi Delta's win over DKE's No. 2 team was Gene Turner's extra point. Final score was Phi Delt 13, DKE No. 2, 12.

Scott Keeps Cagers On Respective Toes

Coach Tom Scott kept his sixty-odd cage candidates on their respective toes for two hours yesterday on the Woollen gym floor, as basketball practice moved along at a quicker pace.

Although no official word has come as yet, another cut of the team will come over the weekend in order to reduce the still-overloaded squad to a workable number of cagers.

Practice will be held as usual this afternoon at four.

Locals Out to Gain Initial Win of Year

By Bill Kellam

Last night on the eve of his charges' home opener, soccer coach Marvin Allen was far from optimistic over the chances of the Tar Heel booters to break into the win column for the first time this season when they tangle with High Point College's Panthers this afternoon on Fetzer Field at 3 o'clock.

An indifferent showing by the Tar Heels in yesterday's final tuneup for the Panther tilt left Allen in a mood that was almost as blue as the booters' jerseys and forced him to fear the worst about the outcome of tomorrow's contest.

Apparently the Blue and White kickers are still in the midst of the natural letdown that usually follows performances as brilliant as theirs against Loyola and Navy on the Maryland invasion.

In addition to their mental ailments, the booters are also plagued by injuries to key players. Hank Pallulat, stubby center fullback who booted the only Tar Heel goal scored by them during last week's disastrous trip, has been sidelined until early next week by a leg injury and had been replaced in the starting lineup by Dave Ferebee.

Chunky Frank Levy, who has shone in this week's practice sessions, will open at left half in place of Tom Williams, who started both of the road contests.

Twenty-two men will dress for tomorrow's tilt and again the Tar Heels will be led by their able co-captains, goalie Al Williams and center half Gus Johnston, who were elected before the Loyola game by the members of the team.

Another rugged home contest is on tap for the Tar Heels on Tuesday of next

Immigration Officials Mar Trans-Atlantic Courtship

Ellis Island, Oct. 22—(UP)—A happy ending to a trans-Atlantic courtship was marred by immigration officials here today as Barney Hagen of Billings, Montana, came to claim his bride by proxy.

Barney got married to Eileen Frances Green, an English girl, after the two had been exchanging "pen-pal" letters for some time. The marriage occurred almost a year ago.

When Barney arrived at Ellis Island today to greet his wife, the immigration officials threw a monkey-wrench into the works. The big question they nopped at the unhappy bridegroom concerned a previous marriage of his.

"I got a divorce," protested Barney. But the immigration officials demanded that he prove the separation from his first wife final before his foreign-born spouse could enter the country.

Barney claimed tonight that he could prove it easily, yers and courtrooms. In the to dash around and visit lawbut it would take a little time meantime, he was not deprived of seeing the wife he had never met. He emerged from the private conference smeared with lipstick.

ous injuries being sustained in the win over William and Mary last week.

Carolina has been set up as a favorite to cop the game from the Gators, but many North Carolina fans, after seeing Florida upset a strong State college eleven in Raleigh last week, are not so confident of their club's chances.

Carolina looked good against William and Mary, but the Tar Heels will be facing a club that tasted victory for the first time in 14 starts last week, and the Gators will not be easy to stop since they have found their spark.

Coach Wolf has developed several excellent backs at Florida, with Doug Belden shaping up as the most dangerous back in the Gator ball-carrying array. Belden is the quarterback in the Florida T-formation.

Religion in Life Delegates to Meet

Council for Religion in Life delegates from all campus organizations will meet at 4 o'clock in Gerrard hall today for an important meeting regarding CRIL's speaker program for the school year.

Chairman Russell G. Baldwin said yesterday that it is imperative for each organization head to instruct his group's representative to attend this "most important assembly of the CRIL this term."

Cards have been mailed, said Baldwin, to all organizations reminding them to appoint a delegate immediately if one has not yet been elected.

President Truman Calls For Special Session Of Congress On Nov. 17

Chief Executive Seeks European, Inflation Action

Washington, Oct. 23—(UP)—To discuss and enact legislation to curb inflation and aid for western Europe, President Harry S. Truman today issued a call for a special session of Congress on Nov. 17.

The step, which is expected to hearten the hungry peoples of Europe and the inflation-hounded people of the United States, was revealed today at a heavily-attended news conference in the White House. Mr. Truman, face grave and his tone deadly serious, said that increased living costs are causing hardship in millions of American homes and that they are imperiling the nation's welfare and prosperity.

As for Europe, continued the President, our government must take adequate steps to meet the crisis besetting democratic European countries.

Truman Anxious

Mr. Truman is anxious to tell the American people—in full — the detailed background of the twin problems facing their lawmakers.

He will make a nationwide radio broadcast — over all major networks—between 10 and 10:15 (EST) tomorrow night.

The President says that he will recommend to the special session "suitable measures for dealing with inflation, high prices and the high cost of living." And he said he would also urge the Senators and Representatives to speed up consideration of the part to be played by the United States in the Marshall program. Mr. Truman particularly stressed that foreign aid — especially for France and Italy—could not wait until January, the month Congress was originally scheduled to convene.

The Republican Congressmen who conferred with the President promised to continue the bi-partisan cooperation on foreign policy which began after Pearl Harbor. But they made no pledge on the domestic situation.

Senate Democratic Leader Alben Barkley said European aid would come first—despite the President's statement that skyrocketing prices are his chief reason for calling the session. And he revealed that the aid program has been broadened to include the American occupied zones of Western Germany and Korea — as well as France, Italy and Austria.

House Republican Floor Leader Charles Halleck quoted Mr. Truman as saying that the estimates of needed foreign relief between now and next March 31 have risen to $642 million.

LOST IN "RUSH"

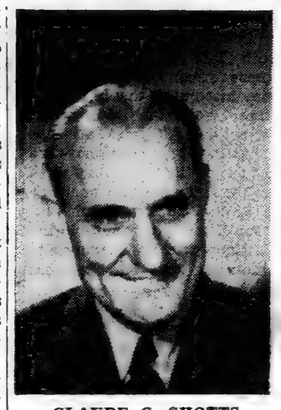
There is at least one student on campus for whom the old slogan "lost in the rush" has a literal meaning.

The house was packed when graduate pharmacy student Sam Koonce walked into his own fraternity, Alpha Tau Omega, went up to the desk, received a name tag, and pinned it on his lapel.

Before he realized what had happened, the ATO initiates of the past year, not having seen married-man Sam very frequently, gave him one of the best rush jobs he had ever seen in his six years as a fraternity member.

Students for Democratic Action Hear Shotts Say Germans Face Dark Future

The Germans today are discouraged with the outlook for the future and are looking to American democracy for a solution to their perplexing problems, Claude Shotts, secretary of the Y.M.C.A., declared Wednesday night as he appeared as guest speaker of the Students for Democratic Action in a discussion of "Europe's Needs and You."



Shotts was among the first group of civilians to carry on relief work in Germany following the end of the war, and was stationed in Berlin for a year as a representative of the American Friends service.

Darmstadt, Cologne, Dusseldorf, and Dresden each exemplified the destructiveness of war, both in material damage and "human consequences," Shotts said, and "you get the impression while traveling through these cities that man has turned against himself."

The country as well as the cities are crowded with people seeking a place of settlement, Shotts asserted. In the cities people are living underground "like rats" and thousands are making their homes in the air raid bunkers, which house 300 persons.

According to Shotts' German informants, hunger came to Germany in 1942 when Goering said that bullets were preferable to butter and the German people gave up their butter for bullets.

Shotts recalled an experiment conducted by the United States government during the war when some conscientious objectors volunteered to starve themselves for one year in an effort to ascertain the effects on the body. This experiment proved that when feeding drops below 1,500 calories daily, certain body tissues break up and the body begins to eat itself. In Germany, he said, many people are receiving 1,280 or less calories daily, and the result is widespread disease.

CLAUDE C. SHOTTS

In one classroom which Shotts visited, 50 per cent of the students, as shown by skin tests, had tuberculosis. Of this number, 50 per cent had open and contagious tuberculosis as proven by an examination by a Chicago physician.

"There is nothing the German dislikes more than charity," Shotts said in conclusion, but his only escape from starvation is the acceptance of aid from the countries more fortunate than Germany.

Five Students Recommended To Get Rhodes Scholarships

The names of five outstanding Carolina students who have been recommended for Rhodes scholarships were released yesterday by the office of Dean C. P. Spruill. They are Irvin J. Erle, a senior from Short Hills, N. J., Donald G. Henderson, senior from Chapel Hill, John E. C. Kapp, a junior from Winston-Salem, David E. Sobel, a junior from New York City, and John W. McGowen, a graduate student from Memphis.

These five men will represent the university before the state selection committee which will select the state of North Carolina's representatives on December 10th.

The basis for selection was set down in the will of Cecil John Rhodes, South African diamond magnate. Qualities especially desired in an applicant are literary and scholastic ability, moral force and physical vigor. However, any applicant who has demonstrated some exceptional attribute of intellect, character or personality will be given consideration.

The two seniors, two juniors, and graduate student named to represent UNC will compete with other candidates from all over the U. S. for one of these scholarships which are valued at approximately 500 pounds, or $1800, per year.

Tri-Delt Pledges Choose Officers

This year's pledge class of Delta Delta Delta, has elected its officers for the coming year. They are president, Grace Winslow, Tarboro; vice president, Lillian Hotard, New Smyrna Beach, Florida; secretary, Dutch Jones, Chapel Hill; treasurer, Elinor Woltz, Raleigh; social chairman, Martha Dan Payne, Greenville.

Picture Making To End Wednesday

No show will be the term most applicable to the faces of those who have not appeared for their individual Yack photographs by the middle of next week according to Yackety Yack board member, Gene Johnstone.

This blanket classification was made because all pictures that appear in the organizational section of the Yack are only a rerun of the original individual photograph unless a special group picture is taken.

The photographers from Chidnoff's have set next Wednesday as the last day that they can possibly remain in Chapel Hill, and a trip to the home studio in New York is the only alternative open to would-be subjects after that date. Special attention was called to this fact by the board of editors, because of the fact that individual pictures were able to be taken in Chapel Hill after the 'final' deadline last year.

"Unfortunately, this will not be possible this year," said Johnstone. He also announced that medical students will take up much of the photographers time next week in asking that all who want their picture in the Yack come this week if at all possible.

Men's Council Head Bill Tate Denies DTH Article, Says Story Is Misleading

By Chuck Hauser

A sharp denial that Wednesday night's joint meeting of the Student, Men's, and Women's councils was "undercover, secret, and unprecedented" as reported in the Daily Tar Heel was voiced yesterday afternoon by Bill Tate, chairman of the Men's council.

Branding the DTH article as "misleading," Tate stated that the councils were not trying to put anything over behind the students' backs but were discussing a practical solution to the problems and overlappings of power which arise between the groups.

The term "unprecedented" was totally out of place, Tate said. "The councils meet together several times a year," he continued, adding that the DTH statement that "The action was not intended to receive publicity" was false, in that the action was to receive all publicity possible to let the students know what is going on in their government.

The question in the case, which previously arose before elections last spring, was whether the Student council, by reason of experience, was any more qualified to judge students' actions than the lower councils.

The constitutional amendment which would have removed the Student council an appellate board was defeated in the general campus elections held last May due to the lack of a two-thirds majority of students who voted. The amendment, at the time attacked by then presidential candidate Tom Eller, is now endorsed by him. (See Eller's statement elsewhere on this page.)

"The defeat of the amendment," declared Bill Tate yesterday, "was due to lack of publicity in favor of the measure." He went on to explain that since all three councils are elected from and by the student body, one should not be considered qualified to judge whether the decision of another was correct or not.

Special Darkroom Lessons Available

Special lessons in photo darkroom procedure will be available tomorrow morning from 10:30 through noon, and on succeeding Saturdays from Bob Coulter, director of Graham Memorial's photography lab which is on the ground floor of the student union.

Now in full operation again, the darkroom is being used by over two dozen students at present, and permit cards for its use may be issued to as many as desire them. No charge is made for the lessons, which take up every phase of amateur photo lab work.

Permit cards may be picked up from Coulter during his office hours in the main office of Graham Memorial. Hours are from 8-9 o'clock weekday evenings with the exception of Tuesdays.

A slight charge is made for use of chemicals in the room. However, students may store their own chemicals there, upon registering them properly.

CANTERBURY CLUB

The regular weekly meeting of the Canterbury club will be held Tuesday nights instead of Monday nights for the rest of the year.

Pair Set to Appear In Recital Tonight

Mr. William Klenz, violoncellist, and Mr. Wilton Mason, pianist, will appear tonight at 8:30 in Hill Music hall in the first of a series of three recitals of music for the violoncello.

Designed as a complete survey of violoncello sonata literature, the series will be continued on October 31 and November 7. Tonight's recital will consist of duo-sonatas by Bach, Debussy, Beethoven, and Faure.

Bach's "Sonata II for Viola de Gamba and Cambaio obligato," which will be performed tonight, was written sometime between 1717 and 1723, during Bach's early five-year stay at Cothen. The Debussy "Sonata for Violoncello and Piano" was composed during the summer of 1915, and represents Debussy's final period.

"Sonata for Pianoforte and Violoncello, Opus 102, No. 1," was composed by Beethoven in July, 1815, and is similar to work of his final period. The Faure "Sonata No. 2 for Violoncello and Piano, Opus 117," again represents the composer in his latest period, for it was written in 1922.

Mr. Klenz and Mr. Mason are both members of the University department of music.

Jones Will Keynote Meeting of CRIL

Rev. Charles Jones will set the key-note for the year's program of the Intercollegiate Council for Religion in Life in an address before the group tomorrow at the North Carolina College for Negroes in Durham. The Council is composed of interested students and faculty from the University of North Carolina, Duke, and North Carolina College for Negroes.

Each of the religious groups on all three campuses have two official representatives to the Council, but all students, regardless of religious affiliation, are invited to attend. This first of the regular monthly meetings will afford an opportunity for the students from the three colleges to get acquainted and perfect plans for the coming year.

The purpose of this Intercollegiate council which is affiliated with other such councils throughout the state and nation is to meet together for friendly interchange of ideas and recreation, to study present day problems as they are related to religious principles, and to initiate projects to bring about social change based on these principles.

Chapel Hill students will meet on the corner in front of Spencer Dorm tomorrow at 1:45 to catch the bus to Durham.

LAUNDRY REFUNDS

The Chapel Hill laundry has announced that there are still 250 unclaimed refund checks from the summer session. Students are asked to pick them up right away, as the deadline is Saturday. The checks may be claimed at the office, 132 Franklin street.

'Secret' Meeting Upheld

Provision 'A Step Forward', Says Tom Eller in Statement

(The following statement was released yesterday evening by student body President Tom Eller to answer and explain yesterday's Daily Tar Heel article on the joint meeting of the Student, Men's, and Women's council meeting.)

"The meeting in question was called by myself in an effort to discuss practical procedures in the three councils and for general discussion between the groups.

"The joint group ended by adopting two informal resolutions. The first was that since all procedural adaptations for appeal to the Student council have failed in effectiveness, the two lower councils unanimously disfavored the process by which a decision from the Men's or Women's council is appealed to another council made up of students until such a council can be unquestionably proved superior from point of experience accessibility to adequate information, and freedom from political pressure resulting from too great a time period between the decision in the lower court and the appeal decision.

"The psychological factor involved when one student court is reversed by another is detrimental to the general integrity and best effects of council operation.

"The group also agreed that at the earliest possible time it would be feasible to amend the constitution in a way which would remove the uncertainty in the finality in any one court's decision.

"The two councils which voted felt that until such time that the constitution was amended in whatever way the constituency would wish, the Student council should cling to its recently acquired right of selecting the faculty branch which would ultimately be responsible for hearing justifiable appeal from the students.

"Heretofore this faculty group has been selected by the faculty itself, in cooperation with the defendant and student government. Under the proposed provision the Student council would select all members of the faculty board without outside interference.

"Naturally the Student council cannot both hear a case and select the board which will hear an appeal from it. In the opinion of the two councils and myself, this procedure represents a step forward in student autonomy and complies with the letter of the constitution.

"We sincerely hope that the Student council will see fit to adopt this procedure, as we consider it to be in the best interests of a sound student judiciary system.

"The meeting, of course, was neither secret, unprecedented, undercover, or unilateral."

Art Majors Ballot To Support WSSF

Art majors, in a combined business and social meeting, voted Wednesday afternoon to support the World Student Service Fund drive which begins November 2. They will dress the uptown windows in displays to promote the drive.

Ruth Evans, president of the Y.W.C.A., presented the project to the art majors, making a plea for their support. "The theory of the W.S.S.F. is educate the people so they can better help themselves." She stressed the necessity for a successful drive, and that this would be accomplished through publicity.

Informal Pep Rally Set for Tomorrow

An informal pre-game rally will be held at the Hotel Thomas in Gainesville, Florida, tomorrow morning at 11:30, head cheerleader "Myrt" Sherrard announced before leaving yesterday.

"I hope we can all meet before the ball game down there," said Myrt, "and the cheerleaders will appreciate it if everyone will pass the word around."

Sherrard also suggested that all students driving down decorate their automobiles in Carolina Blue and White crepe paper.

Women Number 958 In Enrollment of 7,258

By Raney Stanford

With coeds who know their colleges best, it is the University of North Carolina, 6 males to 1 woman, according to a break-down of this year's enrollment figures released yesterday by Chancellor Robert House. Of this year's record-breaking total of 7,258 students, 958 are women.

Every state in the union but seven are represented in this total enrollment, and these seven are all far western with the sole exception of Vermont. Six out of every 10 students hail from North Carolina, and the Tar Heel state residents are followed by the ones from Virginia, New York, and South Carolina in that descending order.

With 4,885 men and 110 women formerly in the armed services, there are over twice as many veterans on campus as non-veterans.

Enrollment of students from foreign countries represented at the University this year is exceptionally heavy, with 53 hailing from 26 other nations, eight more countries than in 1946.

Highest registration is in the General College with a total of 3,222; followed by the college of Arts and Sciences, 1,717; the school of Commerce, 1,143; and the Graduate school with 899.

An increase of almost 25 per cent over last year was reached in the Pharmacy school registration, and the school of Medicine, with a total of 101, showed a slight gain.

Further break-down gives the school of Public Health 117 enrollees, 60 per cent of whom are graduate students, and the school of Social Work, 47 students, all of whom are in the post-graduate category.

The ratio of men to women reaches an exaggerated proportion in the school of Library Science, which has 28 women students registered, and one lone, solitary male.

Shaw Sends Photo, 'Only True Likeness of Joan of Arc', To Hans Rothe, European Producer Directing Famous Play

By Mark Sumner

A photograph, believed by George Bernard Shaw to be the only true likeness of Joan of Arc, was recently sent by the Irish playwright to Hans Rothe, European play producer and director who is directing the Carolina Playmaker production of Shaw's "Saint Joan."

The picture was made from a piece of sculpture formerly in the Church of St. Maurice, Orleans, France, and now in Rouen, France. Shaw mentions it in his preface to "Saint Joan" as being the only authentic picture of the French maid, although evidence is scant.

It was used on the program cover of the World Premiere production of "Saint Joan" in London, 1924, and according to John W. Parker, Playmaker business manager, it will be used again on the cover of the Playmaker program.

Rothe saw the original production in 1924, and discussed the picture itself with Shaw when they met some years later. Shaw believes it is a symbol of Joan's character and wrote the leading part in his play in that light.

"We have cast the play according to Mr. Shaw's interpretation of the character as he explained it to me in London," said Rothe.

Eleanor Ringer of Asheville, who played in the Asheville Community Theatre's production of "Dark of the Moon" and in the Playmaker productions of "State of the Union," "Hear the Hammers Ringing," and "Innocence," is to portray the role of Joan.

"Saint Joan" is the first play of the Carolina Playmakers thirtieth season. It will open in the Playmaker Theatre for a four day run on October 29.

Student Council-- Stick to the Rules

The Constitution specifically states that students who are tried by Honor councils shall have the power to appeal to the Student council for a review of the case. Many campus leaders have seen the disadvantages of such a system. It has been condemned by Dewey Dorsett, former president of the student body and by Tom Eller.

Dean Fred Weaver in a written report on the Constitution, July, 1946, stated, "Inasmuch as there is no jurisdictional differences between the two courts it is impossible to establish a clear basis or reason for two trials. Consequently, one of the courts becomes unnecessary, and beyond being unnecessary, a serious impediment to the effecient functioning of student government."

It is not the merits of the court system that we condemn (nor is it) the three Councils—for feeling that there is no need for the appellate power of the Student Council. t is the tactics they employ to try to change the existing system. Amendment number five in last spring's election was, in effect, an attempt to relieve the Student council of the power to review cases that ed been appealed. A sufficient number of ...ts o... were unconvinced that this power should not be exercised by the Council. The amendment registered only a 52 percent majority in favor of abolishing the appellate power. A two-thirds vote was necessary to carry the amendment.

If the Councils feel strongly that it is an injustice to the students involved if the Student Council reviews repealed cases they should orient the campus and cite specific cases in order to prove their points. Then in the December elections they should prepare another amendment to present to the student body for a vote.

It is only a reflection on their honesty and integrity; it endangers their character as an individual to hold a secret meeting and agree not to exercise their powers. When the Student council members were elected they swore to uphold the constitution and to perform the duties of office.

We do not know precisely what took place behind the closed doors Wednesday night, but implications from a reliable source are that in the future the Student council will hold only a "mock" session to pass a resolution to refer the case to a faculty committee.

The members of the Student council were not elected for that purpose.

Portrait of a Backyard

...cr wling on his hands ... p ...p n—the com... was broken glass, ... d a pile of very muddy clay. A broken bottle with its jagged edge upright like a sore thumb. Another little shaver, supposedly looking after the little kid, kept running under the house to add a few sticks to the little fire he had started under his matchbox of a home. This is a scene taken from Victory Village.

It is not the parent's fault that their children are not in day school or a kindergarten. They tried, but all of the church school nurseries are full. Their mothers must work during the day to supplement the monthly GI checks. At least one mother has taken it upon herself to organize a nursey in which each of the mothers will contribute an equal amount of time. But the number of children a system of this kind will accommodate is limited.

What is needed is a day nursery that will accommodate a large number of children. They need facilities to take care of children from a few months old to six years of age. They need equipment to prepare nourishing food for the children during the time when the fathers are in school and the mothers are working. Near the nursery building there should be enough outdoor room to build a playground for the kids to be out in the open when weather permits.

It is not fair to the parent or the child to have to rough it out in Victory Village. They deserve some consideration. We urge the University to acknowledge this situation and establish a nursery center for the care of the children during the day. Temporary buildings could be secured from WAA and also the equipment necessary for the maintenance of such a center. Probably all of the staff of the center could be picked from the mothers already in the village. Expenses would be quite low and a slight fee to cover the cost of maintenance could be charged for each child.

We implore the administration to examine the conditions themselves and see the great need for such a center. You owe it to the married students.

Unaccustomed as I Am...

For a man interested in helping himself the Debate squad of the University affords about the best means we can imagine. The speakers who stood before their audience, cleared their throat and then began with "Unaccustomed as I am to public speaking . . . "have no place in the world of today.

It would be difficult to find a spot so remote that there is no demand for a speaker even for the smallest occasion. A man can have the most brilliant thoughts in his head, but unless his thoughts flow from his lips, the thoughts are worthless. The debate squad is one means of thawing out these thoughts.

There is no doubt but that public speaking and forensic activities are arts. Even the greatest speakers, actors, and men who are continually in the limelight consistently remark that on every speaking occasion they feel the same sensation of fear and ill-at-ease. But they overcome this after the first few minutes of speaking.

Public speaking is a peculiar art if we use the other arts as a criteria. When we read the work of an artist or examine his attempts on canvass we are at liberty to either close the book or walk away from the picture. It is not considered proper to leave a gathering when a speaker is involved in his elocution. The only alternative is to sweat out the speech, and steer away from another address by the same speaker.

The Debate squad offers a training ground for potential speakers. Easy delivery comes only through practice—before an audience.

The 'New Look'? No!

By Pete Gerns

"Long skirts are not here to stay" according to the majority of the 100 students who were polled on this subject over a two-day period this week. 34 persons thought that the skirts and bustles had a good chance to stick around for a while, ten years, maybe, and even thirty, according to one optimistic soul. The breakdown of the poll which was conducted by class and sex is as follows:

Question: "Are long skirts here to stay?"

Male—Frosh, yes 1, no 9; Soph, Yes 7, no 13; Jr., yes 5, no 15; Sr., yes 5, no 20.

Female—Jr., yes, 7, no 3; Sr., yes 9, no 6.

18 out of 75 male students, or 24 per cent, and 16 out of 25 coeds, or 64 per cent, feel that the wardrobe designers have done a good job. Some offered individual comment: Carol Driver said: "I think long skirts are pretty, myself," while Bill Wood offered: "The women who allow designers to change their style of clothes as suddenly as they did, show great weakness of character." "I think they'll change and will get longer yet" adds Robin Peacock. Phyllis Knight doesn't think that long skirts should be worn constantly. "I like them for more formal occasions, but I don't like long, full skirts."

We close this column with the comment of Jud Kinberg, otherwise known as Dan the Dog. Says he: "Long skirt, dark stockings, and cocktails are the most beautiful things in this world."

For coming Tuesday, we offer this choice morsel for thought: "Who is the pursuer and who is the pursued, male or female?" Please turn all answers over to the DTH office or "Campus Forum" by Sunday evening.

This Changing World

Inevitably: A New Party

By Bill Robertson

Last week we made an analysis of those elements in the international situation which tended to lessen the danger of another major war. At the same time we mentioned that the present "war hysteria" beclouded certain immediate domestic issues seriously affecting the welfare of the American people. Principal among these domestic issues is the question of high prices and, more recently, a "meat shortage." What are the facts about this situation?

It was not so very long ago that there was another "meat shortage" in our country. This shortage was accompanied by a demand by leading packers that all price control be removed. President Truman, who has been known to give orders that the government intervene when "strikes" have been called in essential industries, decided to "intervene" once again. Price controls were removed and the shortage quickly disappeared.

Since this historic action was taken the price of meat has risen so greatly that the average house-wife has voluntarily cut the proportion of meat in her food budget. To put it in high-flown economic language—"the high price of meat has kept purchases down to a minimum for months."

Now it appears that Mr. Truman is faced once again with a "meat shortage." This present "meat shortage" is accompanied by the following remarks from Oscar Mayer, president of a large meat-packing concern, testifying before a congressional subcommittee hearing:

It cannot be said that meat is in short supply—and—Beef supplies have been particularly plentiful in 1947.

It is also accompanied by Security and Exchange Commission figures revealing that 14 packing companies, including the big 4, doubled their profits in 1946 over the previous year. On the basis of present SEC estimates Swift and Co., the largest, is expected to reap profits 80 per cent above the "highly pleasing" 1946 level.

This time President Truman has a unique solution for the problem. It appears that we must "conserve" the meat (without lowering prices) in order that less demand for meat will lead to less demand for grain. Then we may ship more of the latter to the starving people of Europe. All of this reasoning ignores the fact that house-wives have already been cutting down on their meat purchases. It also ignores Department of Agriculture statistics on the production of both grain and meat. (It would be interesting to discuss the mountains of rotting wheat in our Western states which were supposedly the result of a shortage of transportation facilities.)

Is there any solution to the problem? Yes, the solution is self-evident-although not simple. First we, the people, will have to oust the OPA-busters in congress and the "big business" cabinet of Mr. Truman from their positions of political power. We can and must do this in accordance with American democratic traditions; that is, by organizing a broad political movement. This movement will be directed against the trusts and monoplies and will answer the needs of the overwhelming majority of the American people.

It will inevitably bring forth a new party, possessing a realistic and practicable program of peace and plenty. This program will contain the people's answer to the attacks now being made upon its economic security and democratic traditions.

NSA Report

Communists Do Active Work

Editor's Note: The following is Bill Miller's second article concerning his personal observations at the National Student Association meeting held last September.)

By Bill Miller

Marvin Shaw of the Communist Party Council of Student Clubs was the leader in Communist activities. He was a dark, chubby fellow who wore heavy tortoise shell glasses, an austere person who contentedly reserved himself for floor discussions. His speeches were sharp and penetrating. They reflected his Economics interests .(He is studying for a masters in a New York School). Marvin was ably supported by Mr. Lee Marsh and company of The American Youth for Democracy (the last word was often mispronounced Demoscow), and Mr. Jeremiah Stamler for the Association of Internes and Medical Students.

Both these groups are presently more disconcerting than the Communist Party, due to the deceptive work they do under false colors. Although all student welfare organizations were voted out of the NSA, they were given the right to speak as members of the Constitutional convention. The more reputable organizations withdrew voluntarily after the vote, but not these gentlemen.

I discovered Shaw a devout reader of The Daily Tar Heel since he "tries to maintain a cross-sectional view of student activities and thought." He knew more about this University and our delegation than I could have hoped to know about him and his party. After passing out this information he proceeded to make the following points: "1.) The Communist party is reorganized by the United States government, 2.) has no connection with AYD. (J. Edgar Hoover says AYD is a Communist 'front' organization), 3.) has no dealings with the Russian government. 4.) It is not out to overthrow this government by force as some have said including Mr. Anthony Biddle, former Attorney General. 5.) The party hopes to establish through the elective process an administration embodying the Communist principles of government.

On the third day a black portfolio supposed to contain information which Herman Baker secured from the FBI was lost. On the same night Marvin Shaw was discovered inciting a caucus of Negro students to take a stand forcing NSA to go on record for the elimination of segregation. This stand would have caused the collapse of the organization for the Southern white students were bitterly opposed, giving the following reasons: 1.) The sentiments of the South would not permit such action. 2.) There were state laws which must be enforced. 3.) The legislation of such a resolution would cause the severance of relations with the Southern schools who were the only people in a position to do anything to improve conditions and carry out the ideals of the NSA.

The Southerners offered as a positive approach: 1.) Their cooperation in the investigation of the problem in all sections of the country. 2.) Support for equal educational opportunity. 3.) The assurance of interracial meetings in all southern regions giving representation to all schools.

The debate was heated and intense. Many of them believed this last strong stand made by the Reds was aimed at forcing the conservative southern delegates out and to gain more voting strength for the sections where they were most powerful. In the heated debate distrust was shown from both sides. The Southerners were in discussion among themselves at all times. It seemed the more the subject was discussed the more considerate both sides became. Northern students sought out the southern delegates for explanations as they realized there was more than mere principle involved in this question. After bickering over the word "discrimination" for two days it was agreed reluctantly by both sides that a compromise might be reached on it permitting northern schools a literal interpretation and permit for the dual educational systems of the South, provided the Supreme court does not rule that system discriminatory.

On the sixth day, a Constitutional committee, upon which John Campitt served, submitted a final draft after a session which lasted continuously for 40 hours. It read as follows: "To secure and maintain equal rights for all people and to secure equal opportunities for education at all levels regardless of race, sex, national origin creed and political belief or economic circumstances: especially by securing the eventual elimination of all forms of discriminatory educational systems anywhere in the U.S., since the NSA is opposed in principle to such systems. . .The NSA encourages wide investigation and discussion of the problems of inequality which exist in order to secure their elimination. However, in view of the complex nature of the problem and the limitations imposed by present state rights, statutes, and laws, it shall be the policy to take action on national, regional and campus level through corresponding organizations of NSA to implement stated principles with regard to the legal limitations involved."

Temperament was at a peak as Marvin Shaw arose and bitterly denounced the "weak' proposal. He demanded the "elimination of segregation clause The climax came—Jim Jorda of the Association for the Advancement of Colored people rose and shouted, "We don't need no Communist to help us solve our problems—we oppose the proposal in principle, but we accept it of necessity." The Convention burst into applause which lasted nearly five minutes.

I was convinced the unity of the Association was assured with this final denunciation of the Communists.

Write Away

The 'New Look'? Yes!

To the Editor:

Electing to be one of the most unpopular men on campus, I hereby take paper in typewriter to defend the "new look." Dispensing with the square vs. round and flat vs. padded arguments, I choose to take a rather serious look at about all there is left to look at, the long skirt.

First, I like it. That is merely the result of having seen many a hidden calf in New York City. Like any style, you see it enough, you adjust to it.

But more important, I believe the new length is here for its share of the stay. The creators of the styles are leaches on our social system, and well they know it. The United States, with the almighty dollar tantamount to social position, gives impetus to the old, "we own something the neighbors don't," the very blood for the style leach. If those financially, and thereby socially, on top, have it, the catch-up bug plagues every strata of society to follow suit. And Adrian loves it.

The so-called financial aristocracy will buy the "new look" and why shouldn't they? They are burdened with the excess of where-with-all and leisure to make the latest style practically a life issue. The nouveau riche, in their struggle to be among the established elite, will of course follow. And so on down the line to the lower-middle-class wife who wants to be the best dressed at her friend's wedding; and, not to be overlooked, the coed with the same outlook towards the next dance.

It is argued that there are some people with a truer sense of values. And I, a newcomer to the South, have long heard this the land of such people. But the ever-growing capitalistic South is strongly felt. And with it must come the economic society.

It boils down to this: if Mrs. Vanderbilt has the "new look," Mrs. Henry Kaiser must have the "new look," the office manager's wife must have the "new look," the secretary must have the "new look," the coed will have the "new look."

Yes, it appears that the long skirt is inevitable, though the change may be slow. Why not resign ourselves, then, to the new length, with no end in view, much less anything else.

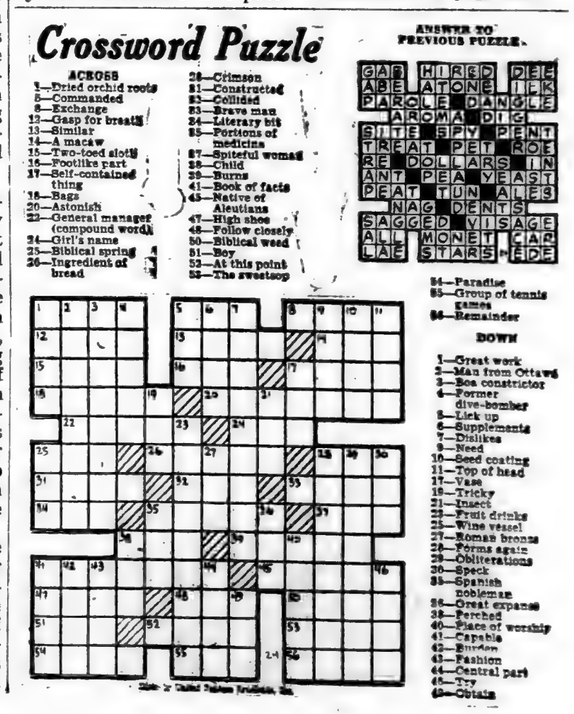
Rushing Complaint

To the Editor:



I am of the opinion that the present system of rushing by the fraternities is a poor one, unfair to the freshman and possibly to the fraternity as well. Having been through rushing as a freshman and at present being acquainted with several freshmen who are now going through the process, I feel that they have not had time to make a well thought out decision as to whether they prefer fraternity life to that of dormitory life. . . .

Undoubtedly the lively atmosphere of the fraternity house during rush week must seem very inviting as contrasted to a lonely room in town. Of course, the freshman doesn't have to join a fraternity right away, and is told so, but the pressure is there.

Booters Score First Triumph With 3-0 Win Over High Point

The Sporting Picture

By Billy Carmichael, III

Officially Speaking

SUCH AS ONE will hate to admit it, it is becoming an established fact after four weeks of this crazy football season that the officiating of the game is definitely on the upgrade. Those four fellows with the stripes that were formerly thought to be running in the wrong direction, are really beginning to observe scrupulously and punish all the little crimes committed that are termed by the rule book as somewhat detrimental to the game. Gabe Hill did not fall in vain.

That such as the Sugar Bowl incident had much bearing on the improvement can possibly be safely stated, inasmuch as the officials received severe warning of the possible consequence of a "maybe he did, maybe he didn't" decision. And too, the keep-order lads seem to have prepared themselves with a little more of the necessary information to cope those out-of-the-way situations that will arise and give J. Horner and the boys material for weeks on end.

Still, there can be seen a need for slightly more proficient officials, who have the ability and the agility to cope with the simultaneous antics of 22 bruising and bouncing specimens of humanity. Possibly the answer now is the introduction of some new and younger faces that have the physical capabilities, co-ordination and quickness that modern football requires. At present, officiating is like railroad engineering—seniority rates the top assignments.

Obviously, no official can be completely infallible, and there will arise questionable situations as long as there is left in the world a single pop bottle, and a single fan to use it. Famous officiating blunders come down through the ages, with now-forgotten Red Fizzell, holding the record of two major mishaps in one lifetime along with the forementioned Mr. Hill. It seems Mr. Fizzell told Carnegie Tech that it was third down one time when it happened to be fourth, which prompted the Tech lads to run another play before booting from deep in their own territory. In the end the only thing they had to kick was Fizzell since Pitt, who happened to be their opponent at that time, was given the ball and was not long for the Tech goal line and a one-point victory.

Fizzell tried this "do unto others" routine again the following year, when he gave Cornell a fifth down which enabled the big Red to nose Dartmouth, 7-3. Cornell, with Snavely at the helm incidently, gave the game back to the Indians after the motion pictures had shown the error. Fizzell, to finish up the story, shifted to the pro leagues the following year, but had even less luck there, being run over and trampled by Ace Parker one Sunday afternoon while studiously observing a play. Result: one broken leg with accompanying bruises, and subsequently, Red's reluctant retirement from the profession.

Gabe Hill's two misplays need no explanation, but have the singular distinction of being pulled both in the same season, the double tip pass play that brought Tennessee victory over Duke in Durham, and the New Orleans forward lateral. No further comment is forthcoming.

Noticeable Improvements

NEVERLESS, IT IS easily noticeable that improvements have been in order. Never before has such genius been shown in catching culprits guilty of offensive and defensive holding from tackle to tackle, or are these eyes being deceived. Illegal use of hands has long been an infraction that has been allowed to get out of hand, slowing the game up immensely and giving a sluggish attitude to the whole proceedings.

Infractions of this class can also lead to serious injury, such as in the case of clipping which the pro teams considered such a threat to life and especially limb, as to charge the offender 25 yards instead of the already-disadvantageous 15 rendered to collegiate culprits. Many a potentially great college player has had his career cut to a numb by one thoughtless clip by a thoughtless blocker.

Another possible cause for the improvement of the officiating is the constant vigilance of the national rules committee which keeps the well-known hawk eye on proceedings at all times and makes necessary things when causes demand. Striking example of their work can be demonstrated in year-before-last's outlawing of the forearm block which made the T-formation so effective, but was the cause of a striking number of chest injuries, the most severe of which resulted in the death of a Wisconsin lineman in 1944. Hence a change was necessary. Also, the clarification of ambiguous rules by the committee aids in their proper enforcement by the officials on the field.

The obvious conclusion is that officiating is progressing, but likewise so is the game of football, and the question now is, "Can the blind boys hold the pace?" Time and a few more bowl games will surely tell. Needless to say, the game of football, those who play it, and those who watch it too, will profit by better officiating which for the first time is poking forward its halo-bound head.

Tar Heel Renaissance

ALL EYES interested in the fame and fortunes of the Tar Heels will be swung in the general direction of Gainesville, Florida this weekend when the local lads attempt to continue the condition known now as the Tar Heel renaissance or perhaps better—reformation, for another week at the cost of the Gators who represent the state sunkissed oranges and equally-well osculated bathing beauties.

Jackson and Singer Pace Locals' Attack

By Bill Kellam

Smashing through for a goal in each of the last three periods, Carolina's booters showed a lot of spirit but little of anything else yesterday afternoon on Fetzer field as they racked up their first victory of the season by dumping High Point college, 3-0.

With the Duke contest just around the corner, Coach Marvin Allen was far from pleased with the Blue and White's performance and when asked to comment on his charges showing yesterday afternoon he moaned, "If we don't play better against Duke we'll really catch it. Our team play was poor and the only use we made of our heads was to bat the ball around with them. We need a lot of work before we play Duke here next Tuesday."

Opening Quarter

Scrappy Basil Jackson and lanky Al Singer led the Tar Heels as they puffed up and down the field during the uneventful opening quarter. The Allenmen penetrated deep into High Point territory several times during the period but their hurried kicks were all either too high or too wide.

The High Point goalie finally put the Tar Heels into the scoring column in the second quarter when he allowed a weak kick by Dave Ferebee to slip between his legs and apparently sweaty palms for the first Carolina score. Jackson, Jesse Greenbaum, and Frank Nelson sparked the Blue and White in this period. Nelson broke up several offensive thrusts by the Panthers and Greenbaum kept the Tar Heel offense from lagging by his skillful ball handling.

Jackson, Partner Gain Doubles Title

The combination of Jim Jackson and Bob Goldwater gained the doubles championship of the Graham Memorial ping-pong tournament yesterday afternoon in a hotly - contested, five - game match.

Playing against Burton Brown and George Whitted, the victors had a rough time before finally coming through to victory by scores of 21-19, 21-14, 13-21, 21-16, 21-14. In winning, Jackson and Goldwater retained the doubles crown that they captured in Graham Memorial's summer tourney.

In singles play, Tom Wadden moved into the finals of the losers' bracket by defeating Whitted and Archie Goodwin in successive matches. Wadden's semi-final triumph saw him drop Goodwin in a very torrid contest. The scores were 21-18, 19-21, 21-19.

The other half of the once-beaten bracket has several players competing to see who will meet Clark Taylor in the semi-final round. The winner will run up against Wadden.

Tar Heels Arrive In Gainesville This Morning For Florida Clash

Snavelymen Rate Role of Favorite

Carolina's invading Tar Heels are scheduled to get off their southbound train in Gainesville, Fla., at about 10:30 this morning after an all-night train ride to the site of their Saturday contest with the Florida Gators.

A squad of 41 Tar Heel gridders made the journey, accompanied by the coaches and trainers that customarily travel with the club. The team will set up headquarters in the Thomas hotel in Gainesville.

Light Workout

The Tar Heel gridders plan to hold a light workout on the Florida field this afternoon at 3:30. Coach Carl Snavely will not have his squad doing any rough work, but the boys will at least be able to get the kinks out of their muscles from the train ride.

Carolina has been installed as the favorite over Coach Ray Wolf's boys by about two touchdowns, but the Florida outfit, which won its first game of the season last week against N. C. State, is determined that the Tar Heels shall not repeat their 1946 victory. Carolina won last year by 40-19 in Chapel Hill.

The Carolinians appear equally determined, and although they have broken even in four games, only last week did they snap a two-game losing streak with a 13-7 triumph over William & Mary up in Williamsburg, Va.

DOUG BELDEN
. . . leads Gators air attack.

Carolina, touted as the team to beat in the South in pre - game prognostications, has been making the experts look bad thus far, and they will be out to prove that they merited that rating. If the Tar Heels win they will possess a record of better than .500 for the first time since their first victory.

41 Gridders Make Southward Trip

Non-Conference Tilt

The game is a non-conference affair for both clubs. Florida is a member of the Southeastern conference, with the Tar Heels belonging to the Southern conference. Carolina will be playing its second game against a Southeastern foe. Earlier in the season they beat defending champion Georgia, 14-7, in Chapel Hill.

Pacing the Florida offensive are Doug Belden, Tommy Bishop, Charlie Hunsinger, and Charlie Forbes. The Gators run from the T-formation.

Carolina Netters Oppose Davidson Today

The tennis teams of North Carolina and Davidson square off in a fall practice match this afternoon at 2 o'clock on the varsity courts.

The feature clash of the day pits Tar Heel Clark Taylor against the Wildcats' number one ace, Bo Roddey. Both players performed in the nationals at Forest Hills this summer, Taylor being eliminated by Frankie Parker and Roddey by Eddie Moylan.

In back of Taylor, Coach Kenfield is expected to use Ray Morris, Heath Alexander, Charlie Rice, Jack Kenfield, and Stan Gruner in the singles engagements. Should there be more than six singles encounters, Don Peck, Duke Wilder, and Bert Ingram will be used.

Forming the doubles combinations will be Taylor and Rice, Alexander and Kenfield, and Morris and Peck. The latter duo were co-captains of the 1944 Tar Heel netters.

Others in the Davidson lineup are Ted Keesler, Len Keesler, Jerry Robinson, and Whit Cobb.

Tar Babies Encounter State Jayvees Today

A 42-man junior varsity squad will journey to Raleigh to tangle with State college's Wolf Cubs in Riddick Stadium this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Plagued by injuries and varsity promotions, the Tar Babies, coached by Crowell Little, will enter the game carrying a single victory against no defeats. In their initial encounter the locals downed the South Carolina Bantams, 13-0.

Linemen Promoted

The Carolina jayvees will be without the services of linemen Roscoe Hansen, Dick Featheroff, and Huck Holdash, all of whom have been promoted to the varsity squad as a result of their showing two weeks ago.

Leading the Carolina attack will be the ball-toting trio of Gus Purcell, Merle Norcross and Bob Koontz. Koontz starred in the last jayvee game and scored one of the game's two touchdowns.

Expected to carry the brunt of the State attack is highly touted freshman fullback John Huzvar. Directed by "Butter" Anderson, Wolfpack Jayvee coach, the Little Staters were edged out by Duke's Blue Imps, 7-0, in

Dobbens, Mangum Crush Opponents

By Kyle Cox

The intramural tag football program closed out its third week of play yesterday afternoon with all 14 teams staging torrid battles in an effort to raise their percentage standings.

Two games overshadowed the rest in the high-scoring bracket. The Mud Dobbens came through with a smashing conquest of Old East by a 42-0 margin while Mangum was staging a rout with Graham and coming out on the long end of a 37-0 score. Oscar Lovelace was the big gun for Graham and topped all scoring for the afternoon with three touchdowns and an extra marker to his credit.

GM Postpones Square Dance; Will Amplify Game Saturday

In deference to the University Veterans association dance this evening, Graham Memorial's Y court square dance will be postponed. More than 200 participated in last week's square dance, and Nancy Tucker, student union recreational director announced the series will be resumed again next Friday evening.

The Carolina Florida football tilt will be broadcast through the loudspeakers in Graham Memorial main lounge tomorrow afternoon, beginning at 2 o'clock, and the latest football scores, received through Daily Tar Heel wire service will be posted in the lounge immediately following the game. In the Rendezvous on the ground floor of the union, Scott Gardner's campus orchestra will play from 8:30-12:30 both tonight and tomorrow night.

Music takes over in the union Sunday as four separate concerts are scheduled. The second Sunday Sing will begin in Memorial hall at 8 o'clock in the evening. Directed by Mark Barker and Avery Gibson, the 45-minute song session will feature an even dozen popular and folk favorite tunes, in addition to three specialty numbers by student performers.

For classics fans, "Music by Candlelight" is scheduled in the main lounge from 8:30-10:30 Sunday night. Recordings of Brahms, Rimsky-Korsakov, Weber, and comtemporaries will be aired in the two-hour show.

by several fraternities was impressed when told by a member that his fraternity wasn't founded by a bunch of fellows interested in nothing but drinking and a good time, but that it had been founded on Christian principles. Most of the fraternities make this claim. It was called to my attention recently that a condition that one must fulfill to become a member of a certain fraternity on the campus was that he must be a "male, white person of full Aryan blood." (A fine Christian principle!) Our learned sociology department is of the opinion that no such animal exists, living or dead.

E. B. White, noted writer, has said that "a 'fraternity' is the antithesis of fraternity. The first (that is, the order or organization) is predicated on the idea of exclusion; the second (that is the abstract thing) is based on a feeling of total equality. . . . Fraternity begins where the exclusion formula is found to be distasteful."

The point being: does the good of a fraternity outweigh the bad? This, of course, is a matter of opinion. The freshman should be adjusted to college life before trying to make this decision. I think a period of one or preferably two quarters should elapse before rushing begins. . . .

Copies of last year's Daily Tar Heels will be on display in Horace Williams lounge all day tomorrow. There are many extra copies which will be given to whoever wants them.

BOOTERS

The Blue and White eleven racked up their second goal on a beautiful play in the third quarter by the ever-hustling Jackson and Dave Boak. The Tar Heels were awarded a corner kick by the officials and Jackson made a perfect boot to directly in front of the High Point goal where Boak jumped into the air with perfect timing to deftly tip the ball into the net with his noggin.

Al Williams shone on the defense for the locals by breaking up several Panther scoring thrusts and setting the High Pointers back by returning the ball to midfield with his long kicks and throws.

The contest was played with unlimited substitution permissible and so at the beginning of the final period Allen inserted a complete new Tar Heel team. Up until the last thirty seconds of the contest, the subs and the tiring Panthers raced up and down the field breaking up each other's attacks and doing little but tiring their legs.

With less than half a minute remaining, Bill Moore booted the ball into the goal on another corner kick play for Carolina's final marker.

Substitute goalie Dave Sobel made two of the most brilliant plays of the afternoon during the final quarter when he blocked in succession two savage kicks headed straight for paydirt.

Little Hebron Cobel paced the visitors' losing efforts.

Traffic School to Hear Cherry Speak Today

Governor Cherry will speak in Chapel Hill at 10 o'clock this morning when 120 graduates of the Institute of Government's traffic school receive certificates qualifying them for admittance into the fifth largest state highway patrol in the nation.

The governor is expected to make a short congratulatory address to the men who have completed six weeks of training in traffic law enforcement. The graduation ceremonies will take place at the highway patrol's headquarters on Raleigh road.

Hatcher to Attend

According to Captain David Lambert, director of the traffic school, the graduates will not be sworn into patrol membership until next Saturday. Besides Lambert and Governor Cherry, other officials present will be Colonel H. J. Hatcher, commanding officer of the state highway patrol and Colonel L. C. Rosser, state commissioner of motor vehicles.

The state general assembly last spring authorized the highway patrol to double its strength through an intensive training program administered by the Institute of Government here. In two six-week schools approximately 220 new patrolmen are being added to the force, bringing it to a total of 423 patrolmen, fifth largest in the U.S.

Trainees Selected

From 1,200 applicants from all over North Carolina, 120 trainees were selected to attend the school ending this morning.

R. GREGG CHERRY

The 120 were chosen on the basis of strict intelligence tests and physical examinations.

"The school which these men have today completed," said Terry Sanford, training director of the Institute, "is the second of its kind to be sponsored by the Institute of Government during the year. Registration will begin Sunday, November 2, for a four-weeks school in basic police procedure. Courses will be designed to train officers from all city, county and state law enforcement agencies in basic police science."

Union Sunday Sing Scheduled For Memorial Hall Tomorrow

Starring specialties by three student musicians, and under the leadership of Bob Andrew, tomorrow evening's second weekly Graham Memorial Sunday sing will come off in Memorial hall, beginning at 8 o'clock.

"The program will probably last a little over 45 minutes," said Mark Barker, in charge of the show for Graham Memorial. "This will enable everyone to be out in time for the 9 o'clock movies and evening meetings.

"These Sunday Sings have been extremely popular in the past, and I hope Memorial hall will be filled this time," added Barker. A dozen popular and folk tunes are scheduled to be sung. Lyrics will be flashed on a movie screen via slides.

Specialists set to appear are Coline Smith, leader of last Sunday's song session and musical comedy star of the campus; Sybil Drake, student pianist, playing "Rhapsody in Blue;" and vocalist James Caudill.

Tarnation to Satirize Carolina BMOC's Announces Editor from Bombproof Office

By Bill Sexton

Campus wheels, ankle-length dresses, and Carolina in general are in for a stiff ribbing come late November, Tarnation Editor Tookie Hodgson announced from his bomb-proof office in Graham Memorial yesterday.

Tarnation's fortified headquarters, located midway between the first and second floors of the student union to baffle enemy bombardiers, has become the scene of bustling activity. Only four weeks remain before the first issue of the current humor mag rebirth is due off the presses, and camofleurs, armor-plate installers, and radar experts already have detected the flaming breath of the deadline dragon close behind them.

"The staff is confident," Tookie declared yesterday, "that all preparations will be in order when the first of our four issues this year arrives."

Meanwhile—in their decentralized hideaways concealed throughout Chapel Hill—writers, artists, and the indefatigable Tookie himself are busily pushing deadlines. Security regulations prevent release of specific information on the coming fall issue until fortifications have been completed in Graham Memorial, but a communique from Hodgson's command post at the Phi Gam house hinted at the main theme of Tarnation.

"It," says Tookie, "will look a little bit like the New Yorker."

Espionage reports indicate the following material is now being readied for publication:

(1) Slightly exaggerated profile of Tom Eller.

(2) Tough-and-not-so- gentle cartoon caricatures of campus bigwigs and politicos, on theme "If This Be Libel, We Agree."

(3) A connoiseur's guide to movies, fashions, records. Theme: "If You Think 'Time' Is Tough, Read This!"

Confirmation is not forthcoming from tempestuous Tookie, who learned during the hardly gentle fight over reviving a campus humor magazine that anything you say will be held against you. Hodgson has played politics hard in a career which includes vice-presidency of his freshman class, a term as secretary of the Publications board, membership on the Orientation committee and Graham Memorial Board of Directors, and staff positions with the Daily Tar Heel, and Carolina Mag. As main instigator toward reviving a humor publication he came through bitter opposition last spring victoriously.

"But," says Tookie, "if anything beats me, it's not Dan the Dog or Fred the Quadruped—it's these parttime students sandbagging our windows. If they don't hurry, heaven help us!"

GM BINGO GAME

The regular Graham Memorial bingo game will come off this evening at 8 o'clock in GM's main lounge. Mark Barker, who will act as M.C., announced that cards will be sold for two cents per.

Authorities Probe Airplane Crash Which Killed 52

By the United Press

Bryce Canyon, Utah, Oct. 24—Officials of the Civil Aeronautics Administration and United Airlines arrived here tonight to begin investigation of the nation's second worst air disaster early this afternoon.

Fifty-two persons—one less than U.S. history's greatest air tragedy at Port Deposit, Md. last May—died in the wreckage of the United Airlines DC-6. The huge plane crashed barely 1500 yards from a small emergency field which Pilot E. L. McMillen headed for when fire was discovered in the baggage compartment of the DC-6.

United Airlines officials declared tonight that they were "completely mystified" by the fire, which eleven minutes after discovery caused the death of all 52 aboard the flight—45 adults, two infants, four regular crew members, and an extra stewardess in training.

Five hours after the crash the plane was still smoking, and officials predict it will be hours before they can begin the tragic task of identifying the burned and broken corpses.

Onlookers described the explosion of the plane as one reminiscent of the atom bomb newsreels. Pieces of the big craft were hurled in every direction, some falling 200 feet into famous Bryce Canyon. One airlines official estimated wreckage and bodies covered more than an acre.

For nearly an hour after the plane struck ground and exploded residents in the vicinity were unable to approach the plane because of the intense flames. Onlookers said some of the passengers were crushed to death when hurled out of the fiery plane by the violent explosion; others died in the flames that followed.

President: Congress Called to Stave Off Hunger, Depression

Washington, Oct. 24—(UP)—In a radio address to the American people tonight President Truman declared that he called Congress into a special session to stave off "depression here at home and defeatism abroad."

High prices in America and hunger in Europe, said the chief executive, are endangering both domestic prosperity and world peace.

Though the president did not he would make to Congress for relieving inflation at home, he challenged what he called "the course of inaction" in the current crisis. He warned that the government would have to assume a "larger share" of the responsibility for bringing the cost of living down.

As for expenditures abroad, President Truman estimated that more than $642 million would be required for emergency relief in France, Italy, and other needy European nations. This sum, he declared, would see Europe's hungry only through the first quarter of 1948, when Congress again would face the same problem.

John Parker Will Address New York Theater Directors

John W. Parker, director of the bureau of community drama of the extension division of the University, will speak to a meeting of New York state community theatre and school theatre directors at Cornell University, Ithyca, N. Y., today. His subject will be the "Theatre and the Community."

JOHN W. PARKER

Mr. Parker, an assistant director of the Carolina Playmakers, left last night by plane for Cornell. He joined the bureau of community drama in 1934 as field representative. His work at that time included coverage of the whole state, offering courses in play production, playwriting, and directing to teachers and community theatre groups.

In 1946, he was made director of the bureau and for the past 12 years he has been secretary of the Carolina Dramatic Association, an organization made up of school and community theatre groups in all sections of the state.

A part of Mr. Parker's work with the association is planning and coordinating regional drama festivals and the annual state festival in Chapel Hill each spring.

He is business manager and assistant director of the Carolina Playmakers, and as an associate professor in the department of dramatic art, he instructs courses of interest to students who are planning to work in the field of community drama or in recreational drama.

Campus Party Holds Election, Appoints Finance Committee

Election of officers and appointment of a finance committee were the main topics on the agenda of the Campus party in its Graham Memorial meeting Thursday afternoon.

Walt Arnold of Bristol, Virginia, and Ralph Sherrill of Winston-Salem were elected to the offices of vice chairman and treasurer, respectively.

Jess Dedmond, party chairman, appointed Colene Smith, Don Hanes, and Ralph Sherrill to the organization's finance committee.

Arnold, who came to the campus in January of this year, is a member of the Student Legislature.

Sherrill, who transferred from Pfeiffer junior college in January of last year, is a member of the elections committee of the Legislature.

Show for Children Is University Aim In New Broadcast

Classical music and dramatic entertainment will be woven together on the air this morning at 10:45 when "Musical Merry-go-Round," a new University radio program for children, is broadcast over the Tobacco network including stations WRAL and WDUK.

Student James Geiger has been chosen as narrator of the series.

"Geiger will play the role of ringmaster of the musical merry-go-round," explained Stuart Lucas, director of the show. "With his fatherly voice, he will escort the children on a make-believe carousel, help them catch musical brass-rings, present various animals through means of music, and introduce the soloists."

The first aim of the broadcast, according to Lucas, is to capture the children's attention by entertaining them.

"Although we do not want to frighten away our listeners," Lucas said, "we will strive to give them instruction in music appreciation."

The repertoire of the North Carolina little and full symphony orchestras will be featured on "Musical Merry-Go-Round."

With the braying and hoof-beats as introduction, the ringmaster will present three musical interpretations of donkeys and horses: Ferde Grofe's "Grand Canyon Suite," Ibert's "The Little White Donkey" and "Meadowland," the Russian cavalry song by Knipper.

Comintern Effect To Be Discussed

"Will the Comintern Destroy the United Nations?" is slated to be the question placed before an open forum sponsored by the Carolina chapter of the CCUN Thursday night, November 6.

The forum, which was planned at yesterday's meeting of the executive council of the local organization, will be held in either Gerrard Hall or Roland Parker lounge.

Guest speakers for the forum will be University professors whose names have not been announced.

Student Leaders Of Duke, Carolina To Assemble Here

Student body President Tom Eller and other student government representatives will meet with their Duke university counterparts Tuesday evening to discuss prevention of pre-game vandalism before the annual struggle between the traditional rivals.

Attending the meeting which will be held at 8 o'clock in the Carolina Inn, will be Eller; Jack Folger, student body vice-president; Barron Mills, Daily Tar Heel editor; Myrt Sherard, head cheerleader; and Dean Weaver representing the administration.

Those attending from Duke will be, in the same order of offices as above, Gordon Smith, Howard Hartley, Johnny Baldwin, Bob Welch, and Dean Herring.

Several appointments were released from student government offices yesterday, including Charles MacRae to represent student government in the joint town-campus food conservation committee, Jim Taylor to the Men's council, and Emile Saleeby as chairman of the campus grounds committee to replace Jess Dedmond.

Chairman Saleeby plans to hold a wire-stringing "bee" Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the lower quadrangle to protect the new grass in that area.

Battle-of-Bands Set For WSSF Drive End

A Battle-of-Bands and the crowning of Miss Payoff of 1947 will be featured at the dance to be given in Woollen gym November 8 at the closing event of the compus drive of the World Student Service fund.

Several campus bands will provide music for dancing, playing intermittently, and at intermission the campus beauty who has received the most votes as Miss Payoff will be revealed.

All organizations are entitled to sponsor an entrant in the beauty contest. Names of entrants must be submitted to the YMCA information office by next Tues-

Carolina In Gainesville For Florida Tilt Today

By Billy Carmichael

Gainesville, Fla., Oct. 24—North Carolina's Tar Heels will be out to make it two wins in a row when they meet a resurgent Florida Gator eleven in this North Florida city tomorrow afternoon before a capacity crowd that is expected to turn out for the inter-conference clash.

The Tar Heels of Coach Carl Snavely have been installed as favorites in the game by a margin of two touchdowns, but the tricky Floridians are rated an excellent chance of pulling an upset.

Last season's engagement between the two outfits resulted in a 40-19 triumph for Carolina, although Coach Ray Wolf's aerial-minded Gators caused the Tar Heel supporters many an uncomfortable moment with a very potent passing attack.

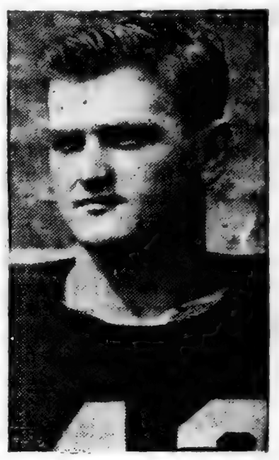
Upset Over State

Wolf's 1947 Florida squad shapes up as an even more formidable opponent, although the Gators haven't had much success from a standpoint of games won and lost. The Floridians upset N. C. State, 7-6, last week in Raleigh, indicating that they will be a rough host to the Tar Heels tomorrow.



Prior to that win, Florida had an unprecedented losing streak of 13 games. Wolf's boys won't be anxious to get back into their losing ways, so the Tar Heels can expect an all-out effort on the part of the Gators to kindle a win streak.

Carolina has not been too impressive either this season, but the team showed decided improvement in the 13-7 win over William and Mary up in Williamsburg last week. The Tar Heel linemen were opening big holes in the center of the Indian line, and the Carolina backs piled through for considerable yardage.

With both teams appearing to be on the upgrade, the game promises to bring considerable excitement to the Florida campus, which hasn't had much in the way of football thrills recently.

The Florida supporters, encouraged by their team's fine showing against State's Wolf-

Di Defeats Bill Proposing Renewal of U.S. Food Control

The Dialectic senate defeated a bill proposing renewal of government control of U.S. food prices during its weekly session Wednesday night.

John Zucker's introduction of the bill was followed by Bill Hardin's presentation of the senate Ways and Means committee's report on the food price situation.

The bill proposed that "The president should set up a federal commission to set the retail price on comodities and control the price situation so that the United States would be able to send sufficient food to Europe to stave off starvation this winter."

Principal speaker, Dr. J. N. Guthrie, member of the economics department and former member of several food committees, stressed the point that enforcement of government regulations under the WPB and OPA proved unsatisfactory during the war.

Several substitutes and modifying proposals that were introduced to the 55 persons present at the meeting were defeated.

New members who were accepted by and sworn into the senate Wednesday night were Don Latts, William Pettigrew, Osborne Fields, Ann Wells, Herbert Price, Charles L. Wilder, Chick Slack, Randall A. McLeod, and Jerry Weiss.

Baritone Yves Tinayre to Give Recital Of Ancient Music in Hill Hall Tuesday

Yves Tinayre, distinguished French baritone, will present a recital of ancient vocal music in Hill Music hall next Tuesday evening, at 8:30 o'clock, as the first in a series of chamber music recitals sponsored jointly by the University Music department and the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge foundation.

Guest cards for this recital will be available at the Music department office this morning at 10 o'clock.

M. Tinayre will be assisted by the University String quartet, composed of Willis Gates, first violin; Dorothy Alden, second violin; Edgar Alden, viola; Emily Porter violoncello; and by Mr. Wilton Mason of the piano faculty.

His program will consist of three songs by Trouveres of Picardy (thirteenth century French school); the ballade, "Rose, lys," by Guillame de Machaut; the chancon, "Adieu mon Amoureuse joye," of Gilles Binchois; "Weep you no more," an Ayre by John Dowland; a chamber Cantata de Requiem by Alessandro Scarlattie, founder of the Neapolitan school.

Also on the program will be the Motetto par lo Sancto Spirito by Giovanni-Paolo Colonna; an Angus Dei by Francesco Durante, one of Scarlatti's successor's in the Neapolitan school; and the aria, "Ora pro nobis Deum," from Mozart's early Motet, "Regina Coeli," K. 106.

YVES TINAYRE

M. Tinayre was born in Paris and obtained his training as a singer in France, England, and Italy. He has done more than any other music scholar to discover and popularize music of the period from the eleventh century to the early seventeenth.

CICA to Entertain New Coeds Sunday

The Carolina Independent Coed Association will hold open house for all new independent coeds tomorrow afternoon from 4 o'clock until 5:30 in the main lounge of Graham Memorial. Graduate students and all girls who are not yet members are also invited.

The CICA has announced that Elizabeth Thomas of Carthage will be their candidate for Miss Payoff. A group picture will be taken for the Yackety-Yack during the regular meeting Wednesday night which will be held in the Grail room at 7:30.

The group has announced tentative plans to entertain the Tennessee team with the Monogram club in November. They are currently working with the Town Girl's Association in sponsoring Sadie Hawkins day.

No More Pajama Elections

The "Let's elect Bill" methor of selecting a slate of domitory officers from a group of half a dozen pajama-clad guys out in the hall is over. Since the ballot box and a properly conducted secret ballot system has been used in the dormitory election this fall there has been much more interest in dormitory. Previously the officers were elected with little forethought and the position carried with it little prestige. Therefore, the dormitory was nothing more than a place for the boys to sleep and the officers nothing more than a group who posted a notice on the bulletin board every year announcing a picnic. (which nine times out of ten did not materialize).

This year in several of the dormitories, men who wanted to hold a dormitory office, even went around to the various rooms of the dorm to politick and try to get in office. There were several spirited elections. In at least one dormitory a run-off election had to be conducted.

If a man is elected who is respected by the other residents of the dormitory, it will make the job of the councilor, whose duties have been increased since the dormitory manager system was discontinued, much easier.

With a much more organized dormitory the individuals will be able to talk over suggestions and improvements to make the over-crowded rooms more livable and also methods for keeping down the noise to a minimum, so that studying may be done in the dorms—a thing which is quite difficult.

Initiative for Freshmen

Last spring, Phi Eta Sigma, freshman honorary fraternity, was started on the University campus. Dean E. L. Mackie, faculty adviser for the group, was instrumental in starting it after talking to the national officers of the fraternity in summer meetings at Purdue and Michigan.

A freshman can become a member of Phi Eta Sigma by making a scholastic average of 95 (or half A's and the rest B's) for his first quarter or his first three quarters. The average necessary for membership in Phi Eta Sigma is higher than that needed for hi Beta Kappa, but has to be maintained [illegible] much shorter period.

expanded to a total of 56 chapters in colleges and universities all over the nation. Last year, when the fraternity came to this campus, 47 members were initiated and 21 more are expected to join this fall.

This freshman fraternity should give encouragement to good scholorship in the beginning of school life and as Dean Mackie said, "It will give the freshman something to shoot at right at first, instead of having to wait until his senior year to work for honors in scholorship." It will give to many freshmen a needed incentive for scholastic achievement and it should help to make most freshmen realize the real reason why [illegible] college.—U.S.

Cobra That Is?

Do You Feel Like Kissing a Cobra?

Bombay (UP) — Do you want to kiss a cobra?

Just look up John A. Royola, former associate of Frank ("Bring 'em back alive") Buck, and now custodian of a deckfull of animals and snakes which the American ship Flying Enterprise is carrying to New York.

Royola has caught more than 500 cobras bare-handed and has kissed at least one. He likes cobras.

"I feel sort of like an uncle to them," he said.

A Hawaiian-born Filipino and closely resembling Sabu the movie actor, he substituted for the star during the filming of Kipling's "Jungle Stories."

"My part was to give the cobra a realistic kiss," Royola grinned. "Easiest money I ever earned."

Gunpowder Helps

During the war he caught cobras for the army in the Philippines. When snake-bite serum was scarce he cauterized a bite by emptying gunpowder into the wound and lighting it with a match. He said it was a cure for any venom "if it is done pronto."

It was in Koh Sichang, 50 miles from Bangkok, that Capt. Kai de Vermond, master of the "Flying Enterprise," turned over the forward deck of his ship to Royola's "zoo," which he caught near the Siam-Burman border.

Five baby elephants with one inch of tusk for each of their five years of age were chained on the deck. In between its use for the seamen, the 550-pound "babies" kept cool by spraying themselves from a drum full of water.

One hundred and fifty monkeys shrieked and chattered in cages across the deck from the 30 cobras, five pythons and a "red-band" snake, a small reptile which Royola says is the deadliest snake in the world.

Three Malayan honey bears which look as if they came straight from a toy counter were caged across from a mandril monkey, appropriately named "Killer." This vicious monkey, about 24 inches high, with angry red eye sockets and fiery red eyeballs could kill a man easily, says Royola.

"I'd rather handle a thousand cobras than one mandril," he said.

Paradoxically, Royola puts a devenomed cobra into the Killer's cage when it becomes unmanageable, since the cobra is the only living thing the mandril fears, according to Royola.

Besides a few wild cats, civet cats and one sea otter, there were two three-month-old aardvarks. These ant-eating animals with pink-tipped snouts are as affectionate and tame as the five gibbons which amused visitors and crew with their antics.

Scouts Issue Call For Troop Leaders

The Chapel Hill branch of the Girl Scouts wants volunteers for the positions of troop leader and assistant troop leader to help with two local troops during the winter quarter.

They would like volunteers from student wives who could devote a good deal of time to the project and who would not be affected by a class schedule in the winter quarter. The proposition requires one afternoon a week.

Applications should be made to Mrs. Marion Saunders at 8186 or Mrs. N. J. Demerath at 5106. Coeds who feel they could devote enough time to the project would be acceptable.

DREW PEARSON ON The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Washington.—One of the great things about the American people is the way they rise to emergencies—especially to emergencies requiring generosity. If the People of Europe fully understood this fact, I am sure there never would be real danger of war in the future.

A friend of mine returning from Europe the other day said he was impressed by the hustle and materialistic drive of the USA and made the criticism that we were engrossed only in the business of making money. I think that I shall send that friend copies of several hundred letters I have received from all sorts of people, high and low, regarding the idea of a "Friendship Train" to collect food from the heart of America as a token of friendship to the people of Western Europe.

They are wonderful, heart-warming letters, the kind that make you proud to be an American, the kind that remind you once again that in a democracy the people are ahead of their Government. In fact, these letters are so fine that they should not be read merely by me, but by millions. To that end, I am printing parts of them below as an inspiring cross section of how this country feels toward the people—not necessarily the governments—of Europe. I am also sending copies to some of my newspaper friends in France and Italy in the hope that they may be published in Europe.

Paul L. Brandt, Mechanicsburg, Pa.—"Our Cumberland County has a lot of churches and every church has a missionary society, but they have seldom had an opportunity to work together to accomplish anything as concrete as helping put another loaded car on your 'Friendship Train.' That's a wonderfully fine plan, and I have proposed that we do it. When does the train leave its western terminal?"

Mr. Harry E. McConnell, Pittsburgh, Pa.—"Should this train be routed via PRR Conemaugh Div. to Altoona, I would regard it an honor to serve in the capacity of conductor without pay between Pittsburgh and Altoona, as I am now employed by PRR as freight conductor between these two points."

J. A. Osborne, Louisville, Ky.—"If the average folk of foreign countries, who are drawn upon to bear the actual brunt of fighting wars, knew the mind and heart of the mothers and dads of the average American family, who in turn are called upon to bear the hardship and horror of war, it would take some pretty slick leadership to arouse them to the killing stage."

Emmet M. Kelly, San Fernando Valley, Calif.—"The idea of starting a train in Los Angeles, traveling eastward and adding carload after carload of food donations from each city as it passes through is a gigantic and marvelous idea. It would be a pleasure and an honor for us to print the labels and stickers for donations to the Friendship Train."

Mrs. Lillian M. Woehrle, Easton, Pa.—"As a national officer of the Mothers of World War II, I am confident that if and when your train leaves Los Angeles, we mothers all along the route will turn out and assist in any way possible."

Dabney R. Yarbrough, Sr., Columbia, S. C.—"As a rule the people of European countries where our food is sent hardly know where it comes from, and often they are made to believe it is coming from Russia. It seems to me we should educate the people and tell them about the 'American Train,' and that the food is coming from a democratic country. Is it not possible to have the information printed in their language and have booklets enclosed in the sacks of flour or grain?"

F. E. Simkins, Lynchburg, Ohio—"I have no corn, wheat or potatoes. Nevertheless I think your idea good and I will send you a check that will buy a few bushels of the above mentioned. Why would it not be all right to include old clothing?"

A. Luce, Tacoma, Wash.—"I'm sure there will be no difficulty in filling a train to extend from coast to coast—but after that, what? Is there any way of routing these goods on a similar train through France so these people will know who their friends are?"

Elbert Baldwin, Washington, D. C.—"The train, to begin, may be only an engine and a boxcar, but I concur 100 per cent in your faith in the goodness of heart of this country. Such a train, once started, will not only be made known in its progress by every local agency—press, stage, radio, etc., that has voice—but will add boxcars and boxcars and boxcars from community to community. If your engine and boxcar get started, I think you will find it will take a fleet of ships to accommodate the response.

Ira L. Warren, Coulee City, Wash.— How about the Navy escorting the ships that will carry the 'friendship cargoes' overseas? The gifts will be from American hearts and the Navy is a party of American hearts. After all, the fleet really belongs to the people. Let the ships go in with guns roaring salutes, bands playing, flags waving—aircraft flying overhead—a never-to-be-forgotten 'Operation Friendship.'"

Ken Whipple, Scotia, N. Y.—"It will not only be the biggest act of humanitarianism ever to be put into action; it will also be the biggest kick in the pants that the 'Commies' ever had and can accomplish more for peaceful and friendly relations than our State Department. I know every Veterans of Foreign War post in the country will work 100 per cent to put it across."

Mrs. Vida Annegers, Burlington, Iowa—"Our high-school students recently voted in an all-school election to 'adopt' a school in France. If this plan could be favorably advertised, thousands of schools might follow suit and adopt similar measures. The results might be more far-reaching than we would dare to dream."

The Exigency of the Age

Sleep-walkers Like Hurricanes

By Russell G. Baldwin

The Carolina campus is fairly crawling with sleepy-walkers. They go their cozy, patter-less way like a tropical hurricane on a rampage up the Florida coast. Will it boil itself out harmlessly in the north Atlantic? Or will it veer inland and deal death to New Orleans? Who can say? So it is with the sleep-walkers at Carolina. They close their eyes and move slowly but surely in no direction at all. Where the fence is lowest there goes the herd. It is easier to follow and be part of nothing than to choose a lone course and be something. Some men are blind by circumstance, others by choice.

Somewhere beneath the mask of apathy an unpredictable turbulance lurks, awaiting the spark that will give it meaning. Just as a hurricane has its origin in apathetic air, the individual is unmoulded dust until the struggling force within him bind together in common direction. The hurricane forces in man burst forth in boiling rage in search of a target. Sometimes they spend their rage on a worthless cause. Sometimes they join it with a million others in quest of a common goal and change the cource of history. They are the benefactors of mankind.

There are some who say one should never wake a sleep-walker. It is better to let him walk over a cliff, to hear the thud of his body on the sharp rocks below, than to wake him and be the recipient of his wrath. Isolation is pacific; inbred thought is comforting, but on the day of reckoning the individual will writhe in the culminating agony of his selfishness.

Never since the dawn of history has mankind had such need for an unleashing of the hurricane forces in man. Never before has the course of history so badly needed changing. The world is on the brink of the abyss; a few more steps and it will go hurtling down to unredeemable destruction. Will no one rouse it from its slumbering? Is its wrath more to be feared than its imminent ignoble end? The hurricane forces lie dormant; the nearness of the abyss looms more terrible. Where is the keeper of the spark?

One of the great men of our time recently gave the following advice: "Identify yourself with the greatest movement of your age." He then stated that the greatest movement of this age is federal world government. In 1787 it was a movement to establish a federal national government, a super-state authority with powers greater than those of the sovereign states. Great men—Alexander Hamilton, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison — identified themselves with that greatest movement of their age and they were made greater. In 1947 the greatest movement of the age is the movement to establish a federal world government, a supernational government with powers greater than those of the sovereign nations.

Who will be the Hamilton, the Jefferson, the Madison of this age? Will you here at Carolina identify yourselves with the greatest movement of your age? Surely you won't shirk this vital duty, this great honor, this unparalleled opportunity. The exigency is urgent. It is time for the bold men to rise to their true position, to take part in the affairs of men, to still the tremblings of the weak with their courage.

Rally around the world government banner! Join the campaign to wake the sleep-walkers before they take the fatal step. World Government organizations have been established all over the world. Most outstanding is United World Federalists with chapters in every state in the Union and affiliate organizations in most of the important countries of the world. Channel the hurricane forces within you into this organization and become a part of the great world government movement. Identify yourself with this greatest movement of your age.

Mauldin's New Book

'Back Home' Condemns Legion

The American Legion is branded a political machine in the hands of a small group by Bill Mauldin in his forthcoming book, BACK HOME, which will be published October 31. This book is a record in cartoon and text of the author's experiences here since his release from the Army.

Charging that Legion policy is made at the top, and individual members are denied any real voice, the popular ex-G.I. cartoonist, in an angry chapter on "gimme gimmie" veteran organizations, says: "The young veteran who is interested in having a voice in his country's future during the next few crucial years, and hopes to make himself heard through the nation's largest veterans' organization is out of luck. Occasionally posts, and often individaul Legionnaires protest top level policies and can throw their weight around locally. But the vibration of dissenting voices seldom extends beyond the next county. Individual members have been chucked out of posts, and posts have had their charters revoked when they have become annoying."

Contending that its current motto is "policy first, veteran second, citizen third," Mauldin flails out against the Legion for "putting other interests above the Veteran's Administration." The old Legion's "selfish interests" caused it to condone an inefficient V.A. administration. Instead of helping Gen. Bradley (current head of V.A.) to clean it up the Legion actually impeded him, because he was willing to work with them but not for them. While professing much sorrow over the roofless noggins of its young membership, the Legion's high command has been strongly against every plan the Government has put forth to ease the housing shortage.

Regarding the "reprehensible" hospital situation under Himes (Gen. Bradley's predecessor) administration of V.A., he charges the Legion with exploiting the situation for its own benefit, rather than agitating for improvement. "This is one of the blackest indictments against the American Legion," he says.

The tremendous growth in Legion membership during the past two years may be attributed in part to its "big machinery," but largely, it is "a product of America's behavior towards its erstwhile heroes." Condemning the tendency amongst civilians to judge both service and ex-service men by "the chiselers, whiners, and goldbricks who are bound to show up in any group of people," and the similar trend among veterans to judge all non-veterans by "the landlord who chisels, the grocer who cheats, and the woman who didn't wait." Mauldin cautions the non-veteran citizens against an ever widening gap between the two. "If the non-veteran citizens do not exert a little more effort to give constructive aid to the veteran in regaining his place in society, then he must expect the consequences," he says. "Demagogues have winning ways, especially with the man who has no one else to whom he can turn in his troubles."

Outlines Parking Plan

Dear Sir:

In order to alleviate the parking problem for those students and members of the faculty and administration who must drive to the campus, I offer the following proposals:

1) The reservation of a centrally located parking area, such as the one behind Memorial Hall, from 8:00 AM till 4:00 PM, for the exclusive use of those who must park on campus.

2) The licensing, by a windshield sticker, of autos permitted to use that parking area.

3) The establishment of a special board to define "essential driver," to issue licenses, to hear pleas, and to punish violators.

This is an enforceable plan, since it would require patrolling of only one area rather than the entire campus. The measure seems to offer the only solution to essential parkers' problems, short of reducing the number of unessential cars.

Tar Babies Edge State Wolfcubs, 6-0, On Blocked Pass

Netmen Sweep Singles In Win Over Davidson

By Larry Fox

Sweeping all seven singles matches, Carolina's netters scored an 8-2 triumph over Davidson yesterday in a practice engagement.

The feature struggle of the afternoon saw Clark Taylor drub the Wildcats' ace, Bo Roddey, in straight sets, 6-3, 6-1. Despite flashes of brilliant tennis, Roddey was unable to cope with Taylor's consistent game and sharp passing shots.

On the second court, Ray Morris and Ted Keesler provided most of the thrills of the afternoon by battling for the full three sets before Carolina's Morris emerged victorious, 6-2, 2-6, 6-3.

Other Singles

In other singles encounters, Charlie Rice bested Len Keesler, 6-3, 6-1; Jack Kenfield downed Whit Cobb, 7-5, 6-3; Heath Alexander won over Jerry Robinson, 6-4, 8-6; Stan Gruner conquered Henry Neisler, 6-2, 6-2; and Bert Ingram completed the sweep with an 8-10, 6-1, 6-4 triumph over Bob Crossland.

"The boys looked pretty good," Coach John Kenfield commented. "Taylor especially played a fine game."

The Wildcats improved in the doubles play and were able to capture two of the three matches. Kenfield and Alexander accounted for the Tar Heels' lone tandem win by defeating Robinson and Neisler, 6-3, 6-4.

Partial Revenge

In the number one doubles tussle, Roddey gained partial revenge for his loss to Taylor by teaming up with Ted Keesler to edge Taylor and Rice, 3-6, 6-4, 6-4. Len Keesler and Cobb upset Morris and Don Peck, 6-3, 6-4, in the other doubles foray.

The Tar Heel netmen played without the services of Vic Seixas and Don Shakle, both of whom are with the basketball squad.

Devils Meet Deacs In Loop Headliner

The Southern conference battle to be waged over in Wake Forest this afternoon between the Deacons of Coach Peahead Walker and Wallace Wade's Duke Blue Devils ranks high among the nation's top gridiron tilts on tap for today.

The contest will provide some 24,000 fans who will jam the Deac's Groves Stadium with a meeting of two of the South's undefeated football powers. Duke has one tie, a 14-14 affair with Navy, to mar its record, but the Wake Forest boys have come through with clear-cut decisions in all their games thus far.

Most observers have named Wake Forest, by virtue of its convincing 19-7 win over North Carolina, as the favorite. But Duke always has enjoyed particular success against Wake Forest. No Wade-coached Duke eleven has ever lost to the Deacons.

Fetzer Dangerous

The spectators will be watching Wake Forest's Tom Fetzer with particular interest this afternoon. The Deacon tailback, who understudied Nick Sacrinty last season, has proved himself one of the South's most dangerous backs. He ranks among the top ten backs in the nation in total offense, with this yardage being accumulated on both passes and runs.

The game will have important bearing on the Southern Conference standings.

Sixty Tankmen Drilling Daily

Sixty candidates for the 1948 edition of Carolina's Blue Dolphins have been churning up the water of Bowman Gray pool for the past week in daily practice sessions.

Twelve lettermen and nine other returnees from last year's squad are back this year and Coach Dick Jamerson expects to build this year's team around this experienced nucleus.

The Monogramers include Co-Captain Mike Morrow, Norm Sper, Bob Ousley, Bob Hutton, Ike Norwood, Jerry Cook, Mac Erle, Tom Scheinman, Dan Breedon, and Bob Elliott. Two other lettermen, Co-Captain Jesse Greenbaum and Sam McCauley, are engaged in fall sports activities, Greenbaum with the soccer team and McCauley with the jayvee gridders.

Returning Reserves

Reserves from last year that will be back for the 1948 campaign include Dave Whichard, John Whichard, Al Barth, Gil Beam, Walt Carnes, Art Dietzel, Allison Pell, and Bill Truitt. Among the promising newcomers are Jim Thomas, Tom Drew, Ronnie Basescu, Jim Mericka, Dave Griffiths, Bob Snow, Hal Ingram, Bernie Harris, Joe Wratten, and Bob Sparer.

Coach Jamerson is planning to hold his first time trials this morning.

Freshman Team

In addition to the varsity outfit, a freshman team will be formed and the tank mentor urges that all first-year men interested in trying out for the squad contact him as soon as possible.

Assisting Jamerson in coaching the team is Ralph Casey, tank tutor at VMI last season and a former coach at Carolina.

Chi Omega, Tri Delt Lead in Volleyball

Kenan, Carr and Archer gained victories in Thursday night's activities in the coed volleyball tournament as the second week of competition drew to its end.

Although all three games were decided by comfortable margins, Carr was the hardest pressed in its winning efforts, downing McIver by 38-26. Kenan breezed to a 35-20 triumph over CICA and Archer came through to drub ADPi, 29-12.

The standings at the end of two weeks show Chi Omega and Tri Delt leading the parade with perfect 2-0 slates. Kenan follows closely with 2-1 while several teams have an even split in two games.

Play will continue next Tuesday with three more contests slated. The tourney has two more weeks to run.

Harriers Run Time Trial This Morning

Carolina's cross country team will run a time trial test this morning, Coach Dale Ranson announced yesterday.

The trials will be over the four-mile route and will give the harrier mentor an indication of who to start in Wednesday's meet with Duke. It will also give him a line on some of his freshman runners before the yearling squad runs its first meet.

AMONG THE RIVAL pass receivers for Carolina and Florida in today's clash are the Tar Heels' John Tandy, above, and Tommy Bishop, right, of the Gators. Tandy is in his fourth season with the Blue and White eleven.

pack, are banking their victory hopes on a trio of clever running and passing backs, each of whom has good records. Doug Belden, the boy who caused the Tar Heels so much worry with his pass pitching last year, again will be back to torment the North Carolinians. This season he is operating in the quarterback slot in the T-formation, installed this season for the first time by Coach Wolf in an effort to find a winning method.

A late telegram received last night from Gainesville reports that there has been a heavy rain in Florida and that the field will be wet for today's game. The Tar Heels worked out during a pause in the rain yesterday. The possibility of rain during the game has been predicted.

Supporting Belden will be Bobby Forbes, the flashy runner who is Florida's leading gainer. He has picked up an amazing total of 491 yards in only four games. Charlie Hunsinger, who made quite a football record for himself while in the armed services, also is in the Gator backfield. It was a 67-yard run by Hunsinger that provided Florida with its touchdown against defensively-strong State college.

Leading Receiver

Tommy Bishop, at end, shapes up as Florida's leading pass receiver. He has been making up for the loss of Charlie Williams, Gator end last year who was one of the nation's top pass receivers. Rugged Jimmy Kynes, who operates at center, is another mainstay in Wolf's forward wall.

Practice sessions for Carolina this week saw Coach Snavely drilling his boys on defensive measures to cope with the Florida offense. The Carolina Jayvees ran plays from the Gator formation, which is the same one that Georgia and Texas tried against Carolina with varying degrees of success.

Particular emphasis was placed on Carolina's aerial defense, which appeared a little shaky against William and Mary. Wolf's teams have a reputation of being proficient at passing. The Florida club didn't use many passes against State, so Wolf may have a few trick aerial plays stored away for the Tar Heels.

Former Coach

Wolf is a former Carolina coach himself, turning out top notch teams in Chapel Hill a number of years back. His 1937 Carolina outfit, paced by Andy Bershak and Crowell Little who now is head mentor of the Carolina Jayvees, ranks as one of the best teams in Carolina sports history.

Both Florida and North Carolina appear in good physical shape for the game. Len Szafaryn, big Tar Heel tackle, has been bothered by a shoulder injury all week but will probably see action.

The Tar Heels arrived in Gainesville this morning, after an all-night train ride aboard a Seaboard Railway train. Snavely sent his boys through a final checkup this afternoon, and the squad appeared in high spirits. The team is quartered in the Thomas hotel here.

The game will mark the second time this season that the Tar Heels have played a Southeastern conference foe. Georgia was defeated by Carolina, 14-7. Next week Snavely's club will meet its third foe from the Southeastern when Tennessee in-

West Coast Contest In Grid Limelight

Collegiate football reaches the midway point this afternoon, with contests over the nation today promising to throw light on possible bowl bids on January 1.

Out on the West Coast, Southern California and California will battle it out in an evenly-matched game that might have a Rose Bowl bid hinging on the outcome. Stanford meets Washington university in another big Western contest.

Notre Dame, locked in a struggle with Michigan for the honor of being the top team in the nation, meets Iowa in a game that sees the Irish as heavy favorites. Michigan will seek to continue its sensational scoring record when it plays Minnesota in a Big Nine clash that might very well determine the other Rose Bowl bid. Illinois meets Purdue, and Northwestern faces Indiana in other Big Nine tilts.

Down South Alabama's up-and-down Crimson Tide plays Georgia, Duke meets Wake Forest, Mississippi clashes with Arkansas, Virginia meets VMI, LSU plays Vanderbilt, and Tulane entertains Auburn.

Eastern contests show Army against Columbia, Penn opposing Navy, Cornell at Princeton, and Dartmouth at Harvard. The Rice-Texas game highlights action in the southwest, with Texas A and M-Baylor and Oklahoma-TCU games following close behind.

Tackle Pete Rywak Registers Touchdown As Local Jayvees Score Second Straight

By Bill Kellam

Grabbing a partially blocked wild forward pass hurriedly thrown by State jayvee tailback George Pickett, Tar Baby tackle Pete Rywak tucked the pigskin under his arm and lumbered 40 yards to tally the afternoon's only touchdown giving Carolina a bitterly contested 6-0 victory. Shields' placement attempt was wide.

The 2,000 spectators at yesterday's struggle staged in gloomy and wind-swept Riddick stadium must have thought for a minute that they were back in Duke stadium seeing this year's Duke-State game again. As in that contest, a host of blue-shirted defenders broke through the State forward wall, brushed aside the State tailback's protectors, and then when the State back threw the pigskin wildly into the air to get rid of it, a blue-clad lineman grabbed the ball and took off for paydirt.

Otherwise, the game would have ended in a hard-fought 0-0 tie with Carolina showing a slight edge in the statistics. Neither team made any real scoring threats during the first half although the Tar Babies did stage a second period march from their own 19-yard line to the State 34. However, the State defense stiffened and the Tar Babies were forced to punt after losing 12 yards on an attempted pass. Shortly after this offensive spurt, the half ended with the ball in Carolina's possession on their own 26 after a State punt.

Hard - running Carolina tailback Dick Bunting and fullback Bob Kontz sparked the Blue and White offensive during the stymied drive.

State opened the second half with a bang when they took over the ball on the Carolina 45 after a Carolina punt. Fullback Bob Youngblood ran and tailback Ed Upchurch passed the ball to the Tar Baby 14 before the Blue and White gridders buckled down and stopped the State attack.

This offensive outburst by the Wolfcubs marked the end of either team's goalward thrusts except for Rywak's last-period dash. From here until the game's end they butted heads futilely in midfield with neither side holding anything but temporary advantages.

The whole Tar Baby forward wall performed ably and held the Wolfcub to less than 50 yards gained rushing. The Blue and White linemen also charged hard and fast and forced the State passers to throw the ball on the run every time. Merle Norcross and Gus Purcell also shone for the Tar Heels on the offense by knocking off big chunks of yardage several times.

invades Chapel Hill.

Charlie Justice, the little seatback who was the main reason Carolina beat Florida last year, again will be back to spearhead the Tar Heel attack. He will be backed up by Hosea Rodgers at fullback, Johnny Clements, wingback, and Co-Captain Joe Wright, blocking back. Others figuring in Snavely's offensive plans are Walt Pupa, Jim Camp, and Jack Fitch.

Powell Starts

Lone change in the Carolina forward wall is expected to come at the right end post, where Kenny Powell looms as the starter. Powell was outstanding in the Tar Heel cause against William and Mary and recovered the fumble that led to the winning touchdown. Carolina holds a decided advantage in the line with more experience and depth. The visitors have a three-pound weight advantage up front, 198 to 195.

There is little doubt but that the Tar Heels have the edge in the kicking department. Justice has averaged 46.4 yards on 29 punts this season and ranks second in the nation.

Father F. J. Murphy to Lead Inquiry Into Teachings of Catholic Religion

Beginning next week, an inquiry class concerning the teachings of the Catholic religion will be held each Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock on the second floor of the YMCA building.

The Rev. Francis J. Murphy, J.C.D., who is the assistant to Dr. Morrissey, the local Catholic pastor, will conduct the course. The weekly meetings will not exceed an hour.

The lecture course will consist of a brief explanation of the content and foundations of Catholic faith and practices, including the Apostle's Creed, moral questions, and the helps to personal sanctification.

Father Murphy, who was born in New York City on April 20, 1912, obtained the degree of Bachelor of Arts from Fordham university in 1939. He then continued philosophical and theological studies at St. John's Seminary, Little Rock, Ark. He was ordained at Sacred Heart Cathedral, Raleigh, on Dec. 21, 1943, and assigned as assistant pastor to St. John's Church, Waynesville. In the Fall of 1944 he began a three year course in Canon Law at the Catholic University and completed doctoral studies in that science last May. He has served as assistant pastor at St. Paul's Church, New Bern, and at St. Lawrence's Church, Asheville. He is also Vice-chancellor of the Catholic Diocese of Raleigh and Director of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine.

Memberships Open For Symphony

Student memberships in the North Carolina symphony society will be available this year for the first time, it was announced yesterday by Dr. W. L. Wiley of the French department, co-chairman of the society's membership drive.

Beginning next week memberships at one dollar, half the price of a general membership will be sold in the Y and at the Varsity during hours to be announced later, and at symphony headquarters in Swain hall all day. These memberships admit students to any symphony-sponsored concert throughout the state, as well as to the spring concert in Chapel Hill.

The North Carolina Symphony is the first state symphony in America, deriving its support from the state legislature and from contributions by the people. Its conductor is Benjamin Swalin, and last year it presented 115 concerts throughout the state, 59 of which were free performances for school children.

Dr. Wiley emphasized the fact that these memberships, in addition to giving students an opportunity to enjoy fine music, contribute to the support of this state project.

Mackie Announces New Dance Ruling

A new procedure for giving campus dances was announced Thursday by Dean E. L. Mackie.

According to Dean Mackie, the old plan was so ineffective that, Professor O. K. Cornwell, and Marvin Allen formulated the present system to replace it.

The current procedure will require the dance sponsors to obtain an application blank, secure the signatures of parties concerned, and submit the signed blank to Dean Mackie for approval.

At present the necessary procedure will be 1. Permission for a date must be secured from E. L. Mackie, faculty chairman of the dance committee, who will arrange the reservation of floor space and notify authorized doormen. 2. At the time the reservation is made, a $2.00 fee will be paid to the dance committee. 3. If the dance is to be held in Woollen gymnasium, the women's gymnasium, or the Tin Can, (a) The form is to be taken to Professor O. K. Cornwell's office in 310 Woollen gymnasium, where the rental fee will be inserted. (b) Arrangements will be made with Mr. C. B. Huggins, 110 Woollen, concerning decorations, bandstand, piano, concessions, public address system, and the like. 4. If the dance is to be held in any place other than those mentioned, arrangements are to be made with concerned parties. 5. The organization giving the dance will arrange for the attendance of chaperones. 6. At least two members of the dance committee are to be invited to attend the dance. 7. Direct payment will be made in the cases of the doormen, the orchestra, and the floor rental.

Experimental Plays

Sam Selden, director of the Carolina Playmakers, announced today that tryouts for the new bill of student writter experimental one-act plays would be held in the Playmaker Theatre at 4:00 P.M. tomorrow.

The plays selected for production by the staff include "Hunted Men," by Mark Sumner, "The Big Pat-Pat" by Quentin Brown, and "Saint Judas," by Eugene Zeigler. They are to be presented on Nov. 6 and 7.

Wallace Club Elects Knowlton President

At an organizational meeting held Friday evening in Graham memorial the Henry Wallace club elected Martin Knowlton of Birmingham, Alabama as permanent chairman.

At Knowlton's recommendation the organization, which was formed last summer with the avowed purpose of securing the Democratic nomination for Henry Wallace, voted to change its name to the Wallace Democrats.

Others elected to the executive committee to serve with Knowlton are Sandra Saunders of Kansas City, Mo., Joe Blake of Chadburn, N. C., and Paul Morehead of Little Rock, Arkansas.

"Already some 70 people on campus have taken the trouble to attend our meetings even though, as yet, we have had no program to offer them. This, to me, is a good indication that pro-Wallace sentiment is not nearly so rare as many people believe," said Knowlton.

The group voted to hold two meetings a month on Friday evenings one of which will be a business meeting and the other a program designed to bring the case for Wallace before the public.

FRIENDSHIP COUNCIL

Social, worship, program, and publicity committees will be chosen at tomorrow night's meeting of the Freshman Friendship council scheduled for 7 o'clock in the YMCA lounge.

Discussion will take place on the year's activities, including dances, sings, parties, hayrides, and religious discussions, conferences, and social-action projects.

Governor Praises Graduating Class Of Patrol School

Praising the University's Institute of Government as "traditional schoolteacher for North Carolina's state agencies," Gov. Gregg Cherry congratulated the 120-strong graduating class of the Institute's traffic school at its commencement yesterday morning.

In his address the governor recounted progress of legislation last spring which authorized doubling the strength of the state police force, and urged that the North Carolina patrol, to become fifth largest in the U. S. when the present class is sworn in November 1, be maintained at "full and efficient" strength throughout the future.

Other speakers at the graduation ceremony included Col. H. C. Rosser, state motor vehicle commissioner; Col. H. J. Hatcher, commander of the patrol; and Capt. David Lambert, who headed the patrol contingent at the school.

The 120, who yesterday completed six weeks of intensive training in motor vehicle law, police technique, first aid, and traffic control, will swell the total strength of the state patrol to 423 when inducted after a week's rest period.

Terry Sanford, assistant director of the Institute of Government, served as director of the school, assisted in the training program by Clifford Pace, David Monroe and other Institute staff members, and by instructors from the patrol.

Classics Tonight Union to Present

Five classical selections will be aired on tonight's recorded "Music by Candlelight," to be played in the main lounge of Graham Memorial. Directed by Philip Counch, the program is scheduled from 8:30-10:30.

The following works are to be played: Tartini, Air from Sonata No. 12 (arranged by A. Busch); Weber, Overture to Der Freischnitz; Brahms, Symphony No. 1; Rimsky-Korsakov, Scheherazade; Grofe, Grand Canyon suite.

President Orders Federal Aid to Maine As Forest Fires Continue to Threaten

Bangor, Me., Oct. 25—(UP)—As hordes of firefighters poured in from neighboring states and Canada, Maine authorities tonight asked that only persons with urgent business enter their beleaguered boundaries.

Though state police report 22 stricken areas are blocked off, grim firefighters are slowly gaining control over the windswept flames that have already killed 20 persons and caused at $40 million damage across New England.

President Truman today declared the entire state of Maine a national disaster area and ordered the Federal Works agency to send emergency relief. Some supplies to set up temporary homes for refugees have already been sent into the burnt-over areas, including blankets, cots, medicine, and temporary housing.

As volunteers from half a dozen states rallied in their grim battle, Red Cross officials tonight estimated that in Maine alone more than a thousand homes had been destroyed. In the New England area some 7,000 persons were reported homeless.

World Relief Begins Drive Next Sunday

In order to coordinate drives for world relief, the churches of the community and the campus, YM and YWCA are cooperating in their efforts to raise funds for the operation of three major relief agencies.

This afternoon all residents of the community, including University faculty and students living off-campus, will be given an opportunity to contribute to the three participating agencies. They are the American Friends Service committee and Church World Service, both of which send clothing, food, and shelter to people of Europe and the Orient; and World Student Service fund, which sends intellectual as well as material aid from American students and faculty to students and faculty abroad.

The university drive will begin November 2. when campus residents will be solicited for these same organizations. Students and faculty who have contributed through the community drive will not be solicited again.

Ministers of Chapel Hill Hill will preach today on "Service," and townspeople have been asked to stay at home this afternoon to receive the visits of solicitors.

NAVAL OPEN HOUSE

Navy Day will be observed at the Naval Armory tomorrow from 2 o'clock to 4:30 with an open house. The building will be open for inspection during these hours both to faculty and students.

Hoseas Rodgers, top, was the big star in Carolina's 35-7 victory over Florida yesterday. The big fullback picked u pa total of 238 yards on running and passing. One of Rodgers' passes was good for a touchdown play to Art Weiner.

UNC Gains 450 Yards

By Billy Carmichael
(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

Gainesville, Fla., Oct. 25—North Carolina's Tar Heels were back in high-scoring form this afternoon as they rolled over the Florida Gators, 35-7, here before some 25,000 fans who turned out to witness the inter-conference battle.

The Tar Heels of Coach Carl Snavely exhibited a well-organized and diversified attack that had the Gators completely baffled. Carolina rang up a total of 17 first downs, 283 yards from scrimmage, and an additional 167 yards on passes.

Hosea Rodgers was in truly great form this afternoon, as the big Tar Heel fullback led his mates to their second straight victory and their biggest offensive splurge of the season. The Brewton, Ala., husky compiled an amazing net total of 238 yards with his running and passing. He picked up 112 yards in 8 running plays and 126 yards on six pass completions in ten attempts.

Carolina's scoring was evenly divided, with Rodgers, Charlie Justice, Art Weiner, John Tandy, and Walt Pupa each crossing the goal line once. Bob Cox had a perfect afternoon of five extra point attempts in an equal number of tries.

The Tar Heel defense was also in fine form, with the Gators being allowed only 21 yards passing and 107 yards from scrimmage.

Take Early Lead

The Tar Heels were not long in going to the front. They struck with the power they had withheld all season, when after Justice had returned the opening kickoff 13 yards to the Carolina 16, they went all the way in three big plays.

Justice got the ball moving by sweeping right end for 19 yards, after which a Rodgers to Clements reverse made 13 more through the dazed Floridians. On the next play Rodgers dropped back, spotted Weiner moving up the middle and hit the big Newark end with the ball on the Florida 30, Weiner gathering the ball in and tip-toeing the rest of the way untouched for a score. Cox added the point, and the visitors led, 7-0.

Florida struck back immediately when Griffin returned the following kickoff from his own eight to the Carolina 38 before Maceyko could pull him down. Forbes knifed for 11 on the next play, but here the Florida attack bogged down and the Tar Heels took over on downs.

Rodgers Gets Loose

Rodgers was off to the races the moment the Tar Heels got possession of the ball. He found a convenient opening at right guard, burst into the secondary, brushed aside one would-be-tackler and then raced up the field in the direction of home for 76 yards and a second Tar Heel score. Cox again did the honors and the Carolina entry led 14-0.

'University Hour' Features Hallowe'en In Today's Program

Songs and stories about Hallowe'en will be featured this afternoon on the "University Hour" from 1:30 to 2 o'clock over radio station WPTF.

Providing the background for the playlets written by Robert Schenkkan will be a series of old English folk songs chosen with the aid of folklore expert Dr. A. P. Hudson of the English department.

Original music for the show was composed and arranged by Harold Schiffman, who will conduct a studio ensemble. Richard Lewis and a chorus will sing the songs—"Tam Pieree," "The Two Magicians," and "Song of the Fox."

Communication Center director Earl Wynn is to produce the program with James Tucker, assistant producer, John Young, studio engineer; and Edward Easter, a musical producer, assisting.

Bob Andrew narrates "The University Hour" and a large student cast has been chosen to act out the playlets: Bob Epstein, Frank Groseclose, James Geiger, Marjorie Norris, Mervyn Lentz, Gloria Gunn, Violet La Rue, Dick Katzin, Betty Jane Elalock, Caroline Padgett, Edna Deeley and Carl Harold.

'Had to Be Persuaded,' Says Dr. Henderson, Speaking of First Shaw Play He Witnessed

By Mark Sumner

"I was given free tickets, but still had to be persuaded before I went to see a Shaw play for the first time," says Dr. Archibald Henderson, official biographer of George Bernard Shaw.

"I was working on a dissertation at the University of Chicago in 1903," he explained, "and the Hart-Conway School of Acting was putting on Shaw's play, 'You Never Can Tell.' Although I was interested in playwrights and the theatre, I had never heard of George Bernard Shaw."

Dr. Henderson, celebrating his 50th year of service with the University, is head of the Mathematics department. In connection with this anniversary and with the opening of their 30th season, the Carolina Playmakers are dedicating the first performance of Shaw's "Saint Joan" to Dr. Henderson.

"I remember," Dr. Henderson went on, "saying that I was too busy—never heard of Shaw—couldn't go—to the expression teacher who got the tickets, but she talked me into it, and I saw my first Shaw play. I don't remember whether the production was good or not, but after the play I felt I had passed through a bath of cosmic rays.

Turning Point of Life

"It was the turning point of my life," he stated, then added, "Shaw's wit and humor, his anti-romantic approach to love, was certainly something new. I felt that there was an undiscovered genius, and decided to read everything I could find about Shaw and his plays."

Before this moment, Dr. Henderson had served a long apprenticeship in writing for the theatre. He had published articles on Maeterlinck, the Belgian Shakespeare; Ibsen, the father of social drama, and Oscar Wilde. He had already obtained his doctor's degree here in mathematics. It was natural, then, that Henderson, upon discovering that there was little material on Shaw published in this country, except a few plays, decided that something should be done to bring Shaw to the attention of the critics and the general public.

There had been a short article on Shaw by James Huniker in the New York Sun, and another short one in a little magazine that was written by Clarence Rook, but that was the total.

Dr. Henderson, then 26 years old, proceeded to write Shaw a letter, saying, "I feel that you are an undiscovered genius and I would like to write the story of your life."

He was afraid that Shaw would not even answer, but three weeks later a postcard arrived from Shaw. It said, "I am very much interested in your offer. I was unaware that I had rung the bell in that distant part of America." The note ended with a request for a photograph of Henderson.

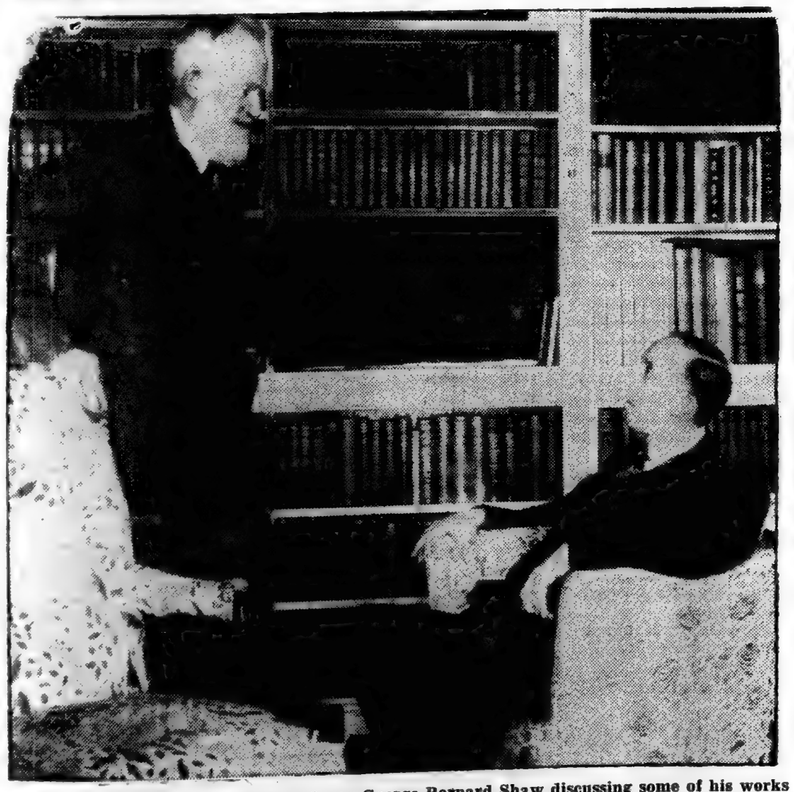
Dr. Henderson went to a photographer and asked him to make the photograph as impressive as possible. The photographer laughed and said, "That's all right. I have plenty of film." When the pictures were finished his wife picked the one she considered "the least forbidding," and Dr. Henderson mailed it to Shaw.

The answer was another postcard on which Shaw said: "You look like the man who can do the job."

"Those were the most delightful, cheerful words I ever heard in my life," says Dr. Henderson.

Begins Writing Biography

That started a correspondence of three years, during which Dr. Henderson wrote over 15 chapters of his biography of Shaw: "George Bernard Shaw—His Life and Works." At one time he received a 54-page handwritten letter from Shaw. In 1907 he went to England to meet Shaw and to have the playwright check the manuscript. He was Shaw's guest for several weeks.



He returned to Chapel Hill and continued his work on the biography. During the next three years he wrote a great number of articles on Shaw, many of them being published in foreign languages.

With his Shaw biography completed, he took a year's leave of absence from the University in 1910, and went back to England, so that the playwright could see the completed manuscript. In 1911, "George Bernard Shaw—His Life and Works" made its appearance. One of the largest English magazines gave it an 11-page review, and it was well received all over the world.

As for "Saint Joan," which the Carolina Playmakers are producing on October 29, 30, 31, and November 1, Dr. Henderson says: "Shaw believes that 'Saint Joan' is his masterpiece. I was able to see the world premiere of the play in London, and 10 days later the American premiere in New York. It has a tremendous impact for the audience, although some people first thought that the humorist was writing with his tongue in his cheek.

Dr. Henderson had planned to retire, but was asked by University officials to remain at his post for another year. He now plans to retire next year.

"I shall be busy, after my retirement, doing things that have been deferred by the press of work," Dr. Henderson said. "Most of my time will be spent in lecturing and writing."

World Student Conditions Topic of First Coed Meeting

First Coed Get-together of the fall quarter will be held tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock in the main lounge of Graham Memorial with informality as its keynote.

Sponsored by the YWCA as an opportunity for all coeds to become better acquainted, the affair will be held on the fourth Monday of each month, and will take the place of the regular Y committee meetings for that week.

Ruth Evans, Y president, will be moderator for a panel discussion on student conditions throughout the world, in preparation for the approaching campus drive of the World Student Service fund. Speaking on the panel will be Claude Shotts on Europe, Lincoln Kan on Asia, and Benedicte Santos on South America.

Betsy Green will lead the singing of songs of foreign nations, and refreshments and a social hour will follow the panel. Sally Lee is general chairman for the affair.

Bad Relations Must Be Combated

Student leaders from the campuses of Duke and Carolina will meet together Tuesday night to lead in the planning for better relations between the two colleges. Last year's session of student leaders was a success in that it greatly reduced the destruction of property on the two campuses. The annual task of painting DUKE accross the columns of Graham Memorial was neglected—likewise the job of dousing Washington Duke with paint.

A student confab should also be scheduled between the University and State College. There has always been a tremendous amount of competitive spirit between the two schools, which finally lead to the discontinuance of the classic. This year's game will be the first time in several years that the two teams have met on the playing field. Every effort should be made to see that this new beginning does not grow into a contest of bitter relations between the two schools.

It seems that state institutions within a state are, as a rule, very bitter rivals. Vandalism occurs before the game, fights persist during the game, and bitter feeling reigns during the following year—until action spurts forth the next football season. The football season should not be constructed into a season when students let their school spirit and love for excitement drive them to vandalism and rowdiness which creates ill-feeling.

Clemson vs South Carolina is a good example of two state institutions plagued with bitter relations. The conduct as last year's game convinced the student leaders that they must act or steps would be taken to discontinue the tilt. The leaders got busy. The Blue Key Fraternities of the two campuses talked the matter over. Their planning brought results and there was comparatively little of the usually bitter relations.

This is what they did: They established a permanent committee between the two schools to continue cooperation on a year-round basis, with the chairmanship of the group alternating between the schools. They used temporary barracks on the South Carolina campus to house Clemson students both before and after the game. Each campus organization was contacted and asked to pledge their membership to serve as hosts. The night before the game a script dance, sponsored jointly between schools, was held. They also sponsored a tea on the morning of the game and a joint flag-raising ceremony.

This is the manner in which bad relations can be combated.

Time for a Carolina Caravan

The time for another Carolina Caravan is fast approaching. With Texas, William and Mary, and Florida all in the past on the Tar Heel schedule, students look forward to only two more football games away from Chapel Hill. The Duke game will be played ten miles away in Durham this year, but all eyes are looking northward toward the Carolina-Maryland grid contest which is set for November 15 in Washington.

With practically direct rail connections over the almost 300 miles between here and the nation's capital, no valid reasons can be advanced for not planning special caravan trains for students who wish to go up.

The proposed caravan would have a three-fold effect. It would promote spirit at the game by having the students keyed up to an excited pre-game pitch from riding together, eating, talking, and sleeping nothing but the outcome of the contest.

Secondly, it would give more students a chance to see a game outside of Chapel Hill—students who would not go to the game by themselves if not given this opportunity.

It would create a friendly atmosphere in which many students riding the train would meet many of their fellow-students with whom they might otherwise never become acquainted.

Last year students enjoyed caravan trips to both the Navy game in Baltimore and the Tennessee contest in Knoxville, in spite of the fact that the Tar Heels came out second best in the latter battle. In addition to these two, special trains were provided by railway companies to take students and other North Carolina residents to the Sugar Bowl game, even though this was not a University-organized caravan. This football season should certainly not be allowed to pass without having at least one organized caravan train, and the only game left to which one could be planned is in Washington the middle of November.

According to Head Cheerleader Myrt Sherard, actual planning of pep rallies, caravans, etc. is out of his hands, and that the responsibility rests on the soulders of the University club. No matter who runs the show, it's time to get it on the road—with a Washington caravan as the goal.—C.H.

Delayed-Action Retort

American delegate Warren Austin gave the United Nations assembly and the Russians in particular, an excellent example of the American belief in freedom of speech when he blasted the Russian proposal against outlawing "war-mongers."

Mr. Austin charged that any such legislation would "establish a censorship and police state and put shackles on the brain of man as well as a gag in his mouth." He went on further to explain that such famed Americans as James Byrnes and John Fosster Dulles, listed by Vishinsky as war-mongers, merely exercise their rights as American citizens when they speak out to warn their country and the world of totalitarian dangers.

The words that Mr. Austin used in replying to the Russian charges were strong and well chosen. He spoke with firmness that clearly showed the American attitude toward the question. It will be to the advantage of the United States if the UN delegates continue to deal with such violent accusations as Vishinsky's war-mongering speeches with strong rebuttals.

An unusually long length of time passed between the first attacks and Austin's eventual speech. Such a delay does nothing but allow the Russian words to sink into the minds of other nations before we make our defense. If we are to maintain our standing, in spite of regular Russian attacks, we must be ready to always reply, with plain, firm words, to the charges.—B. B.

DREW PEARSON ON The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Washington.—Ex-Senator Burt Wheeler of Montana has now been retained by one of the biggest whiskey distillers to fight its battles at the White House.

Wheeler has been hired by Lewis S. Rosenstiel, head of Schenley's, and also has been loaded up with a lot of ballyhoo to the effect that the Luckman Committee is composed of crackpots and New Dealers and he is supposed to sing this song to the White House.

Wheeler was picked by Schenley's because of his long friendship with President Truman and because he was able to get Schenley's out of trouble with the Justice Department's Antitrust Division recently.

Several of the big distillers were in Dutch with the Justice Department for trying to monopolize the whiskey business, but the astute gentleman from Montana managed to get them off the hook.

Whether Burt Wheeler will try to sell his old friend Truman on Schenley's gripe that the Luckman Committee is a bunch of crackpots is another matter. Burt is smart enough to know different, and what's more, he knows that Truman also knows different.

Note—Still wringing their hands over the whiskey holiday, the big distillers have retained the Ivy Lee publicity firm in New York to stage a campaign for them. Ivy Lee is the man who transformed the Rockefeller family from one of the worst-hated groups in the USA to present pillars of society.

President Truman gave a significant explanation of his plans for European reconstruction to a delegation of visiting Unitarian churchmen the other day. After his talk, however, one part of his remarks were carefully censored before being released to the press. This was because Truman let slip the remark that the Marshall Plan might cost as high as $40 billion. Apparently it was feared that this might be misconstrued by isolationist critics.

In brief, what the President actually told the visiting church dignitaries was:

"In 1945, we canceled 95 billion dollars in war contracts. Now we want to spend 30 to 40 billion dollars in a long-range program to rebuild the world. I believe this is more economical for us than it would be to spend 105 billion dollars a year for war."

He spoke in response to prepared statements read by Dr. Winfred Overholser, moderator, and Dr. Frederick Eliot, president, of the American Unitarian Association.

Later Truman accompanied the group into the White House rose garden to pose for pictures. Walking beside Rev. A. Powell Davies, minister for the All Souls Church, Washington, D. C., he remarked:

"This is the time for a moral arousing."

As they bunched together for the picture, the President noticed only one woman in the group and politely insisted that she pose beside him. At this Rev. Davies pointed out that she came from the President's home state—Mrs. Margo Pieksen of St. Louis.

"I always enjoy being photographed with a fellow Missourian," retorted Truman merrily.

The Freedom Train, carrying a lesson in democracy to the doorsteps of the American people, is now rolling across the country. Tremendous crowds line up to view the Bill of Rights, the Declaration of Independence, and other stirring reminders of our American heritage. It is the most important exhibit on American freedom in our entire history.

Believe it or not, however, the idea was once ridiculed as a daydream, later branded as a political stunt. The backstage story of how the Freedom Train was born is an epic tale of one man's tenacity. Today, his name doesn't even appear on the list of sponsors. He is Attorney General Tom Clark and his battle to launch the train lasted two stormy years.

Actually, the train grew from a $20,000 idea to a $40,000,000 project. Clark's original thought was to send one car on tour, principally through the south. The chief passenger was to be the Bill of Rights. He hoped it might promote civil liberties and combat racial intolerance. Later he enlarged on the idea, plotted to contract the rise of liberty in America with its fall in Nazi Germany. Talking this over after a Cabinet meeting one day, Mr. Truman pledged: "You have my strong endorsement."

Amendments for UN Charter

By Russell G. Baldwin

What lies ahead for the U.N.? Success or failure? It is difficult for anyone to attempt to plot the UN's present position. Many factors must be considered before its past can be accurately judged, and many more must be considered before its future course can be adequately predicted.

To say that the UN in its present form will preserve peace is absurd. It is just as ridiculous to say that the UN is doomed to failure. There are plenty of people on either side of this imposing question and the opinions of practically all of them are heavily colored by emotionalism. Some think what a great tragedy it will be if the UN fails; others are convinced that it will fail and take a sadistic pleasure in deprecating man for his fatal folly.

It is interesting to note the rise and fall of faith in the UN. Hope was at its peak in April, 1945 when representatives of most of the important countries of the world met in San Francisco to write the U.N. Charter. But, even then, there were signs that the structure on which the hope was founded was dangerously weak in certain critical points. Only a few voiced a warning and their fears were over-run by the blind wave of optimism which prevailed. The stout courage of men like Herbert Evatt of Australia was not enough. The unbalanced system of representation, the veto, the premise that some nations are more equal than others remained.

Since that historic meeting in San Francisco, the UN has been the hope, the despair, and now the failure of many of the world's citizens. In the U. S. there is still considerable optimism, but I am informed that Europe is overwhelmed by a flood of pessimism. They feel that the UN has failed, that war between Russia and the U.S. is inevitable. There is evidence that this same feeling is spreading in the U.S. with disconcerting rapidity.

It is generally conceded by those who are well-informed that the UN Charter must be amended before it will have any hope of success. The record of the past two and a half years has made the weakness of the UN plain to the public eye; yet, the people have made practically no effort to remedy the situation. They prefer to clutch at the last, scattered straws of hope as the winds of the time blow

'Miss Payoff' Provides Topic For Conversation

By Sally Woodhull

"Who's going to be Miss Payoff?" is the question most frequently asked in Y circles these days. Candidates names are to be submitted to the information office in the Y building before Tuesday, and everybody's eagerly awaiting the beginning of balloting on November 2 to see which campus beauties have the qualities that really pay off!

Votes will be sold at ten cents each during the week of the World Student Service fund drive, November 2 to 8, and at the Battle of Bands in Woollen gym Saturday night, November 8, the winning beauty will be revealed.

Plans for other activities during WSSF week are moving right along, too. Battle of Bands will be the grand finale, but before that must of necessity come the grand opening, a campus-wide jamboree to be presented by the Grail, the Valkyries, and Sound and Fury on the opening night of the drive. Among other organizations taking active parts in the drive are CCUN, which is furnishing films to be shown at the town theaters; the art majors, who will decorate store windows in town; and many of the individual Y committees.

Coeds all, whether Y members or not, will get together tomorrow afternoon in Graham Memorial for a lot of fun and some serious thought on world conditions. Though this affair is taking the place of the Y general membership meeting, it is designed for all coeds rather than for Y members only.

Most Y committees met last week to make further plans for their fall quarter programs, but Public Affairs continued the execution of its program by hearing Dr. Rupert Vance discuss "Politics in the South." The "Politics in the South." The committee is studying the southern region during this quarter, and later will discuss national and international affairs, with the aim of making intelligent citizens and voters of its members.

On the Quiet Side

News in Campus Wear

By O. E. Schoeffler
Men's Apparel Editor, Esquire Magazine

It may be that the appearance of undergraduates' wives and offspring on the university scene has had a sobering effect on clothes fabric designs for college men. Or it may be an en masse shift in the preferences of America's university men from the bold and blatant patterns they favored to the quieter tones prevelant for fall. Or just call it a change of pace. Whatever the reason and small matter what you term it, the University man's fall wardrobe can scarcely be distinguished from that of a young business man on his way up, or any successful young professional man's wearing apparel.

A careful glance at the university man's jacket for fall campus wear sees these three obvious facts: first, that it's a quiet, small patterned tweed; second, that it hangs straight down and has little if any, padding in the natural shoulders; and third, that it's a single-breasted three-button model. In contrast to the clarion-call patterns of jacket fashions of former years, the new fall versions are quite mild but far from meek. There's plenty of character in those newer shades of brown, tan and blue, and the blue-grey just arriving on the campus is going to have quite a few fast friends.

Neckwear is in for a change of pace too. And one type that hasn't been around for quite a while and will decorate the necklines of the undergraduate body is the crocheted tie. Crocheting, as the texts on domestic sciences will tell you, is knitting with a single hooked needle, and the results are mighty mighty, good-looking. Or so they are in the new Fall ties. Not only have they been fashioned in wide color ranges, but various arrangements have been made in their stripes. Some stripes run horizontally. Others are diagonals. All are quite narrow, and spaced about an inch and a half apart. There's pleasant color in them too, and one we saw made on a background of maroon had an alternating horizontal blue and gold stripes. Another featured a dark blue background and was diagonally thin striped in yellow and red. That roughish texture of crochet ties makes them naturals for wear with tweeds. They know up nicely too, and the accepted size is a bit on the large size.

The overall picture, then, is one of quiet and rather inconspicious dignity. Which will suit most university men well. But characteristically, these same men will manage to inject a single note of dominant color in their ties or socks or perhaps in their shirts, and thus manage to stay way out in front as one of the country's chief inspirations for newness in men's apparel.

Wells Opposes Car Ban

(Editor's Note: The following are excerpts from a letter written by Hugh A. Wells, president of the UVA, to Mr. John W. Umstead.)

Dear Mr. Umstead:

Your statement of Monday night that the Board of Trustees has already considered action which would ban the possession of cars by students at the University comes as a great shock to us. Your personal opinion to the effect that "unless attitudes change . . . further action will have to be taken" prompts us to reply to you personally not only as a member of the Board of Trustees but also as a resident of Chapel Hill.
